MRS. W. P. STEVENSON

The passing away of Mrs. Stevenson this week meant the loss of a friend to the college. Although we students have had little contact with her in recent year, she has been very interested in campus activities always. She and her husband have been active in many things and always very hospitable to the college groups they entertained at their home.

We who have known Dr. Stevenson through the Vesper services have come to respect him and to him we extend our deepest sympathy.

JOHN W. KERR

Although he was new to Maryville, the sudden death of John Kerr last Saturday has been a loss quickly felt by those who knew him. The passing of any member of the college community makes a difference to the students because we are so intimately related here on the hill.

John will be remembered by his unaffected enthusiasm, his keen interest in things of deep value, his love of music, and the sincerity and earnestness with which he prepared himself for the gospel ministry. To his friends he meant even more than all these things, for he was to them a true and inspiring companion.

CAMPUS CRUMBS

With Thanksgiving past and only a few days left until the great Christmas migration (apologies to Dr. Hunter), we've noticed a sudden change and certainly a change in conversation. "How are you going home?" "When are you leaving?" "Boy, when I get home, I'm going to—" And in three more weeks the tune will be changed and we'll hear "When I was home, I did—" and so Christmas comes and is gone. . . We imagine that all these exams and term papers we've been hearing so much about this week will soon be forgotten but right now it does seem as though having three exams on one day and exams nearly every day is quite an order, especially for these people who are planning minutely every minute of their short vacation.

We heard a funny one the other day that happened in a sociology class. Dr. Case and the class were discussing social epidemics when the question was asked "What is a social epidemic?" Immediately Chuck Kindred on the last row spoke up "the flu" The Chilhowean seems to be progressing. We heard Doug and Phil discussing the "dummy" the other day and trying to figure out this and that Wednesday morning the chapel certainly looked empty and it was estimated that only a third of the students were present. We can't imagine what the speaker thought of the college and the students' loyalty! We don't mean that anyone should be forced to give what they don't wish to or what they don't care to, but we do think they might at least uphold a certain standard and politeness toward college visitors The decorations in the bookstore look fine this year and if you haven't seen them you ought to drop in. By the way, if you are interested in writing to Santa Claus at the North Pole, we've heard that the college post office will do their best to see that he gets it. Several weeks ago a freshman wrote for his doll and told Santa what a good boy he's been all year Also we read the other day about Mary Christmas who is busy at this time of year signing letters Dr. Ruth Stephens, the speaker at the IRC on Thursday night gave a very forceful and clear account of the positions of the countries at war and also, of some of the neutrals and their position in the present situation. We had heard what a popular professor and speaker Dr. Stephens was at the University and we were glad that the IRC asked her to return. It does seem, however, that there should be some way of students knowing what is a good program in order to avail themselves of the opportunity of improving their store of knowledge. The crowd that turned out for this meeting was small—smaller, in fact, that the usual crowds which attend. One reason may have been the many conflicting meetings which were announced for Thursday and also the fact that many had exams the next day We wish that the whole student body might be able to gain the picture of the world events today which Dr. Stephens gave to those present The lights on the Christmas tree in front of Thaw were put up Thursday and we think that all we need now is a covering of snow to make us sure that we are getting ready to celebrate Christmas . . . Dr. Orr said the other day to his Ethics class, we hear, that a girl who loves her Dad will get along with her husband. It's amazing how many girls we've heard talking about their Dads this week. Of course, that statement may have had nothing to do with it, but who can tell? I imagine some Dads may get a bit more attention this year too, as a result of that statement . . .

You fellows had better start treating some of these girls pretty nice because if you remember next year is Leap Year, and we've heard it rumored that there's a Leap Year party being planned for the week w come back. . . . We wonder just what type of action Professor Colbert was advocating Friday morning when, explaining about the Messiah rehearsal on Saturday, he said that "girls that cannot get in the front soprano section can fall over in back." We read in the paper yesterday that the president has already set the date for Thanksgiving for next year. It's November 21, in case you wonder . . .

THE COMMENTATOR

Conducted By GEORGE L. HUNT

CHRISTMAS, 1938

The stores are closed,
The trees are sold,
The street decorations seem an afterthought.
The clerk is cursing his employer for the measly check,
And the choir sings "Joy to the World!"
The dinner is eaten by the general,
And the fanatics gather in a little room around a bedraggled thirty-five cent tree;
The cannons boom intermittently,
And a lonely contralto sings "Silent Night."
The storm troopers clatter in the cobbled street,
A Lutheran mother holds her baby closer,
Fear filling her sad eyes as she sings almost frantically
"Away in a Manger."
Arabs, Jews, and Britons mingle hostily
With muttered oaths from one, curses from the other, and warnings from the third
As an American tourist sings
"O Little Town of Bethlehem."
Strikers pace the Parisian streets
And gendarmes swing their clubs threateningly
As a huddled group of carollers sing
"The First Noel."
The stocking has been filled,
The tree trimmed,
The presents wrapped,
And the train tested.
A tired mother and a tired father hum together as they go to sleep
"O Come All Ye Faithful."
"Everywhere, Everywhere, Christmas tonight."

* * * *

The above contribution to Christmas joy was written last year as the title and various references indicate. At first I thought it would be adaptable to the present holiday spirit, but upon reading it over I knew that such an adaptation would be impossible. I am well aware that it is completely cynical, and were this to be taken as my whole attitude towards Christmas I could be justly accused of an unhealthy state of mind at a time when I should feel joyful. Needless to say, this does not represent my entire feeling, but the fact that I am printing it now shows to some extent that I feel a good bit of sadness again this year about the atmosphere in which Christmas is being celebrated. All our deep pleasure at a time like this must be colored with regret that the world is in a poor condition to receive the message of Christmas. But thus has it been and thus will it ever be. Christmas would be a mockery except for our faith in our power as human beings to be better than we are except that we hope, contemporary indications notwithstanding, that the trend of mankind is upward.

* * * *

Enough of that. The special significance which we attach to the Christmas season—a vacation for a few weeks—makes it mean more to us than to those who have not been away from home for what seems a long time. The greetings of this column go with you while you travel and while you make up for lost time while at home. Mizpah.

Dear Mr. Santa Claus and Co.:
Please send the following gifts and such
As directed, thank you much,
To the folks you see below;
Or if you can't, please let me know.

Three "crip" courses, three that's all,
To every girl in Baldwin Hall,
Or if you can afford some more
They'd like to have you make it four.

Alfy Davies hopes to see
Cafego 'neath his Christmas tree,
Fully clad in football clothes
With Christmas tinsel on his nose.

One Foolproof Get-Rich-Quickly Plan
To every senior girl and man.
Don't bring textbooks any more;
They still have those you brought before.

A hundred attractive assorted goals,
For us who can't, upon our souls,
Decide what we most want to be;
And help us from our quandary.

And if you have them in your stock,
Please drop into my Christmas sock
One luscious, chocolate layer cake.
And this I ask for Christmas sake.

The annual singing of Christmas carols is under the direction of the Social committee. It will be held under the lighted tree in front of Thaw immediately after the presentation of the "Christmas Carol."

ECHO SPORTS

THE HIGHLAND ECHO DECEMBER 9, 1939

SPORT ECHOS

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

BASKETBALL GETS THE NOD for the next few months as the sport's headline. The cagey Scotties will be well in the running this year, led by four lettermen, including Captain Etheredge. The SMC loop is strong this year according to pre-season dope. Three practice games before the holidays will warm the season up.

A FAREWELL TO FOOTBALL was sounded Thursday night at one of the best banquets seen around Pearsons in a long time. Shattered hopes of this year and fond dreams of next were in order with a mixture of gab and grub. Congratulations go to "Shoey" and Scot, next year's leaders of the Scot gridiron greats.

JAMES ETHEREDGE'S name went up on the imaginary roll of Maryville all-time stars as Coach Honaker admitted "Joe" was probably the best pass receiver ever developed here. Coach went on to say that when games were won and touchdowns were made almost entirely by passing, it was a great tribute to an end and the passers behind him. Etheredge deserves all the praise we can hand him for a great piece of leadership and playing this year.

THE DOCTORS PERFORMED successful operations on the Preachers this week in a 6-0 upset on the practice field. Scalpel-lati of the Pre-meds sewed up the game when he took a pass at the goal line. The game featured blocked punts, rough play, and good touchball generally. Club and society competition has been keen this year, and here's hopin' it will continue to round out the Maryville intramural program.

A MOCK MEET will be presented in Bartlett pool Saturday night before a mixed swimming party. The meet will consist of the pre-season time-trials with competition and fun besides. Everybody is invited.

NOT MUCH NOISE is coming from Coach Thrower and his back-patted artists, but his first turnouts look good for another big year for Maryville's perennial outstanding wrestling team. They tied Vandy for top honors in the state last year, and with the exception of a heavyweight and a replacement for Eddie Meares, they look beter than ever. The call for men is still open, however.

J. D. Hughes Elected Captain Of '40 Scots

Honaker Named As 23 Get Letters

John David Hughes was elected 1940 football captain Thursday night at the annual banquet. "Shoey" hails from Everett, Gunterville, and Maryville or any place south of the Mason-Dixon. He has lettered three years, has been all-conference, and is a probable choice for this year's ideal eleven. He plays at full or wing, boasting one of the best tackling and line bucking records in the conference. He is also one of Etheredge's passers. Scot Honaker, Jr., 130 pound quarter will take over alternate duties next year. Honaker lives here in town, and carries three letters also. His forte is passing and marksmanship punting.

The banquet, attended by 64, was toasted as Maryville"s "121st" by Toastmaster Hunter. Speeches were given by President Lloyd, Dr. McClelland, Miss Heron, Coaches Honaker and Thrower, retiring Captains, and other important personages present. Dr. Lee Calloway gave the principal address of the evening. Introduced as one of Maryville's all-time all-stars, Dr. Calloway talked to the boys of carrying football's hard learned lessons over into life. He praised highly our coaching staff and congratulated the boys on another successful season. Coach Honaker made his comments on the outlook of a good season next year, the boys play this year, of the few breaks that might have given us a championship, and his appreciation of the captain's work. He quoted an opposing coach as declaring Captain Etheredge as the best pass receiver in the South with the possible exception of Kavanaugh.

Twenty-three lettermen were announced by Dr. Hunter. These included: Seniors—Etheredge, Smith, Kramer, Kindred and Wilburn; Juniors—Hughes, Honaker, Tipton, Henschen, McCurry, Cragan, Baird, Morton, Jackson, Duncan and Swift, manager; Sophomores—Sieber, Shelfer, Tipton, and Hooker; Freshmen—Taylor, J. Kramer, Witt, and Gamble.

'40 FOOTBALL LEADERS

HUGHES

HONAKER

Squad Of Twenty Bolsters Cage Team

Around the remaining four lettermen from last year's hardwood team, Coach Honaker, each day for the past two weeks, has been drilling a squad of twenty men in basic and complex fundamentals of basketball techniques.

Each day in the Alumni gym, the squad of two seniors, five juniors, four sophomores, and nine freshmen, includes in the three hour session foul shooting, passing, and scrimmage.

In shooting for the current Smoky Mountain championship, the Scotties are forced to pit there speed and skill against such rangy and rugged opponents as last year's Milligan title winners, Lincoln Memorial University, and Carson-Newman. Because of its position as the largest college in the SMC, Maryville, as always, will be the object of severe and vicious attack from each opponent in the loop. For the prestige gained in winning over the Highlanders, all teams point for the Orange and Garnet. Realizing this situation, Coach Honaker has a bright outlook for this year's hoopsters in the apparent wealth of superior varsity reserves.

From the six lettermen of 1938-39, Captain Joe Etheredge, Bill Boydson Baird, and Scot Honaker remain as the varsity nucleus. Weldon Baird, oldest of the three Bairds, was lost in graduation, and the sixth letterman, Dale Russell, was unable to report.

On the squad are, guards: Baird, Husk, Taylor, Bean, Deyton, and Foreman; forwards: Baird, Honaker, Clemster, Headrick, Walker, Lord, Humphries, Higdon, Sweeney, and Fisher; centers: Etheredge, Morrow, Manning, and Bell.

Anti-spread Athletic Club Gains Faculty's Interest

As a means of combating increasing waistlines and also as a means of counteracting excessive boredom, a variety of athletics are engaged in by many members of the faculty. Chief among these seems to be swimming, closely followed by volley ball. Golf and tennis have smaller numbers of followers.

Although there is a decided lack of organization in faculty athletics, everything runs with reasonable smoothness under the constant coddling of Coach Fischbach. Most of the faculty athletes are a bit on the lazy side when it comes to exerting energy other than that used to insert the decorative red marks we sometimes find on returned exam papers. They need someone to keep nagging at them in order to keep the unambitious members from skipping too many practices.

Coach Fischbach is just the man for this job. Last year, when he was away, the interest of the other members was not sufficiently keen to keep the ball rolling. This year, stomachs are on the decline again.

Highland Basketball Team Meets Independents Tonight

To inaugurate the Scottie basketball season, Coach Honaker's basketeers will oppose the Friendsville Pirates in an exhibition game on the Alumni court, Saturday evening at 7:30.

Captained by the former Maryville high-scoring flash, Howard McGill, the Buccaneers will offer the Highlanders a formidable array of former local collegiate and scholastic stars.

On Tuesday evening, the Orange and Garnet will get their initial taste of intercollegiate battle when they engage the Hiwassee five in the Maryville gym. Although boasting of only three lettermen, Captain Ralph McNabb, guard; Bob Kilbourne, forward; and Cecil Hughes, guard; the Tigers are expected to carry a strong opposition from Madisonville.

A game with an independent team from Knoxville has been announced for Wednesday evening by Coach Honaker.

Probable Maryville starting lineup: center, Etheredge; guards, Baird and Husk; forwards, Honaker and Baird.

Swimming Tonight

Tonight in the swimming pool, the first swimming meet of the year will take place.

Coach Fischbach will divide his squad into two groups for an inter-squad meet, in order to get some idea as to what prospects he has for the coming swimming season.

From 25 to 30 swimmers will participate in the meet, which, among other things, will include diving exhibitions and possibly a water-polo match.

excitement aroused by the first presentation that the ladies of that period consented to leave their hoops at home in order that more listeners might be crowded into the auditorium; and according to precedent, performances of the "Messiah" today contribute more money to charity than does any other work of art.

After this performance in Dublin, Handel, beginning with March 23rd, 1743, brought out the "Messiah" every year in London with great applause; and although in the course of time he made various changes in the work, on the whole he left it in its original form, which was not as complicated as it might have been had Handel not realized that the Dublin orchestral and choral resources were by no means on a par with those of London.

The first English performance of this oratorio was at Covent Garden theatre, London, and it was on this occasion that King George II, greatly impressed by the music, stood up during the singing of the "Hallelujah Chorus." His courtiers and people followed suit, thus originating a custom which has been followed by audiences since that time.

The program of the presentation of the "Messiah" this year is to be as follows:

Overture—orchestra
Tenor recitative: "Comfort ye my people."
Air: "Every valley shall be exalted"
Richard Woodring
Chorus: "And the Glory of the Lord"
Bass recitative: "Thus saith the Lord"
Air: "But who may abide the day of His Coming?"
Ralph Reed
Alto recitative: "Behold, a virgin shall conceive"
Air and chorus: "O Thou that tellest good tidings to Zion"
Margaret Law
Bass recitative: "For behold, darkness shall cover the earth"
Air: "The people that walked in darkness"—Ralph Reed
Chorus: "For unto us a child is born"
Pastoral symphony
Soprano recitatives: "There were shepherds abiding in the field"
And lo! The angel of the Lord came upon them"
"And the angel said unto them"
"And suddenly there was with the angel"
Bernice Cathcart
Chorus: "Glory to God"
Alto recitative: "Then shall the eyes of the blind be opened"
Air: "He shall feed His flock like a shepherd"
Margaret Law
Soprano Air: "Come unto Him all ye that labor and are heavy laden"
Bernice Cathcart
Chorus: "Behold the Lamb of God"
Chorus: "Surely He hath borne our griefs"
"And with His stripes we are healed"
Chorus: "All we like sheep have gone astray"
Intermission
Tenor air: "Behold, and see if there be any sorrow"
Recitative: "He was cut off out of the land of the living"
Air: "But Thou didst not leave His soul in Hell"
Richard Woodring

VOLUME 25 MARYVILLE, TENN. DECEMBER 14, 1939 NUMBER 13

Theta And Alpha Sig Present "Winterset" In Chapel, March 1st

Tryouts Being Held For Ten Parts This Week

Maxwell Anderson's "Winterset", a tragedy, will be presented by Theta Epsilon and Alpha Sigma in Voorhees chapel the night of March 1. There are about ten parts to be filled, and tryouts for these parts are being held this week. Parts will be assigned before the holidays, and rehearsals will start promptly after the holidays. John Fisher is the production manager, and Lloyd Shue is stage manager. The play will be presented under the direction of Mrs. N. E. West.

"Winterset" divides its opportunities and responsibilities almost equally between the actors, director, and designer. It is set in New York below one of the great bridges, and has as its characters, Trock Esdrella, a gangster just out of prison with six months of life left in his consumptive body and a blind determination to live these six months in spite of Garth, who is the only surviving witness to the crime for which he was sent to prison.

The action is centered at the home of Garth and begins with Trock's attempts to make sure that Garth will not betray him. But into the affair stumbles Mio, the son of the man for whose murder Trock was sent to prison, and whose life is now centered around the purpose of revenging his father's death. Judge Gaunt, whose mind is failing as a result of the case also enters.

The plot is simple. It is the story of Trock's determination to live the six months opposed by Mio's vow of revenge, and it runs the gamut of emotions and irony. As commentator on the passing events there is Esdras, Garth's father, and for contrast there is Meriamne, Garth's sister.

Correspondent Writes On Present Situation In Maryville Sector

By JOHN ROSS

In the hills of East Tennessee, about sixteen miles southwest of Knoxville, there is an active battle front. This strong fortification is designated as Fort Maryville and is very prominent in the present situation. We shall see and compare it to any of the heavily armed sectors of a European front.

Try to picture a mighty division about to go on a three weeks leave of absence. Upon returning these select companies of Freshmen, Sophomores, Juniors and Seniors will start a long offensive that will last until spring. The following are two dispatches from our correspondent just behind the line of action:

Dec. 15 39 11:00 Jr sk lp The air is tense. We here on the front feel as if something were about to burst. The activities that precede definite action are noticeable around the hill from which we are observing. The "Pearson", "Baldwin", "Carnegie" and "Memorial" sectors are in quite a stir. Large numbers of supplies and stores are being moved and routed in many directions. The "Thaw," "Science", and "Anderson" batteries have the appearance of big guns about to dis-

SENIOR CLASS DUES

Ralph Reed announces that the senior dues this year will be $1.00. From this sum, $100 will be used for the guarantee of the Chilhowean. What remains from this sum will be used toward whatever social function the class decides upon.

Following vacation there will be a drive to collect the dues. Dorothy Quass, Martha Dean Reed, and Ralph Reed, will accept class dues at any time, however.

Contributions For New Forward Fund Surmount Set Goal

$32,000 Collected In Blount County Alone; Pledges Still Being Made

The first drive for the "New Forward Fund", which began in Blount county and Maryville on Nov. 19, has at the present time resulted in contributions of $32,000.

During the week of November 19 to 25, a special campaign was conducted in the county to obtain the $25,000 set as the goal for this section. By the end of the first week the goal had been exceeded by $4,000, and now the total amounts to $32,000, and there are still reports to be received while the total continues to increase.

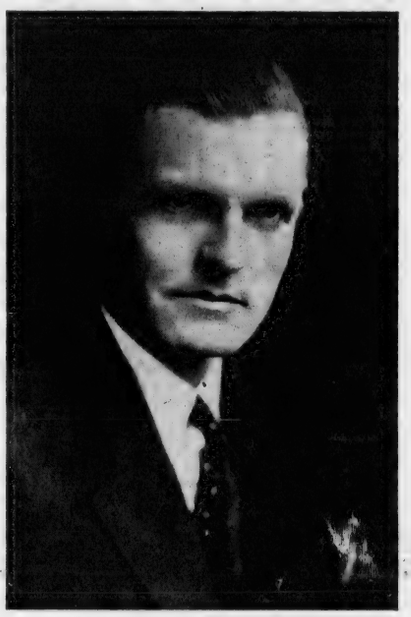
Conducting the campaign was a committee of 100 persons appointed in the community, a smaller committee of 25 persons, and three co-chairmen. Dr. Samuel Tyndale Wilson, president-emeritus of the college, served as honorary chairman of the committee; and President Lloyd and other administrative officers of the college led in planning the campaign and cooperated with the committee in carrying it forward.

A bulletin, entitled "Maryville College Renders a Mighty Community Service", was published and distributed in the county in connection with the drive. Also speakers represented the college in forty churches of the county on November 19, and over both radio stations in Knoxville.

The drive in Blount county is the initial move in the first phase of the "New Forward Fund" which will extend through 1940.

Over Twelve Hundred Hear Handel's "Messiah" Given By Chorus Of Two Hundred

Over twelve hundred people heard George Frederick Handel's great oratorio, "The Messiah", which was presented Sunday, Dec. 12 at 3:00 in Voorhees chapel. This seventh consecutive production given by a chorus of over two hundred voices and five voices and five soloists was attended by an appreciative audience of the music lovers of this section. Mr. Ralph R. Colbert directed the chorus which was accompanied by the orchestra under the direction of Miss Dorothy Horne. For the fourth consecutive year Garnet Manges, graduate of Maryville college, was piano accompanist.



The solo airs and recitatives were taken by four present and one former student of Maryville college. Ruth Woods of Greenback and Bernice Cathcart of Maryville, both seniors and majors in music, took the soprano solos; Richard Woodring, senior voice student from Ardmore, Pa., was the tenor soloist, and Ralph Reed, also a voice student, from Delaware, was the bass soloist.

Lasting an hour and forty-five minutes the performance this year was fifteen minutes longer than the preceding one. Several additional solos were used, including a bass recitative and air, and a tenor recitative and air. The chorus "All we like sheep have gone astray" was also added.

Dr. Briggs Gives Reading Tests In Georgia Schools

Dr. David H. Briggs and his two psychology assistants at the request of the superintendent of the Gordon Lee Schools went to Chickamauga, Ga., on Wednesday and returned on Saturday. Dr. Briggs lectured on remedial reading to student groups, the local PTA, and a meeting of the teachers of Walker county. He supervised the testing of the eyes of over a hundred children. Superintendent Patterson, in his interest for improved reading conditions in public schools, was responsible for the interest of the community in the tests.

Dr. Louis H. Evans To Lead Series Of February Meetings At College

The leader of the 64th series of February meetings, which will begin Feb. 8, 1940, will be Rev. Dr. Louis H. Evans, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church, Pittsburgh, Pa. Dr. Evans is returning to Maryville college to render this great service for the second time. He was here before in 1936, when he proved to be one of the most dynamic and popular speakers which the college has had.

Dr. Evans is pastor of one of the large and influential churches of the nation and serves also as president of the Presbyterian Board of National Missions, which conducts one of the most extensive service enterprises of the world. He is in great demand as a speaker at young people's groups and on college campuses throughout the nation and is sought with equal interest by other religious groups. In the past summer he was called to San Francisco to deliver the sermon on the Church Day at the World's Fair.

Dr. Evans is a graduate of Occidental college, Los Angeles, Calif., and of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Chicago, and holds honorary degrees from Washington and Jefferson college and Jamestown college. After graduation from the seminary he went to North Dakota. After several years of service there he spent a year with his father, a noted Bible teacher, on a trip around the world, visiting colleges, universities, and missions in the many countries of the Far East and Near East. After his return he became pastor of the Presbyterian church at Wilmington, Calif., where in three years he received over 400 persons into the church, doubling its membership; he then went to the pastorate at Pomona, Calif., where he remained for four years and where he received almost 600 persons into the church. He went to his present pastorate in Pittsburgh ten years ago.

Dr. Evans was an all-California state end in football and an all-conference and all-southern California player in basketball. He played on the Los Angeles Athletic Club basketball team the year that it won the championship of the United States. He is

Milanov And Carlsson Will Give First Dual Singing Concert On Artist Series

On Monday, Jan. 22, 1940, Zinka Milanov, dramatic soprano, and Carin Carlsson, Swedish contralto, will give the first dual singing concert that Maryville has ever had. The joint concert will be held in Voorhees Memorial chapel at 8:15 p.m.

Zinka Milanov is a Czechoslovakian soprano. She has been singing in this country for four years and is one of the leading sopranos in the Metropolitan Opera Co. She has sung in many operas and under many of the great conductors. Everyone who has heard her has praised her very highly. Last summer she sang in Switzerland with Alexander Kipnis under Toscannini.

Carin Carlsson is in this country for her first season and is on a singing tour of the country. She comes from Sweden and there she sang with the great Swedish tenor, Bjoerling. He said that her voice was one of the finest he had ever heard.

This concert is the second in the Maryville Artist Series.

Twelve Men Enter Contest To Be Held In February For T. T. Alexander Prize

Last week, about twelve young men entered the T. T. Alexander oratorical contest. A preliminary contest is first held, the judges being the faculty of the Department of Bible and Religious Education. The winners of the preliminaries enter the final contest, which is judged by competent men, selected by the faculty. Each contestant has four subjects on which he may speak: The Diety of Jesus Christ; Christ's Atonement for Sin; The Resurrection; and Salvation Through Faith.

The T. T. Alexander prize fund was established by a friend of the college, who desired to remain anonymous and to have the prize named in honor of one of Maryville's foreign missionaries. The interest from this fund, which usually amounts to about eighty dollars, is awarded annually to the winners of first and second places in the contest.

By the plan of alternation used, women students participate one year and men students the next. Last year, Marianna Allen won first prize, and the second prize was divided between Arda Walker and Jean Naberhuis. The contest is open to members of all classes. The winner will probably be announced immediately after the February meetings.

"Christmas Carol" To Be Presented In Chapel At 7:30

Singing Of Christmas Carols To Be Held Under Lighted Tree By Thaw

Charles Dickens' "Christmas Carol" will be presented this evening in Voorhees chapel at 7:30. Opening with an organ recital of Christmas music played by Miss Katharine Davies, the pageant will be followed by the annual singing of Christmas carols around the lighted tree on the campus.

The program will open with an organ recital by Miss Katherine Davies. She will play: "Cradle Song" from the Christmas Oratorio by Bach, "Where Wild Judea Stretches Far" by Soughton, "March of the Magi Kings" by Dubois, and "Improvisation of 'God Rest you Merry'" by Roberts.

The story will be read by Mrs. Nita Eckles West, while twenty-five students of the Dramatic art department present the scenes in pageant form. The pageant is directed by members of the class of religious drama.

The principal characters are played by: Frank Brink as Scrooge, Charles Fish as Bob Cratchitt, Elsie Klingman as Mrs. Cratchitt, Bob, son of Dr. Frank McClelland as Tiny Tim, David Hall as Fezziwig, Virginia Berg as Mrs. Fezziwig, Edward Thomas as the ghost, Russell Stevenson as Scrooge's nephew. Louise Allen, Elsie Klingman, and Ruth West are stage managers and in charge of costumes.

The annual singing of Christmas carols is under the direction of the social committee. It will be held around the lighted tree in front of Thaw immediately after the presentation of the "Christmas Carol."

The class in Religious Drama gave this program on Thursday night, Dec. 4 at the First Christian Church in Knoxville before a regional meeting of Christian Endeavor.

BOOK BRIEFS

By BRASHER BAILEY

This is designed to suggest some of the new library books and also as suggestions for reading this vacation. Covering wide fields of interest and including many best sellers, the large assortment of recent books includes among others:

"Queen Anne Boleyn", by Francis Hackett, is a highly entertaining, as well as educational biography of Henry the Eight's second wife. Written in a novel, confidential manner, this story of Anne Boleyn will have wide appeal, especially for those who in their study of history have longed to know of all those little details concerning this very important and romantic character.

Joseph C. Lincoln's "Christmas Days," a timely little story of Cape Cod, epitomizes the best and finest way of the New England life and of the Christmas spirit found there.

Dorothy Thompson, whom we have known chiefly through her column, has, in her "Let the Record Speak", brought to us a brutal, impersonal analysis of what has happened in regard to the European situation, why it has happened, and its meaning to the democratic nations.

"Inside Asia" by John Gunther, gives all the facts that the average westerner wants to know about Asia. It is a representation of the events, the personalities, and of the forces that are changing Asia today.

All the brilliantly colorful background of New Orleans during the Mardi Gras season is captured in "Days Before Lent", a powerful and profoundly moving story by Hamilton Basso.

"Days of Our Years", an autobiography by Pierre van Passen, is, in a large and literal sense, the biography

Christmas Spirit

A Merry Christmas to you! We've heard this greeting many times, and it brings to us memories of the most joyful season of the year. Fir trees covered with snow, green holly wreaths, candles, carols, a bright and crackling fire, mistletoe—all these are part of Christmas, but they couldn't make a Christmas. We need the Christmas spirit—the spirit of joy and love which pervades the world over at the celebration of the birth of Christ.

Christmas is a world wide day and no matter where or who you are the Christmas spirit still prevails to give you a sense of joy and love. The celebration and festivities take such varied forms in different countries, but they have the same theme, "Peace on earth, good-will toward men."

Christmas began years before the birth of Christ, but was a festival in honor of the sun. It was not until 300 A.D. that Christmas was set as a definite date for the remembering of Christ's birthday. Since then this day has been abolished at certain periods in various countries, but has been re-established again. The customs also which accompany the day have varied but many have become so firmly fixed that no Christmas would seem real without their being a part of it.

The birth of a babe has changed the world and has changed it so that we today may enjoy happiness and fuller lives. We have often heard conjectures about what the world would be if "it had not witnessed this great event." We sometimes wonder ourselves just what a year would be without the Christmas celebration and spirit.

To us on a college campus Christmas probably means more than to many others. It means home, a vacation, and a family to welcome us. And for these we ought to be sincerely joyful.

So to all of you, we wish a very Merry Christmas!

Situations In Sector

charge a horde of screaming shrapnel. There is an unexplainable feeling in the air. From all signs it might appear to be the beginning of a tremendous storm.

Dec 22 39 11:00 Jr sk lp All is quiet. There has been almost no action since the afternoon of the fifteenth, except for headquarters in the "Anderson" sector. Repair work on shelters and fortifications and sentry duty at the powerhouse have the appearance of calm watchfulness; a camp awaiting the morning when a fierce battle of intellect will begin again. In the "Maid Shop" machine gun nest, there is a steady buzz that probably comes from those on duty there. Overhead, dark misty clouds rush by and a cold wind howls around the fortifications and through the cedars. One sees a mighty sector in chilly sleep, longing yet dreading the day of renewed action.

Santa Hears From Maryville Students Who Are Being "Good Little Boys" Yes?

By CARSON BREWER

Dear Santa:

I have been a good little boy all this year. Please bring me a choo-choo train, a doll carriage, and some checkers.

Hopefully,
Olson Pemberton Jr.

The above epistle to his majesty, Santa Claus, was written by Olson Pemberton a few days ago. It was sent out of the college post office in a bundle of letters headed west. In all probability, its final resting place will be Santa Claus, Missouri. That's the place where all such heart-rending appeals to Santa usually wind up.

In order to save postage for the other occupants of Carnegie, we've decided to publish the Xmas wishes of the boys we can contact rather quickly. (There's a deadline to make in a few minutes.)

Joe Etheredge says, "Santa, I've been good. Would it be asking too much of you to bring me an air rifle, a cap pistol, an electric train, a football, and a basketball?"

Dopey Lentz says: "Mr. Santa Claus, maybe I haven't been guite as good as I should have been. I'll be glad to call things event if you'll just manage to bring me a new pair of garters and a fire engine."

Russ Stevenson wants a nice big RCA radio and victrola set. Please, Santa! Russ has been awfully good.

Paul Sieber says: "Santa, if you have any nice blue-eyed blonds in stock, I wish you'd bring me one."

Harry Johnson begs: "Santa, if you could manage it any way in the world, I wish you'd bring me enough egg men for me to put one on my plate every morning for the rest of the year."

John A. Thompson wants a motor boat (bathtub size), a new pair of roommates, and an "A" on an English theme.

When we went up to room 333 to get the order of George Webster, Cliff Proctor, and Paul Akana, the boys were not at home. But, Santa, judging from the appearance of the room, we don't believe you could go wrong in giving them a vacuum cleaner. (Don't be offended, fellows. We're ordering one, too.)

Coach Honaker was another fellow we were unable to contact. However, if you have any nice pass-snatching ends who could sufficiently fill the shoes recently vacated by Capt. Joe Etheredge, I just know Coach would be tickled to death to get one of them. And, Santa, Coach wouldn't be mad if he waked up on Christmas morning to find his other sock sagging under the weight of a tackle built according to the same general measurements as those of the departing Arnold Kramer. Just lay some equally capable replacements for Nig Wilburn, Chuck Kindred, and E. B. Smith next to Coach's bed, where he can see them when he first puts his feet out into the yuletide air.

For the rest of us, Santa, just fix things up in a way that we can all have one whale of a big time during Christmas.

of athletic interest and build, being 6 feet 4 inches in height. He is in his early forties.

Dr. Evans cannot accept more than a fraction of the speaking invitations which come to him each year, and yet he has consented to spend ten days in Maryville college, bringing to the college his genuine friendship, his experience of many places, and his unusual ability. Above all, he is an earnest, evangelical Christian minister, whose chief aim is to help young people enter into the abundant life which Christ offers.

During the February meetings this year the singing will be led by Rev. Sidney E. Stringham, pastor of the Epworth Methodist church of St. Louis, who comes back to the college to render this service for the 18th time in the past 19 years. Mr. Stringham is counted one of the true friends of Maryville college and brings to the meetings a genuine, vigorous, and capable leadership. His contribution to the services each day is a very important one.

Clever and entertaining is Angela Thirkell's story of "The Brandons". The characters were particularly well presented. None of us would ever expect to find in this world a Mrs. Brandon or an Aunt Sissie, but we like to read about them.

For thrills and a tense emotional narrative there is "I Wanted Wings", the story of the making of an aviator, by Beirne Lay Jr.

"Country Lawyer" is the human document of both a man and of the law profession as told by the "Country Lawyer's" son, Bellamy Partridge.

For nature lovers and amateur gardeners, "The Garden in Color", by Louise Beebe Wilder, provides a special treat. Contained in it are natural color reproductions of 500 plants, and full comments and descriptions of each.

Here's to your Christmas—may it bring all you hope for.

SPORT ECHOS

APOLOGIES TO SORE SENIORS. Due to very unfortunate circumstances the Echo was unable to print the story of the Wilson Bowl classic. A 6-0 victory for the seniors over the Satellites was the story. For the first time in intramural history, school colored uniforms and floodlights fell upon "Y" athletics. The game moreover featured probably the best touch football ever shown around the hill. The game was tight and took the seniors' superior teamwork to finally settle the score. It gave the seniors a perfect record, and a great deal of self confidence for the interclass cup.

ALTHOUGH THE SPORTS ANNOUNCING crew makes a lot of noise, we hear very little about them. It's about time that a kind word was put in for their efforts. The football crew consists of Glenn Young at the mike, John Guinter on the field and Vaughn Lyons at the board. They have a pretty nifty setup in the box, and though they don't produce like the big time, they function considerably better than some of the Knoxville local talent we've heard. Besides football they run their amplifiers around to the track meets and swimming meets as well. Anybody who wants to stick out their neck for a lot of complaints and very little praise, might see about taking over the job next year. Young is a senior and must relinquish a three year stand in the box to somebody else who can stand it.

CHRISTMAS PRINTING PROBLEMS prevents us from giving any account of the Scotties' cage duels Tuesday and Wednesday nights. For the fans who didn't see the games, and from the defeat we received last week, and took for granted that the Scots weren't so strong overlooked one point. McGill is one of the best shot artists that has ever come out of Maryville, and the team he had built around him had seen as much basketball as any of the Highland stars. As a matter of fact, Maryville should enter the season with a very good five, and give her conference rivals fits if not de-feats.

Smoky Mountain officials completed a lot of business the other day. The squabble about King leaving the conference is still undecided, the only information we have is that they were refused permission to leave, and an investigation will ensue. Appalachian Teachers did remove themselves from the SMC. Dr. McClelland of Maryville is the new vice-president of the conference. Besides that they named five from the Scotties team for all-conference honors, including both our captains for next year. Carson-Newman undefeated, and tied only by Maryville took home the trophy.

Fischbach's Proteges Turn In Time Trials

Last Saturday evening at 7:45 in the college swimming pool before approximately 300 fans, the Maryville college swimming team held an inter-squad meet. The squad was evenly divided into two teams for this exhibition with lettermen being placed on both teams to insure a close and interesting struggle.

The plan behind this meet was to give the new men an idea of what real competition in a meet would be like, and to put into practice that which they have been learning in the past weeks of practice. It was also held to show where improvement is needed so that work may be done on the weak points during the weeks to come. The times that were recorded during the course of the evening were not valued as much as the experience which each man gained.

Team B carried off the laurels, scoring a 43-32 triumph over team A. Frank Cross was the individual high scorer of the evening when he racked up 13 1-2 points.

Sophs Defeat Frosh, 15-13

Although the women's frosh basketball team led during most of the game Saturday night, they lost to the sophs by two points, the score being 15-13. The one remaining game of the season, that between the sophs and the junior-seniors was played Tuesday night.

McGill Good For 26 Points As Friendsville Romps To 46-36 Win

For the first chapter of Maryville's 1939-40 basketball season, played Saturday evening in the Alumni gym, the Scotties were handed their initial setback as the Friendsville Pirates romped to the long end of a 46-36 score.

Captain Joe Etheredge drew first blood as the Highlanders forged ahead early in the first period. After Coach Honaker's free substitutions in the second quarter, the visitors took the lead which they held throughout the remainder of the game. At the midway whistle, the Orange and Garnet scrubs were holding the invaders at 17-15. The closest count which the Honakermen could establish in the last half, came when the varsity five pushed the score to 28-21 in the third frame.

Outstanding for the Scotties were Etheredge, who led his team with 12 points, and the two Baird brothers, Bill and Boydson. High scorer for the visitors with 26 points was Howard McGill, Maryville's former all-Smoky Mountain Conference forward. Following "Flash" with ten points for the Bucs, was Quillen, former Friendsville all-state center.

After seeing every man of the Highland recruit corps, Clemster, Humphries, and Taylor stood out for the fans as valuable varsity material.

In the preliminary attraction at 6:30, between the freshmen and sophomore girls, the upper classmen outpointed their rivals, 15 to 13.

Interclass Sports

In the YMCA volleyball tournament, the five team entries have reached the semi-finals with the elimination of only one squad. After the holidays, the juniors will oppose the seniors, and the freshmen will meet the sophs for the right to play in the finals. In the second week of January, the winners play the consolation winners for the championship.

European War Prevented "Exchange Student" From Attending College Here

Maryville had high hopes of numbering among the student body for this year an "exchange student" from France. Exchange students are scholars taking up their study in foreign countries. This system of transferring students is one widely fostered by universities and colleges in the Americas, Europe, and Asia. The whole plan is under the supervision and arrangement of the Institute of International Education located in New York City. Each year, under the direction of this organization, many students have the opportunity of a year's study abroad and a new educational experience. They may go to South America, Europe, or whatever place is most desirable and available.

Last year, Maryville enjoyed the privilege of having a girl from Germany. This year a girl from France expected to live here on the hill for the 1939-40 term. However, her plans to continue her educational courses in America were thwarted by the present war situation. In the following letter received by Dr. McClelland she expresses her disappointment at this unfortunate circumstance:

"War is just coming over Europe at the very time of the departure of the French students to the universities of the United States.

"The S.S. "DeGrasse" is still leaving Havre the 9th of September for New York. But I am not able to sail on board of this ship because, just has wroted to me M. DiGeon of the "Office Universitatre" of Paris, I have to get another authorization of my both parents.

"I am in possession of my mother's one, but my father is in this moment fighting on the front and I don't know exactly where. I just know he is doing duty as a French officer.

"I hope that when the war will be finished, my fellowship will be still valuable.

"I am awfuly sorry I can't do my own duty in your college, this year, but I still hope I shall do it once.

I still respectfully yours,

Scenes From Shakespeare Presented At Studio Tea

At 8 o'clock last Monday night members of the Dramatic Art department held their annual tea in the Fine Arts studio. Scenes from three of Shakespeare's plays, "Taming of the Shrew", "Hamlet", and "Romeo and Juliet", as well as parts of Maxwell Anderson's "Mary of Scotland" were enacted. Two former Maryville students, Lois Black and Gordon Bennett, were guest artists. College students taking part were Frank Brink, Mary Frances Spurlock, Carol Dawn Ward, Jean Hutchison, and Bill Gehres. Commentator was Esther McCollum.

Nearly Three Hundred Freshmen Get Grades At Personnel Office

Mid-semester grades, issued to 294 freshmen last week, were to be favorably compared to those of other years' according to a statement made on Wednesday by Dr. Frank D. McClelland, director of personnel. "There were fewer really low grades, and many were unusually high," Dr. McClelland said. The grades, which were based on the work of the students through November 14, were mailed to the students' homes on Nov. 24.

Beginning on Monday, Nov. 27, continuing through that week and on Monday of last week, the reports were issued in alphabetical order to the students. Each freshman was counciled concerning his grades and his ability to do college work as based on three tests which were given at the first of the semester. These tests were: the Purdue English Placement Test, the 1939 Council on Education Psychological Examination, and the Iowa silent reading test.

The English placement test was given to determine into which English class the student should be placed. The Psychological test determined the student's knowledge concerning mathematics, science, language, and other important subjects. The reading examination was a test of the student's accuracy in reading and a gauge of his rate of speed.

These grades, according to Dr. McClelland, are issued as soon as possible so that the student and the parents might see just what the student's scholastic standing is. These grades are not necessarily forecasts of the students' final grade.

Tall Tales

As told to: FRANK E. HAGAN and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Ever Meet a High-Behind?

MANY a tenderfoot has protected the camp from a high-behind, but not one of them has seen this fabulous beast.

The high-behind, as all Westerners know, is equipped with a stiff tail, the end of which was fashioned like a posthole digger.

The chief delight of the high-behind was to turn on its back, balance on the tail and spin madly in circles. Of course you understand the rotary action of this indulgence bored a hole in the ground into which the high-behind invariably disappeared.

Night deries of a tenderfoot frequently included replenishment of condensed milk cans around the camp. This was the favorite food of the high-behind. The beast opened the cans with his metal tail and after three drinks was lulled into such abiding peace that the camp was safe for the night from his attacks.

VOLUME 25 MARYVILLE, TENN. JANUARY 13, 1940 NUMBER 14

Berg And Johnson Take Leads In Alpha Sig—Theta Epsilon Production, Mar. 1

Tommy Stahl, Bill Felknor, George Phelps, And Erwin Ritzman Are Also Cast In Leads

Virginia Berg and Melvin Johnson have been cast in the romantic leads of Miriamne and Mio in Maxwell Anderson's "Winterset", Alpha Sigma and Theta Epsilon's contribution to the mid-winter dramatic season at Maryville college. Tommy Stahl as Trock, Bill Felknor as Garth, George Phelps as Esdras, and Erwin Ritzman as Judge Gaunt take the other leads in the play which is to be presented in Voorhees chapel on March 1.

Dick Watkins, cast as Shadow; Jack Harwood, the hobo; Bruce Walters, Carr; John Ballenger, Lucia; Lois Thorson, Piny; E. B. Smith, policeman; and Howard Dizney, the Radical are cast in the other parts in the play.

The play is set in a large eastern city and the time, as the title infers, is in the dead of winter.

"Winterset" is a romantic-drama which deals with the lower levels of society in the slums of a large city. The plot is built around the romance of Miriamne, the daughter of an old Jewish Rabbi, and Mio, whose father was electrocuted for a murder that he did not commit. To further complicate the plot, it develops that the brother of Miriamne, Garth, is a member of the gang of thugs who were responsible for the mis-carriage of justice in the death of Mio's father.

Action is motivated in the play by the conflicting desires of Mio in proving that his father was innocent and clearing his name, and that of pursuing his love for Miriamne.

"Winterset" is one of the most successful of modern realistic dramas and enjoyed quite a successful run on Broadway. The play was copyrighted in 1935 and was only released recently for amateur production.

Cunningham First Of Flying Class To Solo

The twenty members of the aviation class under the Citizens Pilot Training program have started actual flying at Tyson McGhee airport, Miss Louise Carson, aviation instructor, announced recently.

Individual members speak enthusiastically of this important phase of the course, and most of them now have three to five hours in the air to their credit. A minimum of eight hours in the air is necessary before any student may solo. One, Alden Cunningham, has already soloed.

The course enables each student to have the necessary 35 solo hours in the air to pass the test for a private pilot's license when completed in June.

Instruction is being given in navigation, plotting and maintaining a given course, reading maps, making corrections for external conditions. "Lessons are only thirty minutes long," said Miss Carson, "because after that, most students are usually too tense to benefit from their instruction."

Besides learning to fly straight and level courses, the pupils are finding out by experience what to do in spins and stalls. The importance of co-ordination, confidence, and balance are taught by means of exercises.

The Citizens' Pilot Training program, the government believes, will further interest in aviation by providing 20,000 well-trained licensed pilots over a period of five years.

Lloyd Attends Meetings In Philadelphia, Pa.

Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd was in Philadelphia, Pa., on Tuesday for a meeting of the administrative committee of the Presbyterian Department of Church Cooperation and Union.

Also on Monday and Tuesday in Philadelphia he attended meetings of the Presbyterian College Union, the Pan- Presbyterian College Union, the Council of Church Boards of Education (representing all Protestant denominations), and the National Conference of Church Related Colleges, in all of which organizations he now or did last year hold offices.

On Wednesday he returned home by plane and Thursday drove to Nashville to speak that afternoon at the annual meeting of the Tennessee Public School Officers Association.

Freshman Debate Team Is Chosen

Girls And Boys Teams Of Five Each Chosen

Members of the freshman debate team were chosen after tryouts, which were conducted Monday afternoon in Dr. Davis' class room.

Roy Crawford, Jack Kramer, Trevor Rees-Jones, James Witt, and alternate, James Wise were selected by the judges to comprise the men's team.

The women's team will consist of Phyllis Anne Cain, Frances J. Hellums, Edith Monroe, and Nancy Wood. Natalie Yelton was selected as alternate.

These men and women were selected on the basis of their speeches rendered in the competitive tryouts, in which twenty-eight students took part. All the students who took part in the debate tryouts, although all of them did not make the team, will be given an hour's credit. Students who made the team will continue the class next semester, and obtain another hour's credit.

In the tryouts each participant was allowed to speak five minutes in the constructive part of his debate. Three minutes were granted for rebuttal.

The tryouts, which were in the form of regular debates, were judged by Prof. Queener, Dr. Hunter, and Dr. Williams.

The question for debate was: "Resolved that the federal government should own and operate the railroads."

Maryville And Other Presbyterian Colleges Extend Forward Fund

Maryville college is extending the New Forward fund to Knoxville and Chattanooga during the week of January 22. The Knoxville Presbyterian dinner will be held in the S & W Cafeteria on Monday, Jan. 22, at 7:00. Maryville is joining with other Presbyterian colleges of Tennessee in simultaneous campaigns.

The Knoxville Presbyterian dinner will be held under the auspices of the committee on Christian Education, Synod of Tennessee, and the four participating institutions: Cumberland U., Lebanon; Maryville college; Tusculum college, Greeneville; and the Westminster Foundation, Nashville. These participating colleges will solicit a limited number of persons in these cities in behalf of the New Forward Fund.

Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd and Dr. James E. Clarke of Nashville will be the principal speakers at the Knoxville dinner. Dr. James D. Hoskins, president of the University of Tennessee, will be master of ceremonies. Forty nine prominent Knoxvillians have been selected on the sponsoring committee and around five hundred persons are expected to attend this information dinner.

Maryville committees have been formed in both cities. In Knoxville, Judge S. O. Houston is serving as chairmen, Mr. Robert J. McClelland, president of the Provident Insurance company, and Mr. Walter P. Coolidge, of the Chattanooga Printing company, are serving as co-chairmen in Chattanooga. The Chattanooga dinner will be held on Jan. 23 and about two hundred and fifty are expected to attend. Dr. Lloyd was in Chattanooga last Friday making arrangements. The solicitations will continue for two weeks.

Carlson And Hess Cancel Artists Series Engagement Due To Situation Abroad

Georgia Graves, American Contralto, Substitutes For Carlson; Tureck Will Replace Hess As Pianist

Professor George D. Howell, who is in charge of the Maryville College Artists Series, has issued the following bulletin:

We are sorry to announce that Myra Hess, previously announced as appearing on the Maryville College Artists Series Feb. 22, has cancelled all her American engagements for the year. The following in the form of a cablegram was sent her American manager: "My work in England has assumed such immense importance that fully realizing my obligations in America, I feel it impossible to leave my country in these fateful days and must therefore most regretfully sacrifice my American tour."

Likewise, the recital by Milanov and Carlson, scheduled for Jan. 22, has been changed. Due to the fact that Carlson is unable to leave Sweden because of the English blockade, Georgia Graves, American contralto, has been substituted, and will appear in joint recital on March 11.

In looking about for a woman pianist to appear on our series we finally chose a young American pianist whom we feel will come more nearly giving us a Hess type of program than any other. So thoroughly a musician is she that Sage Magazine for June, 1938 honored this pianist, mentioning her alone of all the pianists who appeared in New York during the 1937-1938 season "for her recitals of all the piano music of J. S. Bach, a remarkable achievement." Another tribute of this young, 25 year old pianist, is given her by Randolph Macon Woman's College, where she appeared last year. To quote Prof. Lipscombe, "We have presented Iturbi, Gieseking, Myra Hess, Bauer, Lhevinne, Brailowsky, Tureck and others. With the exception of Hess, Tureck is the only one invited to return the following year. She is superb. I recommend her with enthusiasm."

Her name is Rosalyn Tureck (pronounced Tur-eck). The late Laurence Gilman writing of her in the role of guest soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra under Eugene Ormandy appearing in Carnegie Hall, New York City, Dec. 16, 1935, her debut year, said: "Last evening's Philadelphia Orchestra concert presented a piano soloist of parts. She chose to play the most formidable of all concertos for the piano, the huge and glorious and frightening Number Two of Brahms, with its heroic truculence, its golden laughter, its tempestuous moods, its vernal exuberance, its ineffable poetry. The best and most heartening thing about her playing was that it came closest to the essential truth of music in that part of it which makes the most exacting demands upon the pianist's insight and sensibility and musicianship—the incomparable slow movement, with its enraptured loveliness, its depth of poetry and self commun-

"Uncle Sam", College Postman, Passed Away On December Twelfth

For about fifteen years, "Uncle Sam" Martin has delivered happiness, love and sorrow to the students of Maryville. He and his aged model T brought many thousand pieces of mail each year. A number of years ago, he was accompanied by a big German police dog that ran along the sidewalk.

"Uncle Sam" bid for the contract when it was still held by students. He was never late, until late years when he was frequently sick, but even then he saw that the mail came through. Next to the service of "Uncle Sam" was that of his up-to-date, rapid delivery wagon. The model T had, according to "Daddy" Knapp, "already served a long apprenticeship" before it began mail service.

"Uncle Sam" ran a thriving livery stable near the Southern depot until the end of the horse and buggy days. Although he had that uncertain dignity of a government servant, he was a pleasant old gentleman. His favorite topics were politics and the weather and his first duty was regular attendance at church and Sunday school.

Mr. Samuel G. Martin died at his home on the twelfth of December from a heart attack. His absence was hardly noticed during the rush and excitement of the holidays, but many students are missing the familiar sight of the old model T backing up to the post office.

Leap Year Arouses Great Confusion As Witnessed By Reporters Here

By JEAN BARNES

I don't know whether it's from the Bible, the Constitution, or just where, but how many of y'all have heard that very wise and serious proverb:

"One year in four
The girls adore
And men abhor."?

Well, I guess there's little poetry and less truth in that old rhyme. Of course the girls appreciate Leap Year, but they think the fellows should too. After all the girls have to treat them to a good time and, willing or not, give a very much unneeded boost to their colossal masculine conceit by exhibiting an interest in them.

When you first hear the name Leap Year, do you picture the caricature of the gaunt old maid running with awkward determination after, and grasping at, a timid, retiring man? Ah, that would be the ideal situation, but alas, a dreamer's Utopia; who ever heard of a modest man! And yet it was a situation something like this that caused this Leap Year celebration to be established.

By the way, you men owe your imagined misery to the Scotchmen; they certainly were not "Scotch" in this case. Way back in 1288, they made a law which enabled any unmarried woman to propose marriage in Leap Year. Bless the Scotch! According to this law, it cost those poor harassed gentlemen (or should I say just men?)

By TREVOR REES-JONES

Once every four years comes Leap Year, and with this Leap Year comes a most unusual party for Maryville students. A topsy-turvy or "turn about's fair play" party is held in the gymnasium. The ladies (there still are a few left) have to date the men, call for them, and escort them back to their dormitory after the party. The tricks some girls use are very peculiar—they either send a note asking for a date or they use the telephone in the library. Let's look at the orthodox fashion, however. The girl goes up to or approaches, very timidly of course, a boy whom her eye is set on and says, "May I take—er—have a date for—the party—oh, you know." Maybe she pulls the antiquated gag of wishing him success in getting a date (and that is not nice, girls) or maybe she really wants a date and finally inveigles him into giving her a date. And so she has a date for the party. Next she must storm the Bastille (Carnegie)—they almost tear it down—at the proper time and grab him. If he is fifteen minutes late, has a shiny nose, and P.H.D., that is perfectly all right. After helping him put his overcoat on, she takes him the round-about way and finally lands at the gym. Since there is no usher the girl must select the seats. Then after a good long program of fun and frolic she escorts him to his domicile and

Education A Tantalizing Process

There is a character in Greek mythology named Tantalus who was condemned to the underworld because he had insulted the gods. There his punishment was to be perpetually thirsty and hungry, and though he stood deep in water and within arm's grasp of fruit he could never quench his thirst or appease his hunger because the water and the fruit would always elude his grasp. The college students is like Tantalus. Surrounded with opportunities and the knowledge, the world within his grasp, it yet eludes him because four years and the work that must be done to fulfill requirements constantly prevent his quenching the thirst that tantalizes him.

It is of course true that knowledge unapplied is worse than ignorance, and there is much truth in the belief that all knowledge does not come from books, yet within the reach of everyone here are the tools waiting to be applied. The library comes into mind immediately, for on its shelves are in easily accessible form the wisdom of the ages. The faculty and fellow students providing opportunities for the exchange of opinions with sympathetic minds is a second advantage peculiar to college environment. And third is the chance to prepare in writing personal opinions subject to the assistance of more advanced students, undergraduates and graduates. These three college functions recall Bacon's famous statement, "Reading maketh a full man, conference a ready man, and writing an exact man." To so develop is the advantage of every man in an institution of higher learning.

Tantalus was frustrated, and to a certain extent so will we be when we try to follow every lead that our education suggests. Yet it is part of the responsibility of the college graduate that he should follow the trails which his education has opened to him. Interests vary, abilities vary, yet there is enough wherever one has devoted his time while in college to keep alive his knowledge of that subject. There is always something unexplored, enough that we will not feel the frustration that comes upon us now when we try to do everything we would like to do. It is part of its nature that a college suggests, and part of his responsibility that the graduate pursue these suggestions.

Conducted By GEORGE L. HUNT

REQUISCAT: 1930-1939

I have read a lot of summaries of the year 1939 as closing a period of three hundred and sixty-five days, but nowhere have I seen it commented that the year closes a decade. In that it is significant, for the nineteen thirties were eventful, filled with happenings the importance of which we will not realize for years to come. There is a danger of overemphasizing the scenes of history that pass while we are on the stage because they are contemporary with us, yet during the years that most of us have gone through high school and college things of lasting effect have been happening.

The decade began in a depressing atmosphere occasioned by the world-wide depression and ends in a depressing one as the world is plunged in war. In 1928 Herbert Hoover had been elected president on a platform of prohibition, prejudice against his Catholic opponent, and prosperity doomed for a fall. I remember the election of 1928 when we were huddled around our battery radio listening to the returns. I had been taught a verse by some religious bigot about the beliefs of the Democrat candidate that began

When Al Smith is elected,
You can take this tip from me,
The orders from the Vatican
Will be cabled overseas.

Smith's religious affiliations was the big issue in 1928—that is a disgraceful thing in our history—but it would not loom nearly as ominously pow.

1930 and the years immediately following saw the increase in airplane travel, the rise of installment buying, the further use of radio as it improved. Columbia, the largest university in the country, registered in 1930 33,144 students. The Empire State building was completed in 1931, and as the election of 1932 neared there were seven million unemployed in this country.

The four years of Hoover had seen definite change of thought regarding the effectiveness of the eighteenth amendment. In 1928 he had campaigned on a dry platform, but in 1932 the issue was between a compromise Republican platform of state option and the Democratic platform of repeal. The Democratic victory insured the doom of national prohibition, and ushered in the era which makes the decade so significant, the era of the New Deal.

It is not alone because of the national debt that we will long remember the years of Franklin D. Roosevelt. It is because of the philosophy the man represents, because of the liberal reforms he successfully inaugurated, and because in him is the culmination of the trend of thought of men since the war. It is earliest represented by his appointment of a woman to his cabinet, seen next in the lightning way he declared a bank holiday on his second day in office, and strongly felt as he tried to institute changes which took even his intimate friends by surprise. The alphabet was recruited, and beginning with NRA we were beseiged by an alphabetic potpourri that made our brains swim: CCC, NYA, NLRB. Model communities, reforestation, governmental control of natural resources, governmental interference into private business, and the mass re-employment of men who soon learned to rely on the government for their daily bread. All these were projects which the years of Roosevelt saw instituted. To some extent individual initiative was stifled, and the PWA jokes are often more truth than poetry. How will all this effect our thinking in the future? That it will vitally affect it is beyond question. Some say that by Roosevelt's actions and the thought behind them civilization has been retarded. Certainly there has been a disastrous de-emphasis of worthy values. Certainly in a mad rush against the expiration of a political term there has been the neglect of the lasting things in men's hearts in favor of the immediate but transitory objective. As I look back on it now, I think Roosevelt has tried to do too much in eight years. His reforms are too vast to be swallowed in one lump. But future policies will not be able to return to the pre-New Deal platforms. There is a change in favor of liberalism which neither party will be able to neglect. The future's going to be different because Mr. Roosevelt has passed this way.

And the decade has been distinguished in other than political ways. The movies and the radio became a definite influence which could no longer be allowed the freedom of a precocious child. In the period from August 1936 to August 1937 the average attendance at motion picture houses was eighty-eight million people a week paying an average admission price of twenty-two cents. This was an increase of eight million people over the same period immediately preceding. In 1937 the number of college students had doubled since 1927, and one-seventh of the youths of college age in this country were in institutions of higher learning. President Hutchins at the University of Chicago was actively advocating classical education.

So we pronounce our benediction over 1930-1939 and enter 1940-1949.

The Moving Finger writes; and, having writ,
Moves on: nor all thy Piety no Wit
Shall lure it back to cancel half a Line,
Nor all they Tears wash out a Word of it.

ECHO SPORTS

THE HIGHLAND ECHO JANUARY 13, 1940

SPORT ECHOS

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

Everybody is out for something and the propaganda going around about this and that is terrific. We hope that all the freshmen do as well as their stories of their high school days. The seasons start this week in three sports: basketball, wrestling and swimming. Tryouts have been raging in wrestling finishing Thursday. Swimming time trials were held yesterday and today by Coach Fischbach. The basketball team has been meeting commercials in some good games. Conference rivalry will be raging this week as all three hit circuit foes.

Speaking of foes, the Fischmen meet Clemson, Tennessee, and Auburn in rapid succession here. The three rank highest in the south with the exception of Florida, who monotonously tops the Southeastern conference. Clemson was champion of the Southern conference last year. On tour the swimmers meet Berea of Kentucky probably, and Concord Teachers of North Carolina, both new foes.

The interclass volleyball tournament came to a close this week with the juniors winners in straight games over the seniors. This shouldn't humble the senile seniors, for the junior team sparked by Capt. Gord Findlay didn't lose a game to anybody, much less a set. They walloped the frosh, seniors, faculty and sophs (in order of self-importance) and took the seniors again in the playoff. The faculty must be commended—they dropped only to the juniors. Their machine, although subsidized, lacked reserves. When Case and Fischbach began to click, they were hard to handle. The YMCA has posted an intramural basketball schedule, and another season begins. The seniors look good in basketball with such bright gleams as Kramer, Procter, and Stevenson.

New faces in wrestling this year are so few that we should feel in top spirits for tonight's big fray. King is a new opponent, and may prove strong. The wrestlers themselves are in good shape; most of the low weights are below their weight classes and the heavyweights slightly above, which is rather unusual for a wrestling team. Galloway and Baptiste seem to be filling the holes left in last year's team by "Herky" and Ed Meares.

Last year's grunters were champions around here you remember even though Vandy tied them for the top spot. A complete schedule has not been given out, but Vandy will engage the lads probably twice again this year and should prove the best matches of the season.

Our basketball team has bowed to three commercial teams of all-stars, now including McGill's and Russell's return to harrass the new alma mater stars. In the only semblance of a college game, Maryville took Hiwassee, before Christmas. Against conference opponents Maryville strength will be measured for the first time this week. With Joe Etheredge back, and reservists continuing to improve, Maryville won't be a pushover for any game this year.

Knox Esso Edges Highlanders 38-36

The Maryville college cagers took two set-backs at the hands of crack commercial squads, Wednesday night. The varsity fell before the fast offensive of Esso of Knoxville by a close 38-36 score. Defoe Lumber walloped the seconds, 39-30, in the prelim.

Both games were slow. The Esso squad, especially, started slow and worked up a knock-down game in the last quarter with the score 22-20 in favor of the Scotty red shirts, Esso began to click and after dragging thru a slow third quarter in which they went ahead at 28-25, they overcame a fighting Highland rally to outscore Maryville at a final 38-36 count. The first half showed both teams vaunting defensive skill and an occasional long shot. Esso seemed to be getting the ball off the backboard, while the Baird boys' faking and Menning's one arm shots on the spot kept Maryville in the lead. In the third quarter Esso began to penetrate the Maryville defenses and push through enough crip shots to give them the winning margin. The fourth quarter looked like some of the famed scrapping that the Scots have a habit of pulling when they are behind. The absence of Joe Etheredge had a lot to do with the Scots failure to show better ball, especially when the going was as rough as the final quarter.

A lack of reserves is one weakness of this year's squad, however, freshmen Sweeney and Taylor looked good for future reference. A little more rivalry will take care of the slowness of the boys going down court. Although fouls were numerous, no one left the floor for Maryville. The Esso squad showed plenty of stuff in spots, which is usual in a squad made up of graduated stars.

"Union Now" Reviewed by Pieper At IRC Meeting

Mr. Archibald Pieper will be the speaker at the meeting of the International Relations club to be held in the philosophy class room, Thaw hall, Thursday evening at 6:45.

Mr. Pieper, who is the faculty advisor for the organization and a professor in the Social Science department, will review the book, "Union Now." The book, whose author is Clarence Case Streit, well known journalistic historian, has received more publicity than any other non-fiction book published in 1939. The theme is the union of all democracies for the benefit of the world.

Interclass

On Monday evening the final week of intramural volleyball got under way when the juniors met the seniors team and the sophs met the frosh.

The first game was held at 7:30 and the juniors kept their winning streak intact as they cut down the seniors, winning by the score of 2-0. The play of Boydson Baird and Lamar Russell sparked the play of the victorious juniors, while Stevenson and Procter stood out for the elders.

At 8:30 the sophomores and the freshmen took the court and the sophomores proceeded to take the frosh to the tune of 2-0. This game was predominately in favor of the sophs and they scored almost at will upon the frosh. The play of McGaha and Howard was a main factor in the defeat of the frosh. While going down to defeat Cooper and Sweeney played well.

The championship game between the sophomores and the juniors was played on Tuesday night, and the juniors emerged the victors. The sophomores were as outclassed in this game as they outclassed the freshmen the preceding night. The score of this game which decided the champions of the school was 2-0. Throughout the entire campaign the juniors failed to lose a single game to any opponent, winning every match by the score of 2-0.

Maryville Meets Hiwassee, Knox Y In Week's Games

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of next week, the Maryville varsity basketeers will oppose the Englewood Independents, Hiwassee college, and the Knoxville YMCA.

Although the Scotties travel to Madisonville for their Tuesday evening engagement with Hiwassee, the Honaker quint will entertain Englewood and Knoxville, Monday evening and Wednesday evening on the Alumni hardwood.

Since the Highlanders may be forced to take the Hiwassee floor minus the services of Capt. Joe Etheredge, Coach Honaker expects a close, hard fought game against the larger opponents who held the Orange and Garnet to a one point victory in their first fray.

The Smoky Mountain Conference race will be started on Jan. 25, when Maryville is scheduled to oppose Milligan on the Alumni court.

Nominating Committee Reports At Bainonian

Bainonian will hold its election of officers to serve next semester this evening in Bainonian hall. The nominations were made Jan. 5 by a committee composed of the officers and were presented to the society last Saturday evening.

The nominations are: president, Margaret Knox, Isabelle Jay; vice president, Marion Kelly, Marjorie Resides, Vivian Moore; secretary, Eleanor Long, Barbara Swift; program secretaries, Charlotte Colby and Eloise McNeely, Beth Pascoe and Jean Naberhuis; house chairmen, Pat Kennedy and Virginia Margaret Williams, Jean Patterson and Ann Ramey; pianist, Lucette de Barritt, Johnye Sue Long; sergeant at arms, Elizabeth Getaz, Jean McCutcheon; poster chairmen, Eleanor Miller and Josephine Gillette. The treasurer, Marion Northup, was elected for the whole year.

New Teams Fill Scot Swimming Schedule

The Maryville swimming team settled down to a heavy grind this week in preparation for a heavy schedule and the opener next week against Tusculum. Time trials are being run today, and Coach Fischbach is lining up a definite team.

The team looks strong this year with experienced men in each line, and strong freshman reserves. Among the outstanding meets of the year comes Clemson, champions of the Southern Conference last year, and the Vols, who according to their freshman prowess last year, plan to easily top the Southeastern Conference.

Lining up for the varsity at present are: Captain Findlay in the dashes, Paul Akana, three year man in the breast stroke and relays, Heydinger, senior backstroker, Craine, senior diver and also three year man, Lee, dashes, Cross, distance, Ritzman, in the breastroke, and outstanding newcomers: Mize, Walker, Bennett and others.

Aerial Darts Begin

Point system women have finished two units of their year's work, soccer and basketball; the winners in both these tournaments were the seniors. Early next week intra-class aerial dart games will be played. The winners of the frosh and soph games will then play each other, and likewise the winners of the junior and senior games. The victors of these preliminaries will play each other in the final on Thursday to determine the champion of the season.

Thrower's Defending Stars In Shape To Throw King Grunters

On Saturday night the 1940 edition of Maryville college's wrestling team will meet King college on the mat at Maryville.

The grunt and groaners have been hard at practice everyday since two weeks before the Christmas holidays and have been getting in shape and readiness for tonight's match since their return. Coach Thrower again has charge of the Orange and Garnet team, and has been whipping sixteen men who have been reporting for practice into a team which is expected to give a good account of itself tonight. The team this year is being managed by Percy Martin.

For two successive Saturdays following the match with King, the Scotties have two formidable foes in Vanderbilt and Chattanooga. King college was not on the Highlanders schedule for last year and the same for Chattanooga, but last year's schedule did contain Vanderbilt. The Scotties carried off the first match 16-14, but were defeated in the return match by Vandy, 8-20.

The probable wrestlers to appear on Saturday night's card are: Eveul, Baptiste, McDaniels, Schreiber, Everett, Hahn, Henschen, and either Culver or Galloway. The weights of these men ranges from 121 pounds to 180. Trials were held on Thursday afternoon when there was inter-squad matches.

CAMPUS CRUMBS

Well, here we are back to greet you again after a strenuous two weeks of this and that. It really is a good thing that we had to come back in order to recuperate from that vacation which always seems to completely floor everyone for a month after. . . We've seen signs that Santa Claus left our poor little college boys and girls a little more than a piece of coal this year—at least the good ones received a little more. It seems fine to see some new ties although some of them certainly have queer designs. Note, for example, Mr. Felknor's baby blue with graduated stripes; but for that matter, note any of Mr. Felknor's ties.

The night watchman has acquired a new car over the vacation and if any of you are planning something exciting it might be a fine plan to recognize this new one. . . . There seems to have been a number of engagements over the holidays and to the happy people we say congratulations! Congratulations go also to Dr. and Mrs. Collins! We extend our best wishes to them and to the baby.

Wasn't it wonderful to find snow on the ground when we got back here last week? We suppose you all noticed the oh's and ah's of those southerners who had never seen it before and also heard the stories the northerners told about the wonderful deep snow "we had at home". . . If any of you are looking for a man to sweep your room (he's quite busy, however), you might call on that illustrious Webster lad by the name of George. We found him in the library Wednesday afternoon pushing a broom around and trying to sweep up some little red candles belonging to Charlie Fish that he'd dropped. So here's your chance for an experienced boy to sweep! . . . We don't know just exactly what service you could put them to but you might have some good ideas. We hear that two other debaters, Otto Pflanze and Arnold Kramer, played, we mean wocked, at the postoffice this Christmas. So judging from that, they too ought to be experienced in their line. . . .

We're glad to see Dud Moore back. How were the chicken pox, sir? . . . Did any of you happen to see Arda Walker the other day? She was wearing five or six huge pins. She says it was a bet and we hope she collected. . . . The Leap Year party was the topic of the week last week and the effects have rather worn off by this time. The fellows have probably forgiven the fact that their dates were late and have gotten over the horrible sensation of thinking they might be stood up. We think the party was a success, and we've even heard the suggestion that they hold one every month so the girls will have a chance to ask all the fellows they would like to. Our suggestion is that at the next one the girls ask all the fellows they want at once and then see how things turn out. . . We thought Jeanne Stringham and Mary Ruth Copeland pulled a good one on Warren and Vernon by swapping dates. . . . We noticed some of the most unusual corsages at this swank affair. Cliff Procter with his exquisite radishes and George Hunt with his colorful and beautifully scented onion and carrot take the prize, however. . . . Coach Fischbach did a fine job with the games. We'd like to see the game idea tried a little more often. . . And the well directed and artistic style show made a hit, especially with the ladies present. We've heard that several of the dates asked their escorts to order them a dress or two. The most popular was the dress exhibited by Mademoiselle Evaul who made SUCH a dramatic entrance and exit. Vaughn Lyons takes the prize though for having "that certain swing". Perhaps some of these ministerials have missed their calling.

Athenian Elects Officers At Meeting This Evening

This evening at the Athenian meet- the election of officers for the second semester will take place. The following members have been nominated for the various offices: president, Harold Austin, George Hunt, and Tom Schaffer; vice president, Arthur Peterson, Fred Rawlings, and Bill Gehres; secretary, Henry Wick, Henry Millison, and Warren Corbett. The office of treasurer is for the whole year.

Dave Kidder will also play several piano selections as part of the program.

ing which evades all analysis. In this endearing music Miss Tureck played with a beauty and rectitude of musical feeling, a propriety of phrasing, a delicate and affectionate adjustment of dynamic tonal values which brought us movingly close to the exquisiteness of the master's thought. It is no wonder that she was recalled again and again."

Such are the press comments concerning her. She will prove as surprising and as delightful an artist as did Kipnis. Miss Tureck appears here Jan. 26, at 8:15 p.m.

stages of being organized. A constitution has been adopted, and officers will be elected tomorrow at a business session. It has had two meetings this year, both held in Knoxville, at which problems confronting student Christian organizations, particularly finances, were discussed.

Maryville's participation in the program of this organization is part of the work of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian associations. William Mooney and Genevieve MacCalmont are the local representatives to the steering committee of the Council. The women's organization will be hostess to the delegates at a tea following the service tomorrow.

Because this meeting is being held, there will be no services of the YM or YW at their scheduled times tomorrow.

"Information Please" At Law Club Wednesday

The Maryville college Law club held its regular bi-monthly meeting last Wednesday evening in Alpha Sigma hall, with the presentation of an "Information Please" program. Two groups were selected, one representing the south and one the north, to compete in the contest. After several rounds of questions, all of which pertained to some phase of American law, the north finally emerged the winner by a slight margin.

Also, at this meeting tentative plans were made in regard to the next mock trial to be presented by the organization. An attempt is being made, also, to secure George L. Berry, former U.S. senator from this state, as the guest speaker at the annual banquet which is scheduled for next May.

Leap Year Party

breathes a sigh of relief (as does the boy).

Whether the matter is carried on in an orthodox fashion or not, the boys get a big kick out of it. At least the boys who are lucky enough to have dates (and aren't some of us wallflowers?) enjoy it. So ends the only Leap Year party of a normal—note, I said normal—college lifetime.

about five dollars to say "No." So consider yourselves lucky, some of you modern Casanovas, if a feminine "Romeo" comes, without welcome, to ask you the all important question, because the most it will cost you to refuse the honor will be about five minutes of embarassment.

After that Leap Year party the other night, someone hailed one of the triumphant girls with "Didja have a good time?" What a picture that made! Enthusiasm lit up her face; she was all excited as she said, "Oh, I had a marvelous time; it was swell!"

"Well, what did you do all the time?"

"Oh, we had to propose to a lot of fellows and all that."

You see, she was just getting in practice. And it's more fun!

No longer do the girls have to dream of good times with the "one and only"; now it's the time when dreams come true. Maybe he didn't suspect her feelings; now she can make them known in a proper, ladylike manner. And that's a big help.

Oh, it's not at all a perfect situation; it's a bit of annoyance to "flatter the old thing" and ask him somewhere. There's infinitely more fun in having him pay her the compliment. The trouble, there, is that maybe he won't show up when she is raring to go places; in Leap Year, she can always see him.

This year brings a powerful lot of changes. Look at that poor, puzzled bunch of injured pride that formed itself into the Bachelor's Club.

There really ought to be a regular festival to honor whoever thought of this whole brilliant idea of having Leap Year celebrated this way. "Just look before you leap," everyone admonishes; then fellows, wait and see results. If it's love that makes the world go round, as the poet said, with mistletoe and Leap Year to help out love—girls, you're doin' all right!

Barer Presents Concert

Three bus loads of Maryville college students attended the third of the Knoxville Community Concert series last Monday night in the University gymnasium auditorium. The artist of the evening was Simon Barer, famed Russian pianist. Included in his program were numbers from Bach, Scarlatti, Chopin, Scriabin, Liszt, and Strauss.

Dr. J. A. Gates To Fill Vacancy In Bible Department

Ozark College Dean To Assume Duties Of Late Dr. Rodgers

Dr. John A. Gates has been appointed to the faculty of Maryville college to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Dr. M. M. Rodgers at the end of last summer. During the first semester, while a successor to fill Dr. Rodgers' place was being looked for,

DR. GATES

Dr. Rodgers' work was competently handled by Dr. S. E. Crothers, Mrs. R. J. Dollenmayer, and other members of the faculty. Dr. Gates is to begin his work here at Maryville college at the opening of the second semester.

Dr. Gates comes from the College of the Ozarks, in Arkansas, where he has been serving as Dean and Head of the been serving as dean and Religious Education. He holds the degree of B. A. from Parsons College, Iowa, the B. D. degree from Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Chicago, the M. A. from Northwestern University, and the Ph. D. degree from Yale University.

Prior to his position at the College of the Ozarks he served as pastor's assistant in the Bethlehem Presbyterian church, Minneapolis, Minn.; as Director of Religious Education in the Westminster Presbyterian church, in Minneapolis; as Pastor of the Brookfield Presbyterian church, Marseilles, Ill.; and as Minister of Education in the First Presbyterian church, South Bend, Ind. He was at Yale university from 1936 to 1938 during the completion of his work for the Doctor's degree and during that time was Director of Religious Education at the Church of the Redeemer, New Haven, Conn.

Dr. Gates has published various articles and series of articles, including young people's topics and Sunday school lessons for Presbyterian and Methodist publications.

Dr. Gates and his family will arrive in Maryville about Feb. 1.

Ten Colleges Represented In Debating Tournament Today

Maryville college is host today to the men's division of the Smoky Mountains Debate conference, whose tournament has been in progress in Thaw hall since 8:30 this morning. Those colleges taking part are Carson-Newman, Emory and Henry, Maryville, Lincoln Memorial, Tusculum, Tennessee Wesleyan, Mars Hill, East Tennessee Teachers, Cumberland, and Hiwassee.

Each college of the conference is allowed to enter an affirmative team of two men and a negative team of two men in the debate division of the tournament and two speakers in each of the other speech divisions of the tournament. Besides the debate division there will be extemporaneous speaking and oratory.

Maryville is represented in the tournament by Clifford Procter and Jack Zerwas on the affirmative team, and Arnold Kramer and Otto Pflanze on the negative team. Jack Zerwas and Arnold Kramer will also represent Maryville in oratory, and Robert Lamont and George Webster will take part in extempore for Maryville.

The debate division is conducted in tournament style with each team taking part in the two rounds of the tournament. There will be no announcement of results until 5:00 this afternoon, at which time the winners of each speech division will be announced.

Last year the tournament was held at Carson-Newman college and was won by the host team. Carson-Newman took first place in debate and oratory and East Tennessee Teachers won first place in extempore.

The girls division of the Smoky Mountain Debate conference will be held at Virginia Intermont college in Bristol, Va., on Feb. 17. Maryville will be represented at this tournament by Betty Moore, Sarah Lee Hellums, Harriet Miller and Arda Walker.

The only other tournament for which teams have been definitely assigned is the Appalachian tournament at Boone, N.C., on Feb. 1, 2 and 3 Maryville will be represented there by Lucille Lynch, Betty Moore, Janet Lindsay in the women's division, and Henry Wick, Hilton Wick, and Bill Felknor in the men's division.

"Drama In The Bible" Will Be Discussed By Mrs. Nita Eckles West

Mrs. Nita Eckles West, associate professor of dramatic art, will be the guest of the YMCA tomorrow evening and will speak at the worship service on the subject, "Drama in the Bible." Mrs. West has been on the Maryville faculty longer than any other active professor and is well known for her work in connection with the college dramatic program. On this same program Ruth Andrews will sing a contralto solo.

The YMCA has made plans for the February meetings prayer services in the men's dormitories before and during the series of meetings, and also intends to send letters to all new college men concerning the meetings.

Field Is Narrowed In Aerial Dart Competition

Preliminary contests in aerial dart have been played this week, narrowing the field of contestants to the following: frosh, "Willie" Williams, Jac Klauber, Becky Jones, Mary Ruth Baker, Aura Santiago, Lois King, and Jeane Stamp; sophs, Jean Naberhuis, and Marian Jenkins; juniors-seniors: Jean White and Betty Brient. The finals will be played next Tuesday. On the following Thursday practice on stunts will be started.

Rev. Thomas B. Cowan Will Be Guest Speaker For Wednesday Service

Next Wednesday morning, the Rev. Thomas B. Cowan will be the guest speaker at the regular chapel exercises.

Mr. Cowan, who is a graduate of Maryville college and Yale Divinity school, is the leader of the Religious Fellowship of Norris, Tenn. As Norris does not have any churches, the religious organizations are affiliated into the Religious Fellowship, of which Mr. Cowan is the leader. Prior to last year, Mr. Cowan was the pastor of a church in Chattanooga for a number of years.

Mr. Cowan, who was born in Scotland, is the author of the February number of "Today", the devotional pamphlet published monthly by the Presbyterian Board.

Oratorical Subjects Are Announced This Week

Oratory subjects for the Estes Oratorical contest have been announced by Miss Jessie K. Johnson and Dr. E. R. Hunter, who represent the Executive Council of the faculty.

This contest, which is held one year for boys and the next year for girls, is open this year to all girls in the junior and senior classes. The oration manuscripts are to be submitted on the first Tuesday in April, and are to be read by a committee of four members of the faculty who select the six orations to be delivered in the contest. The final contest is to be held between the first and fifteenth of May, at a time agreed upon by the contestants and the committee.

The subjects which were chosen by the Executive Council are:

1. Religion in a World at War. 2. Creative Living. 3. Medical Science in 1940. 4. China and the Future. 5. Socialized Medicine. 6. The Future of the Tennessee Valley.

Bainonian-Athenian Have "Quiz" Program Tonight

Tonight Bainonian and Athenian will combine to present their annual "Professor Quiz" program. The following teachers will attempt to answer the questions: Prof. Colbert, Dr. Case, Prof. Wendt, Miss Jackson, and Miss Carson. If the teachers cannot answer the questions, the audience will be allowed to try their luck. Any student may submit any number of questions that he desires to. The questions can be on any subject. These should be handed to George Hunt, Arthur Peterson, or Hilton Wick before 6:00 tonight.

Last week, the regular semester election was held, with George Hunt being elected president, Arthur Peterson, vice president; and Henry Wick, secretary. Several songs and musical selections were given by Charles Orr and Dave Kidder.

S. E. Stringham To Lead Singing At Feb. Meetings

His Effective Leadership Continuous For Two Decades

Rev. Sidney E. Stringham, pastor of the Epworth Methodist church of St. Louis, is to return for the 18th time in the last 19 years to lead the singing at the February meetings. Through his annual visit and his leadership, he has established abiding friendships on the hill. Each student generation comes to know him as one of the true friends of the college.

Mr. Stringham is pastor of a busy city church, but each year he gives a certain amount of time not only to Maryville college but to churches in different parts of the middle West. His ability as a preacher and as a song leader make him much in demand for special occasions.

When Mr. Stringham first led the Meetings at the college, he was pastor of the Methodist church in Alcoa. It was discovered that he had special talent as a song leader and was invited for the first time when a leader from a distance found it impossible to come. His work was so satisfactory that he has been urged to return from year to year through all of this ensuing period. Mr. Stringham has been since that time a pastor elsewhere in Tennessee, including Chattanooga; and in Illinois before going to St. Louis.

This will be the second time that he has been associated with Dr. Louis H. Evans in the February Meetings for both men were here in 1936.

Vols To Hear Crothers

Dr. W. H. Crothers will speak at the Student Volunteer meeting Sunday evening on "What it Takes to Be a Missionary." The Chilhowee trio, Mrs. Wagner Newberry, Miss Jessie K. Johnson, and Mrs. Charles F. Webb, will sing.

Maryville Artists Series To Present Rosalyn Tureck, Pianist, Friday January 26

Julliard School Graduate Nationally Recognized Bach Specialist

"DESTINED FOR FAME"

Able Young Musician Given Schubert Memorial Award In 1935

Appearing on the Voorhees stage for the first time will be Rosalyn Tureck, who will be presented next Friday evening at 8:15 p.m. under the auspices of Maryville College Artist Series. She comes here after making successive appearances in Seattle, Chicago, New York City, and Cleveland.

Miss Tureck is one of the leading pianists of the country today, and is definitely on the way toward making her place with many other musicians who have visited the local stage. To use the words of The New York Post: "Miss Tureck has a wholly admirable technique—clean, fast, and controlled; an intelligent musicianship born of conviction as well as calculation; and attractive simplicity of manner. These qualities had their sure effect upon a sizeable and receptive audience. This lady should 'go places'."

Rosalyn Tureck was born in Chicago of Turkish and Russian ancestry—a rich, racial mixture, which is reflected in her warm and exotic musical temperament. At the age of four she was already giving indication of extraordinary gifts by improvising on several instruments. At the age of thirteen she won a first prize of $500 in a Greater Chicago Piano Tournament in which 15,000 students participated.

Several years later she received a fellowship in the Julliard School in New York. Here she was able to profit by Olga Samaroff's teaching, wise counsel, and rich experience. Here too, she was able to enrich her musical background with a complete theoretical equipment, and gained a wide experience in accompaniment and chamber music, and in teaching. In 1935 she was one of the few students graduated with distinction from the Julliard School.

Meanwhile, an enthusiastic and constantly growing coterie almost brought her before the public as a Bach specialist, following the presentation by Miss Tureck of eight lecture-recitals on Bach at the Junior League in New York. Her rich potentialities in other directions, however, made those interested in her hesitate to urge her debut as a Bach specialist, and she finally entered into the National Federation and Schubert Memorial contests in 1935, winning the $1000 award of the National Federation and the Schubert Memorial award by an appearance with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

In October, 1935, she gave her debut recital at the Town Hall in New York, completely captivated the all-but-capacity audience, and winning unusually enthusiastic praise from the press. At the present time, in addition to her recital and orchestral work throughout the country, Rosalyn Tureck continues to teach at the Julliard Graduate School, the Philadelphia Conservatory of Music and is a member of the faculty of the Lawman's Music Courses in both New York and Philadelphia. Her most recent engagements include recitals on Sunday afternoon in collaboration with the weekly symphony concerts. On March 27, she will take the place of Walter Gieseking, another of the famed artists who have performed before a Maryville audience, on this particular program.

The June 1938 "Stage Awards the Palms" issue of Stage magazine selected her as the only pianist for honorable mention. Stage's "Palm" was awarded to the great Toscanini. The editor of Stage magazine in selecting a pianist for honorable mention said, "Rosalyn Tureck, for her series of all the piano music of Bach, a remarkable achievement."

Malcolm Miller, dramatic critic for the Knoxville Journal, used most of his space in last Sunday's edition telling of the achievements and future possibilities of this renowned artist. During the course of the article, Miller pointed out that "To have accomplish-

Social Committee Sponsors Benefit

Sarg's Marionettes To Show Here, Feb. 3

Tony Sarg's marionettes, the most famous in the world, will be here Saturday night, Feb. 3. They have been shown in foreign countries and all over the United States, and, as they are in much demand, we are very fortunate in being able to secure them. These marionettes, three feet in height, will present Robert Louis Stevenson's immortal classic, "Treasure Island," a play in three acts. It will be a stage show.

This is the annual benefit performance sponsored by the social committee, the proceeds going to the social program of the college. It is to be one of the best programs given by this committee in several years. The students in charge of social programs are: Charles Baldwin, chairman, Ralph Reed, Joseph Swift, Gordon Findlay, Ruth Abercrombie, Ruth Woods, and Jeanne Stringham. There are six faculty members on the committee.

Sophomores Plan YW Program For Sunday

At the next meeting of the YWCA, to be held Sunday afternoon at 1:15 in the Y rooms, a new type of program will be instituted. The service will be in the form of a meditation hour, and the subject will be "Meditation in Time of International Stress." This is to be a service given entirely by sophomore girls; Phyllis Heaton will lead the meditation.

Special music will be given in the form of several solos, both vocal and instrumental.

Facts Concerning Rare Species Are Made Known To Public By Tennessean

By BRASHER BAILEY

My shoes are removed regularly each night (socks in summer only)! I have never seen a log cabin outside a public park! "Preserved tarnips" are yet to be on my menu (Mother thinks turnips in any form are bad for the blood)!

These startling statements may sound quite unbelievable coming from a Tennessean. They may, in shattering your illusions concerning this perennial source of amusement, make you a little angry.

Don't be discouraged, however; for we are hilariously odd in a great number of other ways, too. We have the annoying habit of speaking to those we do know and greeting those we do not know with a smile. We can be made childishly happy by nothing more than a new moon. Strangely enough, there is attraction for us in a waltz by Strauss as well as in "Comin' 'Round the Mountain". A Muni flicker files us through the box-office, as does a picture starring Miss Gloria Glamour, and we liked Alexander Kipnis well enough to join our cultured friends in encoring him seven times when he appeared here recently.

There are those among us Tennessee boys here at the College who have not, in this goodly portion of our alloted three score and ten years, taken unto ourselves one of those little brides you've heard so much about. Perhaps that is because we are not possessed of a doll that says "mama", a bag of jelly-beans, an ox (we're supposed to have those, too, aren't we?), a bull-tongue plow, and five acres of ground in "them thar hills." These are, I believe, the things that must accompany any good prospective husband around these parts. We want to be extra good husbands, however. We're going to school, get some "book larnin'" so as to make the money that always comes with it, buy our "Little Women" dolls that also go to sleep, and put windows in our little homes (only the wealthier Tennesseans have windows, you know). I always say that, when one does a thing, one should do it right (some class for a hill-billy, huh?)

We are friendly without being democratic. We laugh easily (after the joke has been caught). The male contingent is fearfully afraid of invaders from the North (I never know what one of these fellows will pull out when he reaches into his pocket: a tommy-gun or a handkerchief). We've always heard that all the women up there are either gun-molls or spinsters; so, its only logical that their unfortunate brothers are hunting for the un-plucked flowers of the South. Personally, you may have your choice of the Tennessee girls here at the College. These flowers are simply those that have been weeded out after ten

Maryville Conducts Brides Course For Junior-Senior Hopeful Girls

By HILTON WICK

Brides may come and brides may go, but Maryville's "bride course" is conducted each semester as a three hour class to benefit those would-be-brides who are not majoring in home economics, but yet ardently desire (?) to someday practically apply such information. (And that is all I can write in one "breath".)

Seriously though, courses are given each year by the home economics department for would-be-brides. (For your information the course numbers listed in the catalog are 313 and 314.) The first semester course is numbered 313 and concerns a survey of foods. The girls are taught cookery, the preparation of meals, marketing, serving, nutrition, balancing of meals and so on. They study the problems of food, especially as they effect the home. I might pause here to say that from the boys' point of view, the eating seems appealing. The impression that I received from the girls was that they did not object to it either.

The 314 course, which is given the second semester, is a survey of clothing. Such stuff as the construction of garments, the historical features of costumes, the selecting of styles, patterns, and various other "complications" are taught. During this semester I imagine the food slackens; the grind (or rather cut) begins.

As far as I was able to learn, the only prerequisite for either course is that the applicant be a junior or senior and that she have the possibility of s-o-m-e-d-a-y becoming a bride. I doubt if actual evidence (he) need be presented to uphold the latter requirement. Both courses have four hours of lab work and one hour of lecture a week.

Nine hopeful girls make up the class this year. They are all "active" and very interested in the work. Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz, their instructor, says, "They must like the course for none of them ever cut classes."

After interviewing Miss Meiselwitz and a few of her "subjects" (the "real brides" of the class remained silent). I find that the girls really enjoy the course. It seems that they are all taking it for the practical side first of all, and secondly for the "eats." One member went so far as to say that "it almost should be a required course." I'm sure that the boys wouldn't mind as long as the food held out. (However, there is a "grooms' course" for those boys who wish to participate.) Another commented that "it was one of the most fascinating courses that she had ever taken. An odd angle was expressed by one of the girls when she said, "Even if one is an old maid school teacher, we all have to eat and keep up with the fashions." (This may be a prejudiced viewpoint).

We Advocate Fire Drills!

For several years we have wondered about a situation which it seems the students ought to take over and try to remedy. It isn't a matter of life or death or even of serious danger, but it is a matter of precaution which has been taken in many other schools and which it seems to some of us could well be employed at Maryville. It's the problem of fire drills.

All through grade school and high school we were carefully trained by practice drills how to conduct ourselves out of the school building in an orderly fashion. Because we are in college and ought to be able to reason this matter out for ourselves does not seem sufficient reason to absolutely ignore a fact which might at some time be very useful.

A certain number of bells ought to be decided upon as meaning fire. Certain floors and sections of the different dormitories ought to be given explanations as to what to do in case of a fire drill and then several practice drills each year should be held in order to effectively execute the plan. This was tried in Pearsons several years ago and the girls were instructed as to what their action should be. We believe that one or two drills were held and then discontinued. Something like that can not be treated as a joke. It would be too much like the story of the "boy who called HELP" if it were not treated seriously and orderly.

And so we suggest to our student council that they investigate this idea and see what possibilities there are of bringing about this precautionary method which we find in nearly all dormtory building on campuses throughout the country. We would like to hear the concensus of opinion on the matter anyway.

M——————C

More Enthusiasm!

The program offered on the Artist Series this Friday to the college students may be a change from the originally scheduled program, but that is no reason why it should be looked on as inferior. Miss Tureck has been acclaimed as one of the youngest and most promising pianists of our day. She is only twenty-five and has a very interesting personality. We have heard reports that on a joint program with Barera, the young violinist who appeared on our stage two years ago, Miss Tureck "stole the show" and we who heard him considered that Barera had an excellent stage personality.

There seems to be a certain amount of enthusiasm lacking among the student body concerning the program this year. We couldn't possibly have the opportunity we now have at the same cost duplicated in many other places. It's an opportunity not only to become acquainted with an artist and his name but also with good music. We'd like to see more appreciation shown for the work that is done in bringing us these artists! And we'd like to see more students take advantage of it!

CAPITAL CORNER

By HILTON WICK

JOSHINGTON: January 13, 2:30 p.m.

FLASH! Senator Tillentellen broke all precedents by announcing from Washington this week that 1941 will be a leap year. His decision is based on monetary reasons. (Get it, girls?) He also affirmed the rumor that it will be another new year!

FLASH! A suggestion has been made that the people of this grand old country start a fund to help the Russians. The money collected—both pennies—will be used to buy fire wood for fires to melt the snow in far off Siberia where the Russians are retreating. Finland has already contributed her two cents. Won't you give yours?

FLASH! Representative Laggert Tillentellen woke up twice in the House today to hear the decision of the Supreme Court, and, also, to hear if his brother, the Senator, had presented the nation with the startling news.

FLASH! The Supreme court, today, described the debt limit as "flexible." The two Congressmen concerned both borrowed twenty cents for their lunch. If no contrary decision is handed down between now and dinner, both men will "liquidate" and borrow twenty-five more for their evening meal. They will then have reached the forty-five debt limit again and will wait for further decisions.

FLASH! The State department reports the sinking of two, twenty-pound swordfish in waters east of Maine. Belligerents have already apologized, and no international incident is expected to develop. Finland has no comment.

FLASH! Two well known Congressmen were invited to a "dutch treat leap year" party. Because both men were "quite busy", they refused the generous invitation.

FLASH! Both above mentioned members have announced their new stand: "We hate leap year." A bill will be introduced tomorrow by the Senator to eliminate such holidays. Such action is unprecedented.

THIINGS YOU MIGHT NOT KNOW UNLESS WE HAD READ THEM SOMEPLACE

Somebody told me about a Maryville student who jumped from a second floor classroom window because he was told he would not do such a thing, but he had the same idea as a New York university coed. Rhoda Shafter was told by her philosophy professor that women lacked courage to be individualists and gave the example of the crazy hats they wear at the dictates of fashion. Rhoda tried to prove him wrong by coming to class the next day in a fur coat and a bathing suit. The professor didn't see the joke, for he sent her home, calling her exhibition "infantile."

The attempt of swing-mad orchestrators to fit one Wiliam Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" to the modern tempo with a version entitled "Swing the Dream" has not been successful. Louis Armstrong is playing a Black Bottom and Benny Goodman is in the cast, but even the big names have not drawn the crowds. Meanwhile, another play by the same dramatist, called "Hamlet" is having a very successful run a few doors down the way, with Maurice Evans in the title role. That ought to prove something.

Mr. Akana will be interested in the fact that a professor at the College of the City of New York has given his philosophy class a choice of doing a term paper on Freud or one on interpreting William Saroyan's play "The Time of Your Life," a top Broadway hit.

A few students are beginning to wonder what happens to good English majors when they graduate from college. News item of encouragement is that at least one put his writing ability to use and received an acting contract. Lewis Howard, who played the lazy cousin in Deanna Durbin's picture, "First Love," got his first stage position by writing a witty letter to George Kaufman. He was a Columbia English major.

The University of South Carolina had the audacity to ask King George of England to judge the beauty section of its yearbook. The American ambassador replied, "I'm sorry to say that His Majesty, King George, will be unable to select the beauties for your annual. The King is very busy with his ministers on the war situation and has no time for the lighter—if finer—things of life."

The soloist on the Ford hour tomorrow night is Helen Traubel, soprano. Miss Traubel was born in St. Louis, Missouri, and has sung in Wagnerian roles in the Metropolitan Opera in New York. Victor Kolar, conductor of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, will direct the Ford hour orchestra. The program follows:

Nicolai Overture to the "Merry Wives of Windsor" orchestra
Wagner Du bist der Lenz from "Die Walkure", Miss Traubel and orchestra
Saint-Saens Bacchanale from "Samson and Delilah" orchestra
Kreisler Caprice Viennois orchestra
Talk by W. J. Cameron of the Ford Mtr. Co.

In its first issue of the year the Saturday Evening Post had an article by W. Somerset Maugham, English author, in which he gave what in his opinion are the ten classics of American literature. It might be interesting to list them, but it would be more interesting and helpful to read the article itself. Here are Mr. Maugham's suggestions:

1. Benjamin Franklin's autobiography.
2. Nathaniel Hawthorne's "The Scarlet Letter"
3. H. D. Thoreau's "Walden"
4. Emerson's "Essays"
5. Edgar Allen Poe—his poetry and short stories
6. Henry James' "The American"
7. Herman Melville's "Moby Dick"
8. Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn"
9. Francis Parkman's "The Oregon Trail"
10. Walt Whitman's "Leaves of Grass."

TALK OF THE WEEK . By Arlene Phelps

STUDENTS SAY

By JEAN BARNES

College students are famous for their fondness of criticizing or of airing their wise opinions on any and every subject that comes up for discussion. The million and one thrilling quiz programs on the radio today are giving the outside world a means of public self-expression. Not to be outdone, we have conducted, here on the campus, a questionnaire. For discussion we have had a weighty and ponderous problem. With breathless interest, as we wandered (and wondered) with eagle eye over the campus, we nabbed about every fiftieth person of this intelligentsia living on the Hill. To each one subject to this temporary holdup, we have propounded our question, "What was the best show you saw last year? Why do you think so?" It is a question about which everyone has an idea. Everyone who attends the movies (and who on the campus doesn't?) appreciates them, enjoys them, and involuntarily forms a critical opinion, whether good or bad, of each show he sees. Here is what some of our amateur critics, or consultants, think:

Anne Gammon, '42: "I think the 'Wizard of Oz', because I liked the color, the music, and the funny characters. I guess it appealed to my childish sense of humor."

George Devereux, '43: "Union Pacific." I like historical pictures, and since 'Union Pacific' was an excellent portrayal of our west during part of the nineteenth century, it rates highest with me."

"B. B." Baird, '41: "I liked best the return engagement of 'San Francisco' because it had a lot of action, good acting, and because I always like Spencer Tracy."

Ruth Duggan, '42, chose "Dark Victory" because of its splendid acting, unusual plot, and the feeling it left when I came out."

Joe Etheredge, '40, liked the exciting "Jesse James" "because it had a lot of thrilling action."

Betty Burkhardt, '43: "I liked 'The Citadel'; it was good and dramatic. It wasn't exciting, but it was interesting."

Frank Barr, '43: "I enjoyed 'Goodby, Mr. Chips' because it showed so well the human character, and it was well acted."

Charlotte Colby, '42, liked "Dark Victory". "'Dark Victory' was a strange picture; it was strange in that it lacked colorful costuming, scenery, plot, and music; the whole picture revolved around Bette Davis, who played a magnificent role."

For Phil Evaul, '41, "Gunga Din' rates first place because "Gunga Din" had depth to it; unlike most shows, its primary purpose wasn't entertainment."

Margaret Clippinger, '43: "Gone With the Wind"—because the technicolor was so good; the acting was superb. Boy, it was the most wonderful picture you ever saw!" (She's from Atlanta!)

WRONG ROSIE SAYS:

"I guess I'll use sardines instead of oysters in the oyster stew." Wrong Rosie reasons that oysters and sardines are both fish—but sardines don't make an oyster stew and substitutions of cheap syrups and fruit don't make a good soda or sundae. Nor does cheap chocolate make a good hot chocolate. Only the best syrups, fruits and foods are served at our fountain by dispensers who are paid to serve you politely, promptly and properly. ECHO SPORTS

THE HIGHLAND ECHO JANUARY 20, 1940

SPORT ECHOES

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

It'll be champions agin champions tonight, with Vandy and Maryville both pining for another title. Dropping in on Coach Thrower and his proteges the other day, we saw some of Coach's ideas through which he puts out the winners. One angle, for instance, was blind wrestling. Henschen at the time was growling at Hahn from behind a blindfold. Coach, on being questioned, admitted that the idea was not to save Henschen from looking at Hahn, but to give him "feel". One of the topnotch matches of the afternoon was between Culver and Galloway, both at 145. It seems that these two boys have been wrestling even for the season, with no falls listed for either. Before King, Galloway got the nod, tonight Culver probably will. Both are topnotch.

Rasslin—at random—Even notice the skill in which Barbell Hahn gets up when a man's on top of him. Crawford, now wrestling for Appalachian, may have helped teach him that . . Julius Nicely, a boy well on his way to first string before a knee injury, is mending and may be able to wrestle this season . . Mr. Dizney, resquiescat in pace—we won't mention you and your pain in the neck. However, the rumor that Fleming, last year's heavyweight from Vandy is coaching the team is, as far as we know, unfounded . . Crawford, thrice intercollegiate wrestling champ, turned the tables on Knox "Y" whom he wrestled for last year, with Appalachian colors the other night.

Today's tank meet with Tusculum is still a question. For the fifth year out of six, a flu epidemic on the Pioneer swimming squad has prompted them to attempt a postponement. The Scot schedule, however, is practically full, and unless Tusculum wires today for Coach Fischbach to come to Greeneville, there'll be no meet with Tusculum. The Highlanders seem to brave weather conditions better and will be ready to leave at a moment's notice. If Maryville meets Tusculum, their only conference rivals, watch out for Whitley, a four-year man, and standout in the distances. Maybe Tusculum needs a little sugar before they swim. That's one of the experiments that Coach Fischbach is trying out.

Basketball steps aside for the minor sport's major activities this week, but a flurry of wins makes the conference game with Milligan look like a more cheerful encounter. The added height and scoring ability of Joe Etheredge gets at both of the Scot weaknesses. The reports of faster and smoother Maryville action against Hiwassee this week, speak well for Coach Honaker's words with the boys in practice. Greatest development on the team this year seems to be in Stan Menning, who's playing good ball at center.

Quote from Anderson in the U-T Journal: "Harvey Boyd McCall Jr., Maryville high school cage tutor is enjoying a large week . . His quintet is undefeated for the season and his forthcoming marriage to Miss Reba Blazer of Maryville was announced in yesterday's Journal . . Incidentally the name Blazer would seem quite appropriate in view of the pace being set by the Red Raiders." Mr. Anderson cannot realize the truth of his statement, as some of the students who remember the Blazer chillun, Toots and Reba, on the hill. Incidentally Boyd McCall is a Maryville product also.

Saturday the Editor turned to me with a story on aerial darts for the sports page. I envisioned young ladies in flowing robes tossing darts at a target in the good old medieval way, and felt heresy in giving it sports space. This week under the direction of Doug Steakley, ex-sports editor, and Chilhowean boss now, I was shown one of their practices. Under so meek a name ravages a game faster than tennis when played well. It's a cousin of badminton, played with wooden paddles and a rubber tipped shuttlecock. Mr. Steakley suggested a possible tournament for the male interclass enthusiasts. The idea is certainly worth the Y's attention.

Scotty Fischmen Win On Forfeit Over Tusculum Tankmen In Scheduled Meet

Highlander Team Ready To Brave Zero And Flu For Trip

Today's swimming meet with Tusculum seems to be forfeited to the Maryville mermen. No word had been heard this morning at time of publication to change the date of the meet or to invite the homelings to Greeneville. A flu epidemic among the Pioneer team was the reason Tusculum asked for a postponement. The Tusculum team reported strong this year, is the only Scot foe in the SMC. Whitley, a four year distance man leads them. Last year Maryville won here 38-37, and lost there 38-37, largely through Whitley's efforts.

Maryville's potential lineup for today consists of Findlay, Akana and Heydinger in the medley. Lee and Bennet in the dashes, Cross and Wright in the distance, Akana and Ritzman in breaststroke, Heydinger and Walker in the backstroke, Crane and Mize in the fancy diving event, and Findlay, Lee, Heydinger and Akana in the final relay.

No team has been submitted to Coach Fischbach from the Pioneer authorities. The meet is scheduled for 3:00 in the Tusculum pool. Maryville meets Tusculum again here late in the season. Eastern Kentucky Teachers are the Scotties' next foe. Kentucky comes here next Saturday for a night meet in Bartlett pool.

Maryville Mat Men Whitewash King

Coach Thrower's wrestling squad showed it's wares last Saturday night for the first time this season by blanking the grapplers from King college 36-0. The Highlanders won five of the eight bouts via the five point route and two by decisions, while King forfeited in the 145 pound class to Galloway.

In the first bout of the evening, Evaul pinned Cox of King. The men appeared to be rather equally matched when they stepped out on the mat to shake hands, but Evaul showed his superiority over his adversary when he forced his opponent's shoulders flat against the canvas in the wrestling time of five minutes and five seconds, for the first victory for Maryville.

With a lead of five points over the King Tornado, the Scots added to their total when Baptiste overcame and pinned his rival in the 128 pound class. Baptiste showed plenty of promise in this bout as he out-manuovered and out-grappled Trulove of King, pinning him in the fine time of two minutes flat.

McDaniels, wearing the Orange and Garnet and Collins of the visiting team, were the next contestants on the mat, and after eight minutes and nine seconds of hard grueling wrestling, McDaniels came out the winner when he pinned his foe. These two men were as evenly matched as any two on the mat all evening and they put on a fine

Scots Meet Buffs '39 SMC Champs On Thur. Night

On Thursday evening, for the Scotties' first game of the 1940 Smoky Mountain conference, Maryville will meet Milligan college in the Alumni gymnasium.

In the game which is scheduled for 8:00, Coach Honaker will submit an Orange and Garnet squad which has been victorious respectively over the Englewood independents, the Hiwassee Tigers, and the Knoxville Bowers, on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings.

Against last year's conference champions, the Highlanders may spring two equally well balanced teams, both built around Captain Joe Etheredge at pivot. Starting the half of the Wednesday evening game was a surprise team consisting entirely of six-footers, namely: forwards—Menning and Morrow; guards—Husk and Taylor; center—Etheredge. Also proving to be dangerously effective in the same game was the speedy midget five boasting of: forwards—Baird and Sweeney; guards—Honaker and Baird; center—Etheredge.

Although Milligan's 1939 conference champions were hit hard by graduation, their varsity has been improved greatly by the addition of a choice group of freshman stars. The invaders, already veterans of several SMC encounters, will boast of an outfit which might easily prove to be the Scotties' most formidable opponents.

You too can help the Scotties to win this first conference game. Will the team be hearing from you at the game?

Interclass Sports

By staging two basketball games in the Alumni gym on Tuesday evening, the sport's cabinet of the YMCA started the fourth series of intramural athletics for 1939-40.

The spotlight at the closing whistle of the first game between the strong faculty five and the plucky freshman team, found the professors leading 11-9. As the score would indicate, each team displayed unusual defensive ability for a first engagement. Coach Fischbach, captain of the faculty, was outstanding for the Ph.D.'s, while Walter Rock, at a guard position, was the leading frosh performer. Since the whiners were forced to enlist the services of two non-faculty players, the officials immediately awarded the decision to the freshmen.

In the second game, which lasted for an extra period, the seniors grasped a two point margin over the juniors with a 24-22 victory. Jimmy Rae, playing his second game of the evening, scored the winning shot for the seniors in the closing moments of the overtime period. J. D. Hughes and Tommy Cragan, fresh from the gridiron, were the spearheads of the junior attack which had been successful throughout most of the game.

It costs more than one million dollars an hour to supply the assembly lines of the automobile industry with parts and materials when production is good.

Commodores Meet Highlanders Tonight In Wrestling Highlight Of The State.

Thrower's Grapplers Primed To Get The Pat Over Vandy With An Eye For An Undisputed State Championship

The Vanderbilt State Champions meet the Maryville State Champs tonight in a grudge match carrying over from last year's tie. With both teams as strong as ever, it looks like the top wrestling event in Maryville's years of prestige in the wrestling game under Coach Thrower. The meet is scheduled for 7:30 in the Alumni gym.

Fresh from last week's unmerciful slaughter of the King Breezes, Maryville will be in top shape for the event. Everett has been wrestling at full speed all week. Nicely, a very promising performer, has dropped out for several weeks. Until his knee heals, he won't be able to do much more than watch. No other weaknesses have appeared in the team, which is still strong in all divisions.

The Commodores have a rejuvenated squad under the direction of Coach Ward, a one time wrestler at Vandy. Although losing several men this year topped by Flemming a topnotch heavy, well-known in Maryville wrestling circles, Coach Ward has a great deal of material and is reported to have built another fine team.

The Scot squad will line up as usual, with a possible substitution of Culver for Frosh Galloway. In order of increasing avoirdupois, these boys are listed for the groans: Evaul, Baptiste, McDaniels, Culver (or Galloway), Schreiber, Everett, Hahn, and Henschen. No Commodore lineup has been received.

In last year's dullest of contests, Vanderbilt dropped to Maryville 16-14 here in a memorable match. It was featured by Carmichael of Vandy, who insisted on wrestling on the pretty white mats on the side of the big black one, especially when Hahn pushed his face into the black one. He lost the match on forfeit. Another highlight—Headlock Fleming and the Finley disaster.

Scotties Cage Tigers 33 To 21

Etheredge And Menning Play Ball At Hiwassee

Taking to the road for the first time this year, the Maryville college Highlanders defeated the Hiwassee college Tigers, Tuesday night, by the score of 33 to 21. Etheredge was the leader in the scoring column for both teams as he tallied 11 points. Kilbourne was tops for the home team with 9 points.

The first half was a nip and tuck battle between the two clubs with the score remaining close with neither team able to penetrate the other's defense for many close-up shots. The Scotties seemed to have trouble getting the ball to split the cords as time and time again the ball would roll around and around the rim and then drop out.

The game was much faster and smoother than the preceding games that the Scotties have played, and the zone defense set up by the Highlanders proved effective at most times, although it did weaken several times. The defense did, however, force the Tigers to take their shots from fairly far out, although Kilbourne did slip by his guard for several crip shots.

Honaker Quint Victor Over Independents

With the return of Joe Etheredge to the lineup, Maryville college basketball team added two more victories to their string in the past week. On Monday night they defeated the Englewood Independents, 41-32 and on Wednesday night they returned to their home floor after a victory over Hiwassee the previous night to trek the Knoxville Civics, 36-29. Etheredge's play was the feature in both of these games for on Monday evening's encounter, his first night back in the lineup, Joe got 10 points and in Wednesday's game he racked up 13 points. Together with his 11 points Tuesday night brings Joe's total for the week to 36.

The play on Monday night against the strong Englewood club was fast, with every member of the starting five and three of the subs contributing points. Menning, fast improving center of the Scotties, added nine to exhibition of wrestling for the many fans present.

King forfeited to Galloway in the 145 pound class, thus giving Maryville a lead of 20-0 thus far in the proceedings.

In the 155 pound class Schreiber represented Maryville and Plexico carried the colors of King. Schreiber completely outclassed his opponent, pinning him in the remarkably fast time o fone minute and 37 seconds. Schreiber's time in the bout was the fastest recorded that night.

The next bout between Everett and Anderson was one of the most interesting and hardest fought battle of the evening. The two contestants were completely exhausted after their grapple and the match finally went to Everett on a decision. Woody had his opponent in a difficult hold for several long minutes of the match and it was necessary to call time out to give the men a chance to refresh themselves before continuing the match. The King man finally broke this hold, a difficult and strenuous task in itself, but neither man had the strength left to pin the other.

The 175 lb. class brought together Hahn of Maryville and Decker of King. After five minutes and 50 seconds of wrestling, Hahn pinned his opponent and the Scotties led King by the score of 33-0.

The heavyweight clash between Gay of King and Henschen of Maryville went to Henschen by decision, and Hal deserves a lot of praise and credit for his work. The man facing him outweighed him and yet the Maryville man was able to decision him. Henschen will wrestle men out of his weight for the remainder of the year in most cases.

The Highlanders will meet Vanderbilt, the co-holders with Maryville of the State Championship last year, on the mat at the Alumni gym tonight.

Summary:

121 lb. class—Evaul (M) pinned Cox, 5:05.

128 lb. class—Baptiste (M) pinned Trulove, 2:00.

136 lb. class—McDaniels (M) pinned Collins, 8:09.

145 lb. class—King forfeited to Galloway (M).

155 lb. class—Schreiber (M) pinned Plexico, 1:37.

165 lb. class—Everett (M) decisioned Anderson.

175 lb. class—Hahn (M) pinned Decker, 5:50.

Heavyweight—Henschen (M) decisioned Gay.

Hiwassee Game

The second half started out with the Scotties beginning to click. Etheredge began slipping his one handed shots through the hoop and Scot Honaker dropped his from the ends. Boydson Baird stole the ball from the hands of one of the Hiwassee men and went the length of the floor to account for two more points.

The rest of the third quarter and the fourth were featured by the defensive work of Lloyd Taylor and the offensive work of Joe Etheredge. Etheredge continually sank goals to keep the Scots in the lead while Taylor held Kilbourne, Tiger ace, from scoring at will.

The work under the backboards improved immensely over the preceding games and Menning saved several baskets by recovering the ball from the backboard. Husk also snatched several off the rim to save baskets. The ball handling of the Scotties seemed much smoother and faster than ever before and the offense seemed to move the ball down into the forward court with more skill and speed.

In the closing minutes of the game the subs were sent in and Hiwassee got four points on them when the whistle blew, ending the game.

"Union Now" Reviewed By Prof. Pieper At Meeting Of I. R. C. Last Thursday

International Relations members heard Prof. Archibald F. Pieper review "Union Now" last Thursday night at 6:45 in Thaw auditorium.

"Union Now" was written by Clarence Streit and published in 1938 by Harper and Brothers, New York. Mr. Streit was born in Missouri in 1896. He went to England on a Rhodes scholarship; served as an officer in the Army engineer corps during the first world war; and became a foreign correspondent at the end of the war.

The book outlines the author's plan for a world union of states modeled after the United States of America and that of the twenty-two Swedish cantons. Streit offers world cooperation as the solution of world peace rather than isolation. Since the League of Nations failed and would fail again, he offers a government over all the people with two legislative houses, a board of five elected by world vote, a prime minister and his cabinet. The judicial branch would be modeled after the United States Federal court and the constitution after the many examples that we have in operation.

The powers of the government would be those that it could best handle, like the regulating of commerce and the coining of money. The world government would be started by the fifteen existing democracies with invitation to other powers after it had proved a success.

At the next meeting of the International Relations club, there will be another round table discussion with members of the faculty participating.

his total for runner-up for scoring honors for the evening. Brown for Englewood had ten points to lead his team.

The ball handling of Bill and Boydson Baird and Scot Honaker along with the continued improvement of the substitutes were a big factor in the defeat of the invaders.

On Wednesday night the Scot's defense and offense bogged down considerably over the preceding evenings and as a result they gave a rather poor showing of themselves. Etheredge again led Maryville with 15 points, but Beck for the opponents topped Joe's efforts one point thus getting high scoring honors for the evening. Scot Honaker was runner-up for the Scotties, with seven.

At the start of the second half Coach Honaker started a team of six footers when Morrow, Menning, Etheredge, Husk, and Taylor began. These were substituted with four mites all ranging around 5'8", they were Scot Honaker, Bill Baird, Boydson Baird, and Bill Sweeney.

Mrs. Goins, formerly Ellen Florence Losey, was married last January. They were both members of the sophomore class and were married in Knoxville. In the same apartments lives an exiled Austrian duchess who would take care of the baby.

Dvorak's Fifth Symphony To Be Heard By Disc Club

On next Thursday afternoon at 4:30, the Disc club will meet in the Fine Arts studio. Dvorak's Fifth Symphony, more commonly known, perhaps, as the New World Symphony, will be played. This work of Dvorak's is one of the most popular ones with students, because of the negro folk songs whose influence can be heard in the music. The well known "Going Home" melody occurs in this symphony. The commentator of the afternoon will be David Kidder, who is a music major.

We're probably very ignorant; but, since none of us are sure of the fact, it really doesn't matter. I'm afraid we've come to feel a little smug and—dare I say it?—slightly superior. We are so much in demand! So in need of pity and protection! So much the center of attention! We were only dazed at first. Then we had a big idea! Now we are laughing up our sleeves. Imagine all that free publicity!

Our friends from Pennsylvania (which is believed by some to be the original home of child-brides) and Ohio come down in droves to see what a Tennessee child-bride looks like, to find if the people in the monkey state do look like monkeys, and to take a peak at the Lil' Abners and the Mountain Boys.

I've heard of some mighty pretty trees and creeks and such that just about one-half of these United States' people have been to see, too. Maryville Teams Capture Honors In Tournament

Debaters Play Host To First Smoky Mountain Forensic Meet

Maryville alpha chapter of the Pi Kappa Delta was the host school of the Smoky Mountain Conference forensic tournament held Saturday, Jan. 20. Nine colleges from Eastern Tennessee, Western North Carolina, and Southern Virginia participated in the tournament. The events consisted of four rounds of debate and two rounds each of oratory and extempore speaking.

Two rounds of debate were held in the morning and two rounds in the afternoon. During the morning the debates were held in the rooms of different buildings on the campus. In the afternoon all of the speaking was done in Thaw hall. The two rounds each of oratory and extempore speaking were held in the afternoon. Those who judged the contests were the coaches of the different schools and the following gprofessors from Maryville: Dr. David H. Briggs, Dr. Ralph T. Case, Dr. Edmund W. Davis, Miss Almira E. Jewell, Prof. John H. Kiger, Dr. Frank D. McClelland, Prof Paul F. Wendt, and Dr. L. L. Williams. The Maryville coaches, Prof. Verton M. Queener and Prof. Archibald Pieper, and the entire debate squad wish to thank all of the professors for their willing cooperation.

Coaches from the various schools who attended the tournament were Prof. Cox from East Tennessee State Teacher's college, Prof. Smith, from Lincoln Memorial University, Prof. Gillenwater, from Emory-Henry, Prof. Huff, from Mars Hill college, Prof. Ragan, from Tusculum, and Prof. Jack of Hiwassee.

At noon the coaches and professors who judged the speaking were guests at Cate's Cafe of the Maryville alpha chapter. After the lunch a business meeting was held and Lincoln Memorial University was chosen host school for next year's tournament.

The contests ended at 5:30 in the

Margaret Halsey Elected To Presidency Of Theta

On Tuesday, in the lobby of Pearsons hall, the members of Theta Epsilon cast votes to elect their officers for the second semester.

Margaret Halsey, a senior from Terra Ceia, Fla., was elected president for the remainder of this year and will formally assume office at the next meeting.

The other Theta offices will be filled by Virginia Knighton, from St. Petersburg, Fla., as vice president; Phyllis Heaton, from Ventor City, N. J., as secretary; Ann Halabrin, from Brooklyn, New York, as sergeant-at-arms; and Ruth Wynn, from LaFollette, as pianist.

Theta will hold its regular meeting tonight at 6:15 in Theta hall. The program and the purpose of the meeting is the installation of the newly elected officers for the second term.

Tony Sarg Marionettes Will Perform Saturday, February 3

Social Committee Sponsors Famous Actors Presenting "Treasure Island" in Voorhees Chapel At 8:00

Coming to Maryville college with a performance which newspapers all over the country have consistently praised, the Tony Sarg Company will present next Saturday evening the Tony Sarg Marionettes in a three act play based on Robert Louis Stevenson's famous production, "Treasure Island." The program will be held at 8:00 in Voorhees chapel.

This particular performance is one of the group of programs sponsored from time to time by the social committee of the student council. In addition to this, the show on next Saturday nights is the annual benefit performance, the proceeds of which go toward making possible a more varied and entertaining social life for the students of the college.

The troupe that is coming here is the original company of Tony Sarg Marionettes which is this year making its 19th annual tour of the country under the same artistic direction, and tour management. During this period, universities, colleges, and prominent high schools have been privileged to witness performances by this theatrical company. Also leading theatres and auditoriums such as the Windsor Theatre and Carnegie Hall in New York, the Majestic Theatre fn Brooklyn, the Goodman Theatre and Century of Progress in Chicago, and many leading social clubs such as the Union League Club of Chicago and the South Shore club have presented this marionette show.

The fundamental basis for the operation of the marionettes is unique. These marionettes are artistically designed and costumed figures that are manipulated from above the stage by means of fine strings attached to the body and limbs of the marionettes. These strings are attached to the skillfully jointed limbs and features of the figures so that it is possible to simulate every possible movement and gesture of the human actor.

The Marionette figures themselves are about 24 inches in height, one-third the height of the human body. They are modelled of a plastic wood that soon hardens permanently like clay or plaster. They are then colored, costumed, and "made up" just like regular actors for a stage or screen performance. The scenery is likewise designed in accurate proportion to fit the size of the marionettes.

The stage which the troupe carries from place to place is ten feet square and eighteen feet high and takes almost two hours to set up. Four actual manipulators or "puppeteers" actually

Workshop Selects Six Manuscripts As Best Written This Semester

Members of the Writers' Workshop have selected six manuscripts as the best read before the group in the past semester. The excellence of two papers made it impossible for the group to give either a definite first place in their choice. They were Isabelle Jay's play, "Phantasy of Youth", and Steve Amos' "Obituary in a Mud Puddle."

These with four other manuscripts were chosen to be placed on file in the library. It is customary to choose five each semester, but because two tied for fifth place, six will be added this year. Besides these two first, those which were named as worthy of representing the Workshop are: "Comedy of the Canterbury Tales", by Dr. E. R. Hunter; "Autobiography, Chapter I," by John Fisher; a short story, "Excuse for Living" by Harold Copeland; and a second story by Paul Akana, "Saint of Uzud-Duire."

The Writers' Workshop is composed of thirty students and faculty members interested in creative writing. Each member presents one original manuscript each semester.

Synopsis Of Maryville History Contained In New College Bulletin

Last Friday, the latest college bulletin was received from the Chattanooga Printing and Engraving company. This bulletin is a synopsis of the college history and work which will be used in connection with the New Forward Fund during the next three or four years.

The bulletin is titled "Maryville College, Dedicated to Christian Higher Education" and contains numerous pictures and stories of the history and work of the college and its work since its founding in 1819.

Among the many pictures and stories of the buildings, classrooms, and students at work is an architect's picture of the proposed girl's dormitory.

Many phases of college life are described in the twelve page, eight by twelve inch booklet. Maryville's standing in the educational world, the aims of the college, those who come to Maryville, the student help program, the faculty and the campus are among the many topics.

The pictures of students at work were taken in the kitchen of the dishwashers and waitresses, in the "Maid Shop", and in the printing shop. The class room pictures are of a systematic discourse class and a "corner of the modern but crowded laboratories." One of the largest of the pictures is of an Easter sunrise service in the amphitheatre.

Next Semester Officers Chosen By Ministerials

Election of the officers of the Ministerial association for next semester was held last Monday evening in Athenian hall. The new officers are Bill Lewis, president; Henry Milison, 1st vice president; Charles Fish, 2nd vice president; Roland Anderson, secretary-treasurer; and Vaughn Lyons, custodian.

Bill Lewis, newly-elected president of the Ministerial association is a senior and hails from Larksville, Pa. Majoring in English, Bill has the distinctive honor of completing his college work in three and one half years. He is a member of Pi Kappa Delta, national forensic society, and is actively engaged in mission work at the Newcastle chapel. After graduating from Maryville college, he plans to enter Princeton Theological seminary.

Tureck Concert Is Postponed Until February

Snow Conditions Cause Change Of Appearance For Young Pianist

Miss Rosalyn Tureck, nationally recognized Bach specialist, formerly scheduled to appear in the second of our Artist Series concerts last evening, Jan. 26, will not come to Maryville until sometime in February following the close of the February Meetings. The reasons for the postponement of Miss Tureck's appearance are mainly centered in one word: weather. Because of the snow and the resulting dangers incident to travel, it was thought best that the concert be put off until such time as those living in Knoxville and surrounding communities who usually enjoy our Artist Series programs could come to Maryville.

Tickets were being sold to the students in as great quantities as usual and though there seemed at first to be a lack of interest and animation as far as the student body in general was concerned, the general trend of the sale of tickets was much improved. However, as far as the resident students are concerned, perhaps an even more important reason for the postponement than the inclement weather would be the immediately pending problem of exams. The examinations being scheduled for this time in no way influenced the postponement of as a whole are greatly relieved that they need neither miss the concert nor be the owners of a guilty conscience.

Arrangements are now being made to schedule Miss Tureck's appearance here about the middle of February, but nothing definite as to the date has been settled. However, no matter what the length of time of postponement there will be no lessening of interest in nor brilliancy of Miss Tureck's performance.

Athenian Officers Will Be Installed Tonight

Tonight in Athenian hall, the Athenian officers for the second semester will be installed.

Last Saturday night, in Bartlett auditorium, Miss Elizabeth Jackson of the Maryville college English department, won the annual "Prof. Quiz" program sponsored by the Athenian and Bainonian societies. Miss Jackson rolled up a total of three hundred and eighty points out of a possible five hundred points to win over Dr. Case, Dr. Wendt, Miss Carson, and Miss Thompson. Each contestant was given five questions to answer, with George Hunt and Helen Bewley acting as questioners.

Several In Hospital

The unusually cold weather sent several students to the hospital this week. Stanley Bird, Aldon Cunningham, and Paul Brown were there because of influenza, and Martha Moore is suffering from pluerisy. All the patients are progressing nicely and will be released as soon as the weather permits.

Young Pastor Is Popular As Speaker Among Youth Groups

LED MEETINGS IN 1936

Special Service On Sunday In Preparation For Meetings Here

The February Meetings for 1940 will begin Feb. 6 with the chapel program at 9:45 on Tuesday morning. Dr. Louis E. Evans, who is to lead the meetings this year writes from Pittsburgh that he is making his plans to arrive in Maryville on the day before the meetings begin. It is his present purpose to come by automobile with Mrs. Evans. It has been planned that he and Mrs. Evans will live in the guest house in the College Woods during the meetings.

Mr. Stringham sends word from St. Louis that he will be here for the opening service, but has not yet advised as to whether Mrs. Stringham will accompany him this year. Mrs. Stringham's mother and other members of her family live in Knoxville.

This will be the second time that Dr. Evans has led the February Meetings, his former leadership being in 1936. He is remembered with great enthusiasm by all of those who heard him throughout the series four years ago. His willingness to take ten days from his regular program is a proof of his belief in the unique value of the Maryville college meetings. He is invited constantly to colleges, to conferences, and to meetings of all sorts throughout the United States. He cannot begin to accept all of these invitations, and yet he is returning to Maryville for this long period of service with us.

Dr. Evans' ministry has been in North Dakota, California, and Pittsburgh. He is pastor of one of the leading churches of the denomination and is president of the Board of National Missions, but he is probably most widely known as a speaker to young people's groups. He is a comparatively young man, is some six feet, four inches in height, was a leading athlete in student days and is a most likeable and dynamic personality. Above all, he is a consecrated Christian who is tremendously in earnest as he presents the offers and the claims of Christ to younger and older people alike.

There will be two services daily beginning at 9:45 and 6:45 respectively. During the meetings there will be a service on Monday morning. There will be no service on Saturday evening. Dr. Evans will preach in the New Providence Presbyterian church on Sunday morning, Feb. 11.

The program of the February Meetings each year includes various smaller group meetings by students and faculty, and the planning of several details by committees appointed for that purpose. As in former years, on the Sunday immediately preceding the meetings, the New Providence Presbyterian church will hold a special observance in preparation for the February Meetings, and the preacher will be President Lloyd of the College.

Work Progressing On Forward Fund

Dinner Will Be Held At Chattanooga On January 30

The new Forward Fund is being carried out in the cities of Knoxville and Chattanooga during this and next week. On Tuesday, Jan. 30, the Chattanooga Presbyterian dinner will be held.

Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd was unable to reach Chattanooga for the dinner that had been scheduled for last Tuesday because of the adverse weather conditions. The Chattanooga dinner will be attended by about two hundred and fifty, including the thirty members of the Maryville college committee, the co-chairmen and the speakers of the evening. The principal speakers will be Dr. R. M. Stimpson, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Chattanooga, and Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd. The Maryville committee is headed by Mr. Robert J. McClelland, president of the Provident Insurance company, and Mr. Walter P. Coolidge of the Chattanooga Printing and Engraving company.

The Knoxville-Chattanooga dinner was held at the S & W Cafeteria last Monday, Jan. 22. About three hundred friends of the college attended. Presidents of the three Presbyterian colleges in Tennessee, Maryville, Tusculum, and Cumberland university, presented facts about their institutions. Dr. James D. Hoskins, president of the University of Tennessee, Dr. James E. Clarke, of Nashville, and Dr. C. E. Barbour, pastor of the second Presbyterian church of Knoxville, were the principal speakers.

Solicitation cards are being distributed this week and next by the Maryville committees in Knoxville and Chattanooga.

YM-YW Program Features Organ Music By Davies

The YWCA has invited the YMCA to share in enjoying a devotional half-hour of organ music played by Miss Katherine Davies. This joint meeting will be in Voorhees chapel tomorrow, Jan. 28, at 1:30.

There will be an informal program of favorite hymns and other devotional selections including Bach's "Come Sweet Death", the negro spiritual "Steal Away to Jesus", and "Even Song" by Gillett.

Two Pictures Are Shown At German Club, Jan. 24

The German club met last Wednesday, 24th, at 4:00 in the chemistry lecture room. The group saw two pictures of Bavaria, and sang a number of German songs.

Dr. Ralph S. Collins introduced the pictures with a short talk in German. The pictures were sound films released by the German Railroad company and showed many of the scenes and customs of the people of Northern Germany. A few of the shots were of mountain climbers high in the Bavarian Alps. One reel was taken in the town of Bayreuth, the home of the great composer, Wagner.

Book Store Notice

Starting next Saturday, Feb. 3rd and continuing for one week, the book store will be open for the rental of books for the second semester.

On Saturday, the 3rd, the bookstore will be open all day except when the mail arrives.

Puppets' Prattle Next Saturday Will Be Purified For Us Austere Presbyterians

By GEORGE WEBSTER

In 1642, the growing immorality of the English stage forced the Puritans to close all theatres. Puppet shows were made an exception. Next week the social committee brings you Tony Sarg's famous marionettes.

Strangely enough, puppetry retains yet some of the effects of Puritan sponsorship. Mr. Sarg, whose name is now so closely linked with the renascence of this utterly charming branch of dramatic art, admits that despite the near-eclipse of the art in the last century, the pull of tradition is strong. He finds his audiences insisting on old favorites like "Rip Van Winkle", "Joan of Arc", and the piece at hand, "Treasure Island." But this has meant no loss of interest or pleasure; even Shakespeare's plays still draw crowds, though they keep coming out the same way.

Another audience insistence, the director has found in his nation-wide travels, is on purity in word and action. Apparently there is something of the Svengali in forcing innocent, pliant, wooden figures into immoralities. So Mr. Sarg is cleaning up the stage, but with discretion. Once he went too far; for a tender high school audience he amended the Rip Van Winkle line from "Let's have some rum punch" to read "hot Coca-cola." Of course everybody laughed, because it is a well-known fact that hot coca-cola is no good. We include this bit so that you will remember your manners come next Saturday and Long John's parrot should squawk, "Yo, ho, ho, and a bottle of milk to take out."

You will be there, won't you? This is no trunk full of thyroid-deficient Charlie McCarthy's the social committee is bringing us. Tony Sarg is a designer, author, and artist, eminent in all these fields. Certainly a man with such ability we can't refer to as making his livelihood "playing with dolls". These figures come as close as

Opinions on Old Man Winter's Gift to The "Cedars" and the "Southern Blue"

By BETTE UMBACH

Since the most prominent members of the student body usually have very definite ideas about most things, it was safe to assume that the recent snow came in for its share of their attention. Here are the opinions of a few of the most outstanding students, who, with due modesty, asked that their names not be disclosed to the general public. (If you can't find your opinion among them, you can conclude that either the copy boy got to it, or it wasn't fit to print in the first place.)

Our first interviewee, tall, willowy, and aesthetic looking, was found wandering aimlessly around in the drifts, a look of rapture in his half-closed eyes. "Ah, 'tis ethereal; 'tis exquisite; it inspires me to uncontrollable heights," he gurgled in response to my query of how he liked the snow. "You mean you like it?" I asked. "Its divinity overwhelms me," he replied; "its whiteness is as the whiteness of the lily—of the purest of lamb fleece; its downy softness as enveloping and caressing as a mother's love. Softly, it came, softly, in the night, unexpectedly, and its virtuous innocence overpowered my every sensation." "Yes", I insisted, "but even then it's really kind of pretty."

"And what," I asked the second subject, "do you think about the snow?" "Definitely a phenomenon," he announced. "Measured fourteen and two thirds inches; first snow of any consequence that I have witnessed since 1927. That year the temperature dropped to six and three quarters degrees below zero, and the depth of the snow measured fourteen and seven-eighths inches. Of course that was nothing compared to 1911, when we had sixteen and eleven-fifteenths inches, with a temperature of eight and 1-27 degrees below." "Are you sure it was 1911?" I asked. "Positive!" he replied. "That's the same year the cotton crop set a new record at one hun-

Oh, Say Can You See

The repetition of a fact, we are told by most speech instructors, is often for emphasis. So we apply that here, and though our predecessor in the sanctum sanctorum of the editorial chair suggested vigorously that Old Glory might more consistently wave from the towers of Anderson, his efforts at patriotic expression having been fruitless, we take up the torch and wave it high.

It was our flag over old Fort Henry that inspired Key to write "The Star Spangled Banner"; it was the flag that pushed our boys on to victory in many a fierce fray, yet that same flag, in all its red, white, and blue splendour, does not proudly send its stripes to the winds of college hill. The student who, heart in mouth, approaches a final examination cannot look up to the cupola of Anderson and there see inspiration, for he sees nothing but a bare pole pointing to the sky.

Now, we cannot sing all the verses of our national anthem (and neither do we know more than one verse of "Jingle Bells"), but we have heard at odd moments the first phrase "Oh, say, can you see?" and perforce our reply must be, with shamed countenance, that we cannot. Its broad stripes and bright stars through the perilous fight inspire us not as they turn on the light. Our efforts may be vain, but at least we have done our yearly duty. What more can anyone ask?

M——————C

Flunk or Pass?

We may be a little late in trying to suggest methods of passing exams, and we certainly do not intend to advocate cramming. "Cramming" is a pet word of most college students and seems to consist of the following ingredients: several "cokes", a long candle, late or rather early hours, several hundred pages, and a very alert memory to digest those many pages.

When it gets to the point where we find it necessary to cram for exams in order to receive a grade sufficiently high to make us feel that we have accomplished something in a course, we really are not working with the proper goal in mind. We have heard and, although we have not investigated the matter at all thoroughly, we believe that more good would perhaps be gained from courses if the system of letter grading were discarded and a "flunk" and "pass" system employed.

What would be the incentive, you ask, to work in a class where you were not always trying to beat the other fellow or to move up from 30th on the list to at least 15th? Well, we feel that the incentive would be within ourselves. We would supply that. We would not be busy trying to memorize pages and pages of notes for a two hour exam and then trying to forget them after the next exam. We could spend that time taking from the course the most that was in it—not just the mere facts but the principle behind them. We could spend the time reading related material which we otherwise would not, to put it tritely, have time for.

One reason, we read in an article recently, that students are so "in the dark" when they finish college is that they have not had time to read the latest books, study the most recent world events, and learn of the new discoveries and advances man has made in those four years.— Those years which are sometimes called the "dark ages" in a student's career.

When an individual is old enough to come to college and to realize the opportunities that college can give him, it does seem that he is old enough to know the interests he wishes to follow and to put into a course the amount of work which he feels will be most beneficial to him. Of course, we would find some students who didn't have the desire to get anything from any course. We find those even now, with the system of grading which we have, but they would easily be weeded out after they had received several "flunk" slips. If they aren't willing to work for an education then they are not worthy of having one. It would be more a matter of take from the course what you put into it, instead of take from the course the B or C which you happened to get because you could answer so many questions correctly on the exam paper.

We would not actually suggest that such a revolutionary change be brought about until the matter had been carefully investigated. We do think, however, that such an investigation would be very worthwhile and valuable, and we would be pleased to hear from any of you who have read of this plan or have witnessed it in practice. Such interest might result in action at a future date. Many large schools have followed this plan of no grades with only flunk and pass, why couldn't we at least investigate it?

THE COMMENTATOR

Conducted By GEORGE L. HUNT

Borah of Idaho

The passing of Senator William Edgar Borah, Jan. 19, closes the career of a colorful and legendary figure in our national life. Men have gone to the floors of Congress and momentarily flashed into notoriety or prominence to be forgotten within a few years, but the thirty-three years of senatorship served by the gentleman from Idaho make him a figure that will not soon be forgotten. The respected dean of the Senate, had he completed his present term he would have served in Congress longer than any other man in the country's history.

Senator Borah was born in Fairfield, Illinois, in 1865, and received his education at Southern Illinois Academy and the University of Kansas. He became a resident of Idaho in 1891 when he began his law practice in that state. First elected senator from the potato state in 1907, he served without interruption until his death last Friday.

His career virtually comprised the twentieth century as far as it has gone, and during those years Borah was a leading figure in the debates of Congress. In 1917 he voted to enter the war, and, according to his biographer, C. O. Johnson (in "Borah of Idaho", written in 1936 when the senator was considered presidential timber), "of all the votes he has cast in the United States Senate, he would like most to be back and change that vote." Following the war he vigorously opposed America joining the world court, but during the Hoover administration he was one of the strongest supporters of the Kellogg Peace Pact. He participated in the attempts to make the peace treaties after 1918 of lasting value; he rejoiced with others that his efforts appeared fruitful; and in 1939 when the only fruits were bitter, he became a highly reckonable power in the neutrality fight. Asked last year what was his proudest act, he replied the work he had been able to do to keep the United States out of Europe in its most recent crisis. At one time chairman of the powerful Foreign Relations committee, he was a strict isolationist. He held a lifelong dislike for Europe and would never visit that hemisphere, yet he strongly advocated our country's recognition of Russia. Because he held this animosity for Europe he was not generally liked by Europeans, so that therein may be the reason for the French comment, that "Mr. Borah represents a generation that is disappearing. He holds tight to the bucolic past of the United States and still lives in the period of the cowboys."

Borah's party affiliation was Republican, and he stood out as the foremost member of his party in Congress even when the party of the elephant did not have control of the national legislature. Whenever party platforms were contrary to his principles he threatened to bolt the party. A striking instance of this independence of thought was exhibited in the 1932 Presidential campaign. The Republican platform had written state option in its prohibition plank as a compromise measure. Borah opposed this fence straddling and openly said he would not support a campaign on this issue as the Republicans defined it. He was a strong prohibitionist and vainly argued before Congress for the retention of the 18th Amendment every time it was proposed for debate. He engaged in debate with Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler on the issue with all his Methodist enthusiasm. His threat to bolt the party on the issue in 1932 caused some consternation in the family camps, and one of the significant things about that campaign was the absence of Senator Borah as he, Achilles-like, sulked in his tent.

He had been repeatedly considered for advancement. He declined the chance to run for vice president on the ticket with Calvin Coolidge, and in 1936 he was seriously considered for the presidential nomination.

Every reader of the newspaper has long been familiar with Borah's name and picture. No caption would be needed under the portarit of a stern-eyed, tight-lipped, determined face graced with distinguished leonine hair. Equally as familiar is his career, characterized in the Jan. 20 issue of the "Christian Science Monitor" as "lifelong devotion to a few cherished principles and implacable opposition to others he disapproved." He will be remembered for his indepedence of judgment, his talent for being in the minority, and for his utter simplicity and sincerity. Various sobriquets were applied to him during his lifetime—"The Lion of Idaho," "The Great Thunderer"—yet nothing will stamp him in the minds of Americans as much as his unbending devotion to what in his eyes was right and good.

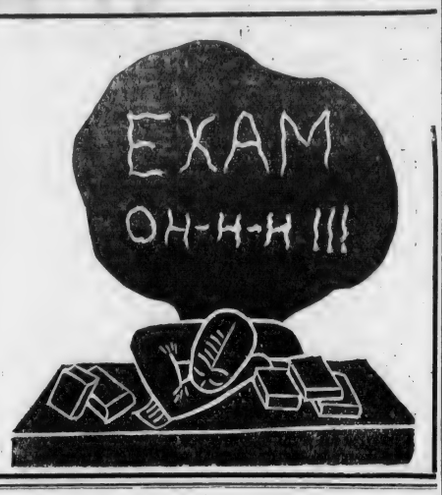
CAPITAL CORNER

By HILTON WICK

"Capitol Corner" presents today, news from distant capitols of the world. These dispatches, unlike most, are not subjected to governmental censorship. News directly from the front!

FLASH! Joshington: The State Department announced this morning that the whole situation is very disturbing. Sooner or later something must be done. In fact the sooner the whole thing is over and done with the better it will be for all of us. The condition has existed for over a month now. The President must exchange that horrible green tie which Alf Landon gave him for Christmas!

RASH! Paris: Two divisions—one French and the other German—who met on "no man's land" on New Year's eve to celebrate the gala occasion have both entirely contracted scarlet fever. Each blame the other for the new outbreaks! Diplomatic notes are being exchanged to clear up the whole situation.



DASH! Moscow: Stalin announced from his summer home (somewhere in Siberia) that the Russians are not retreating. The "boys" are practicing skiing and the slope of the land just happens to be toward inland Russia. They are getting ready for the Olympic "winter sports" to be held near the Mannerheim line this coming spring.

HASH! Berlin: The Germans at the Western front had hash tonight for dinner. Two ducks flew over the fortifications early this morning, and the Germans, thinking them to be French planes, shot the defenseless birds to death. Result—hash! (This is not propaganda.)

SPLASH! Helsinki: The new Russian skiers succeeded in crossing the border mountains and started down over the hills toward the capitol. Eleven divisions have just passed us here like the picture in America, "Gone With the Wind." The "boys" were last seen sinking into the Baltic ocean.

CASH! Carnegie, 201: We're fresh out! In fact for second semester bills, we are planning to float a new bond issue redeemable in something after two days notice—starting with the year 1952. Address unknown!

dred and forty-eight million, eight hundred and eighty-five thousand bales. The winter after that, though, was quite mild—only nine and one-half inches, with a temperature of a fraction over two above. That makes this season seem quite remarkable." "Yes," I agreed with him, "it does."

"Do you like the snow?" I asked softly, not knowing upon what deep mental calculations I was intruding. Her personality smile slowly thawed out and her exquisitely, if artificially, formed lips pouted. "No!" she retorted. "It makes all the curl come out of my hair. And not only that, but it makes my face all red looking." "Yes" I consoled, "but that makes for greater economy as far as rouge is concerned," to which she agreed. "And that snow suit and hood certainly look devastating on you." "Do they?" she asked, just as if she didn't know. Her personality smile was turned on again, and she said, "Well, I guess the snow is pretty good after all."

"And how does the snow affect you?" I asked the next subject. "Fine," she cried, after a two minutes pause, during which she was enthusiastically inhaling. "What's fine about it?" I probed. "The early mornings," she stated, exhaling;—"plunging into the invigoration of the fresh air. A five o'clock hike around the loop is just the thing to put new life into your blood streams—to awaken the sleeping cells of the brain—to give you a fresh, clean, appreciation of nature and life, itself. Winter sports seem to bring out the best qualities to be found in a person," she said, inhaling endlessly. I agreed with her, measuring doubtfully the skiing possibilities of the Corduroy. "There is nothing," she announced, exhaling suddenly, "like getting out of bed and into a cold shower." "Nothing?" I asked chatteringly. "Nothing" she replied, eyeing me contemptuously; and she walked away, muttering something about sissies.

"You're quite thrilled about it too, I suppose," I approached the next victim. "About what?" he asked, in a nice, practical voice. "Don't you think the snow is wonderful?" I asked. His attitude changed; he folded one mighty hand into a mightier first, tightened his lips, and said, "No, I DON'T think the snow is wonderful, and we DO have snow even in Alabama, and it IS cold enough for me," with definite emphasis on "don't", "do", and "is". "The paths get sloppy," he continued, "and when I walk my girl home, there's all that snow to plow through again, and my boots get all stiff. And besides, my feet are cold." Well, there really isn't much you can say in a case like that, except suggest one hundred per cent wool socks; so I let it go at that.

Rev. Norum Will Speak To Student Vols Sunday

Rev. A. H. Norum, pastor at Greenback, Tenn., will give an illustrated lecture on "Work in Alaska," at the Student Volunteers meeting Sunday evening at 8:00 in the philosophy class room.

THE HIGHLAND ECHO JANUARY 27, 1940

SPORT ECHOES

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

Tonight opens in Bartlett pool, the biggest schedule ever attempted by Coach Fischbach's splashers. It includes more important "big name" colleges than any athletic schedule of any sport in recent years. Tonight's water fray will pit the Eastern Kentucky Teachers, a little college with a big name in swimming, against the Maryville aquamen. A point of interest to upperclassmen, may be the fact that Wicklund, holder of several Maryville records, is helping coach as a student at Teachers. The Fischmen seem strong this year with no weak places in the lineup. Experienced men fill a place in each event, with frosh reserves strong in bolstering the vacant second places. Watch for the added entertainment during breathing spaces in the running of events. It's a new idea for the spectators who like the aquacade angle of swimming.

Thursday's basketball game against the Milligan Buffs was a little disappointing to Scot sport fans. The boys looked a lot better than the final score spoke. Many opinions of Highland spectators tended to give Maryville an edge on strength, but the Scot cagers themselves can't be blamed. Milligan put up a baffling game with a now unorthodox offense and defense. The boys put up a hot set-to in the zero air, however, as soon as they found themselves behind. Boydson Baird sounded as if he was ready to scrap as of last year in the close conference games. Etheredge was hitting too. Numerous fouls seemed to keep the Scots from getting on their game, and handicapped Milligan no little. Maryville goes on the boards against the Buffaloes next month with conference games behind them, and Thursday's prevue on Buffalo style, the Scot scrappiness ought to give us a winning margin.

Cheerleaders at the game began a practice that should have started years ago. The yelling was swell. Although an ancient Yankee custom treats basetball as the sport for boosting as big as football, lazy Southern gab seems to be all that's been shown heretofore on the hill. There's no reason why we shouldn't get out there and do some cheering, for the team looks good. There will be cheerleaders at every game now. A little cooperation, enthusiasm and sportsmanship will make them mighty happy and the team even scrappier. The band will come out if the students begin to show real Scot spirit.

Talk on the hill has already come around to another wrestling championship. Vandy looked sorta embarrassed the other night when "Fish" Anglin flopped around under diminutive "Hog" Hahn. One of the best matches ever seen around here was that McDaniels-Pellet struggle. It was fast aggressive wrestling and plenty of thrills. The beautiful comeback of Mac deserves congratulations. Tennessee and Tanner is the stumbling block to our oft patted prides. Tennessee is undefeated in the state also with a similar victory to Maryville's over Commodore grunters.

Interclass Sports

On Jan. 22, in the Alumni gym, the freshmen and juniors scored victories over the sophomores and faculty in the YMCA interclass basketball tournament.

In the first engagement, the frosh, led by Griffith Fort with 15 points, outscored the sophs by a score of 34-15. Captain George Howard paced his team with eight points.

In the second game of the evening, Coach Fischbach connected for fifteen of his defeated team's nineteen point total. Outstanding as his team scored 43 points was Tommy Cragan, with 14.

In the games Wednesday evening, the strong senior five beat the freshman team and the sophs outscored the faculty quint.

The smooth Stevenson-Rae combination accounted for 25 points as the seniors won over the frosh, 40-12. Harold Lawson was high point man for the frosh with four points.

The second game was won by the sophomores when they took a 39-28 decision from the faculty. George Howard starred for the sophs as he rang up eighteen points to lead his team. According to Coach Honaker of the faculty squad, "Flash" Wendt proved to be the most outstanding player on the professors' team.

Jean Naberhuis Clinches Aerial Dart Tournament

Mary Ruth Baker and Betty Brient, winners of the freshman and junior-senior aerial dart tournaments, respectively, were defeated in the play-offs Tuesday by Jean Naberhuis, sophomore.

On Thursday all girls in point system practiced stunts, which included duck walk, dog walk, novelty walk, camel walk, somersaults, and head stands.

Rasslers In Win Over Vanderbilt Saturday Night

Weather Conditions Handicap Both Teams In Old Rivalry

Last Saturday night on the Maryville mat, Coach Thrower's wrestling team scored its second consecutive win of the current wrestling season when it won from Vanderbilt university 31½ to 4½. The Highlanders were impressive in their victory and it definitely establishes their chances for the state championship that they held jointly with Vanderbilt last year. The Scotties won three of the bouts via the five point route and three by forfeit while drawing the other.

In the first bout of the evening Evaul pinned Hughes of Vandy in four minutes and ten seconds. Evaul did a fine job in pinning his opponent and showed great skill in taking this bout. It was the second victory for Evaul this year as he pinned his opponent the week before in equally impressive style.

The second bout of the evening brought together Baptiste of Maryville and Hutton of Vanderbilt. The Maryville lad was continually on the defensive and the Vandy man decisioned him but it was one of the hardest fought and hotly contested bouts of the evening. The score at the end of this bout read Maryville 5, Vanderbilt 3.

In the 135 lb. class McDaniels met Pellet of the visiting team. After six minutes and nine seconds of the most gruelling bit of wrestling on exhibition that evening, McDaniels pinned his man. Dave was in a hole for a good bit of the match and was almost pinned several times, but was able to wriggle out every time and finally placed his foe's shoulders flat against the canvas for five more points for the Scotties.

The match between Culver and Dozier was one of equality between the two men and it was called a draw after the two overtime periods had expired with neither man being able to pin or decision the other. The bout was slow to watch as the two men were so evenly matched that there was little action taking place besides the jockeying for position.

Schreiber of Maryville next pinned George of Vanderbilt in the long exhausting wrestling time of 11 min. and 55 sec. This bout was thrilling to watch as it seemed that every moment that one man or the other would be the victor. Schreiber finally proved the man to do the trick and he pinned his man leaving the crowd in a nervous uproar from McDaniels and his bouts.

The 165 and the 175 lb. classes were forfeited to Maryville by the visitors due to injuries suffered by the Vandy wrestlers in a previous match the night before. The score at this point was: Maryville 21½, Vanderbilt 4 1-4.

The next bout brought Henschen of Maryville and Smith of Vanderbilt to the center of the mat and it was Henschen who walked out the victor as Smith forfeited after nine minutes of wrestling. The Vanderbilt man did not return for the overtime period against his rival. Henschen again did remarkably well against a man who clearly outweighed him.

This ended the match officially and the Highlanders scored another victory and their first against the defending co-champs this year. Hahn put on an exhibition bout with Anglin of Vanderbilt. Hahn weighted 175 and Anglin weighed 198 pounds, but the Orange and Garnet clad man outwrestled and out manuevered his heavier opponent, but was unable to pin him due to the advantage in weight that the other man had.

The Scotties' match with King on Tuesday was called off due to the weather conditions, but the Highlanders will grapple with the grunt and groaners from the Chattanooga Y team tonight in the gym.

221 lb class: Evaul (M) pinned Hughes, 4:10.

128 lb class: Baptiste was decisioned by Hutton (V).

155 lb class: Screiber (M) pinned George, 11:55.

165 lb class: Vanderbilt forfeited to Everett (M).

175 lb class: Vandy forfeited to Hahn.

Buffs Trample Scotties 46-36

On Thursday night the Milligan college Buffaloes defeated the Maryville college Scotties 46-36 on the boards of the Alumni gym. Etheredge was the leader in points scored for the evening with 13 markers. Cooper led Milligan with 12 points.

The play of the evening was fast and furious with many fouls being committed by both sides. Several men were banished from the game due to an excessive number of personal fouls. The Milligan players showed their superiority at the foul line and this was a big factor in their win. The passing ability and the defensive work of the visitors was also another very decisive factor in their victory over the Orange and Garnet quintet.

The man to man defense of the Buffaloes forced the Highlanders to resort several times to long shots. Boydson Baird cracked the cords for 8 points on long shots from all angles. Joe Etheredge sank his shots from the foul line and his one handed crips which pushed his 13 points through the hoop.

Cooper's long shots for Milligan, together with his uncanny ability at the free throw line, gave him his 12 points to pace the winners. Webb, another Milligan man racked up 11 points to follow closely his team mate in the rout of the Scotties.

The Scotties played listless ball for the first few minutes of the first half but finally came to life and led the visitors when the two teams left the floor for the half, 25-18. The play of the winners improved steadily through

Teacher Tanksters Meet Highlanders Tonight In First Swimming Headliner

The Maryville swimming team opens its season at home tonight against their ancient rivals from Eastern Kentucky.

This series of meets is of long standing, and fine sportsmanship. The Scotty team promises to be the best in years at Maryville, and hopes to prove it tonight under the stiff opposition. Eastern has split with Maryville in the latest two meets; last year the score was 38- lichmond lads on the bi h Coach Fischbach has ta as to this year's lin h, Kentucky will pro strong a team as usual. In all probability neither team will be in top shape. The Scot crew is weak with colds, and snow conditions will hamper the efficiency of both teams.

With Klimstra back after a short illness the substitutees are strengthened and the scoring power of the whole team is at full strength for the first conference tilt with Milligan.

FRIENDSVILLE

The Maryville college basketball team took to the road again on Monday evening when they traveled to Friendsville to tangle with the Friendsville Independents. The Independents were turned back by the score of 36-30 in an exceedingly fast and rough game. Etheredge again was top scorer for the Orange and Garnet as he slipped 10 free throws and two field goals into the bucket for 14 points. Kennedy for Friendsville sank 10 of their points.

From the opening whistle until the final blast the game appeared to be the fastest and the roughest that the Scotties have played in this year. Several men were banished from the fray due to excessive number of personal fouls. The ball handling and general all-round play of Boydson Baird was one of the outstanding features of the game. Although one of the smaller members of the varsity, Boydson seemed to control both backboards and his shiftiness of the boards left him open to sink his 7 points.

The Highlanders played a man to man defense throughout the entire game and it functioned rather well.

Maryville Matmen Meet Chattanooga

Coach Thrower's undefeated varsity wrestlers go up against the Chattanooga Y tonight in the Alumni gym. Chattanooga Y will be of unknown strength, no meets or data being available. The Scot matmen haven't met them in a great while, and hope to make this encounter impressive, in their grapple for the State Intercollegiate and amateur championship.

The lineup against Chattanooga will be the same as last week, with Culver wrestling the 145 lb class again. The lineup: Evaul 121, Baptiste 128, McDaniels 135, Culver 145, Schreiber 165, Everett 153, Hahn 175, and Henschen heavyweight.

The boys are in good shape prepping for the University of Tennessee, who will be their big foes of the year probably now that Vandy is past. Comparing respective scores the Maryville boys should do well against the Vols, too. The meet will be scheduled so as not to conflict with the East Kentucky Teachers-Maryville swimming meet, earlier in the evening.

This will be the first entry into the amateur circles for the grapplers this year. Knox Y will furnish further opposition later in the season.

Scots Gain Three Wins Over Local Independents

Last Saturday night immediately preceding the wrestling matches, the Maryville college basketball team took the floor against the Englewood Independents and the result of the game was the second win within a week over the Independents. The game on Monday night resulted in a 41-32 win for the Scotties and the one on Saturday evening was a 41-26 victory for the Orange and Garnet. Scot Honaker was high point man for the evening for Maryville with 13 points. Closely following him were Klimstra with 10, and Etheredge with 9. For the Englewooders, Raper pushed 10 points through the hoop to lead his team.

The game was the fourth one of that week for the Scotties and was also the fourth victory of the week. It was sparked by the offensive work of Klimstra whose long shots cracked through the basket with monontonous regularity and the all-round work of Joe Etheredge and Scot Honaker. In the week the Scotties scored 110 points with Etheredge being top man in the scoring column for the Highlanders with 45 points.

This contest as was the preceding one against the Englewood club, was fast with the ball handling and passing ability of the Scotties smoothing out the rough spots and functioning more evenly. Scot Honaker continually broke through the Independents defense for one handed shots and Husk and Taylor covered the backboards more efficiently than before. The defense of the Maryville quintet stiffened when needed and held the strong Englewood club down considrably.

Marianna Allen Attends Conference At Toronto

From December 27 to January 1, the World Student Conference on the World mission of Christianity was held in Toronto, Canada. Marianna Allen represented the Student Volunteer organization of Maryville college.

Miss Allen, a junior, is from Knoxville, and is majoring in religious education. She was selected as a delegate for the Toronto conference at the Tennessee Student Volunteer conference in Nashville last spring.

The World Student Conference in Toronto was held in the interest of the Student Vol movement and other student Christian organizations. There were five hundred delegates at the conference. These came from 18 countries and many of the students wore their native costumes. Three delegates went from Tennessee.

The conference was primarily for study and to train Christian youths who could in turn train in their home sections. The objects of the conference were to get new and up-to-date information about the world church, to reorganize and restate all old ideas about church work, to obtain information about foreign missions, and as a worship experience.

Among the world famous religious leaders at the conference were: T. Z. Koo, world figure in the Student Christian movement, who flew from China just for the Conference; Robert Mackie and D. T. Niles, native of Southern India, who spoke on the needs of the Indian church.

Independent Games

Husk and Honaker did a fine job holding McGill to 7 points as it was he who almost single handedly beat the Scotties the last time the two teams met.

The feature of this game besides the pace which was set and continued throughout the entire game was the foul shooting of Joe Etheredge. Joe was given 10 free throws and the tall center made everyone of them. The defensive play of this pivot man was also of high calibre. Although few substitutes were used, the play of these men was encouraging.

The preliminary game between the Maryville B squad and the Louisville Rams was won after an equal rough and fast struggle, by Louisville, 43-35.

On Tuesday night the Maryville college quintet defeated the Defoe Lumber Company team on the boards of the Alumni gym, 45 to 32. The high scorer for the Highlanders was long, lanky Stan Menning, who dropped in 12 points. Hannah topped the Lumbermen with 15.

Defoe made up of former college stars were unable to penetrate the Scotties' man to man defense enough times to win the game and the defense of the Scots is showing definite improvement over their past performances.

The game was fast, with the Scotties employing a fast break at several stages of the game that netted them points when they were needed. Husk and Etheredge followed Menning in the scoring column with 10 and 9 points respectively. Boydson Baird again took many rebounds off of the backboards and his floor game was equally as smooth. Bill Baird continued to play his steady brand of basketball.

Husk's long shots from outside the foul circle clicked and the Scotty guard dropped them in along with a number of crips to be second man in the scoring column. Etheredge's and Honaker's shots, though not as plentiful as the games before, accounted for 15 more points for the Maryville team.

The play of the subs again was an omen of encouragement for the future as they amply replaced the regulars upon entering the fray. Morrow, Menning and Taylor were the outstanding trio of subs who took part in the game.

New Porch on Memorial

An improvement, begun and almost completed during the Christmas holidays, is the new porch on McLain Memorial hall. It was supposed to be ready for use after the holidays, but due to the cold weather it's completion was postponed.

"The gift is another of Mrs. John Walker for the beautification of the campus," said President Lloyd this week. "For a long time Mrs. Walker noticed the bare and homely appearance of the building and remarked about it. When the old heating plant was removed and the new road laid out, she reminded us that Memorial was more than ever within public view. She then asked if she might build the porch and we were delighted to accept her offer.

"The porch is half as long as the building and costs more than might be thought by those not experienced in building. It is almost a duplication of the porch on the other side except that a few trimmings were omitted and the steps are against the building because of the great height at the front. It is in excellent taste and not only fits the architecture of this historic building but greatly enchances it."

In the preliminary game the Maryville B team rolled over Friendsville, piling up the score of 55 to 25. In the past two games the play of the B squad merits some praise as they have improved considerably over the other two games played.

the entire second half and the play of the Scotties lost its zip of the first half and as a result the Milligan team left the field at the end of the game with a ten point lead.

Subs Menning and Taylor played fine ball for the Scotties and amply filled the shoes of the varsity players that they replaced. Menning broke up several plays with fine clean blocks of the Milligan players' shots, and Taylor went off the floor several times to take the ball off the hoop and thus saved the Scotties several baskets.

The Buffaloes employed a long pass and a fast break to beat the Highlanders. They passed the ball around with great speed and skill and then shot it in to a man breaking towards the basket. Their long shots and the free throws also accounted for many points against the losers.

It was the first conference game for the Highlanders and it broke a winning streak that had extended to six games over independent teams. The Scotties next face King college on Wednesday night at Maryville.

In the preliminary game the Maryville B team was defeated in the last minute of play by the Alcoa high team, 23-22.

Prof. Pieper Speaks To Law Club On Case Meth.

On Wednesday night, Professor Archibald Pieper spoke to the Law club on the advantages of the case method of taking law.

Prof. Pieper is going to use the case method in the new course in political science which he is going to teach next semester, entitled American Constitutional History. Instead of studying text books, he will use the case method, studying various law cases through the United States history.

Plans are being made by the Law club to hold another mock trial sometime towards the end of February. The committee to arrange this is composed of Hilton Wick, Jean White and Jack Kramer.

The trial will probably be held in Alpha Sigma hall and will be open to the public.

Tony Sarg Marionettes

put on the performance. They move around on the "cat-walks" on top of the stage, speaking and singing the parts of the actors on the stage. Each marionette has from twenty-two to twenty-eight strings attached to its legs, arms, hands, eyes, and shoulders. With so many strings to pull and so many actors to manipulate, it is easy to understand that the task of these "puppeteers" requires real skill of hand, voice, and mind.

To use the words of The Arkansas Gazette: "The Tony Sarg marionettes will win the hearts of children, six to ninety-six." The price is only 20c for children and 35c for adults.

evening and the following results were announced at 6:00: East Tennessee State Teachers entered twelve debates, winning nine; Emory and Henry entered sixteen debates, winning eight; Carson-Newman entered twelve, winning eight; Mars Hill entered eight, winning five; Tusculum entered eight, winning three; Tennessee Wesleyan entered eight, winning one; Lincoln Memorial entered eight, winning one; Hiwassee entered four, winning none; and Maryville entered twelve debates, winning nine. In the oratory division Kramer, of Maryville, was first; Hunt, of ETST, was second; Welsh, of Tusculum, was third; and Zerwas, of Maryville, was fourth. In extempore speaking Lamont, of Maryville, was first; Hunt, of ETST, was second; Hartley, of ETST, was third; and Hutchinson, of Emory-Henry, and Webster, of Maryville, tied for fourth place.

Maryville entered three teams in the contests, two affirmative and one negative. The affirmative teams were Jack Zerwas and Clifford Protcter and Bill Felknor and Hilton Wick. The negative team was Otto Pflanze and Arnold Kramer. The three teams each won three out of their four debates.

Prof. Verton M. Queener and Prof. Archibald Pieper are coaches of the Maryville squad.

possible to being humans, the only line of demarcation being that they can't talk. But, definitely, they make up in action for the things that are lacking in the native talents of man. The puppet musn't scuttel along the stage with his head and shoulders bent forward, nor must he defy the laws of gravity and walk on his heels. The hardest thing in puppet operation is to make a figure walk—Tony Sarg is the only man who makes a puppet's walk look like second nature.

So it is with this show—a perfect illusion is created on the miniature stage. The magic charm, the fairy wonder, and yet the amazing human quality of these shows bewitch everyone who sees them. So complete is the ilusion, in fact, that when at the end, one of the operators steps on the stage amid the puppets, you are utterly confounded. This personage looks like a monster, looks unreal, terrifying—even a second "King Kong"!

So, come one and all. You girls who lead your men around on a string, come and watch experts do it. If you missed things on the last ethics quiz, you will be interested in the Calvinistic determination these creatures show, their destinies controlled by inexorable and invisible fate. And while you muse on these things, your little brother or your freshman date will giggle in childish glee at the little dolls' antics.

The carnival barker's spiel—"For anybody 6 to 60. If you're under six you can't understand it. If you're over sixty, you just can't stand it!" Now, anybody can understand "Treasure Island," and even the faculty can stand it. We repeat for emphasis—you'uns come. It's only 35c and cheap at half the price.

Phyllis Heaton Elected Triangle Club President

Phyllis Heaton, sophomore from Ventor City, New Jersey, was elected president of the Triangle club at its meeting in Dr. Brigg's classroom on Thursday evening. Miss Heaton, who was active in the club's cheering section for the football games, will assume office immediately and will serve as the president of the organization for the second semester of the school year.

At the same meeting Alfred Davies from Atlantic City, N. J., was elected vice president, and Lily Pinneo from Newark, N. J., was elected secretary of the group. Both are members of the junior class. The president of the club states that the rumor that would have the club change its name to the "Joisey" club is unfounded.

Installation At Bainonian

Bainonians will meet at 6:15 in the Bainonian hall. At the meeting, the officers just elected for the second semester will be installed.

"Winterset" Will Be Presented By Theta-Alpha Sig

Anderson's Play Is One Of Recent Successful Stage Dramas

"Winterset", Alpha Sigma and Theta Epsilon's mid-winter dramatic production, will be presented Friday evening, March 1, in Voorhees chapel

The production staff for the play as annnounced by the joint play-committee of the two societies is John Fisher, production manager; Dorothy Quass, advertising manager; Dale Mathias, assistant advertising manager; Lloyd Shue, stage manager; Esther McCollum and Lois Thorson, assistant stage managers; Nina Clark, costume mistress; Katherine Bennett, assistant costume mistress. Mrs. Nita

JOHN FISHER

Eckles West is director of the play.

"Winterset" is one of Maxwell Anderson's most recent stage hits. Mio, played by Melvin Johnson, is seeking vengeance for the unjust conviction of his father and in tracking down the parties who are guilty of the crime for which his father died; he falls in love with Miaramne (played by Virginia Berg) who is the daughter of an old Jewish rabbi (George Phelps) and also the brother of Garth (Bill Felknor) who was witness to the crime and could have saved Mio's father. Garth instead saves his own life.

Trock (Tommy Stahl) is the gangster who actually committed the murder for which Mio's father was electrocuted and has intimidated Garth to the extent that Garth does his bidding. Shadow (Dick Watkins) is another member of the gang who aided in the murder.

"Winterset" is a highly emotional play, but it also combines this emotion with action of a sort that might be expected in a typical gangster situation. The conflicting desires of Mio, who constantly gives vent to his emotions in philosophical poetry, and the complications created by the weak will of Garth and the strong principles of his old rabbi father contrasted with the immaturity and purity of thought of Miaramne—mixed with a bit of gangster intrigue—make "Winterset" more than interesting.

"From all indications of present practices, 'Winterset' will certainly be an outstanding contender for the Theta Alpha Phi award this season," announced Mrs. West this morning.

Bainonian Preparing For "Valentine Shop" Tonight

"Bainonian Valentine Shop" will be open for business to all Bainonian girls at 6:30 Saturday night in the Fine Arts Studio. The "shop" is under the management of Charlotte Colby and Eloise McNeeley, Bainonian's new program secretaries. Mary Frances Spurlock is the vender of the valentines. The "shop" has a new line of valentines to suit every need: the Old Fashioned valentine, Carol Dawn Ward; for the Friend, Louise Marshall; Collegiate, Sally Young, Helen Pratt, Mary Ruth Hale; Comic, Dave Hall and John Ballenger; for the Teacher, Eleanor Long. The customers are Anne Ramey and Troy Moore.

The "shop" has been decorated by June Morley. Invitations to the opening were sent out by Pat Patterson, Rose Pinneo, and Marion Avakian. Valentine refreshments were arranged by Terry Jones and Edith Mae Persing.

Hospital News

The seeming return of spring has brought a great deal of sore throats and colds to the Maryville campus. Because of these illnesses Dorothy Jobes, Betty Moore, Lorraine Adkins, Hester Santiago, and Cecil Donnely were in the hospital this week. They are all progressing nicely.

Debating Team Captures Six Places At Appalachian Mountain Tournament

Hilton Wick Selected To Be Maryville Representative In Peace Oratorical Contest At Carson-Newman

Six members of the Maryville college debating team returned the first part of the week from Boone, N. C., after taking six places in the Appalachian Mountain Tournament sponsored each year by Appalachian State Teachers college. Approximately thirteen schools attended the tournament, representing colleges and universities in Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee and South Carolina.

Lucille Lynch placed first in the women's division of impromptu speaking; Vernon Lloyd was awarded first in the men's division of extemporaneous speaking; Elizabeth Moore received third honors in women's oratory and women's extemporaneous speaking; Henry Wick placed third in the men's division of oratory; and George Webster was awarded second honors in the men's division of impromptu speaking and second honors in the men's section of extemporaneous speaking. Those making the trip included Lucille Lynch and Janet Lindsay as the women's team, and George Webster and Vernon Lloyd as the men's team. Elizabeth Moore and Henry Wick accompanied the teams as individual speakers.

The next tournament on the schedule is the women's section of the Smoky Mountain tournament to be held on Feb. 17 at Virginia Intermont in Bristol, Va. Those planning to make the trip include Harriet Miller, Arda Walker, Sara Lee Hellums, and Elizabeth Moore.

At the State tournament to be held at Carson-Newman college this year on March 1-3, there is to be held the annual Peace Oratorical contest. This is sponsored each year by the Intercollegiate Peace Association in every state of the union. The purpose of this contest is to give the average college student a fuller insight into happenings in the world today, and to enable him to interpret present developments in terms of future events. This contest also offers the college student a chance to present constructive ideas and suggestions in regard to world conditions.

Mrs. Helen B. Hart is in charge of the contest here in Tennessee, and is making all necessary arrangements for the March tournament. She has announced that the first prize this year will be $50, second prize $30, and third prize $20. The forty-eight winners throughout the country will send in their declamations to a group of three judges, who will choose the best from among these and award to the winner the national prize of $100. The competition is always very keen in the contest, as shown in the fact that last year over 862 students participated. The student to represent Maryville in this year's contest is Hilton Wick. He was selected last week by the coaching staff of the local debating team.

Also announced last week were the assignments to the State and South Atlantic Forensic tourneys. Those making the trip to the State tournament include two men's teams, composed of Robert Lamont and Henry Wick, and William B. Felknor and Hilton Wick. The women's team will include Lucille Lynch and Janet Lindsay. Assignments to the South Atlantic tourney to be held Feb. 29-March 2 at Raleigh, N.C., include two women's team comprising Arda Walker and Harriet Miller, and Elizabeth Moore and Sara Lee Hellums. The two men's teams are composed of Otto Pflanze and Arnold Kramer, and Clifford R. Procter and Jack Zerwas.

Progress is being made on the arrangements for the National Pi Kappa Delta tournament to be held in Knoxville the first week in April, and for

Joint Recital Will Be Presented With Milanov And Graves, March 4th

On March 4, the second concert in this year's artist series will be held. At this time Zinka Milanov, leading dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, and Georgia Graves, one of America's most outstanding young contraltos will appear in a joint recital. The concert was to have been held on March 11, but due to an engagement in which Miss Milanov was scheduled to appear for the Metropolitan Opera, the date of the concert here was moved to March 4. Both Miss Milanov and Miss Graves are popular young singers, and their recital should be one of note.

The Tureck concert, scheduled for Jan. 26 and postponed because of weather conditions, will be held in Voorhees chapel April 9.

Baird To Tell Athenians Of Maryville Basketball

Bill Baird will discuss Maryville basketball tonight in Athenian hall at the regular weekly meeting of the Athenian society. Maryville's style of defense and offense will be explained, and the Maryville-LMU game, which will be played tonight, will be discussed. Baird will tell Athenian members what chance the Maryville team has of winning the basketball title in the Smoky Mountain conference.

Stephen Amos read his Writer's Workshop report, "Obituary in a Puddle," at the meeting last Saturday. This masterpiece was voted as one of the best of the year.

Tonight's meeting will be over in time for the basketball game.

No YWCA Service

Because of the February Meetings this week and next, YW will not have its regular Sunday afternoon service tomorrow. The YWCA has endeavored to aid the religious spirit inspired by the February Meetings by encouraging the attendance of the girls at the ten o'clock prayer meetings, held each night in the dormitories, where special effort is made by the leaders to continue the spirit of Christian earnestness and fellowship.

First Test For Freshman Debate Team On Feb. 23

For its first test of the year the Maryville college freshman debate team will meet the Johnson Bible College freshman debate team at Maryville, Feb. 23 at 7:00.

Only the men's team, consisting of Roy Crawford, Jack Kramer, Trevor Rees-Jones, Jimmy Witt, and James Wise, will debate.

Only four of the five boys will debate. Freshman debate instructor, Archibald Pieper, has not yet selected the four debaters he will send against the Johnson Bible team.

The question to be debated is: Resolved, that the federal government should own and operate the railroads.

Great Educator, Dr. Mark A. May, Maryville Grad

Yale Professor Attains Great Distinction In Education

Dr. Mark A. May, who graduated from Maryville college in the class of 1911 and who is Director of the Institute of Human Relations of Yale University, is now chairman of the American Council on Education.

Dr. May has attained very great distinction in the field of education in the United States. He is the author of various works, is a professor in Yale University, as well as Director of the Institute of Human Relations, has been for a number of years on the Board of Education for the State of Connecticut, and has held other prominent places. For the year 1939-1940 he is chairman of the American Council on Education which is in some ways the most representative educational association in the United States. Its headquarters are located in Washington, D. C., and it, in a sense, coordinates the various educational groups of the nation. It has a very large financial subsidy from certain of the wealthy foundations and renders a distinct service in the United States in the directio of coordinating educational activity and in investigating and publishing works on education and educational institutions.

The Institute of Human Relations, of which Dr. May is the director, is a pioneering institution, which was founded in 1929. It is financed by the Rockefeller General Education Board, and is composed of research workers, whose interests lie in psychology, economics, education, history, statistics, psysiology, and many other fields. They believe that physical scientists and social scientitsts working together might start a new science of human relations whereby man could learn to be happier and on better terms with his fellows. Dr. May has been with the Institute since 1931, and became the director in 1935.

These are additional honors for Maryville college, at least an honor to one of her sons in whom she has confidence and pride.

Schubert's 7th Symphony To Be Heard At Disc Club

Schubert's Seventh Symphony in C Major played by the British Broadcasting Orchestra under the direction of Adrian Boult will be heard at the Disc club Friday, Feb. 11, at 4:30 in the Fine Arts studio. The commentator will be Wendel Whetstone.

This Seventh symphony of Schubert is probably the composer's greatest masterpiece. Schubert never heard it performed. It was not published until after the composer's death.

Candidates' Conversation Concerns Conditions In Country's Capitol

We asked for a feature last Tuesday evening at staff meeting and found this Frankie and Johnnie question-answer column in the basket on Thursday evening when we went to read copy. It's anonymous, and we don't wish to be accused of slandering two well-known presidential nominees, but here goes! Take it for all its worth!

FRANKIE and JOHNNIE
(A Telephone Conversation)

Frankie: Is that you, Johnnie?
Johnnie; Cactus to you, Frankie.
Frankie: Poison ivy you mean.
Johnnie: Well, take your choice.
Frankie: What do you think of a third term?
Johnnie: For you or me?
Frankie: Me and McNutt.
Johnnie: It don't add up.
Frankie: We are both handsome.
Johnnie: Remember men vote too.
Frankie: How will I get rid of him?
Johnnie: Put him in a room with a mirror on each wall.
Frankie: What then?
Johnnie: He will break his neck trying to see himself.
Frankie: How about Farley?
Johnnie: He don't like you, either.
Frankie: He was for the New Deal.
Johnnie: Yeah. But not the Double Shuffle.
Frankie: You mean he is a Conservative?
Johnnie: Frankie, I wonder.
Frankie: Wonder what?
Johnnie: If you know the difference between a Liberal and a Conservativa.
Frankie: What do you think?
Johnnie: Well, a Conservative earns and spends his own money.
Frankie: Then a Liberal . . .
Johnnie: Spends everybody's but his own.
Frankie: I don't get you.
Johnnie: Ask Cochran and Cohen.
Frankie: That's my trouble now.
Johnnie: How's the fishing?
Frankie: Can't land a sucker.
Johnnie: You ought to use a rowboat; battleships scare them away.
Frankie: You catching any?
Johnnie: You ought to see my mail.
Frankie: Hasn't that local boom died down yet?
Johnnie: Not according to the Gallup poll.
Frankie: Dewey would take you like he did Manila.
Johnnie: That was the horse-and-buggy days.
Frankie: I wish they were here now.
Johnnie: So does everybody else.
Frankie: Suppose I start a war?
Johnnie: You tried hard enough.
Frankie: They shoved it in my face.

Dr. Louis H. Evans Conducts Nine Religious Services And Group Meetings This Week

Lead In "Faust" Taken By Hovel

Maryville Professor to Sing February 14th In Knoxville

On Wednesday, Feb. 14, the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra and the Civic Opera club will present "Faust" in the Knoxville high school auditorium at 8:15. Mr. Ralph Hovel will sing the role of Faust.

The opera will be presented in concert style under the direction of Mr. Ed Hamilton, husband of Mrs. Anna-rine Atkins Hamilton, who is instructor in dramatic art here. Mr. Hamilton is director of the New Providence choir and of the music department of Knoxville high school. About a hundred members of the two organizations are taking part in the presentation. Those participating have spent a lot of time and work since last October on the production. This is the first year the two factions have gone together in this way.

Mr. Ralph Hovel, instructor in German and French, is singing for the first time with the Civic Opera club. Mr. Hovel studied voice in Cincinnati and German music while an exchange student at the University of Heidleberg where he studied for a year, 19-35-36. He sang in the student concerts at the famous castle of Heidleberg, and with a trio of American students at festivals and meetings in other cities. Mr. Hovel will sing Faust in quartet and duet part as well as solo numbers. Mrs. Hovel and a number of other Maryvillians are singing in the chorus.

The opera is to be cut somewhat, especially scenes requiring action, but none of the important and popular selections have been taken from the opera. It will be sung in English because of the lack of familiarity with the original German. The concert will be about an hour and forty-five minutes long.

Last spring the Civic Opera club presented "Sweethearts." Plans are being made to produce the "Chocolate Soldier" and "Carmen" some time next year. Both the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra and the Civic Opera club are made up of music lovers and are non-profit organizations. Tickets can be secured from Mr. Hovel for 75 cents.

Printers Will Receive Chilhowean Manuscript Copy By February 18

At this time the editor of the Chilhowean is busy preparing the manuscript copy for the printers. This copy is due by the 28th of February, and so the deadline for Chilhowean staff members has been set for Thursday, Feb. 15. At that time all pictures and copy are to be turned in at the Chilhowean office.

To date, many of the pictures have been turned in, but there are still some which have not yet been received in the office, and it would be a great help if these pictures could be sent in immediately. The staff has been collecting their material which is due so soon, and they hope by the 15th to be able to say that most of their work is done—at least, as far as the actual copy is concerned. If all the copy and pictures can be given to the printers before February 28, a twelve percent discount will be taken from the price of the books; and so the editor and business manager are doing their best to meet this deadline.

Small Discussion Groups On Common Problems Introduced

CONFERENCES HELD

Rev. Stringham of St. Louis Leads Singing At Services

Nine services of the February Meetings under the leadership of Dr. Louis H. Evans, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church, Pittsburgh, have been held this week. Six services remain, the series closing next Wednesday morning.

Dr. Sydney E. Stringham, pastor of the Epworth Methodist church, St. Louis, is leading the singing at these services. Both he and Dr. Evans are available for conferences with students and others wishing advice. Dr. Evans will speak at the morning worship service in the New Providence Presbyterian church.

Dr. Evans has this year introduced small group discussions of common problems held after the evening services in a Thaw hall classroom. These discussions center around problems of Christian service, Christian morality, the responsibility to the church and other things which are the concern of student groups.

Following his introductory service last Tuesday morning, the Pittsburgh pastor has been using as the basis of his morning talks the first epistle of John, developing from that what he considers should be the religion of a college man. His evening services have not followed a definite theme but have discussed individual problems of Christian living. A brief resume of the morning and evening services so far follows:

TUESDAY MORNING

The educational imperative is that men should fear God and keep his commandments. A life is not whole unless it includes as an important part of itself the soul; with this we have whole, well-rounded lives. There are openings for whole men in science, in industry, in education, in medicine, in business, and in the home.

TUESDAY EVENING

It is a characteristic of young people that they are continually questioning, but the weakness is that the questions are not investigations that will lead to convictions. To be inquisitive in this way would deepen the roots of our religion. Yet college students do not try to reach conclusions about eternal verities because they fear being dogmatic, because our age is one of analysis rather than synthesis, and because they have poor tools with which to do the analyzing. But it is a fallacy to fear being dogmatic; other things are positive, why not religion? It is easy to pull our beliefs apart, hard to put them together again, but in this difficulty comes the need for synthesis. Our tools must be accompanied by spiritual help: "the light from the spirit must go with the knowledge of reason."

WEDNESDAY MORNING

In examining the religion of a college man, in establishing one, we must use the Bible as a kit and as a blueprint. Therefore, the morning addresses are based on the first epistle of John. Most college groups, no matter how hard they appear, need and want God, and in the letter of John we have the material that will give us tests for our behavior and our belief, that will determine the validity of our present state, and that will give us certitudes.

WEDNESDAY EVENING

From the example of the contrasting characters of Stephen and Saul when the first Christian martyr was stoned to death we face the question, do we follow the mores of the crowd and hold their coats as did Paul or do we dare to be different? All great men of their day—scientists, statesmen, thinkers—have been stoned to death because of man's enmity against the best. We do not have the courage to defend tottering ideals. We are prone to hold the coats in matters of reverence—blasphemy, disregard of the Sabbath day, abuse of things sacred; in matters of sobriety; and in matters of soul winning. But we have the grandstand of Christian martyrs

Follow Him

For five days we have been listening to a dynamic speaker for Christ. We wonder if there is anyone who has not been influenced by the direct and sincere messages of Dr. Evans. He has certainly offered us something great with the recognition that we can reason along with him easier than we can accept unreasoned conclusions. He has made a "bull's eye" and has grounded his arrows in the center of our collegiate interests and youth problems!

There is a great tendency today among college groups to be indifferent or, at any rate, to feign indifference to whatever concerns our religious life. Perhaps that is due to the fact that we realize how inadequate it is and fear that others may detect that inadequacy. Whatever it may be, it's time we woke up to the fact that we can't ignore or neglect Christianity and then expect to find it waiting when we need it. Dr. Evans has presented this truth in a forceful way and we need to follow his words!

Here's To St. Valentine!

Before we knew it, Valentine's Day slipped up on us and has almost passed without its annual recognition on this page. St. Valentine and his assistant, Cupid, probably wouldn't have even noticed the absence of a little publicity, for there seems to be a goodly number of affairs even on our campus which are keeping them busy. But that's what we have them for!

We aren't sure whether Valentine's Day and Leap Year have any connection but we feel that if they did, things might be a little different. We've gathered that the women are looking for more chances to do their own dating and from several girls who would like a Leap Year party every week so they could date all the fellows they'd like to, we conclude that variety and not one-man-only combinations are in demand. On this variety business we heartily put our stamp of approval.

And there, you see, men, what the girls would do—why not try it yourself? At least you'd find out more about what you like and what you don't like. So we say—more dating, St. Valentine for our campus, but let's have a little variety in it!

CAPITAL CORNER

By HILTON WICK

Friends, (perhaps, just friend. I know my brother reads it!) February 2 was groundhog day. And many of us did not take time to think of this significant fact. This little animal prophet has for years been our chief forecaster of winter. To winter or not to winter—ah, how sweet; how romantic! So, today we pause to pay tribute to this little hibernator who gladly awakes each February 2 to serve humanity. We saluate thee, Mr. Groundhog! How's the Mrs.? The following words are dedicated to our saluted friend.

Joshington, Feb. 2—

Feature this: Senator Braggert Tillentellen awaked again this morning in the Senate to see if winter was to continue. He cautiously proceded to the out of doors, and was met with a blinding snow storm, which blew him down the Capitol steps. He did not see his shadow! Incidentally, he did not see. On returning to his customary somnolent state, he snoristled the following statement: "Citizens and fellow voters—I greet you all this delightful morning. Like all 'sows of the border', I did not see my shadow this morning. Winter is definitely over. Yes, my friends and fellow voters, and you who have elected me, winter is over—definitely—definitely over the entire city!"

Down With This!—

Representative Laggert Tillentellen, brother of the stately Senator, say this wise thought (translated from the original Chinese). "He who see his shadow has no 'bay window' or double chin." (WHo Woo Fang is responsible for this statement. He say all reference to any person living or dead is purely intentional. He claim author unknown. Perhaps, it is best. Chop, chop.)

Get This?

By noon today the blizzard had ended, and the sun was melting the snow at a rapid rate. Joshington is now covered with four feet of water. All the hogs (ground) and donkeys are floating out of the city. Congress, with its members gone, has automatically adjourned. The flood is cleaning the city. Moral—a new animal is expected in the late fall or early winter.

May each little hog sleep on!

Conducted By GEORGE L. HUNT

HUTCHINS HAS IDEAS

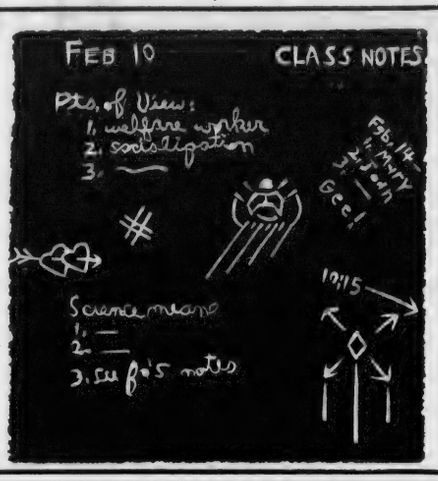
We are told that never does an educational meeting pass without some reference to Robert Maynard Hutchins. He is today one of the outstanding men in his field, not alone because in such a day as this his ideas appear radical but because they are working at the University of Chicago where he is that institution's fifth president. About two years ago he wrote a series of articles for the Saturday Evening Post on education, which provoked controversy. At the time I did not read them, but they have caused so much discussion in recent years that the other day I got the old copies from the library and read the articles.

Hutchins was born in Brooklyn, the son of a Presbyterian minister. His illustrious family is common knowledge to students here, for it has been a matter of but a few months since the elder Hutchins resigned from the presidency of Berea College and was succeeded by another son who came there from a position in Yale-in-China. Robert Hutchins received his higher education at Oberlin and Yale, studied and taught law, was Dean of the Yale Law school in his late twenties, and at the age of thirty was made president of the University of Chicago. He has been in the west a little over ten years and in those years has instituted changes in the school that make each year have an air of expectancy about what will happen next. The most recent bombshell was the abolishing of football, formally announced last December 22.

The first of the four Post articles is devoted to a general discussion of the weaknesses of modern education. With the Hutchins gift for pungent expression, the writer says that higher education is characterized by triviality—tryin gto take every trivial thing seriously; mediocrity—measuring education by the number of years a student has spent in the academic shades; and chaos—"the result of our preoccupation with piling up information and multiplying courses, and pouring the mixture down the throats of students, on the false assumption that the process would produce young people who had learned how to think." He continues, "If education is to educate, it must shift its emphasis from the popular to the important."

Dr. Hutchins makes a strong point of the unnecessary courses offered in our colleges and professional schools, especially courses that do not teach background or basis but teach "practical" dollar-earning things. He further emphasizes this in his book, "The Higher Learning In America", by pointing out for illustration that the catalogue of any divinity school today is "made up of subjects which, it is assumed, will assist the pastor in coping with his first charge. He learns about building management, and community singing, and church socials, and what is called religious education. Theology, which deals with the intellectual problems of his profession, has almost entirely disappeared from the curriculum." He likewise examines the law schools and is equally caustic about them: "And if there are regrettable differences between the standards of the British bar and those of the American bar, is it not possible that one reason for them is that the American law school emphasizes training for the practice and the English universities emphasize the understanding of the law?" This is his general principle: "To the extent to which the attention of the student is directed to vocational interests and away from the intellecual content of the discipline, the university fails to do the only thing it might do and attempts to do something in which it is bound to fail."

A later Post article, entitled "Why Go To College?" (January 22, 1938), is an answer to this question. He sees college as a place to learn how to think, and if the goal of life is happiness, this happiness comes from a training of the intellect. Happiness cannot be bought, it does not come from having wealth and property alone, but must be sought in wisdom and goodness. He firmly believes anyone should go to college who has demonstrated both an aptitude and a desire for more education than he has been able to get in elementary and high school, and everyone who fulfills these requirements should be given the education he needs. His statement in a later article that "we shall have to educate our young people until they reach the age when they can find employment" is not a passing remark to be dismissed lightly but one on which he dwells at great length. Formal education until this education can be satisfactorialy applied—that is his theory.



He has achieved his greatest publicity for what is called the "Chicago Plan." In the main it consists of three points: 1) anyone may enter by demonstrating his aptitude for college work regardless of his previous training (in other words, a high school diploma is not necessary.) 2) Class attendance is voluntary, thus the "cut" system is eliminated.

3) There are general courses in the fields of knowledge for two years and then general examinations are given((eliminating the type of test which asks insignificances just to test the knowledge of the footnotes).

Hutchins is called by his opponents "a dangerous young man in a hurry backwards," because of his emphasis on the importance of Aristotle and Aquinas in the modern curriculum. But this does not mitigate his determination that these things should be taught. "Just as much courage, and courage of a higher sort, is required to tackle a 200-pound idea as to tackle a 200-pound fullback," is his cryptic statement.

Commenting on Dr. Hutchins' book, "The Higher Learning in America," Dr. Lynn Harold Hough in one of his essays in the collection entitled "Free Men" says: "It has been said that the virility and vitality of an institution can be judged by its power to produce its severest critics within its own life. According to this principle, no institution is decadent as long as it is able to subject its own processes to corrosive and caustic analysis. Judged by this standard, American education has some reason to congratulate itself upon the possession of genuine vitality." He then proceeds to examine Dr. Hutchins' book. Undoubtedly Dr. Hough is right, and it will be interesting as well as essential to our well-rounded knowledge of the world's progress to watch the developments in education resulting from the work of Robert M. Hutchins.

Are Checks Written With a Pencil Legal...?

The courts have in some cases recognized as legal, checks written with a lead pencil.

But there is no law compelling banks to pay lead-pencil checks. Because such checks are so susceptible of alteration, banks generally regard them as unsafe and may refuse to honor them upon presentation.

With ink available almost everywhere, and with fountain pens now almost as numerous as pencils, there should be no reason why anyone should write or accept pencil-written checks. Pay safe and play safe! Write checks in ink!

THE HIGHLAND ECHO FEBRUARY 10, 1940

SPORT ECHOES

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

Exams, snow and February meetings have taken up the student interest in past weeks as sports rested for a heavy seige this week and the rest of February. Of interest to sports fans will be the prowess of Dr. Evans, our speaker, in college athletics. Attending Occidental College of Los Angeles, Calif., a rather small school, Dr. Evans was named All-California end. A huge, driving gridster, Dr. Evans showed versatility in gaining a similar honor as center on the basketball hardwood. Some of the boys around Bartlett are commenting on some of his workouts while he is here. In seminary, we hear that Dr. Lloyd and Dr. Evans combined their talents on the seminary basketball team. Finally after hearing his own modest account of his tennis and hockey, we wonder what he isn't good at.

Swimming has taken the spotlight this week as the lads went into action in two meets. All we have is praise for one of the best Tusculum teams ever put up against Maryville. In a dual meet with Tennessee swimmers, who consider themselves high in swimming circles this year, we believe that the balance of the Tusculum team and their crack relays would edge Tennessee out of prominence. It's big teams coming up for the swimmers—Tennessee, Clemson and Auburn in order.

The Honakermen of the hardwood seem to be making a comeback, if that's possible so early in Conference play. With an initial setback against Milligan, they got through a close defensive at Tusculum to run up a sky-high score, licked King and outfought Teachers here at Alumni gym to gain second place among conference rivals. LMU, the opposition tonight, will tell the story of Scot strength and chances for a championship. The Rail-splitters are undefeated in conference play and seem to have all sorts of smooth power. Maryville, with two potential teams ready to go on the floor have an edge in reserves probably. Coach Honaker can put a team of fast midgets on the floor, including Scotchmen Honaker, the Bairds and Klemstra; or he can put Etheredge, Menning, Husk, Morrow and Taylor, for a team of six footers.

As all the Highland teams go to work tonight, Coach Thrower's grapplers seem to have the best odds for a win. King's team at King will be the program. No heavy competition seems to be in sight for the Scottie prides until they tie up with Vol wrestlers. Appalachian AAU champions versus the perennial Maryville champions would be a great meet this year.

With the seniors tying up the first half of the basketball tournament, YMCA intramurals seem to be definitely dominated by the Forty Furies. With Jimmy Rae out of the senior lineup, however, there may be a slip up in the setup, as the sophs and juniors are coming up fast.

Scotties Break Pioneer Spirit By 40-25 Score

Last Saturday evening on the Greeneville floor, Maryville college trounced the Tusculum five by a score of 40-25. Little as the score would indicate, the Pioneers were able to hold the Scotties dangerously close, up until the final 10 minutes.

At the end of the first half, which had been almost entirely devoted toward the defensive, the two teams were tied at 12-12.

As the Highlanders took the floor for the second half, their offensive machine began slowly to draw away from the SMC cellar holders. Led by Scot Honaker, who was scoring baskets from all points, the fast-breaking Orange and Garnet reeled off twenty-eight points while limiting their panicky opponents to thirteen. In the waning minutes of playing time, Stanley Menning connected for two successive sleeper shots, followed by a final field goal by Boydson Baird.

This evening, following the B prelim, the Honakermen will face the acid test—the conference leading basketeers from Lincoln Memorial will invade the Alumni gym at 8:00.

Lineup:

Maryville	Pos	Tusculum
B. Baird 2	F	Hice
Honaker 17	F	Ripley 9
Etheredge 15	C	Bailey 6
W. Baird 2	G	Spargo 2
Husk	G	Miller 7

Subs: Maryville—Menning 4, Morrow, Humphcries, Taylor. Tusculum: McCoy 1, Seers, Sanborn, Hoshour.

Rasslers Go To Bristol To Meet Tornado Tonight

Tonight the Maryville college grapplers travel to Bristol to engage King College wrestlers in the second meeting of the two squads this year. The first meeting on the Maryville mat on Jan. 13 resulted in a 36-0 win for the Scotties.

Since their last encounter with the Tornadoes, the Highlanders have a win over Vanderbilt in the only appearance on the mat. They were as equally impressive with their win over Vandy as they were over King. This is the first road trip of the current season for the Highlanders and is the first match that they have had since the night of Jan. 20 when they wrestled Vanderbilt. Scheduled matches with Chattanooga YMCA were called off due to the weather, and the exams coming in during this period have left the Scotties with a total of 21 days without a match.

There have been several changes in the lineup of the Orange and Garnet grunt and groaners since their last appearance on the canvas. John Baptiste, diminutive 128 pound wrestler has been suffering with an injured back and can not be counted on as a contender in this match tonight. Bruce Wilds, a freshman, will take the place of the injured man for Maryville. Les Galloway, another freshman, will ras-

Tankmen Drop Conference Fray

In the first of their two conference meets the Scotty splashers fell to a strong band of Pioneers, 31-44. The Tusculum Tankmen boast the strongest and most well-rounded team in their history. The combination of Whitely, Morgan, and Condit slowed down the Maryville hopes for their own best season in years. In the dashes, Morgan cut the water in record time with Lee pushing for a close second. Condit, a veteran backstroker, won in the relays which were both taken by Tusculum, and Whitely copped the distance swims. These boys were high point men for the meet. For Maryville Lee and Cross scored high with two seconds to their credit. Gene Craine, veteran Scot diver, and Paul Akana, three-year breaststroker, won Maryville's only firsts.

Tusculum team went ahead early, as they took the first relay, the fifty dash and the 200 yard swim. Craine then took the diving honors of the afternoon with a close decision over Doty. Maryville was put in the running again as Akana and Ritzman swept the breaststroke. All depending on the relay, the Tusculum lads put together a team that was timed below the SEC record, although there was a controversy as to the accurateness of the timekeeping.

Maryville has a return meet with Tusculum here in the later meets of the schedule. The meet should be the biggest swimming duel ever staged between the teams, with the Highlanders stronger with experience in their own pool.

Fischmen Defeat Eastern Kentucky; New Records Set

In the first meet of the Scottie swimming schedule, the Fischmen churned in well ahead of a scrapping band from Eastern Kentucky. Scoring 50 points to Eastern's 25, it was the most decisive victory ever made by Maryville over these old rivals.

Swimming the longer distances, the Scots set several records in events new to Maryville swimming. Heydinger, Akana, and Findlay set up a 300 yd. medley mark, winning easily in the first race of the meet. Maryville swept the meet of first places, losing only the 220 yard freestyle and the diving. Jimmy Lee, who has made vast improvement in his sprinting style this year, had a big night for the Highlanders, taking firsts in the fifty and hundred, and anchor on the relay. The final relay was probably the best race of the afternoon with both teams fighting all the way. Another new record was set in this event by victorious Scots, Findlay, Heydinger, Akana, and Lee. The 440 yard swim, won by Cross, also put a record on the books. Dickman and Brock gave the Scotties a bunch of trouble, scoring firsts in the 220 yard dash and the diving for high pointage for the Tea-

Scotties Win Over E.T.T Here, 48-40

Last Monday night the Maryville college basketball team defeated the East Tennessee Teachers by the score of 48-40 on the Maryville floor. The fast play and the defense strength of the Orange and Garnet were the factors in their win over the strong quintet from Johnson City.

The Scotties used a lightning fast offense which caught the Teachers off guard and napping several times permitting Etheredge or Baby Baird to slip in and drop crips on them. Etheredge was high scorer for the Highlanders and for the evening with 17 points. He was closely followed by Scot Honaker who scored 15 points. For the losers Bowers and White shared their team high points with 13 apiece.

The Teachers started out fast and had a rather large lead on the Scotties at the very beginning of the contest but the Highlanders kept plugging away at the lead until they had passed it and left the floor at the half leading by 13-12. Baby Baird set the crowd crazy with his ball handling and defense work, while dropping in nine points. Several times Baby stole the ball away from the Teacher player and streaked down the floor for baskets for Maryville.

The long shots of Scot Honaker were dropping through the hoop every time he shot one. The majority of his 15 points were made from beyond the foul circle and several were made from difficult side angles. Joe Etheredge continued to play the brand of ball that he has been displaying all season. He dropped numerous crips after faking his man out of position and a

Maryville Quintet Faces Conference Leading LMU Tonight At Alumni Gym

Tonight on the boards of the Alumni gym, the Maryville college basketball team will play host to the league-leading LMU quintet. The visitors are setting the conference race afire with the rapid-fire basket making and their tight and smooth defense. Thus far they are in first place due to a string of victories which has reached eight. They have victories over every team in the conference except Maryville, whom they have not played as yet.

The Lincoln Memorial University basketball team sparks a fast offense with an airtight defense that has held their opponent's scores down and enabled them to romp over all comers. A freshman center is the spark plug of the team and he is leading the team in its victories. The remainder of the starting team are older and experienced players, who have played together for several years.

Maryville started out rather poorly when they dropped their first conference game to Milligan. Since that off night, the team has won three straight conference games in as many starts and are now in second place in the conference standings. The winning streak started at the expense of King whom the Highlanders turned back to the tune of 39-37. The next victim of the Scotties improved play was Tusculum. The Pioneers were defeated 40-26 on their home floor. E. Tennessee Teachers went down to defeat 48-40 on Monday night at Maryville. The play of Joe Etheredge and Scot Honaker, along with the splendid ball handling and all-round play of the Baird brothers, and the fine defensive work of Lloyd Taylor, has been the decisive factor in the wins of the Scotties.

In the past three league games Capt. Etheredge has scored 54 points, while Scot has dropped 43 points through the hoop. Scot has been dropping his long shots in with a monotonous regularity while Joe has been punishing the cords with his one-handed crips and push-up shots from all over. These two men greatly overshadow the other members of the team as far as the scoring column shows, but the team work and the close cooperation of the whole team is resulting in the wins that the Scotties are chalking up.

On next Wednesday night, the Scotties will play Carson-Newman on the boards here. The Eagles have several league victories, although they lost a close one to Tusculum in the past week. They have a speedy ball club and are definitely in the conference race. The game on Saturday night will prove the mettle of the Scotties in the eight remaining conference games on the schedule.

Scots Face Vol Splashers Today

The Maryville swimmers journey to the Smoky City University today to meet the Vols in an afternoon meet. Victorious against East Kentucky and downed by Tusculum, Maryville's records aren't sufficiently good enough to concede them very good chances against Tennessee's strength this year, but an all-round Scot team should put op a close meet. Tennessee in their only meet tied Kentucky in a triple meet including Tusculum. Tennessee is strong in the backstroke, the distance, and the medley relay.

Probably the outstanding performer for the Vol tankmen will be Silva, potential SEC champ backstroker this year. Curtis, Elmore, Webb, and Yagodkin complete their list of veteran stars.

Next week the Maryville boys will entertain Clemson in Bartlett pool. Clemson, southern champions last year, will probably prove to be the strongest team ever to swim against Maryville here.

Maryville's lineup against Tennessee will be an all upper-class outfit, including Lee, Craine, Heydinger, Akana, Ritzman, Capt. Findlay, Cross, Wright, and Mize.

Maryville Tames Tornado, 59-37

By beating the King college basketball team 59-37 in a game played Jan. 31, on the Alumni hardwood, the Maryville Highlanders scored their first victory in Smoky Mountain conference competition.

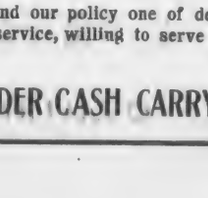
After the first few minutes of play, the favored Scotties snatched the scoring advantage which was never endangered throughout the remainder of the fast and free scoring battle.

Captain Joe Etheredge accounted for 10 field goals and two free throws to continue his red-hot pace. Messerole stole high honors for King with 13.

In trying an experiment for the first time, Coach Honaker used a slightly shifted lineup with Bill Klemstra and Scot Honaker as running mates at the forward positions.

"Junior", as dubbed by fun-loving bleacherites, provided the large crowd original entertainment with his witty "Charlie McCarthy" double-talk.

Proceeds from the game were turned over to the Maryville committee of the President's Infantile Paralysis Fund campaign.



Lineups:

Maryville	Pos	King
Klemstra 1	F	Fowler 1
Honaker 9	F	Messerole 13
Etheredge 22	C	Kursavage 5

February Meetings

watching us and Jesus Christ watching from the right hand of God.

THURSDAY MORNING

There are three ways of looking at religion; historically, theologically, or as an experience. This can be illustrated in the account of the way three disciples saw the tomb after Christ's resurrection. One saw with physical eyes but did not realize the underlying meaning, another saw and believed because it had been proven, the third saw and felt a change in himself because he did so. To mean anything to us our religion must become an experience of a living Christ, the Christ that changed Paul, the Christ that is God because He did things that only a God can do. The colege man wants a religion that will work, and having this experience will make it work.

THURSDAY EVENING

Other religions may offer footprints, but the Christian religion offers footfalls in that we have the abiding presence of a living Christ with us. God is our Father as well as our Creator. He is personal, and it is His coming back after His death that makes our religion unique and gives us a Christian experience. It is an experience that can paint landscapes because we know, we have the faith; it is an experience that can unite God and men, for Christianity is not a movement but a fellowship; it is an experience that can unite the natural and supernatural in our lives and makes God real to men.

FRIDAY MORNING

The rocks upon which we test our conduct as found in the epistle of John are companionship—those united in Christ cannot be separated; a clean heart—we are tested by our speech and our thought for they reveal what kinds of hearts we have; and confession—we are all guilty of sin and cannot escape it, and confession follows upon this consciousness.

FRIDAY EVENING

In recent years we have been made conscious of our impulses so that a lot of sins are laid at their door. We have been engaged in the battle of our impulses, worshipping the god of self. But Christianity will not say we are victims of our impulses, for we then become incapable of choosing between good and evil, being morally inculpable we have no moral sense. In our march of progress we have learned how to control the elements, now we must learn how to control ourselves. We cannot be entirely guided by our impulses because we have our God who expects high things of us, we have a soul, and we have ideals. Our impulses must never be our masters but our servants. When we want something in life, we subdue the impulses that stand in the way of it. We must do that about our religion and not let our impulses stand in the way of achieving the high Christian goal. In this we have the example of Christ who on the cross did not succumb to the impulse of self-preservation, but submitted himself to the divine will.

SATURDAY MORNING

We are guided towards our goal, according to the guidemarks in the second chapter of John's epistle, by first conquering sin. We may be compared to the wrestler who must learn gradually how to break the holds his opponent gets on him. So may we become victors by learning to break the hold of sin and then doing it. Second, we must keep His commandments. Our souls grow by the assimilation of the truths of the Bible and the elimination of those things we are told are wrong. In this we have the help of our consciences, which are compasses with the magnetic point of Jesus Christ. And third, we are guided by our desire for Christ-likeness. Everyone wants to be like Him, but it is the Christian imperative that we must strive for this Christ-likeness.

U-T Dean Discusses Engineering Career

Because little Johnny eagerly tinkers with the radio is no indication he should grow up to be an engineer, said N. W. Dougherty, assistant dean of the University of Tennessee College of Engineering, speaking on "Engineering as a Career" on a U-T broadcast over station WSM.

"As a matter of fact, the young man who is good in English is apt to outdistance the young man who is handy with his hands," declared Dean Dougherty. "Too often the parent believes that a boy is a good prospect for engineering when he likes to use mechanical tools, make toys, or fly a kite."

A boy who intends to be an engineer should be proficient in mathematics, physics, chemistry, and be in the upper fourth of his class scholastically, he said.

Teachers vs. Scots

lot of his points came from one hand push-up shots from the vicinity of the foul line.

Bill Baird and Lloyd Taylor played good defense ball for the Orange and Garnet and it was Lloyd who made several spectacular saves of baskets when he left his feet to capture rebounds almost off the rim. Bill continued to play his steady, even, heady type of ball.

The play was rough and several key men of both teams were removed from play due to an excessive number of fouls. The play was particularly and noticeably rough under the backboards where the rebounds were fought for with vigor and roughness.

Several times the Scots had the Teachers trapped when the ball was passed and repassed with great speed and skill and then passed out for Scot to drop his long ones or to Joe for his short ones. The passing attack of the Scotties showed definite improvement and the zone defense that the Highlanders employed proved to be the best that they have shown as yet. The zone seemed to tighten when needed and the Teachers had difficulty penetrating it for close-up shots from under the strings.

Just before the half ended, the Scots put on a spurt that swept aside all hopes of a Teacher's victory. The quintet swept down the floor and had several baskets and passed the tiring Teachers in points. The Scots were never headed after this and they led until the final gun sounded.

Tonight the Scots play host to the conference leaders, LMU. This will be the deciding game for first place honor as the Scots are now trailing only LMU in the conference standings.

The B squad lost a close game to Maryville high school in the preliminary game. The college team was leading until the last quarter when the high schoolers put on a spurt to overtake and pass the collegians.

Chilhowean

As yet, according to Phil Evaui, business manager, there are about 200 students who have not yet made their second payments. The deadline originally set for this $2.00 payment was Friday, Feb. 2; and it would be greatly appreciated if all who have not yet made this payment would pay it either at the book store or the YM store, or to Alfie Davies, Paul Brown, or Phil Evaul, members of the business staff.

The color and style of the cover of the 1940 Chilhowean have been decided upon, but the data concerning this will be kept secret until the arrival of the books.

Wrestling Tonight

sle in the 135 pound class, and Dave McDaniels will go up to the 145 lb. class. Clem Hahn, after his very commendable performance against Anglin of Vanderbilt, will more than likely take over the heavyweight duties held by Henschen, and Hal will wrestle in the 175 lb class.

Although a definite lineup cannot be given for the Tornado, the men who wrestled against the Scotties the previous meeting are the most likely to repeat again unless injuries have taken their toll and new men are substituted. The team which the Scotties will tangle with tonight will be a far better team than the one which the Highlanders whitewashed here a few weeks ago. This is the first year of inter-collegiate competition for the boys of Bristol and they will have far more experience and skill now than they did at the first meeting of the two.

The probable lineups for the two teams tonight are:

	Maryville		King
121 lb. class—	Evaul	vs	Cox
128 lb. class—	Wilds	vs	Trulove
135 lb. class—	Galloway	vs	Collins
145 lb. class—	McDaniels	vs	???
155 lb. class—	Schreiber	vs	Plexico
165 lb. class—	Everett	vs	Anderson
175 lb. class—	Henschen	vs	Decker
Heavyweight—	Hahn	vs	Gay

Lincoln Day
Finland Asks Aid
Huge Storm In East

Monday, Feb. 12

At two of the many Lincoln Day celebrations held throughout the country, former President Herbert Hoover speaking at Omaha and candidate Thomas E. Dewey speaking at Portland, Oregon denounced the New Deal for having failed to produce prosperity even after spending huge sums in "pump-priming" projects. Both Dewey and Hoover declared that unemployment existing at the present is the logical outcome of Roosevelt policy.

Political observers, commenting on the tone of the Lincoln Day celebrations predict that Republican criticism in the 1940 campaign will center around charges that the New Deal has retarded re-employment by discouraging profits in private industry.

The British government announced that a new British-Turkish trade agreement has been completed and will take effect Feb. 19. The treaty provides that British exports to Turkey shall not exceed eighty percent of Turkish exports to Britain, thus giving Turkey a favorable trade balance in British commerical relations.

The contest for Turkish trade has aroused much competition between London and Berlin. The present agreement is to remain in force one year and for successive annual periods unless abrogated.

Tuesday, Feb. 13

The Finnish high command issued a statement reporting the Mannerheim Line defenses on the Karelian Isthmus unbroken after thirteen days of fighting at Summa. The report said that Russian losses were between 30,000 and 50,000 men while their own losses were "surprisingly small."

The Finnish report also contained a plea to the civilized nations of the world for aid against Soviet Russia. The Finns especially expressed need for more airplanes with which to combat the continued Russian raids.

Wednesday, Feb. 14

The Finnish legation in London reported that between 2000 and 3000 Englishmen have enlisted as volunteers for the struggling Finnish army, in answer to appeals for aid. The British government approved the recruiting of British manpower by allowing men over 27, or exempt for other reasons from conscription this year, to enlist for Finland.

Thursday, Feb. 15

A terrific northeast gale caused more than fifty deaths as it swept across New England from Maine to Ohio, leaving huge snow drifts which blocked transportation on land, and made several flying fields unusable. The snow storm was accompanied by a wind which reached a maximum of eighty miles on hour and caused gaert property damage. Temporary employment has been given to a large number of men for clearing streets and restoring transportation.

James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, sued his wife, the former Betsy Cushing of Boston and New Haven, for a divorce after a separation of 18 months. Roosevelt charged his wife with desertion, and declined to comment on the suit. Mrs. Roosevelt issued a brief statement in which she said that under a settlement agreement she had been given custody of their two children.

Friday, Feb. 16

Sweden definitely refused military aid to Finland through a statement issued by Per Albin Hansson, the Swedish premier. Reports from the Finnish frontier at Summa admit that Russian forces have penetrated defense lines, and have captured part of the village which has been the center of heavy fighting for 16 days.

Finnish cabinet officials are reported to be making appeals to Britain and France for military aid before the defenders are forced to give ground to intensive Russian advances.

The Republican National Committee by an overwhelming vote of 66 to 32 selected Philadelphia as the 1940 convention city.

Debaters Leave For Tournament

Girls' Team Takes Part In Conference Meet

Four members of the women's division of the varsity debate squad left early this morning to attend the women's section of the Smoky Mountain tournament, which is being held today in Bristol, Tenn., at Virginia Intermont. Those making the trip include Jeanne Stringham, Elizabeth Moore, Harriet Miller, and Arda Walker. The tournament is scheduled to end at 5:30 this afternoon, and the speakers will return sometime late tonight.

Harriet Miller and Elizabeth Moore upheld the negative side for Maryville, and Arda Walker and Jeanne Stringham took the affirmative side of the query. Elizabeth Moore and Arda Walker were the extemporaneous speakers, Harriet Miller was the Maryville representative in the after-dinner division, and Arda Walker was Maryville's orator in a competitive field of eight speakers.

Two other home debates have been scheduled so far this year. Otto Pflanze and Arnold Kramer are preparing to take the negative against Emory University of Atlanta on next Saturday evening. On the following Monday night, February 26, Vernon Lloyd and George Webster are slated to debate the affirmative against Birmingham-Southern of Birmingham, Ala.

Club Has Pie Eating Contest

German Club Conducts Contest For Members

Tonight at 8:00 in the YW room, the German club will sponsor a pie-eating contest for the members of the club.

Ten pie-starved contestants will start devouring ten blueberry pies as soon as ten lucky numbers are drawn.

Only the boys will participate in the contest. All the boys in the club will draw numbers, but only ten members will be lucky.

The pies are being furnished by Mr. Alfred Zubiller, father-in-law of Dr. Ralph Stokes Collins. Mr. Zubiller, who has made many friends among the German club members, will be a guest at the party. All the members are eagerly looking forward to having him with them.

After the pie-eating contest is over, Professor Ralph Martin Hovel will lead the group in the singing of German folk songs.

The party is for only old members of the club and students who wish to become members.

President R. W. Lloyd To Begin Tour Of Several Middle Western States

President Ralph Waldo Lloyd has begun a trip which will take him through many of the northern states, and on which he will make short stops in Ohio, New York, and Illinois. His first stop will be in Ohio, where, on Sunday morning, he will preach at Western college, in Oxford, Ohio.

On Tuesday and Wednesday he will be in Rochester, New York, where he will attend the meeting of the Western Section of the Alliance of Reformed Churches throughout the World holding the Presbyterian System.

Thursday Dr. Lloyd will be in Chicago to attend the annual meeting of the Cooperation Commission of Evangelism of the Presbyterian Churches, U.S.A.; he attends this meeting as a representative of the Northern Presbyterian church. He has been asked to discuss at this meeting, the February Meetings of Maryville college, in respect to the preparation, general conduction, and the results. Dr. Lloyd will return to Maryville college after the meeting at Chicago.

Ministerials Meet

Dr. Gates will conduct the meeting of the Ministerial association. He will introduce a new type of meeting in his presentation of a seminar for Christian church school education. Dr. Gates will conduct the meeting Monday evening at 6:45.

Sixty-Fourth Series February Meetings Closed on Wednesday

Booklet "Fourteen Prominent Collegians Look At Life" And Forum Groups Outstanding Features

The sixty-fourth series of February Meetings closed last Wednesday morning with Dr. Louis H. Evans speaking on "The Rewards of Assurance." The appreciation of the students was expressed to Dr. Evans and Dr. Sidney E. Stringham, leader of the singing for the services, by President Ralph W. Lloyd, and shortly after the close of the service the two visiting ministers left for their homes in Pittsburgh and St. Louis.

Two things distinguished this year's series from the previous ones, the forum discussions led by Dr. Evans and the distribution of a small booklet by students, entitled "Fourteen Prominent Collegians Look at Life." These discussions, held after the evening services, concerned such questions as prayer, Christian service, marriage, and were conducted by the question-answer method. On Monday evening Dr. Evans followed his forum discussion with a talk to ministerial students in which he answered questions they raised about their profession.

There follows a summary of the services Sunday evening through Wednesday morning.

SUNDAY EVENING

God is not real to so many people because they have not used the resources of prayer to find Him. The individual doubts his importance in the sight of God, yet he is more important than the whole universe. Prayer is the means of finding out how much he means to God. The three elements of powerful prayer are: 1) a reaching upward, that is, to God; 2) a reaching outward, that is, to others—this helps us to become less self-centered; 3) a reaching inward, that is, to myself—you find your real self on your knees in prayer. The greatest thing in the world is to do His will revealed in prayer.

MONDAY MORNING

The epistle of John gives us the tests of our Christian feeling. The first test is concern: how much do we care? The world is full of hatred, and we are told to love. In its most general sense love means wishing others well in spite of their faults. True love will not make us self-centered. The second test is consecration. We should be so devoted to living like the Master that we will not succumb to the lusts that entice us, the lusts of the eyes, the flesh, and the work self has done. The third test is confidence. Can we look God in the eye when we have done our task, sure it will find favor in His sight? This is the beginning of victory.

MONDAY EVENING

The individual makes three choices in life: his God, his vocation, and his

Pi Kappa Delta Question Is Debated At IRC Meeting Friday

Last evening members of the International Relations club met in Thaw hall to hear a varsity debate on the Pi Kappa Delta debate question for this year; Resolved, that the United States should follow a policy of strict (military and economic) isolation toward all countries outside of the Western hemisphere engaged in armed civil or international conflict.

Hilton Wick and Bill Felknor, of Maryville, represented the affirmative side of the question and Janice Hartle and Audra Claypool from Capegirardeau, Mo., Southeastern Mo. State College, composed the negative team in the debate.

George Webster, president of the club, called the meeting to order, introduced the speakers and made a short introduction of the subject to be discussed.

Find Your Future With The Aids Offered At The Personnel Office

By DON KENT

If you like people with gold teeth, or people who are natural leaders or people who are methodical, or if you dislike Bolshevists, witty people or absent-minded people and if you can't make up your mind whether you want to be a farmer, minister, vacuum-cleaner salesman, school teacher, nurse, or artist, then the Personnel office has a special interest in you, strictly aside from your scholastic record and absolutely confidential to boot. In other words, nothing you say will be used against you.

Seriously, the Personnel office is interested in helping you find the position you'd like and are best fitted for, and they have a number of tests to assist students in the wise choice of a vocation.

For instance, those rather silly-looking introductory remarks are a small part of the Strong Vocational Interest test. Your "yesses" and "noes" and checks and crosses are matched quite impersonally against those of successful men in various fields to see how tastes and abilities agree. Then by a scientific compilation of your strong points and special talents, the checker is able to decide in what occupation you are most apt to succeed.

Other tests to help the student analyze his possibilities may be taken at the office. The Thurstone Personality Schedule and Minnesota Mechanical Aptitude test are both available there. Monographs giving the facts and figures on ninety-one different vocations can be secured for the asking.

Picture In Memory Of Late Dr. McMurray To Be Dedicated At YMCA

A talk by Dr. Clifford E. Barbour and the dedication of a picture in memory of the late Dr. John H. McMurray will feature the YMCA service Sunday at 1:30 in Bartlett auditorium. The time is changed just for this service.

Dr. Barbour, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Knoxville, is closely associated with the college. He was the leader of the February Meetings in 1938, is a director of the college, and has frequently spoken at devotional services here. He received his Ph.D. degree from Edinburgh and has been pastor of the Knoxville church for a number of years.

Dr. McMurray was, until his death in 1938, professor and head of the departments of social sciences at the college. He was beloved by the students who knew him, and the picture to be dedicated in his memory was purchased by the YMCA for that purpose. The picture is a reproduction of the head of "Christ in Gethsemane", and is the third painting to be placed in the Bartlett auditorium in memory of college officials who have died in the past few years.

The YMCA is planning a series of programs on appreciation of world minorities about which further announcement will be made.

Black Face Skit Takes Limelight At Alpha Sig

One of Alpha Sigma's outstanding programs of the year will take place in Alpha Sigma hall tonight at 6:15. The feature attraction will be a black face skit with Dick Watkins and Perry Bigham playing the parts of Rufus and Sambo, and Bob Wright as Mr. John, the interlocutor.

In addition to this attraction, Junior Herrick will give the principles of what every good freshman should do, and E. B. Smith will play several piano selections. Erwin Ritzman will lead the Alma Mater.

Pre-Medical Club Meets Monday In Alpha Sigma

There will be a meeting fo the Pre-medical club in Alpha Sigma hall at 6:30 on Monday night. The major event of the evening will be a professor-quiz program. Refreshments will be served.

The quiz program will consist of medical questions, and these questions will be answered by four chosen candidates and by volunteers from the audience.

Marion Northup and Fred Bingman, program secretaries, in urging all members of the club to attend, promise an interesting program.

Student Groups Observe Feb. 18, As Prayer Day

Universal Prayer Day Is Held Throughout Entire World

Sunday, February 18, has been designated by the World Student Christian Federation as the universal day of prayer for students. Three organizations on the campus are connected with the WSGF, and plans have been made to observe this day of prayer. The organizations taking part are the YWCA, YMCA, and Student Volunteers.

There will be three services tomorrow on the campus. The first at 8 a.m. in the YW rooms will be sponsored by the YWCA devotional program. The second service at 12:00 in the Fine Arts studio will be in charge of the YMCA. There will also be a sundown service for the officers of the three organizations and will be conducted by the Student Volunteer group.

Special emphasis will also be made in the regular meetings of the three organizations and in the evening vesper service. Students all around the world will be holding services in observance of this day.

Second Leap-Year Party To Be Held

Strenuous Ping Pong And Games Are Featured

Saturday evening at 8:00 there will be a Leap Year party in the Alumni gym. This party is being planned by the Social Committee which has bought several new games that will be introduced to the students at this time. About 25 card tables will be set up on the gym floor, and any wishing to bring and play games of their own may do so; others will be welcome to play those provided by the social committee. In addition to these table games, there will be ping-pong games for those who want more strenuous exercise.

Music will be played during the evening and refreshments will be served. Those who come are requested to wear rubber soled shoes.

Amateur "Artist Series" Featured At Bainonian

Bainonian program chairmen, Eloise McNeely and Charlotte Colby, have planned a "Young 'Artist Series'" for the regular weekly meeting of Bainonian tonight at 6:15 in the Y rooms. The "Young 'Artist Series'" will consist of two piano solos, "Clair de Lune" and Jongleur", by Marion Magill; a reading, "Over the Strawberry Bed", by Troy Moore; a vocal number by Ruth Andrews; and a Chopin waltz by Johnye Sue Long.

Dr. S. T. Wilson Is Eighty-Two Years Old Today

Wilson Was President Of Maryville College For 29 Years

In a rambling white house on Indiana avenue a fine old man with a life steeped in fascinating memories today celebrates his eighty-second birthday. He is Dr. Samuel Tyndale Wilson, president emeritus of Maryville college. For twenty-nine years president of the college, he retired to "Casa Bianca", the home on Indiana avenue, in 1930 and for ten years he has been quietly enjoying the advantages of rest and reflection.

Dr. Wilson's whole life has been wrapped up in Maryville college. Following his graduation from here in 1878 at the age of twenty, he spent two years in the mission field and in 1882 was called to the college to be professor of English literature and language and Spanish. From that time on he has been associated with this institution. Until 1901 he served as professor, registrar, librarian, and dean simultaneously, and in that year he was elected president.

According to Dr. Ralph Lloyd, "while Dr. Anderson founded the college, it has made its greatest growth under Dr. Wilson." The truth of that statement can be realized when it is noted that at the time when Dr. Wilson assumed the presidency there were 75 students in the college department and upon his retirement the enrollment included seven hundred and sixty students. During his presidency the value of the college property and endowments multiplied eight times over, due largely to his efforts.

He has further contributed to the

Glee Clubs, Orchestra, Will Present Balfe's "The Bohemian Girl"

On April 5 members of the combined glee clubs and orchestra will present Michael William Balfe's opera "The Bohemian Girl". This will be the first time that an opera has been given on the Voorhees chapel stage, although several operettas have been presented. "The Bohemian Girl" is a romantic opera in 3 acts. The scene is laid in Presburg, Germany, in the eighteenth century. It is the story of a high born girl who is kidnapped by gypsies. Her life after her capture is a mingling of rustic and court affairs. The part of Arline, the kidnapped child, is to be taken by Elizabeth Ann Huddleston. Richard Woodring will take the male lead in the role of Thaddeus. Other leading members of the cast are Lynn Birchfiel, Ruth Woods, Sam Cornelius, and David Hall. "The Bohemian Girl" is one of the most popular light operas ever produced.

Glimpses of Maryville's History Rise From The Dust of Anderson Vault

By JOHN ROSS

Way back in 1915, the "Echo" was changed from a monthly to a weekly publication. In that first issue was this statement from an editorial: "and may all the news of Maryville college find an echo in it." Sure enough there is still that echo of last week's news under your door every Saturday afternoon.

Have you ever heard that saying about history repeating itself? "Huh" (Dr. Evans). Even back in 1915 Carson-Newman was falling before the "Blount Countians" on the enemy floor to the tune of 54 to 19. About that same time there was a Forward Fund that got $75,000.

The Echo for November 10, 1915 carried a picture of the new swimming pool and the story of its dedication. The picture was taken before the seats were built and showed the swimming team in coverall bathing suits as they prepared to plunge.

Things don't change much, yet those old papers covered with the dust of the college vault, the hallowed hole in Anderson, tell of some vastly different things. There was the co-eds basketball team that was starting on a three game road trip in Kentucky on January 30, 1917. And there was the Theta Epsilon program for November 17, 1915 in which "the censor for the evening was Miss Marie Baker." About the same time there was a movement afloat to name the college teams something beside the "Blount Countians."

Years ago (date not given for obvious reasons), in the freshman class notes: "The freshman class under the leadership of its president, Mr. Briggs, is showing much strength." Later in the article "Again the freshman spirit (Is it the same as now?) was shown by Mr. Briggs on the gridiron."

"Baldwin's back parlor was the scene of a very beautiful wedding last Monday, February 14, 1923."

April 1, 1925 was a grand issue date for the Echo. It was a "scandal issue" printed on yellow paper. Headlines read "No Honor System at Maryville. Cut Class and Go To the Show Today." An article, two full columns, began, "The intelligence test which the Echo recently gave to various members of the faculty revealed that practically all the instructors and professors of Maryville college are feeble-minded, morons, or imbeciles."

The first world war transformed the Echo as well as the campus life. In Happy Birthday!

This is the birthday of a man who will long be remembered in the history of Maryville college. Although Dr. Wilson has not been active in college life since our time here, he has still gained great respect and admiration from the students. His name is connected with many achievements in the history of the college during the last forty years.

And so we wish a very happy birthday to the man who has done so much to further Maryville college!

All Three Verses, Please!

It seems to us that something ought to be done about the singing of the Alma Mater. Looking around the chapel on Wednesday morning, we were ashamed to see the number of students who were obliged to look in their books. Either each freshman class ought to be required to learn all the words when they first arrive, or at the beginning of the first semester the whole student body should learn all three verses.

We have often wondered if perhaps there weren't some who didn't even know the words of the first verse. It's about time something was done and a requirement was carried out to the effect that every person is responsible for all three verses.

How much better it would be to see over eight hundred faces singing the Alma Mater respectfully than to see eight hundred books with the Alma Mater coming weakly from behind them!

CAPITAL CORNER

By HILTON DICK

JOSHINGTON, February 17, 12:00, Noon:

The Cupie-Valentine service, official spokesman for all Congressmen and others at large, has its annual VRR ("Valentines Received and Recognized") message today. The official spokesman delivered the message before both houses——were in session.

Now, a few selected heart throbs representing several interests:

Official!

"To Frankie, dear, we bring this cheer—
Thanksgiving comes but once a year,
Valentines, 'ere we forget
Come also once—still yet, still yet."
Regards, the Nation.

Strife?

"Oh, James, brave man, what have you done?
Your hat is in the ring,
I've lost my manager—my hat, (?)
Perhaps, I've had my fling."
from "Frank"

Senator

"Braggart Tillentellen,
Warrior of the call,
Your heart goes out to many—
But slumber conquers all!"
Affectionately, Laggart T.
(also "asleep in the deep.")

Wise!

"Confucius say, his love for all
Is sent afar and near,
But golly sakes, forget that stuff,
He's getting velly, velly tired of it!"
Love, from C. to all his little Valentines.

In?

"Thomas, Thomas, Tommy Dewey,
Will you be our Valentine?
We will put you in the White House,
Just to stay there (this won't rhyme)."
the "White Elephant Inn"

A Trade?

"Cordell Hull, able trader,
You must face the march of time,
Accept the backing of the party—
We will be your Valentine."
the "Donkey Club"

THE COMMENTATOR

Conducted By GEORGE L. HUNT

It is the complaint of many people that they cannot understand this "modern stuff" in the field of music, literature, and art. To some extent this columnist shares this disgust, yet he finds a great deal of pleasure in trying to understand what the moderns are attempting to do and he feels that the reader and lay critic is too quick to dismiss as unintelligible what some study would make, if not intelligible, at least a little more understandable. The following comments were written by Stone Norton and deal with the philosophy of the modern artist as Mr. Norton interprets it.

Mr. Norton, a Maryville student, will be one of two students who will graduate this year as the first art majors this school has produced. The other student is Miss Marie Jensen. We are glad to offer the facilities of the column for Mr. Norton's discussion.

Many popular misconceptions have grown up about the visual arts today. These misconceptions exist for two reasons. First, the exploitation of art elements by artists who depend on sensation for the relative amount of success they achieve has made the public rather dubious as to the sincerity of the art movement as a whole; and second, there is confusion regarding art today because the layman believes that the purpose of art is illustration.

In every movement there are a certain number of radicals, and the art movement is no exception. These radicals may be grouped in several different schools, most imoprtant of which are abstractionism, Dadaism, Surrealism, and Futurism. These schools cannot all be criticized in the same manner, but it may be said that each school denies something essential to an art that will live, that is an art of universal appeal.

The layman holds the conservative view; he sees art as imitation, a model of nature. He judges a work by its literary, its descriptive quality. He fails to see the intrinsic value of art. He is unable to distinguish between what is good and what is bad in art. This is especially true in modern art where the ability of the artist is more subtlely expressed than in the art of the past where polish and technique were always present.

In order to clear up some of this confusion, it might be well to summarize the aim and purpose of the majority of contemporary artists.

The main current of art, the expressionistic school, takes the middle course. It recognizes that subject matter is important, but at the same time insists that painting should be something more than just representation. As a whole this movement organizes aesthetic values in three general classes: the beauty of material, of form, and of expression. In this way it seeks to give painting an intrinsic value.

In the appreciation of materials, the artist seeks to understand their limitations along with their possibilities to use them to the best advantage. For example, an expressionistic sculpture would never attempt to represent clouds in marble because he does not feel that a material with the properties of marble can express something light.

When an artist speaks of "form" he uses the word in a much broader sense than does the layman. Form is then conceived chiefly in terms of linear design, third dimensional weight, volume, and solidity, but it may also include another and wider meaning, that of law, system, or order.

In making use of expression, the third aesthetic value, the artist attempts to project his own personality into the interpretation of his subject matter. He seeks the essential quality in his subject matter to make its meaning full without putting in a great many details. This expressive quality keeps painting from becoming purely intellectual and dry, but at the same time retains the strength that comes with order.

This new art is never sensual, for if it were, it would be illustration. It is never moral, for if it were, it would be religion. It is amoral, in that it pictures life as it sees it.

This is the philosophy of the artist of today; it produces an art that is not only rational but beautiful. A few hours of thoughtful reading in an attempt to understand what the contemporary artist is aiming at will open up a vast new field of aesthetic enjoyment.

Marian Avakian will be the speaker at the Student Volunteer meeting scheduled for 8 o'clock tomorrow evening in the Y rooms. She will discuss the missionary work of Mrs. Joy Kassouny in Beirut, Syria.

This Christian work in Syria has been adopted by the Student Volunteer organization as its year's project. Already half of this amount has been forwarded to and gratefully received by Mrs. Kassouny.

February Meetings

life partner. God is interested in all three, and in times like the present when our homes are not protected by social pressure and there is nothing outside to hold them together, their sustaining power must come from within. The breakdown of a home affects succeeding generations as well as the present, and it is important to realize that romance isn't enough to build a home on. The qualifications for a happy marriage lie in science—good health and in education—learning economy; but qualifications also are spiritual. At least four might be mentioned under this head. One is the command to honor thy father and thy mother, another a good disposition, a third honorable character, and a fourth like beliefs. Samson stood eyeless in Gaza because the woman he married did not worship his god, and it is important to consider this item. The wife expects her husband to be her fortress, and he can not be this unless he has God. The husband likewise expects this of his wife.

TUESDAY MORNING

The next test of your Christianity is credal, do you believe like a Christian? The Bible tells us to believe more times than it tells us to behave, and the denial of the deity of Jesus Christ is the biggest lie you can tell. There are three great doctrines we accept as Christians. First, that Christ came in the flesh as the Incarnate God, and this we believe because Jesus brings heaven with Him wherever he goes. Second, that Christ is divine. Our attitude towards Him as a great person or as God makes all the difference in the world whether we simply honor Him or devoutly worship Him. He repeatedly maintained His deity and was killed because he did so. Men know He is God by His teachings, by experience, and by tradition. Third, that He is the Saviour of the world. He is the only leader of any religion that offers to solve the sin problem, sin which is the barrier between man and God.

TUESDAY EVENING

Two crosses are seen, the Cross of Christ and the Cross of His Followers. What you believe about the first one depends on how you look at it. There are some things in Christianity that are beyond our intellect but are known by experience and the cross is one of them. But it means that man may no longer live for himself but for the Christ who died for him. As for the crosses of the followers, they are personal and voluntary; some of them are the crosses of conscience, confession, and service. If you follow Jesus Christ close enough you feel His cross.

WEDNESDAY MORNING

The rewards of having the assurance of Christ in your life are: 1) you know eternal life—a lot of worth in living now is to have the assurance of the future; 2) you have the power of praying for others—"If you will talk to Christ about that friend it won't be long before you have the power to talk to that friend about Christ."; 3) you have victory over sin; 4) you feel the reality of Christ. The test of Christianity is, do you know Christ?

Law Club Program Given Here Wednesday Evening

Last Wednesday evening members of the Law club met in Alpha Sigma hall for the first meeting of the club of the second semester.

The program consisted of talks by various members of the club on some of the different phases of the profession of law. Robert Wilcox talked on "Civil Law as a Career"; George Webster discussed "International Law" and Arnold Kramer spoke on the "General Practice of Law."

"Criticizing Papers" Was Program Of Workshop Held Monday Afternoon

Writers' Workshop met for the first time this semester on Monday afternoon, February 12. A round table discussion on the ways of criticizing papers was the subject of the afternoon, the idea being to arouse interest in criticism of the papers which are read weekly by the members of the workshop. In this round table discussion the workshop was trying to work up a set of standards or rules by which they could criticize papers in true literary fashion. The final decision of the manner of criticism to be used was as follows: 1) that the writer of the paper should criticize his own paper as to its purpose, style, characterization, plot, etc.; 2) that the group should give their impressions of the paper; 3) that the paper should be analyzed; 4) that evaluation should be given of the paper's characterization, style, information, and plot.

Readers for the next meeting which comes Monday, February 19, are Miss Jessie Johnson and Mabel Ennis. In addition to conducting the round table discussion, the page for the Chilhowean was signed.

Informal Party At Theta

Folk dances and games are planned for the informal party for all Theta girls. Penalties must be paid by all the girls who do not participate in the program. Margaret Ash and Kitty Bennett are in charge of the program. The meeting will be held in Theta hall this evening at 6:15.

SPORT ECHOES

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

Cagey Coach Honaker seemed to be priming his team of Scotties for a close championship race this week as he took LMU over the boards for the licking, and a scrapping Carson-Newman band for a thorough drubbing. They go on a road trip next week. If they keep up this burning pace, it looks like a hot time in old Alumni gym before the season's gone. The students seem to be in the swing of things also. Let's keep up the spirit of the boys on the floor and cheer them to the top of the SMC.

Wrestling is in for a big week—Vandy and Tennessee. The new shakeup of the squad with McDaniels moving up to the 145 and Galloway taking over the 135 duties, will be proved and ready tonight. Baptiste, out with a torn shoulder, is in good shape for the big week and will complete a healthy battling bunch. If Fish Anglin decides on an exhibition tonight, he'd better request Evaul. Watch Joslin, Crane, and Freeman, when U-T tangles with our grapplers over here. They're tops for the Vols.

Coach Fischbach's lads had a lot of water thrown at them this week, but with Dr. Evans' compliments ringing in their ears, they're a happy outfit. Dealing in personalities in swimming this week, Coach Fischbach and Coach Holzendorf are close frends. We don't see how they could be anything else with those names. Jimmy Lee, who copped a record last night, is looking forward to another encounter with Dickman of the Kentucky team. Dickman a diving and dash star, hails from Covington also. Their rivalry is ancient, and Lee seems to have taken the first round. When backstroker Silva, SEC champ and pride of Tennessee, meets Martin, Southern champ tomorrow, there's going to be action. Martin gets the nod from us, however; his time should place him high in the nationals at Yale this year. The father-son, and brother aspect seems to point to quite a clannish talent gold mine on Clemson's team. Gene Craine seems to be stacking himself up quite a record. He is beating the best of the best.

Preliminaries in track were apparent on the weeds of the Wilson cinder circle, as some of the Maryville champs of last year got out in the frigid February air and began the long unkinking work. Alfy Davies and Doug Steakley are already training for a big season. Coach Thrower is advising all the runners to begin to run distance as a preparation for a defense of our first track championship.

Clemson Tigers Claw Scottie Swimmers In Tank Exhibition By 46-29 Score

Lee Cracks Pool Record As Scots Splash Champs

The Southern champions from Clemson showed Maryville its colors last night in winning easily 46-29. Showing true championship form, they took firsts in all events, except the diving and final relay. The 200 yd. relay was given to the Scots by forfeit when a Tiger tangled with the pool ladder. Maryville's Craine showed beautiful form edging Richards, 98-96.

Standout performer for Maryville was James Lee, veteran dash man of the Highlands. Lee lowered the pool record in copping second place in the 50 yd. dash at a 26.4 clip. The old record was 26.9. Taking seconds for the Maryville boys were Heydinger in the backstroke, Cross in the free style distance and Findlay in the hundred.

Showing their championship paces, Martin, Holzendorf, and McKnight, three of the best in their events in the South, cut faster time than has ever been seen in the Bartlett pool. Holzendorf swam the 100 yd. dash in 55 seconds, good time anywhere this side of the Olympics. Martin, considered one of the highranking backstrokers in the United States, is capable of close to world record time. McKnight, although not so illustrious as his fellow team mates, holds the southern championship and breezed through his event in brilliant time.

Clemson battles U-T this afternoon in what should prove the University's first downfall. The Scot Fischmen have a vacant date next week. Auburn, the scheduled opponent, was unable to make the trip.

The meet was officiated by Stevenson as referee and McCurry as starter. Clifford Procter took over the announcing duties.

Complete results of the meet:

300 yd. medley: Clemson (Martin, McKnight, and McKnight). Time: 3:21.

220 yd. freestyle: Ehrhart (C), Cross (M), Akana (M). Time 2:46.

50 yd. dash: Holzendorf (C) 24.7, Lee (M) 26.4 (new record), Haden (C).

Diving: Craine (M) 98.13, Richards 96.64 (C), Mize 85.83 (M).

100 yd. dash: Holzendorf (C), Findlay (M), Lee (M). Time: 55.

150 yd. backstroke: Martin (C), Heydinger (M), Haden (C). Time: 1:50.

200 yd. breaststroke: McKnight (C), McKnight (C), Akana (M). Time 2:54.

440 yd. freestyle: Martin (C), Ehrhart (C), Cross (M). Time: 6:28

Scot Cagers Clip Eagle Wings 44-35

Last Wednesday evening on the Maryville court, the Maryville college basketball team defeated a Carson-Newman Eagles by the score of 44-35. The victory was the sixth successive win against one defeat for the Honaker-men in the Smoky Mountain conference standings. In the first conference game against Milligan, the Scotties were handed their only set-back.

Grabbing the referee's toss-up at center which started the game at 8:15, Carson-Newman started the scoring with a long field goal. After dribbling the ball down the floor, Lloyd Taylor tied the score at 2-2 with his long shot from deep center. The Eagles cracked the hoop for two more field goals, and as they were leading 3-6, Captain Etheredge called time out for the Scots.

Notice

Coach Thrower requests that no one use either of the basketball courts in Bartlett or the Alumni gym unless equipped with basketball or tennis shoes. It is imperative that this be observed else the courts will be closed to the student body.

Coach Thrower.

Quickly breaking from their huddle, Maryville grabbed the lead on two one-handed push-up shots by Etheredge and a long shot by Taylor. Dazed by the rapid shooting which left them trailing at 9-6, the Eagles were forced to call time out.

Again breaking quickly into the offensive, Boydson Baird scored 3 points on a fast pivot around his guard for a field goal and a resulting foul shot. Not until Maryville had scored 15 points did Carson-Newman add to their column which had been rung up in the very early moments of the game.

Rallying after 5 ringers by Etheredge, the Eagles in a burst of uncanny shooting worked the score within four points of the Scotties lead.

At the end of the half, the electric scoreboard read: Home Team- 24—Visitors-19.

Although the opening tip from center was taken in the air by Scot Honaker, the Eagles started the second half scoring with a free shot from the foul circle and a long range field goal. After Maryville set a burning pace with three successful foul throws and a field goal by Honaker, the Eagles called their second time out.

Etheredge, on an intercepted pass from his zone position, out-sprinted the Eagle guards for a thrilling lay-in basket to increase the lead to seven points.

After being substituted for Taylor, Boydson Baird tossed in two double

Scot Grapplers Journey To Nashville To Meet Fast Coming Commodores Tonight

This afternoon at 4:00, the Maryville college wrestling team will invade the state capital for a return match with the powerful grapplers of Vanderbilt University. In the first meet with the Commodores in Maryville, the Scottie mat men tok a one-sided victory by a score of 31.5—4.5.

Because of Vandy's impressive victory over the University of Tennessee last Friday in Nashville, Coach Thrower believes that the outcome of this encounter will determine the state championship.

The same Orange and Garnet team which already holds victories over Vanderbilt and King, is expected to line up in defense of the state title. However, due to several injuries on the squad, the 128 pound class will be taken by Wilds or by Baptiste, and the 145 pound division will be filled by either McDaniels or by Culver.

No word has been received from the Commodores, but the probable lineup against the Highlanders will be:

Maryville		Vanderbilt
Evaul	128 lbs.	Hughes
Baptiste or Wilds	128 lbs.	Hutton
Galloway	136 lbs.	Pellet
McDaniels or Culver	145	Dozier
Schreiber	155 lbs.	George
Everett	165 lbs.	????
Henschen	175 lbs.	??

Maryville Quintet Shades LMU 33-31

SMC Leaders Receive First Setback By Hot Highlanders

On Saturday night the Maryville college basketball team won its fourth straight Smoky Mountain conference victory in 5 starts, when it outscored the Lincoln Memorial University team 33-31. It was the Railsplitter's first loss in the conference race, having won eight in a row before meeting the Scotties on the boards of the Alumni gym. The teams played before the largest turnout of the year and the bleachers overflowed as many had to sit at the ends of the gym.

The play of the Scotties was highly commendable as they outfought and outplayed their rivals and staved off a rally coming in the final minutes of the game to win. The game was rough at times but this was chiefly due to the pressure on both teams and many of the fouls could not have been avoided. Several men were banished from the game due to an excessive number of fouls.

The high scoring honors for the evening went to Nidiffer of LMU. Joe Etheredge led the Scotties in the scoring column with 13 counters and he was closely followed by Boydson Baird who dropped 12 thrilling points through the hoop. Joe continued to display his all around offensive ability and shone equally as well on the defense. Baby Baird set the immense crowd crazy with his defensive work and his uncanny shots which he popped in at the most unexpectant and opportune moments. He would dash in from nowhere and uncork a dazzling shot—time after time. The defensive work of Lloyd Taylor was the high light of the game. Taylor, a freshman, has proved himself the man for the starting guard post by his ability to get the ball off both backboards and his ability to guard his man. Scot was bottled up all evening and was unable

Tennessee Mermen Take Highlanders

The Maryville tanksters bowed to the University of Tennessee's powerful crew last Saturday by a score of 54-21. The Maryville lads failed to register a first in a meet far out of their class. The final relay was taken by Maryville by the disqualification of the Vol team.

Leading a brilliant afternoon's work for U-T was Webb, Brock, and Silva. Each took firsts in his specialty. Silva was probably the oustanding swimmer for the University. A backstroke star, he went out of his race to take the 440 from Webb. Silva also helped annex the medley relay points. For Maryville, Lee took seconds in the

Scots Face Tough Vols On Tuesday

The Scottie grapplers, after a hard week end at Vandy, continue their travels next week to meet Tennessee. The meet is scheduled for Tuesday afternoon on the Vol mat.

The teams will be vaunting for the State championship when they tangle. It'll be the toughest in the book for the Highland he-men. Tennessee cannot very well be judged for strength; their record is not so good as Maryville's, but their sole defeat, from Vanderbilt recently, came as a result of their captain, one of the best 165 pounders in the state, being unable to wrestle and forfeiting the deciding match. They swamped Vandy at Knoxville.

The Scot team will be in good shape with the rejuvenated lineup probably holding for the meet tonight and Tuesday. Baptiste, after a bad time with a shoulder is back in prime condition. Tennessee has three outstanding wrestlers that the Thrower tutored grunters are watching for. A crack 128 pound veteran, Joslin, the captain and topnotcher on the team, Crane, and Freeman, a 175 pound man, seem to be the competition.

Highland Quintet Faces E-H Cagers

On Monday the Scotties start on their first long road trip when they play Emory-Henry, Tenn. Teachers, and LMU on Monday, Tuesday, and Friday nights. Then they return to battle Tusculum on Saturday night in the Alumni gym. It is the first time that the Scotties will have left home since they journeyed to Tusculum to battle the Pioneers.

This will be one of the toughest, if not the toughest week, in the Scotties schedule, as the teams are all tough and are all gunning for the high riding Scotchmen. The Scots have now won five out of six conference games and are closely pressing LMU for the lead in the Smoky Mountain conference.

In the previous meeting with Tusculum, the Scotties were victorious on the Pioneer's floor when they handed their hosts a 40-25 defeat. The score does not indicate the tough time that the Highlanders had in winning the contest. It was only until the very final quarter that the Scotties were able to run up the score against Tus-

Maryville's History

September, 1917 came the sound of reveille at 6 a.m., on Wednesday and Friday mornings. The two companies of Maryville men drilled on the baseball diamond. The next September, Maryville opened with the largest student army training corps in the state of Tennessee. The Echo was sponsoring a campaign to send a copy to every Maryville college boy "over there." The full page campaign ad carried the slogan: "Every Maryville boy in France an Echo." The papers were full of death notices until the announcement of demobilization on Dec. 3, 1918.

In spite of the war there was the usual thread of campus life as shown in a note on the ministerial association wheih was holding "bi-weekly" meetings on the first and third Tuesdays of each month. (Even then there were typographical errors.)

It was during the war period that Carnegie was dedicated and William Jennings Bryan, orator, statesman and gentleman, known the world over for his profound interest in America and Americans, delivered his famous lecture, "The Making of Man."

Not long afterward, on January 30, 1917, the headlines called the University of Tennessee "Poor Losers" and gave a hot story on the University's breaking of agreements for athletic contests.

December 1, 1921 was a spectacular issue with a six column picture on the front page of the Highlanders as Appalachian champs. On the front row was a gent by the name of Robert Thrower (193) "the big Texan tackle with three more years of college football." In the issue for February 16, 1923 there was a four column picture with Captain Thrower again on the front row and the summary of how the Highlanders had scored 345 points to their opponents' 91.

Once upon a time there was this filler which can be used as a filler again: "Ask Ralph, he knows".

dashes, Craine scored a close second to Elmore of Tennessee in the diving. Maryville's high scoring of the meet was in the diving event as Mize took third behind Craine.

In the close final relay event, a technical win of the Scotties was made by Findlay, Akana, Heydinger, and Lee.

to get his usual quota of points. Bill Baird played a magnificent game in spite of a hurt shoulder that was causing him considerable trouble.

These five men played practically the entire game without a substitute until the last quarter when Husk, and Menning went in to relieve them. The same was practically the case with LMU, as they only sent three subs into the fray.

The play started rather slowly but gradually speeded up as the offense of both teams got started and as the players began to warm up. Then it was sparked by several fast breaks and several beautifully executed screen plays on the part of both teams. Against the Highlanders' zone defense proved to be a big factor in the conquest of the conference leaders. There was a large amount of fouls called during the course of the evening, due to the rough and spirited play of both teams.

The lead that the Scotties enjoyed never increased beyond ten points more than their opponents', and the game had the crowd mad with joy and spirit until the final whistle had blown. In the last few minutes of play with the Orange and Garnet lead slowly diminishing, everyone was to his feet and the crowd went wild when the final gun did sound. The Railsplitters had a chance to win three times in the last 54 seconds of play when they had the ball down in the forward court three times in that much time.

They Tried To Take You From Me

They tried to take You from me,
They said You were but an idle myth,
A delusion and a childish superstition;
When I prayed they mocked me,
And when I worshipped You they called me mad.
But O, my Master—I have met and I know!
I have heard You in the still of the night,
And in the infinite silence I have beheld Your glory;
In the hour of pain I have felt Your comforting hand.
How can I doubt You whom I know?
They tried to take You from me.
They proved in learned discourse that You never were;
They told me I was simple, and that You were but an empty dream;
Scientific proof they gave, and Spoke wise words I could not understand,
They ridiculed and scoffed and and laughed
But, Oh, my Master—he that once has met You cannot doubt!
He that once has felt Your holy presence never questions more.
Though they are blind, yet have I seen Your splendor;
Though they are deaf; yet I have heard Your voice.
You can I doubt You whom I know?

Report of Commission on Curriculum for secondary schools, 6th year book, of Dept. of Superintendents of N. E. Association.

"Man hungers and thirsts for righteousness. The great universe calls to his spirit and unless he ignorantly or willfully closes his ears, he hears the voice of God. When this orientation takes place, life assumes poise and dignity and grandeur. Otherwise its strivings, its struggles, its achievements seem trivial and insignificant.

NO GREATER TASK rests upon the secondary school than to help its pupils to find their God. How this is to be done is the reatest problem.

Of one thing only we are sure: we cannot solve this problem by ignoring it."

The Gospel According To You

There's a sweet old story translated for man
But writ in the long, long ago—
The Gospel, according to Mark, Luke and John—
Of Christ and his mission below.
Men read and admire the Gospel of Christ,
With its love so unfailing and true;
But what do they say, and what do they think;
Of the Gospel "according to you"?
'Tis a wonderful story, that Gospel of love,
As it shined in the Christ life divine,
And, oh, that its truth might be told again
In the story of your life and mine.
Unselfishness mirrors in every scene
Love blossoms on every sod,
And back from its vision the heart comes to tell
The wonderful goodness of God.
You are writing each day a letter to men,
Take care that the writing is true,
'Tis the only Gospel that some men will read—
That Gospel "according to you."

A Woman's Question

Do you know you have asked for the costliest thing
Ever made by the hand above—
A woman's heart and a woman's life
And a woman's wonderful love?
Do you know you have asked for this priceless thing
As a child might ask for a toy—
Demanding what others have died to win—
With the reckless dash of a boy?
You have written my lesson of duty out
Manlike you have questioned me.
Now stand at the bar of a woman's soul
Until I shall question thee.
You require your mutton shall always be hot
Your garments shall always be whole;
I require your heart to be true as God's stars
And pure as heaven your soul.
You require a cook for your mutton and beef,
I require a far better thing,
A steamstress you're wanting for stockings and shirts
I look for a man and a king.
A king for a beautiful realm called home,
And a man that the Maker, God
Shall look upon as He did the first
And say, He is very good!
I am fair and young but the rose will
Will you love me, then, mid the falling leaves
As you did mid the bloom of May?
Is your soul an ocean so strong and deep
I may launch my all on its tide?
A loving woman finds heaven or hell
On the day she is made a bride.
I require all things that are grand and true
All things that a man should be;
If you give this all, I would stake my life
To be all you demand of me.

college by preparing records of its growth and its leaders. "A Century of Maryville College—A Story of Altruism" and "Chronicles of Maryville College" have come from his pen, the first in 1916 and the last named in 1935. He has written biographies of Dr. Isaac Anderson, Prof Thomas Jefferson Lamar, and Dr. H. G. Hutchinson, figures who loom high in the history of the college. In addition to these college works he has written an account of Maryville students in the mission field, "Our Foreign Legion," and "The Southern Mountaineers," one of the best works in its field.

Dr. Wilson now makes his home with one of his six children, Mrs. Clyde T. Murray. His other children are scattered all over the world, one in California, another in Syria, a third in Florida, a fourth in Texas, and a fifth doing work among the Dakota Indians.

Aubrey Williams, a government official who is a graduate of Maryville college, has been reported to have said that the two greatest men he has ever known are President Roosevelt and Dr. Wilson. Such praise is typical of the high esteem in which those who know Dr. Wilson hold him. This college generation does not know him personally, but his influence is felt and his name is honored for the contribution he has made to the Maryville tradition. Sincere birthday congratulations are extended him by the student on college hill.

markers on a tricky hok-shot and a dribbling fast break.

With forty seconds remaining, Carson-Newman called their third time out in a futile attempt to stall defeat. As the Eagles took possession of the ball after the final score by Stan Menning, the timer's gun ended the game with the score reading: Maryville 44, Carson-Newman 35.

Outstanding for the Maryville attack were Capt. Etheredge with 16 points and Baby Baird with 7 points. Brown led the Eagles from his guard position with 14 markers.

With their record of six victories and one defeat, Maryville must win every game in the last half of the conference schedule to win the SMC championship. A loss of one game would assure the Orange and Garnet of a tie for leadership.

In the preliminary game, the Defoe Lumberjacks won a decision over the B team in an overtime period, 25-23.

culum and win by such a decisive margin.

In the game against LMU, the Scotties won only after a hard fight, 33-31. The score shows what a close and hard fought game it was, and on the Railsplitter's floor anything might happen. The University will be gunning for the arrival of the Scotties as they were handed their first and only defeat in the conference race by the Highlanders the other night.

Tennessee Teachers provided the Orange and Garnet quintet another tough and hard fought game and the going will be anything but smooth in Johnson City. The Maryville team won out only after four quarters of fighting, 48-40. This will be the first meeting with the non-conference foes from Emory-Henry.

No lineup has been received from the Vols, but Joslin, Crane, Freeman, and Tanner are sure to be the heavy end of the starting lineup.

If Maryville comes out of this fray undefeated, her record will crown her Amateur and Intercollegiate champions of Tennessee. If the Scots drop the match, they have another shot at Tennessee on the Alumni mat at the end of the week.

NEWS REVIEW

Turkey May Enter War
Finn Relief Fund Grows
Many Russians Killed

Tuesday, Feb. 20

The Turkish newspaper Yeni Sabah of Istanbul announced that Turkey is determined to enter the European war if Germany attempts to invade the Balkans. In conference with British and French military experts the Supreme War Council began a week's emergency session for studying plans to co-ordinate Turkish forces with the Allied armies now being concentrated in the Near East.

Turkey also announced that she will use a part of the recent British-French loan to construct a port at Eregli on the Black Sea to be used as a base for naval operations.

The Turkish state has an estimated military strength of 1,000,000 men who can be co-ordinated with an Allied force of 570,000 men now in Syria, Palestine, and Egypt.

Wednesday, Feb. 21

Former President Herbert Hoover, chairman of the Finnish Relief Fund announced that he had received a $100,000 contribution from John D. Rockefeller Jr. The Rockefeller gift boosted the American fund for relieving the distress of the Finnish noncombatants to nearly $2,000,000.

Russian airmen dropped bombs on neutral Swedish territory for the second time since the beginning of hostilities, and aroused fresh fears in the Scandinanvian countries. The first violation on Jan. 14 brought a prompt apology from the Moscow government which said that the Russians were lost in a snow storm.

Immediate protests were registered with Russia, and the incident is expected to be discussed at the meeting of the ministers of Sweden, Norway, and Denmark Saturday at Copenhagen. Neutral observers believed that the incident would revive the Swedish movement for intervention in the Russo-Finnish war. The Swedish government has refused direct military aid.

Finland called up two more classes of army reserves, men 44 to 46 years old, to meet the increasing numbers of Russian troops. Some 2000 Russians were reported killed in an unsuccessful attack on the eastern sector of the Mannerheim Line. The Russians claimed the capture of 21 fortifications including 15 concrete forts.

In the Anglo-French-German war, the Royal Air Force shot down two German bombers attempting raids on the eastern coast of England. The German navy sank a British trawler with all but one of its 22-man crew on board. Increased aerial activity and heavy artillery firing was reported in the Saar area of the Western Front.

Friday, Feb. 23

The United States House of Representatives voted 216 to 168 to extend the Hull reciprocal trade agreements for a three year period. Five Republicans joined with the Democrats in support of the measure, which will now be sent to the Senate where the Finance Committee is scheduled to begin hearings Monday. The continuation resolution is the first great House victory for the administration in this session.

The Senate Elections Committee approved a bill to outlaw political activity by any of the half-million state employees who receive part of their pay from federal funds. The measure was drafted by Senator Hatch, author of the Hatch Act which applies to federal workers. The committee vote was 6 to 3, and the bill was opposed by three Democrats normally friendly to New Deal legislation—Minton of Indiana, Lucas of Illinois, and Stewart of Tennessee.

Preachers Hear McClelland

There will be a meeting of the Ministerial association in Athenian hall at 6:45 on Monday evening. Dr. Frank D. McClelland will speak on "The Mistress of the Manse", a topic which has been of great interest in the past.

Debate Squad To Participate In Two Forensic Tournaments Next Week At Carson-Newman and No. Car. State

Debaters To Seek Fourth Straight Victory At State Tourney, And Fifth Win At South Atlantic

"Members of Maryville college's varsity debate squad face the very difficult task of participating next week-end in two separate speech tournaments which happen to occur on the same dates," stated Professor Verton M. Queener, debate coach, this morning.

Since the two tournaments take place in different parts of the south, the debate team has necessarily been divided into two separate squads.

Representing Maryville at the South Atlantic Speech tournament, which will take place at Hickory, N. C., on February 29 through March 2, will be Sara Lee Hellums, Harriet Miller, Betty Moore, Arda Walker, Arnold Kramer, Otto Pflanze, Jack Zerwas, and Clifford Procter.

At the same time Maryville will be represented at the State Forensic tournament in Jefferson City, Tenn., by Janet Lindsay, Lucille Lynch, Hilton Wick, Bill Felknor, Henry Wick, and Robert Lamont.

For the past three years, Maryville has won first place in the State tournament and has been high in the rankings at the South Atlantic tournament.

At the South Atlantic Speech tournament, Miller and Walker will debate the negative side of the Pi Kappa Delta debate subject and Moore and Hellums will take the affirmative in the women's division. In the men's division, Procter and Zerwas will take the affirmative and Kramer and Pflanze the negative.

In the other divisions of the speech tournament, Maryville will be represented in the women's divisions by Walker in oratory and extempore, Miller in impromtu and after-dinner speaking, Hellums in the group discussion and problem solving contests, and Moore in the group opinion contest.

Kramer will enter the men's division of oratory and problem solving; Pflanze, extempore; Zerwas, impromtu and group discussion; and Procter in after-dinner and group opinion.

At the State tournament at Jefferson City, each team must prepare both sides of the question. The men's teams are Henry Wick and Robert Lamont, and Bill Felknor and Hilton Wick. The women's team is Janet Lindsay and Lucille Lynch.

Hilton Wick will participate in the State Peace Oratorical contest for men and Henry Wick will enter the tournament oratorical contest. In the women's division, Lucille Lynch will enter oratory. As yet, no other assignments to the special speech divisions have been made, but entries will be made in each contest.

Student Council Comes To Life; Improvements Suggested For Campus

To all those who wonder, and to those who have been bold enough to ask, yes, the Student Council does exist. It has been active all year in behalf of the students, and from now on a summary of each meeting will be printed in the Echo. This is being done to inform the student body of the activity of the Council, and to show how well it represents the students who elect it. Attempts are also being made to arrange so that students who have particular suggestions may appear before the Council to present their ideas.

At the meeting in Miss Johnson's classroom Monday evening, the following ideas and suggestions were presented. A bubbler fountain has been approved, and will be installed in Fayerweather Science hall. The possibility of investigating the extra current charges, especially the reasons for the extra charges late in the semester was considered. The possibility of installing a public pay telephone was also discussed. The following suggestions were made to the Social Committee: that attempts be made to secure an open swimming program some Saturday night in the near future, that a roller skating party be held on the walks of the campus in the spring, that a school party be held in the mountains some Saturday in the spring.

A proposal was also presented to have a more thorough explanation of what characterizes a holiday and what the penalty for "cutting" before and after a holiday is. The so-called "double cut" seems to be confusing to most students.

It is hoped that each of these suggestions may be investigated, and a conclusion reached.

Freshman Debate Teams Enter State Tournament

Two teams of Maryville's freshman debaters will participate in the freshman division of the state tournament, which is to be held at Carson-Newman starting February 29 and running through March 2.

Last night two men's teams of Maryville's freshman debaters debated two teams from Johnson Bible college, here at Maryville.

For Maryville, on the affirmative side, were Jack Kramer and Roy Crawford. On the negative side for Maryville, were Jimmy Witt and Trevor Rees-Jones.

The debates were non-decision.

Bainonian, Athenian Argue on Mid-winter

Several Society Members Protest First Choice

At their last Saturday meeting, held a week ago tonight, Bainonian and Athenian members received the report of the play committees and voted as to the choice of their mid-winter. Both societies approved the committees' choice of "Mr. Pim Passes By", a popular comedy of twenty years standing, written by playwright A. A. Milne.

After the decision, however, several members of both Athenian and Bainonian protested against "Mr. Pim" because it required only seven characters, three men and four women, and would give no chance to many members of the societies to have the opportunity and pleasure of acting in the production. In consequence, a joint, special business meeting was held on Wednesday evening. After a heated discussion, it was decided to appoint new committees to reconsider the old choice—with the intention of making a new one.

John Wintermute, Dave Hall, and Rit Anderson, Athenian members, with Charlotte Colby, Betty Moore, and Carol Dawn Ward, of Bainonian, constitute the new committee.

The new choice of a play is to be limited to one of about six, among them: "Dover Road," "Mr. Pim Passes By", Berkeley Square", "Pygmalion", "She Stoops to Conquer", and "The Rivals."

It is hoped that the committee will have reached a decision to be voted upon by the societies tonight, so that casting and production may be begun as soon as possible.

The play will be presented about the middle of April.

Student Council Donates Two Contemporary Works

The Student Council of Maryville college presented two books to the Lamar Memorial library, one in memory of Mrs. William Patton Stevenson, and the other in memory of John William Kerr.

These volumes, presented on February 1, are two of the most popular recently published books. "Men of Music", by Wallace Brockway and Herbert Weinstock, is a commentary on the lives and works of famous musicians, presented in memory of John William Kerr.

"Moment in Peking", by Lin Yutang, a novel of contemporary Chinese life, was presented in memory of Mrs. Stevenson.

Theta-Alpha Sig Open Mid-Winters With "Winterset"

Johnson and Berg Have Leads In Anderson's "Winterset" Mar. 2

On next Saturday evening, March 2, at 8:00, Theta Epsilon and Alpha Sigma will present in Voorhees chapel, Maxwell Anderson's modern realistic drama, "Winterset". The play, directed by Mrs. Nita E. West, is of an unusual type new to the Maryville stage.

VIRGINIA BERG

It has been one of the most successful plays on Broadway in recent years, and was released only recently for amateur performances.

The romantic leads in the production are to be taken by Virginia Berg and Melvin Johnson, both members of the sophomore class. Berg and Johnson take the parts of Miarmne and Mio, two young people of the lower class in the slums of a large modern city. Mio's life is divided by two conflicts. One is the pursuing of his love for Miarmne; and the other is the exposing of the people who were responsible for the unjust death of his father, who was electrocuted for a murder which he did not commit. Tommy Stahl and Dick Watkins are cast as members of the gang responsible for the death of Mio's father. Bill Felknor has the role of Garth, brother of Miarmne. Garth knows who really committed the murder and could have saved Mio's father. George Phelps, who will be remembered for his successful performance in "Our Town", will play the part of the old Jewish rabbi, father of the heroine, Miarmne. Members of the supporting cast are Jack Harwood, Bruce Walters, John Ballenger, Lois Thorson, Howard Dizney, and E. B. Smith.

With this play, "Winterset", Theta Epsilon and Alpha Sigma open the mid-winter dramatic season at Maryville, and make their bid for the Theta Alpha Phi cup, presented each year to the society producing the most outstanding play.

Production manager, John Fisher, has announced that tickets for the play are on sale at the book store, the YM and YW stores, and will be sold each evening after supper in the lobby of Pearsons.

Milanov Metropolitan Soprano And Graves Outstanding Contralto, Give Joint Recital At Chapel March 4th

Young Jugoslavian Dramatic Soprano Selected By Toscanini As Orchestral Soloist In London, Vienna

Two of the finest voices now before the public will be heard by a Maryville audience in Voorhees chapel on Monday evening, March 4, when Zinka Milanov and Georgia Graves will appear in a joint recital. Milanov, the leading Metropolitan opera dramatic soprano, and Georgia Graves, America's outstanding young contralto, will appear on the local stage after making many successful performances in the 1939 and early 1940 season.

Milanov belongs to the great tradition of operatic and concert singing. The young Jugoslavian soprano received her first vocal training from the renowned Milka Ternina. She made her debut in 1930 at the State Opera in her native village of Zagreb as Leonore in "Il Trovatore", and, since that time, she has received honors through all Europe and in the Eastern United States. In December of 1937 she made her Metropolitan opera debut as one of General Manager Edward Johnson's earliest "finds". At that performance, she was received with great enthusiasm, and is at the present time one of the most valuable members of that famous company.

The favorite soprano of Toscanini, Milanov has been chosen by him as orchestral soloist in London, Vienna, Salzburg, and Lucerne, as well as in Carnegie hall, New York. Time and again the radio has carried Milanov's brilliant voice into millions of American homes, but at the present time, she is making her first concert tour of the country. She has chalked up another success with every appearance. The New York Times, the most widely read newspaper in the world, said of one of Miss Milanov's recent appearances in that city: "She not only brought a great voice and vocal art to the test, but she seemed to have the great spirit of music in her soul. Her voice served her well, in dramatic outbursts, in sustained high tones, and in the trembling supplication of one of her numbers. This was great singing."

To appear with Milanov on the second of the 1939-40 Artists Series here at Maryville will be one of the foremost of the younger group of American musicians, Georgia Graves. Miss Graves hails from Colorado, where she received her first vocal study and the degree of Bachelor of Music at the state college. She won a scholarship for study with the immortal Schumann-Heink, and upon her death,

Seven Students Take Solo Flights

Ground School Course Will Be Concluded Soon

Most members of the aviation class have now taken their first solo flights. Many months of tedious ground-school work and several hours of preliminary flying with the instructor have given them the necessary mechanical ability, but of more importance, perhaps, the work has brought about the mental and emotional adjustments necessary for those who would be fliers.

Those who have soloed to date are Ruth Mack, Lyn Tyndall, Aldon Cunningham, Bill Baird, Frank Morrow, Bob King, and Bob Jackson. Of more than half a hundred student flyers at the local airport, Ruth Mack and Lyn Tyndall are the only women.

Other college students are invited to attend ground school classes. This Monday evening, Mr. B. L. Henry of Knoxville, meteorologist at the airport will speak on weather forecasting, the subject which the class has been studying in their meetings for the past few weeks. Each day, the students have been taking observations of the clouds, wind, and atmospheric conditions as part of their "homework". The meeting will be at 6:45 in the chemistry lecture room. The ground school sessions will be completed within a month at which time a CAA official will be here to give an examination covering navigation, meteorology, and civil air regulations.

The CAA inspector for this section recently visited the airport. He spoke approvingly of the work being done by the units of the CPTC in his section which covers Tennessee and parts of five other states.

Dr. Floyd V. Filson Of Chicago Seminary Leads Chapel March 2

On Saturday morning, March 2, Dr. Floyd V. Filson, Th.D., from the Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Chicago, will speak in the chapel.

Dr. Filson went to Park college where he graduated in 1918 with an A.B. degree. He received his D.D. from the same college in 1930. He attended the University of Basel, Switzerland where he received his Th.D. in 1930. In 1935 he started teaching New Testament literature and history in the Chicago Seminary and has held that position since.

After the morning chapel service, and continuing throughout the day, Dr. Filson will hold personal interviews. These interviews will be for any who are interested in attending the Presbyterian Theological Seminary, or anyone who is studying for the ministry. The method of arranging for interviews or the place where they will take place, has not yet been determined. It will be announced later.

Freshmen Plan For Class Party on March Sixteenth

At a meeting of the freshman class last Wednesday morning, plans were made for a party to be given on March 16, which will be sponsored by the class.

George Phelps, president of the freshman class, appointed the following committees: Entertainment, chairman, Erma Russell; Members: Gene Martin, John Schelonger, Ruth Johnson, Nancy Wood, and Frank Heinz. Refreshment committee: chairman, Roberta Parvin, members: Marjory Fields, George Devereaux, and Charles Foreman. Decoration committee: chairman, Joe Dickinson, members: Betty Clevenger, Leslie Gilbert, and John Thomas. Cleanup committee: Arthur Bushing and Wilson Garnet.

A report was given by Wesley Lochausen, the class chairman. It is urged that every freshman pay his class dues as soon as possible.

Anderson Bell Murder Gives Promise Of Reign Of Terror

By TREVOR REES-JONES

The other night, Monday night to be exact, while all youse (south of the Mason-Dixon it's youse all) guys and gals was snoozing the big job was being pulled.

I could keep on forever like dis (slipped again), but this kind of slanguage is not appropriate at this institution of higher learning, so from now on I'll relate my little piece of fiction in approved English——what little I know.

The seven o'clock bell has rung, and all the Baldwin boys have returned to old Carnegie. All is quiet except for the blaring of a few radios and the tramping of some of the fellows going to Pop's to study (?). After a short period of time a boy starts making the rounds, poking his head in a room here and a room there. I smell something brewing and it is not some coffee for the fellows. Pretty soon this boy returns to his room and waits. But not for long for it is no time until a motley looking crew is present. What's up? Have patience, you'll soon know. A few words of command are uttered, a few instruments are passed out, and two by two the boys leave. Down the steps they go and out the front door; all noses pointed toward Anderson hall.

Their approach to Anderson reeks with Napoleonic tactics. Let's say there are six boys. One boy loiters near the chapel; one goes to the back of Anderson; and one strays around in front. With extreme caution the other three boys enter the portals of Anderson and ascend the stairs. One flight, two flights, and on until they are outside the illustrious hall of Alpha Sigma. Then another flight of creaky stairs, a turn, a few more steps and they are confronted by a door. And this door has a Harvard (I'm prejudiced) lock. One boy produces a piece of wire for "starting cars on cold mornings" and proceeds to pick away. Finding that the door will not be convinced of its unfriendly attitude, the boy gives a lunge and the door flies open. After giving a few looks over the railing to see if the cost is clear, the boys march into the attic.

They walk across a small board walk and then a staircase looms ahead. More stairs—but they have had enough practice. A flashlight is brought into action and they begin the painful (yes, painful—the Ministerials are meeting below them) trip up. Up and up they go until they reach a trap (and keep yours shut about all this) door. But this seems to be the least of their worries—a push heavenward and they are in the tower of Anderson. Three boys, a cold windy night, and a bell. Silently they cut the rope which is attached to the bell. Was that a whistle from the boy stationed in front of the chapel to look out for the garde de nuit? No, just the wind howling. Two of the boys tilt the bell upward while the other participant holds on the clapper for dear life. What's that? Just eight bells with the accompaniment by the

Keep It Up!

We are glad to hear what progress the Student Council is making. When the words "student council" are mentioned, the student part seems to be generally disregarded, and we tend to forget that they have been elected by us to represent our desires. That these powers are limited we are aware but we congratulate them on the fact that they are taking advantage of what powers they do have.

This is the only organization on the hill which has a full representation of the student body and is the only place in which student views can be aired with the possibility of something being done about them. We believe that in approaching things as they are doing the council will find that they have increased their powers.

Why Not More?

It has been many weeks, in fact, months since we have heard such strong comment on any chapel program as we have heard this week on the Wednesday morning one. The idea of listening to music in the half hour appealed to a great many of us and the question has been raised, "Why not more?"

And why not more? These programs are favored by the student body. Why not have one each month? It would be a change from listening to a speaker each Wednesday morning, and we are certain that it would do as much good to the listeners as some speakers could.

We have noted at various chapel programs a note of disrespect on the part of the students toward the speaker, but we could not have found a more attentive audience than listened to the musical chapel program. You may think that this was due to the fact that only infrequently do we have such a program. This may be and we feel certain that the plan could be overworked, but we believe that this has not happened as yet and that a little more frequent use of the plan would not harm.

We very rarely hear the choir except at the Sunday evening vesper service and it was a treat to hear them sing in a chapel service. Some who do not attend the vesper services do not ever have an opportunity to hear it.

So again we say, "Why not more?"

CAPITAL CORNER

By HILTON WICK

Joshington, Feb. 24, 12:00 Noon:

Today is the climax of the Birthday Week celebration in your Capital. Tall Boom, Senator and associate of Braggert Tillentellen, one of the chief celebraters of the capital family, promoted the fast aging week. Great festivities were prevalent during the past few days. Monday evening was dedicated to sleep; Tuesday evening the "boys" rested; Wednesday was the "day of peace"; Thursday, quiet was observed; and for the sake of variety, Friday evening everyone slept again. They said that it was better than doing nothing!

The three great leaders, Laggert and Braggert Tillentellen and Tall Boom are all celebrating their birthdays this week. By mere coincidence the three men were born on a leap-year, February 29th. However, because of the unhandiness of such a date they celebrate their birth earlier in the month.

Yes, these three are great men! They have led America well! They truly have represented America superbly. They have been outstanding in difficult fields of endeavor! You understand I'm speaking of Lincoln, Washington, and Edison!

To get back to our trend of thought, both Tillentellens and Boom are somewhere between fourteen and eighteen years of age (because of leap year). Realizing their responsibility the men have regulated their mental age to parallel their chronological age. What delightful and appropriate thoughtfulness!

The three bearers of all this thought have adopted symbolical middle names, Washington, Washingtons, and Cherry Tree—the last being the name chosen by Tall (Cherry Tree) Boom.

Thus ends Birthday Week. With these great Americans so saluted, we move on. Have you noticed its gaiety, its splendor, its liveliness? Won't talk???

THE COMMENTATOR

Conducted By GEORGE L. HUNT

WEBSTER'S COLLEGIATE DICTIONARY, Fifth Edition, (G. and C. Merriam Co., Springfield, Mass.), 1939, Copyright 1936, 1273 pages

Alexander the Great, we are told, mourned because he had no new worlds to conquer. Many of us, likewise, complain about the lack of adventure that accompanies a college career. Yet within the past few months I have found a new world to conquer. It has all the enticements of an elusive goal, all the thrill of a trip to the Indies. It is the world of words.

A dictionary is a forbidding looking volume with its column after column of bold and light face print, its quaint illustrations, its streamer of pronunciation helps at the bottom of each page, and its multisyllabic words. You can't conveniently lift the large ones in the library and you don't often have a good desk-size one; so, unless a freshman English assignment calls for it, you seldom invade its privacy. Yet a trip in the dictionary has fascination untold. Open it at random and you are transported to another world. The last word under "B" is "Byzantine" and you think of Asia and Constantinople, of mosques and veiled Arabs, of the Greek Orthodox church, and of Richard Halliburton. What matter if your thoughts are as disconnected as that? What matter if the definition after the word cannot catch the glamour and mystery that surrounds the Asiatic in your mind? You have been called away from your dormitory room into a far-away world.

Let's try again. Lift about a quarter of an inch of pages to page 266 and you read "delirium tremens." Does that not transport you? Well, frankly, no. It makes you think of the drunks you saw in the bus at Christmas time (not the special bus of Maryville students), and you can't think of anything worse than a violent delirium. But that illustrates what I mean. The dictionary can send you off on all kinds of tangents, delightful or otherwise.

The particular dictionary of which this column is a review is a remarkable book. It tells you just about anything you want to know, from chemistry symbols to the highest mountain in Brazil. It can tell you the population of your home town if it is of respectable size, the capital of any state, the name of almost every famous person in history with his birth and death dates, guide to modern pronunciation than which there are few things more changeable, rules for spelling and British spelling preferences, and how to prepare copy for the press. Usually you think the dictionary of the English language is the only thing in this book, but there are one hundred and twenty-seven pages of other material. I am not a book agent, but I am constantly amazed at the number of things a person can find in a dictionary the size of any desk handbook.

The Collegiate Dictionary first appeared in 1898 and was based on Webster's International Dictionary. The present edition was made necessary by the appearance of the second edition of Webster's New International Dictionary in 1934. Now editors have a definite problem in maintaining the size and shape of a small dictionary. Over the years new words come into the language and a good dictionary must include them. Soon, however, with the advancements in science and the accompanying new vocabulary, with the acceptance of certain slang as good usage, the desk dictionary is largely becoming impractical and unwieldy. As the editors remark in their preface, "The vocabularies of many entirely new fields of knowledge as aviation and radio have been, during the past several years, both changing and growing. The vocabularies of Economics, Commerce and Finance have grown in bulk and in their importance and interest to the general reader. There have been new developments in literature and the arts, new discoveries and new terms in all the sciences. Above all, there has been an ever-increasing interest on the part of the public in all these matters and in the words that describe them." How to include all these in a small dictionary is not an easy question to decide, and in preparing this fifth edition every entry and every definition of the preceding edition has been carefully compared and each omission has been scrupulously weighed. To this edition they have felt it necessary to add only 32 pages to the general vocabulary.

A word must be said about the illustrations in this volume. There are 1800. The first page of the dictionary itself foretells the delight you will have just looking at the pictures. There is an aardvark. Unless you go to Africa or a large zoo you will never see one, but page one of Webster's gives him to you. His name means "earth-pig" and he is an ant-eater. Twelve pages later you see a drawing of an addax, an animal with a fur collar and long horns. Then over in the "f's" there is the picture of a Florentine florin of 1252. This is not an animal, but a gold coin with a lily on it.

Mythology, history, biology, chemistry, religion—there is not a thing that the dictionary does not cover. Of course this is not remarkable when you realize that our symbol of communication is a word and a book of words would of necessity cover these subjects. But if the thought is not remarkable, it is at least genuinely fascinating to go through the pages of a dictionary and linger on the things it unfolds to you. Each new addition shows the new progress has been made in all phases of life; so sometime when you don't have anything else to do, pick up a dictionary and read a few pages. If anybody asks you what you are reading, reply as did Hamlet to a like question, "Words, words, words." It won't satisfy your questioner, but if he knew he would think you were crazy anyway!

SPORT ECHOES

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

Those who saw the basketball game at LMU last night, saw one of the best working basketball machines to show in Conference play. LMU was smooth, fast, and definitely "on." At home in their temporary gym, they had a good margin on the Highland lads when the game started. The LMU gym even handicapped LMU. In all due justice it must be said, however, that the Lincoln team deserves to win the SMC championship. Their shot-making and backboard recoveries were tops on any court. This is LMU's first basketball championship, which has been undisputed. It is their major sport there, since football has been discontinued. The team starts early, practicing all fall and completing the schedule first among SMC teams. This was their last game, so that their string of 11 wins and one defeat clinches the title. Maryville has the consolation of breaking their unbroken string this year.

From the Blue and Gray of LMU, we find an All-conference selection that places "Joe" Etheredge at center. Mr. Click, the author, says this about Etheredge: "Etheredge has been the mainstay of the highly vaunted Scots throughout the season. He hits the basket for ten, fifteen, and even twenty points per game. Etheredge is a grea team man as well as a dexterous ball handler." Another selection that we agree with whole-heartedly on the scribe's slightly biased pickings, was Terry Nidiffer at forward, from the Railsplitter team. Nidiffer was by far the smoothest man on the floor last night. He scored high, his phenomenol foul shooting hit for six out of six, and he was the only regular on the floor unthreatened by fouling out rules. He is a small boy with a fast elusive style that nearly toppled the Highanders in the game here. We substitute Baird in the All-conference lineup that the Blue and Gray picks. After his play last night, Click should be convinced that "Baby" is first string material on his stellar squad.

It's Champs again this season for the Maryville maulers. In the tremendous competition against U-T Wednesday, they will try to make the Championship an undisputed one. The Maryville team is an amazing one when looking over weight figures. Only these reasons explain it. The Scot coaching is tops—the Scot condition is tops and the Scot skill is tops. Clemmy Hahn is the prime example of the light Highlanders tossing mighty foes. Hahn tips the scales at no more than 165, yet he wrestles 175 and heavyweight.

Rasslers Flatten Knox Y 29½-4½

The Highland grapplers continued their march to the top of the State Wrestlers' Championship as they defeated easily the amateur forces of Knox Y, 29½ to 4½, on the home mat. Maryville won all of the matches except the 155 and heavyweight. The Scot final score accounts for five pins during the evening. The wrestling was fairly slow, climaxing in Woody Everett's smearing of Mower of the Y. Baptiste in the first event of the evening wrestled the 121 pound class, for the first time, pinning his man in the record time of the evening, 2 min., ten seconds. Knox Y showed one fine wrestler last night in Householder. Householder, taking the only match of the invading grunters, decisioned Schreiber of Maryville. The match was studded with overtimes, Culver and Henschen taking advantage of them to take Scot points.

The Maryville team showed a new lineup with strong reserves taking over the places of the regulars for the evening. The absence of Evaul and McDaniels was evident. Both boys are slightly ailing.

The meet was featured with an exhibition match by two inexperienced men of both teams, Starns for Maryville and Raby of Knoxville. Raby decisioned Starns in a very interesting fray.

Complete results:

121—Baptiste (M) pinned Doby.
128—Wilds (M) pinned A. Kelley
135—Galloway (M) pinned Wolfkiel
145—Culver decisioned C. Kelley (K)
155—Householder (K) decisioned Schreiber (M).
165—Everett (M) pinned Mower.
175—Hahn (M) pinned Caldwell.
Heavyweight—Henschen (M) and Snyder (K), draw.

Highlanders Take Tennessee 25½-4½ 17-13

On Tuesday afternoon the Maryville college wrestling team defeated the University of Tennessee's team on the mat at Knoxville. The final score was 25½ to 4½, in favor of the Orange and Garnet. The visitors scored their points on three falls, three decisions, and one draw. The points went to the losers when their 128 pound man decisioned Maryville's grappler and the 155 pounders drew. The wrestlers performed before a good sized crowd of Maryville supporters who had traveled to U-T for the important match.

Vol Matment Meet Scots Wednesday For State Title

The Maryville maulers reach the climax of the wrestling season, Wednesday night, when the highly touted U-T Vols meet Maryville on the home mat. The State Amateur and Intercollegiate Wrestling Championship will be decided in this final meet of the season. A win for the Highlanders will give them undisputed title to it, although they received a defeat at Vanderbilt last week. A defeat will throw the title into a three way tie between the Vols, who are twice defeated (once by the Scots), the Commodores and Maryville.

In the meet with Tennessee several boys will bear a great deal of watching. Joslin, at 128, has set himself up during several years of grappling as tops in the State in his class. Captain Crane, another veteran, wrestling Woody Everett is a top-notcher. In the 175 lb. class the Vols boast a strong man in Freeman. Freeman held Hahn to a decision last week. In the heavyweight, the burly and notorious Tanner will try his strength again, with Henschen of Maryville.

Fischmen Engage U-T On Tuesday

In a return meet booked for Tuesday afternoon in the Maryville pool, the Scottie swimmers will seek revenge for a 54-21 defeat two weeks ago from the mermen of the University of Tennessee.

With few possible exceptions, the Orange and Garnet will face the same team which swept every first honor in the U-T tank two weeks ago. Disqualification of the Vol team gave Maryville the final relay event.

LMU has a complete schedule with last night's game.

The fighting Maryville Highlanders were overcome by the LMU Railsplitters last night by a 59-39 score. Maryville was the last hurdle for the Lincoln lads on their way to the SMC basketball crown.

The championship game was played on the LMU court, giving the Scots quite a handicap. The LMU team hasn't been beaten on their boards but once in several years. LMU, however, was at the peak of their game, hitting the basket from all angles in the fastest scoring game of the basketball season in this circuit. Maryville held well in the first half, using a zone defense most of the time. LMU held the lead at half time at 26-19, having pulled away from a 10-10 score earlier in the game. The game was rough and the referee was tight in his decisions, sending half the regulars of both teams off the floor early. Etheredge's scoring punch was missed as he fouled out in the second half, and left the leadership to Boydson Baird. Baird played one of the best games of his three years, in the second half, scoring nearly all of the Maryville points to push Etheredge for high point honors.

The second half was fatal to the Scottie flag hopes; Nidiffer, probably the best forward in these parts, started a scoring spree for the Railsplitters which accounted for 14 points. His foul shooting was phenomenal, scoring six points on free throws. Watson at center played a bangup offensive game opposing Etheredge at center. Maryville swapped their defense in desperation in the last half to a man-for-man, but it didn't seem to slacken the LMU cagers scorching pace. The Maryville team showed fine form in the setback and a fighting spirit

Scottie Cagers Come Home For Pioneer Fiasco

The Honaker quintet faces the Pioneer basketballers from Greeneville tonight on the Alumni hardboards. Maryville, fresh from an unsuccessful challenge to LMU basketball authority, will have the edge, as the Tusculum lads trail the remainder of the SMC teams. The picture is not so perfect as it seems, however. Tusculum is coming fast this end of the season, and boasts a victory over Teachers.

In the game with Tusculum early in the year, after a neck and neck first half in which the Pioneer defense bottled all Scot shotmaking, Maryville won 40-25. Fast breaks by the Highland outfit made the difference in the scoring during the second half.

Tusculum in the meantime has developed a great scoring threat in Captain Bailey on one of the forward posts. This all makes them a well rounded team that invades the hill tonight; the game will be a hard one to win because everybody is out to get the high flying Scots.

February 24, 1940

Dear Mom and Dad,

You may not think so, but this is the most important letter I've sent you this year. I know you will agree after you hear my story.

I am still courting the sweetest girl in the whole world and if I were to tell you all the cute things she says, I would spend the rest of the semester at the typewriter. But that's not the point.

You have heard the old saying that "clothes make the man". Well, according to my wardrobe at present, I have more inclinations toward a mouse. My old suits have reached the point that I am almost ashamed to wear them. Even my best suit is not the best any more. The other day I leaned up against a stove and burned the whole back out of the trousers. Dad always told me that I should burn my britches behind me but I don't think he meant it in that way.

Here is what I've been working up to. The other day I was at Proffitt's, which is the students' store of Maryville. George Haynes, a college student, waited on me. I told him I had no money at present but he explained that Proffitt's extend to the students a liberal sixty day credit policy which would enable me to purchase a new suit for Easter. With this in mind, I looked over the selection of suits.

Proffitt's handle all the latest styles in spring suits and they certainly have some beautiful patterns. They come in popular colors in herringbone stripes, plain colors and most any pattern a college boy would desire. They are priced to meet the college boy's income, too, for they range from $16.95 to $35.00. I saw any number of suits that "caught my eye" and I certainly wish I could get one, for it will be embarrassing to take my date to church on Easter in my old suit.

Please write me immediately and let me know if you can forward me the money before Easter or give me permission to charge it till a little later on.

Anything you say will be all right with me but remember—I'VE GOT TO HAVE A NEW SUIT FROM PROFFITT'S FOR EASTER.

Very hopefully yours,
Your son.

P. S. You should see the beautiful selection of Arrow Shirts and ties to match. I will show you the ones I like best when I come home, for I will have bought them all at

ECHO ADVERTISERS REVEAL INTERESTING FACTS

Reporters Review Maryville Business Concerns

This week the reporters of the Highland Echo have interviewed local business people in an effort to learn some of the facts of certain concerns. This page is devoted entirely to the beauty parlors and the cleaning and pressing establishments.

Maryville College was established in 1819 and has grown considerably throughout the following years. It has expanded from a mere handful of students to an enrollment of 800. The College employs 100 persons which makes a grand total of 900 persons who are either enrolled or employed on the hill. Blount County alone is represented at the college by 157 students and many of those who graduate make their homes permanently in Maryville as well as those who are employed at the college. The total population of the city of Maryville is approximately 5500. Thus the college comprises approximately 13 percent of the population.

The influences of Maryville College are many on the local community and local business people realize the great benefits it offers.

This week we devote our space to the following shops who are cooperating wholeheartedly with the Highland Echo in extending to you their good will and appreciation for the patronage which the college people offer them.

College Cleaners Is A College Supporter

College Cleaners is owned by Mr. George Garner and is located in Little Town. Mr. Garner is a staunch supporter of all Maryville athletic teams and is known by many students on the campus. He is assisted in his business by his son George, who is known by most students as a great running back of several seasons ago.

College Cleaners is well represented on the campus by Captain Joe Etheredge in Carnegie hall, Charlotte Colby at 316 Baldwin, and Katherine Ogilvie in 38 Pearson's.

Nu-Way Cleaners To Install New Equipment

Nu-Way Cleaners, one of the oldest cleaning establishments in Maryville, is located on College Street. The original founders of this concern gave the name Nu-Way to the shop with the thought in mind that their work would always be done by the newest methods. The present owners are furthering this policy by their recent purchase of equipment which will enable them to give much quicker and better service.

This excellent service is available to college students through Nu-way's representatives on the hill. They are: E. B. Smith in Carnegie, Edna Gleaton in Baldwin, and Lily Pinneo in Pearson's hall.

Nu-Way invites you to try their excellent service. Their agents will be glad to serve you at all times.

Raulston Cleaners Was Organized Back In 1922

Raulston Dry Cleaners boast the largest cleaning plant in Maryville. Their location is on Court Street directly behind Cate Cafe. College students patronize Raulston's because of their prompt one-day service of Grade A odorless dry cleaning.

College students know Raulston's on the hill by their student agents at the college who offer prompt collection and delivery service.

They are Tex Pyle and Carl Teague in Carnegie; Ruth Mack in Pearson's, and Grace Mann in Baldwin.

Raulston's are anxious to express their good will to Maryville College and offer an extended invitation to students to visit their plant.

Anderson's Bell

town bell. Well, the old town bell will reign supreme tomorrow! The cotter pin is pulled out, a bolt is removed, and the clapper is free from its original abode.

The descent to the ground level is made with caution, and the job is done. All the boys slink out of sight and return to their rooms, get out their books, and start studying. All in a night's work.

The next morning Sexton Vaughn Lyons, kicks himself out of bed and heads for Anderson. But he goes up only one flight of stairs, enter Prof. Hovel's la salle de classe, open a small closet, and grabs the bell rope. A mighty heave and what happens? Well he gets up from the floor maledictioning and gazes at the rope in his hand. His main thought is "Curfew Shall Not Ring Today."

But where is the clapper ???? Year after year it falls a victim to ??????. Last year when the clapper was hooked, Howard Davis (one of the official tollers of the bell) wrote a dirge entitled "The Terrible Murder of the College Bell." The first verse started as follows:

"Listen, my children, and I shall tell
About the murder of the college bell.
How on a dark and windy night
(Oh! It must of been a terrible sight)
The assassin climbed the squeaky stair,
And jimmied the door with utmost care".

In closing I wish to state that any similarity to any person living or going to school here is purely intentional.

S-C-O-O-P: Many English papers leave a small space at the bottom of the last page for flash news, news which has come in after the paper has gone to press. The Echo cannot do this; so for further developments see your next week's paper. But this flash news came in before the deadline: The above incident occurred on Monday night, February 19. The next day another clapper was resurrected from the vault and placed in the bell. But the following day this clapper, too, was gone. The board of directors is considering the advisability of establishing a branch office of the United States Steel Company somewhere on the campus, probably on the site of the old power plant. Has a Reign of Terror started?

which lessened the Railsplitters' lead late in the game, although the difference was entirely too large to overcome. Superior shot making, and strong reserves seemed to tell the story. Lincoln Memorial's plays under their basket were mighty smooth basketball.

Special mention should be made of Bill Baird, and Robyn Walker, opposing guards. Their defensive work and floor play stood out for both teams.

coached with the distinguished baritone, Emilio deGorgorza. She, like her co-recitalist, has scored triumphantly in her New York recitals, in numerous concerts through the Mid-West, and in the major countries of Europe. On one of her most recent concert tours of the European continent, she sang with the well-known Sibelius.

Miss Graves has been very favorably received by the American critics. To use the words of the outstanding critic of the New York Herald Tribune, Jerome D. Bohm, "... Miss Graves' contralto voice is one of the finest to be heard hereabouts. It is not only warm and rich in texture, but wide in range and voluminous. She has at her command the most prizeable of attributes for the interpretation of music-genuine intensity."

George D. Howell announces that around fifty tickets are still available for this concert, and that these will be put on sale next Wednesday morning after chapel. Certainly, great credit should be given to Prof. Howell for the work that he has done this year in obtaining artists for Maryville audiences. Despite the difficulties created by the war in Europe and by unusual weather conditions here in East Tennessee, outstanding foreign and American stars have been signed for engagements on the local stage. This is no small feat in itself.

Jewish Faith To Be Topic Of Rabbi Marks At YWCA

At the regular meeting of the YWCA tomorrow afternoon at 1:15, Rabbi Jerome Marks of the Temple Bethel in Knoxville will speak on "Distinctive Beliefs of the Jewish Faith." This will be the second in a series of services based on the general subject of "Speak to Me of Religion."

Last Sunday the Y rooms were filled to capacity when Father Englert of St. Mary's hospital in Knoxville, gave an exceptionally interesting talk on the Catholic faith.

At this conference several important meetings will be held, and problems which deans of American colleges have to face will be brought up for discussion.

Mrs. Snyder has the distinction of being the district head of publicity for this district which includes five states. As the holder of this office, she will attend a special meeting of the publicity chairmen, where matters of special interest to the heads of this department will be talked over.

Mrs. Snyder is expected to return to the campus tomorrow.

The M club, composed of those girls who have earned the college letter by participation in the point system, met Tuesday evening, February 20, in the YWCA rooms. Barbara McCutcheon read a paper concerning sporting goods from a consumer's point of view. Price, quality, manufacturer, and other important factors were discussed. After the program plans were laid for the study of first-aid from a doctor residing in this city. Mrs. Queener was present as the sponsor, and Dorothy Quass presided.

Squads Debate At State And South Atlantic Tournaments

Eight members of the varsity debate squad, accompanied by Prof. Verton M. Queener, left last Wednesday morning for the South Atlantic Tourney at Hickory, N.C., while eight other members of the squad departed Thursday morning for the State tournament at Jefferson City, accompanied by Professors D. A. Briggs and A. F. Pieper.

The group that went to the South Atlantic spent Wednesday night at Virginia Intermont in Bristol, and left there on Thursday in time to arrive in Hickory half an hour before tournament-time. These debaters are expected to return sometime early tomorrow morning. The four varsity teams that went to the State tourney returned late this afternoon from Carson-Newman after having competed with fifteen Tennessee senior colleges.

Representing Maryville in the Hickory contest were Clifford Procter, Jack Zerwas, Arnold Kramer, Otto Pflanze, Arda Walker, Harriet Miller, Elizabeth Moore, and Sara Lee Hellums. Procter and Zerwas composed the men's affirmative and Kramer and Pflanze made up the men's negative. Hellums and Moore were Maryville's negative representatives in the women's division of the tournament, while Walker and Miller upheld the affirmative side of the question.

These same speakers were also entered in numerous other speaking events of the tournament. Kramer participated in men's oratory and problem solving; Procter, after-dinner and the formulation of group opinion; Zerwas, impromptu and the stimulation of group discussion; and Pflanze, extemporaneous speaking.

In the women's division, Sara Lee Hellums was entered in the stimulation of group discussion and the problem solving contests; Moore, the formulation of group opinion; Walker, oratory and extemp; and Miller, after-dinner.

On Monday evening, March 4, at 8:15 p.m. in Voorhees chapel, Zinka Milanov, leading dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Georgia Graves, America's outstanding contralto, will appear in the first joint recital ever presented here. These two voices, among the finest now before the public, have been heard in many successful performances during the 1939-1940 season. Richard Wilens is to be the pianist, and his talent and performances are worthy to accompany these outstanding vocalists.

The program of this concert is a finely balanced one of Finnish, Jugoslavian, German and English songs as well as soprano and contralto operatic arias and duets of beauty. The program will be divided into six parts, the first of which is the Finnish group sung by Miss Graves, in which are included Wagner's "Schmerzen", "Sav, sav, susa" and "Flickan kom ifran sin alsktings mote" by Sibelius, and Sjogren's "Jahrling mocht ich so Dich halten". Next comes the Jugoslavian group sung by Madame Milanov containing "Death Song" by Bersa, "Desire" by Kunz, "Hallo Girl" by Konyawitch. The third division is a duet from Act II of Verdi's "Aida", after which comes the intermission.

Following the intermission comes a group of English and German songs sung by Miss Graves. These are Vittorio Giannini's "Heart Cry", Alicia Needham's "Four Ducks on a Pond", "Old Mother Hubbard" (in the style of Handel) by Hely-Hutchinson, Stephen Foster's "I Dream of Jeannie", and H. H. A. Beach's "The Year's at the Spring." The fifth part consists of "Pace, pace, mio Deo" from Verdi's "The Forces of Destiny"; and to complete the program Madame Milanov and Miss Graves will sing a duet from Act II of "La Gioconda", "E un anatema".

Dr. Lloyd Returns Today From Trip To Pittsburgh

Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd will return to Maryville today from Pittsburgh, Pa., where he attended a meeting yesterday of representatives of the Presbyterian Church U.S.A. and of the United Presbyterian church. Dr. Lloyd was one of five representatives of the Presbyterian Church U.S.A., which has a membership of two million. The moderator of the United Presbyterian church, which has a membership of 250,000, represented that church.

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss possibilities of closer cooperation and union between the two churches. Dr. Lloyd was the chairman of a subcommittee which handled discussions concerning other Presbyterian and Reformed church groups.

Head of Negro College To Speak in Services Concerning Minorities

Continuing the series of services begun last week on appreciation of world minorities, the YMCA is having a program this Sunday on the Negro. The speaker is President Samuel M. Laing of Knoxville College, Knoxville, Tennessee.

The programs are designed to show the cultural contribution made by the various groups. Knoxville College is a college for Negroes under the sponsorship of the United Presbyterian church, and its president is well qualified to speak on the things that race has contributed to the world.

Last week, Rabbi Jerome Mark of Temple Beth-el, Knoxville, spoke on the Jew and the part he has played in world history through the centuries.

Bad Weather Prevents Campus Workers From Completing New Road

Due to the recent bad weather, there has been very little campus work. Some work has been done on the new road, but owing to the rains and mud, not much progress has been made. Mr. Ernest Brown and his crew have started "spring cleaning." A number of the men have been working in the college woods cleaning up debris and underbrush. The new back porch of Memorial hall has also been completed.

In memory of Mrs. William Patton Stevenson, a beautiful headstone was erected in the college cemetery last week.

Faculty Members Attend State Philological Meet

Five members of the college faculty who attended the Tennessee Philological Association meeting this week end read papers before sections of the group. Dr. Hill Shine read "J. S. Mill's Authorship of the Letter on Saint-Simonism in 'Le Globe', April 18, 18-32"; others were "The Beginning and Theory of German Naturalism" by Dr. Ralph S. Collins; "Provencal Sunshine of Daudet" by Miss Catherine Wilkinson; "Th Development of Pierre Bayle as a Literary Critic" by Miss Ruth E. Cowdrick; and "Robert Frost, Botanist" by Miss Jessie K. Johnson.

This was the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the association.

Bainonians And Athenians Choose Mid-winter Play

Modern Play, "The Family Portrait", Selected Unanimously

At a special joint meeting of Bainonian and Athenian on Thursday evening, the societies voted on their midwinter. The vote was unanimous for "The Family Portrait", a modern drama by Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Cowan. The play concerns the life of Christ and of his family in their home in Nazareth. It is, however, not classed as a religious play; at the same time, it si by no means a burlesque on the life of Christ.

"The Family Portrait" is considered one of the best of our modern plays and has been very successfully presented on Broadway and in Chicago. Its authors, having worked for some time in Hollywood with Producer Cecil B. DeMille, are well known in the dramatic world. Though the central figure of the play is Christ, he does not appear on the stage. The play depicts his influence on his family and their opinion of his actions from his early life as a carpenter-son to his final—what they considered—disgraceful crucifixion for political reasons. There are frequent elements of humor throughout the story.

There are about ten or twelve major roles in the play and thirty-five characters in all, thus giving the various members of the two societies a good chance to act in the production. There are seven scenes in the play. It has been favorably acclaimed by one of the foremost of Broadway's critics as one of the best plays produced on Broadway last year.

The try-outs for acting will probably be held the early part of next week.

"America In A World At War" Is Round Table Discussion at IRC, Fri.

Four Maryville college faculty members will take part in a round table discussion at the meeting of the International Relations club Friday evening, March 8. The theme of the meeting will be "America in a World at War." Prof. Archibald Pieper, of the Social Science department; Dr. Frank D. McClelland, Dean of Students; Prof. Paul E. Wendt, of the Social Science department; and Dr. E. R. Hunter, head of the English department and Dean of Curriculum will be the faculty participants.

The form of the meeting will be a round table discussion with questions presented by a student leader. Some of the questions to be asked are: what place is religion playing in the present war? What side will Italy take? Will there be a major attack on the Western front in the spring? Will Germany

Societies Stage "Winterset" By Maxwell Anderson Tonight Starring Berg And Johnson

Theta-Alpha Sig Present Broadway Play In Bid For Annual Award

SEATS NOT RESERVED

Ritzman, Phelps, Stahl, and Felknor Take Leads In Production

This evening at eight o'clock in Voorhees chapel, Alpha Sigma and Theta Epsilon societies will present Maxwell Anderson's drama, "Winterset', starring Virginia Berg and Melvin Johnson in the romantic leads of Miriamne and Mio. "Winterset" is the first of the society contributions to the mid-winter season, presented in competition for Theta Alpha Phi's annual dramatic award.

Others taking leads in the play are Erwin Ritzman, George Phelps, Bill Felknor, and Tommy Stahl.

Virginia Berg, who plays the part of Miriamne, is a sophomore and comes to Maryville from Beimar, Ohio. She is a major in dramatic art and has taken an active interest in dramatics at Maryville, having taken part in Alpha Sigma-Theta Epsilon's mid-winter last year, "Quality Street."

Melvin Johnson, who takes the part of Mio, is from Worcester, Mass. Johnson, a major in science, has also taken part in dramatics and was in "Quality Street' last year. Besides his interest in dramatics, Johnson is an officer in Alpha Sigma society and manager of the basketball team.

George Phelps, who played the leading role of Mr. Webb in the production of "Our Town" earlier in the season, is the only member of the cast that is a freshman. Phelps' performance in "Our Town" proved that he is an experienced actor. In "Winterset" he takes the role of an old Jewish rabbi, Esdras. Phelps comes from Canton, Ohio, and intends to major in sociology. Besides dramatics, Phelps is president of the freshman class and an officer in Alpha Sigma.

Tommy Stahl is cast in the part of Trock, a gangster. He is a sophomore and comes from Baltimore, Md. Stahl served as stage manager last year of "Quality Street' and has been a member of the stage crew since his freshman year.

Erwin Ritzman is the only senior in the cast and portrays the role of Judge Gaunt. Ritzman has played roles in "Our Town" and "First Lady" during his dramatic career at Maryville. Besides these, he has also taken an active interest in the YMCA, having served on the cabinet and now being vice-president. He is also a member of the swimming team, the choir and the orchestra. Ritzman comes from Reading, Pa., and is a major in biology.

Bill Felknor takes the part of Garth, son of Esdras. Felknor has played many minor roles on the Maryville stage, but has his first chance at a lead this evening. Felknor, a major in economics, is a junior and comes from Meridian, Miss. He is also a member of the debate squad and the Echo staff.

"Winterset" has in the supporting cast Dick Watkins, Jack Harwood, Bruce Walters, John Ballenger, Lois Thorson, E. B. Smith, Howard Dizney, Carmen Archilla, and Kitty Bennett.

The plot of "Winterset" is built around the electrocution of Mio's father for a murder that he did not committ. Trock Estrella, a gangster, is responsible for the murder that Mio's father died for and Garth had witnessed it. The motivation of the play is created by the conflicts that ensue from Mio's attempts to bring the real murderer to justice and at the same time he falls in love with Miriamne, who is the sister of Garth. The action resulting brings into the scene Esdras, the father of Garth and Miriamne, and also Trock and Shadow (Dick Watkins) who had really committed the crime. The judge at the trial of Mio's father wanders in and further complicates the situation.

"Winterset" is rated as one of Maxwell Anderson's most successful plays. It is a modern, realistic drama throughout, but the method and form employed by the author makes it outstanding.

All seats for the play are 35c and are not reserved.

Maryville Alumnus To Instruct At U-T

Three Faculty Members Teach At Summer School

Maryville college will be represented on the faculty of the University of Tennessee's 1940 summer session. Professors George D. Howell, E. R. Hunter, and Ralph R. Colbert will teach a number of classes. Dr. Fred K. Kirchner, an alumnus of Maryville, will also teach in the chemistry department.

Prof. George D. Howell will be visiting professor of organic chemistry and will also have some classes in general chemistry during the first six-week period.

Dr. Kirchner, of Bridgewater college, Va., will teach general, analytical and physical chemistry for the second six-week's period. Dr. Kirchner came to Maryville from Newark, New Jersey and graduated in the class of '34. He went from Maryville to the University of Tennessee as a teaching fellow in 1934-35. He recently received his doctorate at Ohio State university.

Dr. E. R. Hunter will teach classes for both six-week periods. He will be in charge of graduate seminar in English and will teach courses in Shakespeare and survey of English literature.

Prof. Ralph R. Colbert will teach in the music department at the University this summer.

Second Reading Test Given to Members Of The Freshman Class

Last Thursday, all students of freshman classification took the Iowa Reading test after chapel.

This second test, called "form B", is used as an alternate for the one given at the first of the year. The test is given not only to find those to whom a second course would be beneficial, but to give a check on the accomplishments of these classes. The test gives data on improvement of those who have taken the remedial reading as compared to those who have not taken the course.

A number of students have taken the vocational tests at the personnel office. Some of these results are ready and others are being prepared. A special assistant is grading the tests. The tests may be taken by any student at any period. A number of vocational monographs have been added to those already at the office, bringing the total to ninety-seven professions that are discussed.

Tests Prove That Southerners Are Superior To Yankees In Scholastics

By GEORGE WEBSTER

"Southern people are innately inferior, mentally speaking, to the citizens of such northern states as Pennsylvania and New York. The schools of the Southland are scholastically below the colleges and universities of 'yankeeland'."

Did you ever hear these statements? Ever since I met my first Yankee, I have. But being the grandson of a man who killed 30 Yankees in the battle of Atlanta back in '64, I could never believe anything but that we Southerners were superior to our "northern brothers".

Last week, Dr. McClelland confirmed my belief by pointing out the results of the sophomore tests of last May 2-3. The personnel director presented figures showing that Maryville and Maryville students—the majority of which are from below the Mason-Dixon line—rank exceptionally high in relation to the better colleges and better students of the United States.

But before we go any further along this line, let us pause a moment and take a brief look at the origin and purpose of the examinations which the class of '41 took last spring.

These tests are given at a uniform period by 150 of the leading colleges of our country to over 28,000 second year students. This is one phase of The National Sophomore Testing Program sponsored by the American Council on Education, an organization of which Maryville is a member. These exams are given on all college campuses with two fundamental purposes: to give the college itself a means of evaluating its work in relation to other seats of higher education and to serve as a means of personal guidance to the students.

As the final tabulations of scores very definitely prove, Maryville made an excellent showing last spring. In the first division, Contemporary Affairs, last year's sophomores averaged 43.55 as a national percentile ranking. In Literary Acquaintance, the participants averaged 37. 6, and in the Science and Math division, 51.8. These ratings are even more significant when the fact is considered that the local scores are compared only with the rating of the other leading colleges of the country.

Dr. McClelland states that he is satisfied with the program as it has operated so far, but believes that definite

Chills and Thrills Fill Old Chilhowean In Melodramatic Moonshiners' Edition

If you think our twentieth century life is perfect modernism, take a look at some of the people who lived and acted in it not so very long ago. Back about twenty years ago when most of you either were not or else were a bit of an infant nuisance, college life here on the campus was going on at what was considered a very modern pace. On one of the shelves in the stacks of the library, rests in dignity a 1920 Chilhowean. If you want a picture of a modern college of two decades ago, browse a while through this venerable volume; then give thanks it is 1940. The successive publications of annuals will give strength to some sort of theory of evolution; there certainly were some funny "critters" a while back.

The Maryville co-ed of 1920 was probably a very modern lovely creature, though the Chilhowean picture of her belies the thought. Her 1920 saddle shoes were "plenty classy"—came way up above her ankles, were dark in color, had innumerable darling buttons or long laces, and peeped shyly from under a voluminous, ankle-length skirt. Her hair, halo-like, extended round her head in every direction, giving her, of course, a very angelic appearance. But yet it was Leap Year in 1920 too, and a few pages beyond the portraits of the glamourous co-eds is a group of eleven Romeos gathered together under the caption, "Junior Order of United American Moonshiners." Their "Motto: Keep cool; flower: Forget-me-not; location: in the moonlight," embellishes the page. Say, maybe we are not as good as we thought; the old boys had something there. Some of the men were dainty looking dears with bow ties—all except the profs who had villainous looking moustaches.

One page of the book was devoted to a suggested course planned by some one of the brilliant student body. Some of the courses should be very popular now: "Casually carry some bread from the dining hall. Credit—much." Those poor old people were faced with the same momentous problem that fatigues so many of us today. How can one get a large and delicate article (bread) from a point X (let us say—the dining hall) to a point Y (a dormitory room) without being observed, stopped, or embarrassed? "Cook during study hours. Credit—still more.

Is It So Hard To Look Neat?

M————C

This editorial appeared in The Ward-Belmont Hyphen for February 17 and we thought it applied to our campus as well as to many others. We have reprinted it here just as a reminder!

"About ten years ago male students in American colleges and universities began to appear in slovenly clothing and with every passing year it seems that they have become increasingly defiant of the conventions of dress. At first we college girls began to resent this habit, but then we apparently decided to join our rebellious brothers and just wear any old thing.

"Many a student's aim, it appears, is to look as much like a ditch-digger or charwoman as possible. His ideal of proper costuming is a pair of old trousers, the dirtier the better, and a shirt that has no place outside of a laundry. Her idea may center about a baggy skirt and any kind of a blouse or sweater regardless of color, with run-over campus oxfords soiled with three months' constant wearing without cleaning.

"How horribly disappointing we must appear turned out in such a regalia, walking about beautiful campuses, over lawns perfectly kept, among the loveliest flower gardens, and in and out of handsome buildings. Our ancestors, after years of striving and preparation, have given us the finest possible environment in which to spend our student days. When we recall these endeavors on the part of our elders, we should begin to realize how inconsiderate we are when we attend a chemistry, psychology, art, or English lecture clothed more for a day of common labor than for a day of higher learning.

"Looking one's worst instead of one's best is a poor way to start life. If we dress untidily we are likely to leave the impression of leading other disorderly phases of life. Very often appearance and bearing speaks louder than words. It is not a matter of money but rather a matter concerned with our own personal standards.

"Of late, some colleges are considering a return to the tradition of the middle ages when university students were compelled to wear cap and gown to all classes in the hope that students will become conscious of their position and dress accordingly. The need for a change in campus fashion will be best if ushered in by us, the students, rather than by required rules of the individual schools."

CAPITAL CORNER

By HILTON WICK

Maryville, capital of East Tennessee colleges, makes the news this week!

Most of you know the "Stage Crew" and have seen the jackets that they receive for their work. The jackets are a rather bright color, and you will notice a star, perhaps, or some stripes on the left arm of each. The stripes represent years of service, and the stars designate some special achievement of the member. Stars are given to one who has been a stage manager for one of the local productions, etc., or to one who is a member of Theta Alpha Phi. There is also an emblem, on the right side (where the coat lapel would be) representative of the crews' work. These awards are earned just as athletic letters and sweaters are. With the permission of the "stage screws" (as they call themselves), let us imagine other "organizations" of the school jacketed.

The library assistants receive the first award. How would a red jacket be with a green, luscious tomato book worm as their emblem? Yes, we'll put this emblem on the back of each assistant! The hairy worm will be digesting a book. We'll add a stripe for each year's activity. A star will be given to the person who finds the 1940 World Almanac.

The matter of award to Prof. Ellis and Miss Fortner is purely optional and is left with them. To grant another point, Miss Fortner may have a blouse if she so wishes!

The waitresses are next. We'll be lenient here, and give the girls an entire white outfit with a generous emblem. How would a delicious navy bean, smothered in ketchup, with a glass of water standing by, suit? Stars and stripes will be white (so as not to destroy the "color harmony"), and will be given for each dish not broken.

Those two illustrious bell ringers—front, and center! gentlemen, your jacket may be any color you choose. The emblem will be a missing clapper with a question mark beside it, if you are able to imagine such. Stars and stripes will be given for each time you forget to ring the early morning bells and the ten-til-seven bell!

The milking efficiency experts must be equipped, also. What shall it be? Is each man strong enough to carry a cow on his back? Perhaps better, we shall substitute a three-legged milking stool. Here, we shall cease to be patriotic, and we will award another leg to the stool for each ten cows milked. By the time the stool becomes a solid block of wood, we shall advocate electric milkers for the cows!

Anderson and Winterset

Tonight's presentation of "Winterset" on the Voorhees stage is not the first time that a Maxwell Anderson play has been performed for a Maryville audience. "Mary of Scotland" was the senior class play in 1937 and "Elizabeth the Queen" was presented by Bainonian society in 1936. Those who have seen these productions know what to expect so far as form is concerned, for Anderson is one of the few exponents of blank verse on the modern stage. In his preface to "Winterset" the dramatist announced his abiding belief in poetry for the stage, but at the same time he prophesied that it would triumph only "when an age of reason will be followed by an age of faith in things unseen."

Anderson has been writing plays for the New York stage since early in the 1920's. Before he was able to devote his time entirely to drama he had been variously college English instructor and newspaper editorial writer. He was on the faculty of his alma mater, the University of North Dakota, and also taught at the University of Southern California and at Leland Stanford. He went into newspaper writing first on San Francisco papers and then on the staff of several New York journals. His first play for New York was produced in 1923 and was called "White Desert." It was a failure. The next year he collaborated with Laurence Stallings on "What Price Glory?" and with this play he began a career of successful dramas which has been most recently augmented by "Key Largo," a current Broadway offering featuring Paul Muni and dealing with a phase of the recent Spanish war.

George Jean Nathan, one of the keenest theatre critics of our day, has at various times dealt with the work of Maxwell Anderson. In an article in the Saturday Review of Literature (March 14, 1936) he discusses the trend towards the literary drama on the American stage. By literary drama he means a play that is sound drama in itself and yet has running through it the silken thread of literature, a play that stands up as a literary work as well as a dramatic piece. The three outstanding American dramatists in 1936, according to Mr. Nathan, (and though they may have changed in the past four years I would suggest only the name of Robert E. Sherwood) were Eugene O'Neill, Maxwell Anderson, and S. N. Behrman. All three are literary dramatists. Of "Winterset" the critic has this to say: "Although not always too ably articulated in the ways of dramaturgy and although here and there fuddled in its gallant effort to break through to vigorous beauty, it is relatively the most estimable literary dramatic exhibit of the year."

Joseph Wood Krutch, writing for the "Nation", says that "Winterset" is bold, original and engrossing. "While the time is the present and the plot one which might serve for a tragic melodrama, the whole emphasis of the treatment is such as to stress the eternal rather than the local aspects of the passions involved and to lay emphasis less upon the action itself than upon its reverberations in the souls." I would stress Mr. Krutch's point, and if you read this before you go to see "Winterset" tonight, bear in mind that it is more than a play performed for enjoyment. It is a study of persons and the way events bring about the disintegration or strengthening of their souls.

This column is not an advertisement for tonight's midwinter, for before you read this you will have made up your mind whether or not you are going. But I have long felt that the plays presented here when they are reputable plays of strong reputation should be introduced to the local audience for what they are. The realization that Anderson's blank verse is a unique thing on the modern stage should make the members of the audience try to enjoy it for more than the action they will see. The criticism of the established journalists who know modern drama should be a guide to the appreciation of the play. For instance, a comment by Mr. Nathan, this time from a different article than previously quoted, that the fault of Maxwell Anderson is that he cannot bind closely into a whole the isolated commendable elements and periodic stirring notes of dramatic music in his plays should give you a point to look out for in tonight's production to ascertain if you agree with Mr. Nathan.

Wick, Lucille Lynch and Janet Lindsay.

In the extra-speaking contests of the women's division, Jeanne Stringham participated in after-dinner and extempore; Lynch, oratory and impromptu; Lindsay, oratory and extempore. In the men's section, Felknor was entered in after-dinner and impromptu; Lamont, extempore; Henry Wick, oratory; and Hilton Wick, the State Peace Oratorical contest.

Last week, the local debating team engaged in two home debates. Saturday evening, Feb. 24, Pflanze and Kramer met Gautier and Scheinberg of Emory University of Atlanta, Ga., in a very evenly contested and hard-fought battle. Scheinberg, the second speaker of the visiting team, put on an excellent show for the small crowd that attended.

On last Monday evening, Vernon Lloyd and George Webster debated the affirmative side of the question for Maryville against Smart and Meeks of Birmingham-Southern University of Birmingham, Ala.

Two other dual debates are scheduled for this month here on the campus. These include Waynesburg college of Waynesburg, Pa., on March 9th, and Erskine College of Due West, S.C., on Monday evening, March 11. The Maryville representatives have as yet not been assigned to these contests.

Three other tournaments are also on the schedule for the team this year, the National Convention of Pi Kappa Delta has been planned for the last week of March, at which time the Maryville chapter of the national debating fraternity will act as host. Prof. Queener states that he has definitely decided to take some of his team members to the Grand Eastern tournament at Rock Hill, S. C., and possibly to the Tau Kappa Alpha tourney in Chattanooga. Both of these take place about the middle of April.

What stand will the churches of America take? If you have a question about the present conflict, bring it to the meeting as there will be a few minutes for audience questions.

At the following meeting (to be held two weeks hence), an army officer from Knoxville will probably speak to the club concerning our national defenses. This so far is a tentative arrangement. This meeting has also been selected for the election of officers of the organization.

From March 21-23 the Regional International Relations Conference will be held at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N.C. Undersecretary of State, Harry F. Grady will be one of the distinguished visitors. President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University in New York City may also attend the Conference. President Butler is the head of the International Relations organization. Several of the members of the Maryville club are planning to attend the Conference.

SPORT ECHOES

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

Wrestling finished with such a bang that there seems to be a letdown in sports this week. The basketball team finished a good season with Joe Etheredge scoring high points in the league as far as we can dope it. There doesn't seem to be a limit to his ability—captain of three major sports this year, coaches will bemoan his graduation. Baseball chatter started up as the call went out for the diamond dusters, and the search for another Sutton or Talmadge was on, in the minds of the Maryville athletic fiends when Coach Thrower called his champions together. It looks like heavy training and an abandoned Pop's is the forecast for spring.

Coach Fischbach's swimmers, slightly water soaked after the ravages of Clemson and Tennessee, are pointing with a new lineup for the Pioneers today. It must be said in defense of the splashing they've taken this year, that they're meeting nationally ranked teams. This week and next, they come back to earth and meet some teams of their own calibre. The trip next week takes them to new fields of endeavor, as both Concord and Berea are new on the list. Straying off varsity swimming, which is dear to our heart, we feel that it is enough said to mention the fact that mixed swimming is in progress on two days of each week—Wednesday, from 3:30-4:30 and Saturday all afternoon. It's an experiment, and will become a permanent period if interest and other things remain equal.

When the talk starts in the dorm about baseball, "T" Etheredge is the respected authority. His newest find in Maryville baseball annals is the UT-MC game in which the great Tommy Bridges, now with Detroit, pitched for the Vols. The raging Highlanders touched Tommy for two runs, and a 2-1 win. More about baseball—nobody is gone this year. The team began to come fast last year and swung a mighty bat near the end of the season. With Honaker and Southpaw Wilburn on the mound, it looks like Coach will be set to turn out another great nine to shine for college hill.

The track champions are in great shape with only both high scorers of last season gone. Remember the excitement last fall when talk of a 9.6 century man coming to Maryville went around? Weldon Baird, a great middle distance man on anybody's track team, will be sorely missed, but his mighty spikes will be filled with Boydson back on the cinders. Anybody who can threaten a grammar school record in the dashes, however, will be met with open arms by Coach Bob Thrower, and a kiss from each of last year's champs. A good polevaulter won't be a bitter thought to the above-mentioned, either.

SCOT MATMEN WIN STATE TITLE

Maryville Loses To Eagles 23-28 As Season Ends

In the final Smoky Mountain conference basketball game played on the Eagle's floor last Thursday evening, the Carson-Newman quintet nosed out the Maryville Scotties by a score of 23-28.

The Highlanders led the Eagles at the half-time whistle with a 17-12 count. Joe Etheredge continued the scoring burden as his efforts in the first half totaled 9 points. Lloyd Taylor was second with 4 markers, and Baby Baird followed with two.

In the last half of the traditional grudge battle, the Frosty Holt-men hit the bucket for 16 scores, while the Scots were only able to account for 6.

Joe Etherdge and Scot Honaker were the only Scotties able to cut the ribbons in the final period. Joe added two field goals and a free throw to bring down high scoring honors, and the other Orange and Garnet score came on Honaker's foul shot.

With the 14 points in the C-N game, Etheredge, in twelve SMC games and in seven independent games this year has scored a total of 293 points for an average of 15.4 per game.

Of the whole 1940 squad, only Etheredge and Morrow ended their collegiate hardwood careers with this game.

Swimmers Pointed For Pioneers Today

At 3:30 this afternoon in the pool, the Fischbach splashers will seek revenge over the Tusculum Pioneers for a previous setback in the Greeneville tank.

Since the final 400 yard relay event determined the winner in the first meet, the Scotties are quite confident that the home pool will aid them in out swimming the opposing mermen.

After the Tennessee massacre of last Tuesday evening, Coach Fischbach has doubled the intensity of his daily practices in an effort to get the team in winning shape for this afternoon's meet. The team with few possible exceptions will be entered in the same events as the Tennessee encounter.

Coach Fischbach says, "I predict that the diving event which we lost up there will be the margin of either team's victory."

Scottie Splashers Bow To Tennessee

On Tuesday evening in the Scottie pool, the Maryville splashers were defeated by the University of Tennessee mermen by a count of 12-63.

The Vols won the opening event as Silva, Hultquist, and Thompson swam the 300 yard medley in 3.9 minutes. Maryville was represented in the event by Robert Moore, Dudley Moore, and Allan Moore.

In the 220 yard freestyle, Webb and Ashley won first and second for U-T, and Cross scored Maryville's first points on a third placement.

The 50 yd. freestyle was won by Delaney of U-T in 26.4 seconds. Brock of U-T finished second, and Lee scored third.

Elmore, the Vol's lone diver, continued the hot pace by snatching high honors from Craine and Mize of Maryville.

Brock of U-T won the 100 yard free style in a photo-finish by reaching the goal in 1.04 minutes. Delaney added three for Tennessee on a second place and Lee scored one point with a third.

Silva and Spain of U-T finished one-two in the 150 yard backstroke, Heydinger of Maryville was clocked third.

Akana scored 3 points for the Scots on a second place in the 200 yard backstroke. Hultquist and Yagodkin were first and third place winners.

The grueling 440 yard freestyle event was swept by Webb of U-T in 6.3 min. After losing an early lead, Cross as third place winner scored Maryville's final point which totaled the score to 11.

After trailing the first half of the 400 yd. relay, the Vols rallied to take the event in 4.67 min. Maryville's team consisted of Jimmy Lee, Capt. Gordon Findlay, Paul Akana, and Frank Cross.

Tornado Blows To Subdue Cagemen

Highlander Quintet Gains Revenge On Buffs By 34-33

The Maryville college basketball team traveled to Bristol on Monday where they were defeated by King college, 35-44. It was the last road trip for the Scotties this year. The following evening the Scotties won from Milligan, 34-35 to avenge an earlier setback at the hands of the Milligan quintet. On Thursday night the Scotties traveled to Carson-Newman where they were defeated 28-23.

The King game was fast and exceptionally rough on the part of both teams. The King team seemed to control the backboards because of the superior height of their men. Many times, however, the Maryville players were edged out of position by the King players.

The Scotties went away to a lead at the beginning but the height of the men facing them was too much and the Tornado began to rumble and scored basket after basket on the Scotties before the half ended. The Scotties defense seemed to melt and the King team rolled all over them. The shooting of the home team around the backboard was far superior to that of the Maryville lads. Time and again the winners would turn rebounds into points as they tapped them in.

Joe Etheredge continued to drop his share in from the pivot post and Baby Baird played his usual sparkling game at forward. Scot, although guarded throughout the entire game by a man inches taller than he, played a good brand of ball. Taylor failed to get his usual number of rebounds but the height of the men facing him was the biggest factor in this failure.

Bill Baird played defense ball during the entire ball game and bottled up his man all evening.

Maryville Whips U-T By 29-3 Score In Finale

The Maryville wrestlers gained undisputed title to the State Intercollegiate championship Thursday night as they downed a strong challenger from the Tennessee Vols.

The Highland heroes only allowed U-T one match in a 29-3 victory. It is the second win over Tennessee this year, the other being by a similar score on the Knoxville mat.

Three men, Evaul, Everett and Capt. Henschen, kept perfect records clean against the burly fellows, to earn the State individual championships. Hahn and McDaniels pinned their men to prove that in their weight classes or out ,they were tops.

The meet was one of the most spirited seen here this season. Both teams were out to "do or die". In the first match, Maryville pitted Evaul against U-T's Womack in the midget fiasco. Evaul won easily by a fall in a continuous match starting off the night of Vol smearing. In the 128 pound class, Wilde, newcomer to the Scot grapplers, bowed to the best Tennessee had to offer in Joslin. Joslin is undefeated this year, and a smooth man, hard for even a veteran to stay the time limit with. Mac McDaniels gave the Maryville fans as colorful a match as usual. After carrying Demos, the Tennessee Greek hope around the mat, he finally popped him to the canvas for a fall. Referee Boretsky had a hard time with this match and in Schreiber's 155 pound fray, in keeping the entire squads of both schools from joining in a pitched battle. The competition was that keen, and the wrestling that scrappy.

Culver showed new aggressive skill in this last meet which points ahead to the title defense next year. He decisioned Grisson of the Orange and White. Due to the absence of Captain Crane and heavyweight Tanner of

This year instead of individual competition in the wrestling tournament, the YMCA plans to sponsor class teams in order to arouse class competition. The plan is to have seven weights, 125, 135, 145, 155, 156, 175, and unlimited. With each class there will be a three pound weight allowance.

In three weeks, class eliminations will be held to select the seven men who will represent each class. The individual matches will be six minutes in length. Those wishing to enter the tournament should either contact the athletic cabinet members or sign under the proper classification on the Carnegie bulletin board.

During the week of March 17-23, the tournament will be held on the mats of the Alumni gym. On two nights at the beginning of the week, two sets of matches will be held to determine the team finalists. On Saturday evening, the deciding match will be staged between the semi-final winners.

YMCA To Hold Banquet Thursday Evening At 6

Thursday evening, March 7, the YMCA will hold its annual banquet at the Presbyterian church. Professor Archibald Pieper will serve as toastmaster and will introduc the speaker, Prof. N. W. Daughtery, chairman of the athletic council at the University of Tennessee. Music will be provided by the quartet.

Announcement will be made the first of the week about signing up for the banquet as only a limited number of men can be accomodated.

Dean Hunter Represents College at Recent Meeting

Dr. E. R. Hunter, dean of curriculum, represented Maryville at a meeting of the Tennessee Council of Independent and Church Related Colleges last Tuesday at Nashville. The Council discussed the points involved in a more progressive training program for elementary school teachers. Among the subjects considered was a plan for extending educational requirements for grade school teachers to four years of college training instead of the present one or two years.

Dr. Hunter states that such action would be of benefit to the educational system. No action was taken by the Council at this meeting.

Attend the faculty reception. Credit—lots. Gymnastics—staying out of your room without getting caught. Credit—enormous. Bathe after 8:30 a.m. on the Sabbath. Credit—more." Is it possible such a horrible idea as this last could have entered their wicked heads? Just think how we have improved!

Hold your breath now and turn to the sporting pages. There is a picture titled "When We Beat U-T" with the basketball players in characteristic poses and the band "going to town." There is the girls' basketball team holding a ball with "'19-'20 champs" on it. The girls at that time contested U-T, Union College, and Martha Washington. It must have been a regular beauty contest as the girls dashed over the floor in their long-sleeved heavy black shirts, enormous, black bloomers, and heavy, dark stockings. Our modern gym suits would have been a shocking impropriety. But those girls did not do so badly; they were champs.

A series of definitions appeared, bearing a sad resemblance to our own trend of thought. "Flu—you're out of style unless you have it. Campused—the privilege and pleasure of drawing apart from the weary strife of the outside world to rest for a week or two in the peaceful grounds of the college campus. Utilization—the use of scraps of meat, potatoes, and onions to make hash. Apples—a fruit served three times a day, 21 times a week, 84 times a month, and 756 times a year at Pearsons." The poor old dining hall got a drubbing in those days. How discourteous!

A few years later, the Chilhowean staff became industrious (or something similar) and created a moonshine edition, dedicated "To Mr. and Mrs. Queener, members of our faculty, whose marriage followed many happy hours of moonshining here on college hill." A very remarkable treatise on the deep subject, "Moonlight and Moonshine," written by President Wilson, appeared in this issue.

Among the organizations pictured in some of those old issues were an Arkansas Club of eight members, a Lucille Club, and a large "Red Hair Club" (the color not synthetic!). There were fifteen stalwart looking members of the department of agriculture, and a boys' home economics group. That must have been in the days of chivalry, or else the Woman Suffrage feeling was very strong. The band was a thriving organization of thirteen, and the Student Vol, of fourteen members

Artist Series Presents

Milanov, young Jugoslavian soprano, received her first vocal training from the well-known Milka Ternina. It was as Lenore in "Il Trovatore" that she made her debut in 1930 at the State Opera in her native Zagrebe, and since that time her glorious voice has won honors through all Europe and the Eastern U.S. In 1937, as one of the earliest "finds" of Edward Johnson, general manager of the Metropolitan Opera Company, Milanov made her Metropolitan debut and at that time she was received with great enthusiasm by her audiences. She has since become one of the busiest and most useful members of that famous company.

Milanov is a specialist in Verdi's operas; and since her appearance in her biggest and most important new role this year, which is the leading role in Ponchielli's "La Gioconda", she is much in demand as a singer for the Metropolitan road work for Verdi operas. The style of her voice and her repertoire of operatic roles has made her one of the busiest artists on the Metropolitan roster. Reports persistently received have indicated that Milanov's voice is considered to be very much like that of Rosa Ponselle in quality, and Milanov is gradually assuming roles in the Metropolitan which were formerly sung by Ponselle.

Things to watch for in Milanov, according to Professor Ralph Colbert, are the beautiful liquid tones of her voice which is one of the most glorious and the purest to be heard in opera and concert today; critics everywhere have commented upon the beauty of her high pianissimo tones. Also students can watch the Finnish and Jugoslavian groups of songs and compare them with the German Leider.

Georgia Graves, one of America's most promising contraltos, will appear with Milanov on the second of the 1939-40 Artist Series here at Maryville. Miss Graves comes from Colorado where she received her first vocal study and degree of Bachelor of Music at the State college, as well as winning a scholarship for study with the great Madame Schumann-Heink. Certainly training with one of the greatest singers of all times would add to the singer's capacity as an artist. Upon the death of Schumann-Heink, Miss Graves coached with the distinguished baritone, Emilio deGorgorza. Recently she has scored triumphantly in her New York recitals, in numerous concerts throughout the Mid-West, and also in Europe where she has sung for Sibelius.

Because of the war and weather conditions, the Maryville College Artist Series has had to change dates of appearance and also artists. But the fact remains that we have obtained for substitutes artists whose work will be outstanding in its own light and for this we should thank Professor Geo. D. Howell who has done so much work on this Artist Series.

How Maryville Rates

improvements could and should be made. The main difficulty seems to be the indifferent attitude of the students themselves. According to the Director of Personnel, many students seem to have little interest either in the program or its purpose. However, this lack of interest seems to be borne only by those who have a dearth of interest in other campus affairs and activities.

Every student that has taken the test is urged to call at the Personnel office and inquire about his national percentile ranking. Anyone who has any suggestions to offer as to increasing student interest is also requested to communicate with the Personnel office.

But, to get back to the origin of the question—the superiority of the Southern race. Even though we were wrong, many of us still maintain that one Southerner is as good as ten Yankees or three negroes. However, whether northern or southern, we must admit that Maryville is taking the lead among the educational institutions of the country, as witnessed not only by the fact that she ranks high on these competitive exams, but also by the many students that come here because they like the spirit and purpose of our college.

Wrestling Match

Tennessee, the invaders were slightly handicapped in the important matches. However, at Tennessee, Maryville gained more points against these two top-notchers than Thursday night against their scrapping subs. Everett and Hahn pinned their men in walkaway matches which were never in doubt.

Everett took care of Harris and Hahn, Freeman, a big boy who outweighed Clemmy more than ten lbs. Schreiber came through for Maryville in one of the roughest and closest matches seen here. Schreiber, despite a cold and some hard breaks, gained a decision on near falls.

Captain Hal Henschen's match concluded the season and a great year for Maryville. He decisioned another Freeman boy.

Maryville loses one man this year—Milt Schreiber. With nine lettermen returning, Coach Thrower has a pleasant outlook for another Maryville winner next year.

Complete results:
Evaul fall over Womack, 3:15.
Wilde decisioned by Joslin
McDaniel fall over Demos, 4:47.
Culver decision over Grisson
Schreiber decision over Harrison
Everett fall over Harris, 3:45.
Hahn fall over Freeman, 5:32.

King Game

On the whole, the play of the Scotties was poor to what they have been showing and the play of the King college team has improved greatly over what they showed during their first appearance on the Maryville court earlier in the season.

The next evening the Scotties traveled to Milligan where they gathered their first victory of the current road trip when they edged out a victory over the green clad players. It was a fast and close ball game all the way, with neither side holding much of an advantage in points throughout the entire game. The Scotties were behind when they entered the home stretch, but managed to overtake the Milligan team and hold the lead.

The Scots' zone defense failed to click and the Milligan quintet had a lead on them until the Highlanders switched to a man to man defense. After this change the Scots put on the heat and went ahead to win the ball game. During the last thrilling few minutes of play, the teams had the crowd in an uproar as they dashed up and down the court. There were several chances for the Milligan players to drop the ball in, but luckily for Maryville, they failed to connect.

VOLUME 25 MARYVILLE, TENN. MARCH 9, 1940 NUMBER 21

Glee Clubs Presentation on April 5, Of Balfe's "The Bohemian Girl" will be First Opera Ever on Maryville Stage

Woodring And Huddleston Take Leads as Thaddeus and Arline in Opera

ORCHESTRA TO PLAY

Two Choruses Of Sixty Voices, Gypsy Dancers Elaborate Costumes

Richard Woodring as Thaddeus and Elizabeth Ann Huddleston as Arline will take the leads in Balfe's "The Bohemian Girl" when the combined glee clubs and orchestra will bring the first opera to the Maryville stage on April 5.

The action takes place at Presburg, Hungary, during the early nineteenth century. The opera was first produced in Drury Lane, London in 1843 and was first given in the United States in 1844. Balfe was born in Dublin in 1808 and showed proficiency as a violinist that later developed into the composing of a large number of operatic works.

The story centers around the life of a little girl who is kidnapped by the gypsies. Richard Woodring as Thaddues is an exile from Poland and joins a band of gypsies. He rescues the governor's little daughter from a wild stag and at a feast that follows, he refuses to drink to the health of the emperor, whereupon he is imprisoned. Devilshoof, the gypsy chief, played by Dave Hall, gets Thaddeus out but he is imprisoned himself. When the feast is resumed, he too escapes with the governor's daughter, Arline, who is played by Elizabeth Ann Huddleston. Devilshoof makes good his escape by crossing a ravine and removing the bridge.

The second act takes place twelve years later when the gypsies return to Presburg. Sam Cornelius as Florestine, is robbed of a watch and a valuable medallion. Thaddeus is now in love with Arline who has become a beautiful young woman, but the gypsy queen, played by Ruth Woods, tries to separate them. She is obliged to marry them and as revenge contrives to have Arline arrested for having robbed Florestine. At the trial, the count recognizes his daughter by a scar.

Arline weeps at her father's castle for her gypsy lover. When Thaddeus is surprised in her chamber by the count, he takes refuge in a closet. The gypsy queen, who is still bent on revenge, comes and reveals Thaddeus' hiding place. Her plan to have Arline shot is foiled by Devilshoof when he turns the rifle. The shot kills the queen and insures the safety and happiness of Arline and Thaddeus.

The college symphony of twenty-eight pieces and two pianos will accompany. The accompanists are David Kidder and Louise Marshall. There are two choruses of about thirty-five members. One is a chorus of natives and the other is a gypsy chorus. The Scholarship Won By Lynn F. Curtis

Former Student to Go To Vanderbilt Medical School

Announcement is made by Dean W. S. Leathers of the Vanderbilt School of Medicine that Lynn Ferguson Curtis of Greenback, Tenn., who received his B. A. degree from Maryville college, is one of the four students who have been selected to receive the Commonwealth Fund scholarships in the Vanderbilt School of Medicine for the session beginning September, 1940. Curtis will obtain his M.A. from Vanderbilt in June.

The scholarships provide $1,000 per year for each of the four years required to complete the medical course, as well as an additional grant of $500 given at the end of the student's two year internship to be used in setting up an office.

Students receiving the scholarships must be natives and residents of Tennessee and are required to locate in rural communities (not more than 12,000 population) for three years following graduation and two years internship. This provision is made to interest them in continuing rural practice. Commonwealth Scholarship holders are not permitted to do outside work while in medical school, being required to devote their full time to curricular activities.

Two of the others receiving the scholarships are now pre-medical students at Vanderbilt. The third will receive his M.S. from the University of Tennessee in June.

M.C. Debaters Win At South Atlantic, Second In State

Procter and Lamont Lead With Five Firsts

By capturing twenty-one places, including twelve firsts, the Maryville college debating team swept both State and South Atlantic forensic tournaments on last week end, which proved to be the most successful in the history of the squad. Eight members of the team attended the State meet at Carson-Newman college in Jefferson City, as eight other members of the group were participating in the South Atlantic tourney in Hickory, N. C.

Clifford Procter of Reading, Vt., and Robert Lamont of Philadelphia, Pa., led the local team to this double win by taking three places each. Zerwas and Procter composed the Maryville affirmative which was the only team to go through the Hickory tournament with a clean record. In addition to this, Procter placed first in the men's division of after dinner speaking, and was awarded top honors in a new contest, the formulation of group opinion. At the same time, Lamont was winning first place in men's extemp, and being awarded top individual honors in debate. Henry Wick and Lamont were the runner-up team in the men's section of the State tourney.

In order to really sweep the tournament in North Carolina, Maryville debaters captured six other top honors and one second place, in addition to Procter's triumphs. Harriet Miller won first place in women's after-dinner and impromptu speaking; Sara Lee Hellums, first place in the stimulation of group opinion; Arda Walker, first in extemp and second in oratory; Jack Zerwas, first in the men's division of the stimulation of group opinion; and Arnold Kramer, first in men's oratory. Considering the tournament as a whole, Maryville very decisively won the men's division, and ran Winthrop college of Rock Hill, S. C., a very close second in the women's section.

While this tournament was going on at Hickory, eight other local debaters were representing Maryville in numerous speaking contests at Jefferson

Student Council Talks of Many Improvements Needed On Campus

At a meeting held Wednesday evening the Student Council discussed again the need of a private telephone somewhere on the campus. It was suggested that the telephone be installed in some place so that it would be easily accessible to all of the students who wished to make private calls.

The possibility of a hike in the later spring for all of the members of the student body was enthusiastically considered, since there seems to be a considerable amount of student feeling that a trip to the mountains would be a valuable experience.

President Morrow suggested that signs be placed at the unsightly paths which break across the campus. His thought and that of the Council was that students did not mind walking on the sidewalks, and only needed to be reminded not to cut across, since there are adequate walks everywhere.

The installation of a drinking fountain in Science hall and the practice of flying the flag from Anderson tower daily, both matters previously discussed, were to be looked into again, and it was suggested that something be done about the condition of the outside drinking fountains.

One of the council members reported that he had heard complaints because of an undue amount of advertising in the Echo, and representatives were appointed to investigate the matter.

Morrow, president of the council, reported that he had sent a note to the president of the student body of Centre college thanking him for the note sent us during the February Meetings.

Some of the students have suggested that they would like to appear before the Student Council to bring up some matters of importance; and others would like to attend the meetings to see just how the business is carried on. The Council wishes to announce that anyone is welcome to attend its meetings.

Vacation Bible School Institute Begins March 15

Designed For Assistance to Rural Churches of The County

Friday and Saturday, March 15 and 16, there will be an institute for Daily Vacation Bible School workers at the College. This program which is sponsored by the Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian church, is designed especially to train workers who will assist with the Vacation School work in the rural Presbyterian churches and mission Sunday schools in Blount County during the coming summer. The plan is the same as that which was carried out last year, and it is hoped to bring in from the neighborhood young people who can be used in conducting Daily Vacation Bible Schools.

Rev. Louis E. Black, field representative of the Presbyterian Board of National Missions, will be present to direct the conference. Rev. F. R. McAlister, Sunday school missionary of Johnson City, Mrs. Vera Bewden Halle, Knoxville, and Rev. R. W. Jones, pastor of the Presbyterian church in Cookeville, will have important parts on the program.

Representative young people from the rural Presbyterian Sunday schools of Blount County will attend this institute and take advantage of the training program there offered. Any of the Maryville college students who anticipate helping in mission Bible Schools during the coming summer are invited to take advantage of these courses. Rev. F. R. Watt, Director of the College Parish project, will be in charge of the program at the Conference.

Frosh Debate Both Sides At Tourney

Cain And Crawford Take State Honors

Freshmen debaters returned to the campus last Saturday evening after a three day tournament at Carson-Newman college. The boys' team was composed of Roy Crawford and Jack Kramer; the girls' team, Phyllis Cain and Frances Jean Hellums. The two teams, which had to debate both sides of the question of government ownership and operation of the railroads, did not capture team honors; but two members of the teams emerged with individual honors. Roy Crawford was adjudged the second best boy debater of all the freshman debaters in the contest, and Phyllis Cain was selected as the best debater among all the freshman girls in the contest.

This tournament ends the debating season for the freshman debaters this year. A few decision debates may be scheduled with neighboring colleges for the debaters who did not enter the tournament. The freshmen debaters have been meeting about twice a week under the direction of Professor Archibald F. Pieper.

Dr. R. W. Lloyd Attends Philadelphia Conference

Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd left Maryville on Wednesday for another trip to the north. His destination was Philadelphia, Pa., where he attended a special conference of the Department of Church Cooperation and Union of the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., on last Thursday. He planned to extend his journey for a business trip into New York and New England for the few days following.

President Lloyd is expected to return to the campus the first part of the week.

Faculty Members At I.R.C. Round Table Discussion

Discussion Topic: "America in A World at War"

Representatives of the Maryville college faculty led a round table discussion at the International Relations club meeting Friday evening. The subjects for discussion had an all-inclusive title, "America in a World at War." The faculty participants were Prof. Archibald Pieper of the social science department; Prof. Paul F. Wendt, of the social science department; Dr. E. R. Hunter, head of the English department and Dean of Curriculum; and Dr. Frank D. McClelland, Dean of Students.

The form of the meeting was a round table discussion with a student leader, George D. Webster, chairman of the organization, presenting the questions to the men. The questions which were discussed included: what significance is the visit of Sumner Welles to foreign capitals? Should the United States give "active aid" to Finland? What are the economic effects of the war on the United States? What effect will the war have upon the coming national election? What are Cordell Hull's (a Tennessean) chances for the presidency? Should the United States stop aiding Japan in its war with China? What are the possibilities of another League of Nations or some similar organization being formed?

Favorable Comment Stated By Student Critic On Production

Maxwell Anderson's "Winterset", staged by Theta Epsilon and Alpha Sigma, captured and retained the attention of its audience throughout its three tense acts.

The human interest of the story combined with effective direction and well-executed scenery helped to carry the play in those few scenes when the efforts of a well-rehearsed cast did not quite succeed in reaching the audience with an interpretation of the playwright's blank verse. It was a difficult piece of dramatics and yet in spite of a seemingly unsympathetic audience and an exasperatingly censored script, every character portrayed his role with vigor and sincerity.

Outstanding, perhaps, was Virginia Berg as Miriamne, lonely young woman of the slums. In a part which required in its characterization the emotional make-up of a woman and the vitality of a young girl, Miss Berg acted with conviction and ability. Notable, also, was Melvin Johnson as Mio, proud son of an unjustly electrocuted criminal. Although inclined to be rather reserved in some scenes, in others Johnson displayed a naturalness and ease of expression that would indicate past experience in dramatic productions.

Thomas Stahl as Trock, gangster leader, gave an excellent portrayal despite the stereotyped limitations of his part. George Phelps in the character of Esdras, aging father of Garth and Miriamne, showed special merit in the role of an humble, bewildered, Hebrew father.

William Felknor, as Garth, aspiring brother of Miriamne, Erwin Ritzman as Judge Gaunt, unbalanced accuser of Mio's father, and Richard Watkins, vengeful gunman, are all deserving of individual notice for the enthusiasm with which they entered the spirit of their roles.

Probably one of the best of the minor roles was that of the hobo, played by Jack Harwood. The audience responded with approval to his interpretation of the half-witted slum beg-

Maryvillians Hear Yugoslavion And Finnish Modern Selctions

By GEORGE L. HUNT

In the Artist Series concerts I have heard during the past four years the Milanov-Graves recital last Monday evening will rank with the top ones. Largely because of the overwhelmingly artistry of Mme. Milanov, but with the added talent of Miss Graves as a contrast because of the delicate simplicity of her numbers, the audience heard an exceptionally well-balanced program.

One of the distinct contributions that artists have made to our knowledge and appreciation of music during recent years has been that of introducing us to the modern music of foreign countries and in many cases to music of our own country of which the layman was not aware. Kipnis did it, and Mme. Milanov and Miss Graves did it with their Finnish and Yugoslavian selections. We are becoming acquainted with Sibelius' "Sav, Sav, susa!" and "Flickan kom" so that they become increasingly popular with us, and the thrilling interpretation that Mme. Milanov put on her own brother's composition, "Desire", has made it a favorite immediately.

The high spot of the concert, in one opinion at least, was the aria "Pace, pace, mio Deo", to which the Metropolitan soprano gave all her overpowering ability as an interpreter of Verdi. Unfamiliarity with the language in which it was sung makes no difference when an artist like Milanov sings it. And so far as Miss Graves is concerned, her peak was the group of English songs, particularly the simple but appealing "Four Ducks on a Pond", and the encores she was gracious enough to sing.

A total of seven encores were sung by the artists. The first was after their initial duet and was an arrangement of Brahms' "Lullaby" which the accompanist, Richard Wilens, had composed en route. It was thoroughly enjoyable and when sung a second time as their final encore made a fitting finale to a fine program. Miss Graves' encores were: "The Disappointed Serenader" by Brahms, "Annie Laurie",

A Challenge To Campus Liberals

Progressive politicians worked for two generations to secure the adoption of the secret ballot in America, and it is now considered so essential to democracy that not even the most practical vote-getter would dare advocate return to a method of voting which would permit those interested in elections to trace the ballots. If this is true of national politics, why is the same principle not applicable to campus elections?

The whole idea of democratic voting in college elections is defeated by the use of signed ballots. This system, long used at Maryville, was devised to prevent the fraud of "stuffing" the ballot box, but in practice it actually multiplies the opportunities for fraudulent voting, since there is nothing to prevent anyone from casting "proxy" votes by forging names of persons known to be absent at the time of elections.

Often interested students hesitate to vote because they know that they are leaving a permanent record witnessed by their signature of the way they voted, and in this way free expression of opinion is discouraged. This method of voting is even worse than voting by a show of hands in the presence of the candidates, because there is a possibility that those involved will not see and remember how each person voted, but with the conclusive evidence of a signed ballot, there can be no mistake about it and no limit to the amount of time that can be spent in studying and tabulating the results.

Those who criticize the status quo are obligated to suggest some method of reform, and it is in this spirit that the following suggestion is made:

(1) That an election commission be appointed by the Student Council to hold each election;

(2) That nominations be made public at least three days before an election so that everyone may know who is running for office in time to make a deliberate choice;

(3) That voting take place at a specified and convenient time, and that it be by unsigned, secret ballots printed for the occasion;

(4) That the election commissioners check each voter's name by a list as his ballot is cast;

(5) That, in order to conserve time and effort several organizations conduct their elections at the same time.

Some such plan, and this one is not defended as perfect, would require a little more time and attention than is usually devoted to campus elections under the present haphazard system, but the benefits coming from the promotion of student democracy, and of fairness to both voters and candidates would be worth the trouble. This is a challenging problem for campus progressives.

Joshington, Feb. 9, 12:00 Noon—

One of the Bureaus announced this morning that Gohevia, country in southern Kiplan on the Tearing sea had not filled its immigrant quota this year. Authorities believe either that America is losing her popularity among the nations, or that the Gohevian "stay at home campaign" was a success. The slogan poem that the Gohevian government used this year follows:

Gohevia is the true land.
Gohevia is the goo land;
Gohevia is the "who" land,
Gohevia is for me!

from the "Immortals."

Merryville, March 9, 12:00 Noon—

We didn't get jackets for all of the "organizations" of the school last week. Some seem to have felt slighted, and I go so far as to say "insulted." In order to please everyone, we will (note the determination) complete the job this week!

First, comes Bill Lewis and his "Dining Hall Boys." Pardon the dealing in personalities, but I've just been listening to the "Rolled Oats Sisters." Well, let's give the boys something more substantial than a jacket. We can afford a raincoat, can't we? For their emblem these men may have a paper plate. No doubt paper plates would be desired at any cost!

Next comes the janitor crew—the fellows, who with a broom and dust pan in each hand, burn the midnight oil. They make quite a parade. Looks like Ed is the only one in step. (All vegetables will be handed the usher as you enter.) To make a clean breast of things, the boys may have on their back their rooms, halls, or buildings which each sweeps. If the fellows who would have to carry the larger buildings (to carry such as the library or maid shop) will see me, perhaps we will be able to make some other arrangements. Every member may have stars and stripes for every broom worn out on the job!

Some office workers must be awarded. After due consideration, I've selected the printing room workers. Their contribution can be the greatest. We'll give them a jacket with a bulletin board emblem. Each new test printed will be posted daily! Stars and stripes will be given for every five persons who make hundreds on such posted tests!

I thought of awarding the choir members, but after deep thought I decided against it. Jackets for the C.D.D.'s would be at a slightly higher rate, and since we didn't know who these were, the charge might be unduly levied on some members.

Oh, no, these aren't free! At a minimum charge the above named garments may be secured this evening. You simply form a line on the right, and select the type you like, from our large supply. Stars and stripes will be free upon remittance of two box tops!

Speaking of stars and stripes, what happened to the "Old Glory" which once floated above Anderson hall?

DREAM

A glittering, transparent bubble takes form, crosses my vision, and enevelops my thoughts with the light mist of memory.
Soft music slips from slender flutes, and I hear your voice again rising gently above the under-current of rhythm to whisper in my soul.
A ripple of laughter entangles my heart and breaks the monody into little bits of light.
A tear drops among the jewels of color and shadow, and covers the blue and green with cool dew.

Pure, white banks of snow, rising and falling among straight firs;
A freshly-lit candle rising above the altar, glowing like the warmth of hope;
Crystal reflections of a spring bubbling, bursting, and peacefully settling—
All these are in your soul.

HITLER

No wife; no child; no playtime hour;
No love of anything but power;
No neighbors near; no family tie;
No caring who may live or die.

No friend beyond the moment's need;
No God, except the god of greed;
No pity and no wrong and right;
No faith in anything but might.

No morning song; no evening prayer;
No little patch of garden, where
In springtime blossoms tulips gay;
Nothing but warfare night and day.

No home by patient labor earned;
No hearth where cheery logs are burned;
Nothing, save for a little while
The stupid cry, "Heil, Hitler! Heil!"

EVENING POETRY

The sun sinking in the sky
Stretches colorful fingers high, across the heavens.

A pine tree on a hill
Outlines against the still of deepening twilight.

From a brush soft melody floats
The music pours from two bird-throats and drifts abroad.

The teasing breeze at end of day
Pauses to rest from wearisome play on the crest of a hill.

One by one the stars appear
A message to all that night is near; then darkness settles.

Artist Interviews

and "My Heart at thy Sweet Voice" from Samson and Delilah by Saint-Saens. In response to the enthuiastic applause of the audience, Mme. Milanov sang the aria from Cavalleria Rusticana by Mascagni, "Zueignung" by Strauss, and "Ein Traum" by Grieg.

At an interview in the afternoon all three of the artists showed the same charm and the same enthusiasm for their music as was evident at the concert. Most of the conversation was with Miss Graves because Mme. Milanov does not speak the English language very well.

The program illustrated well who is the favorite composer of each artist, and a question to that effect verified it. Miss Graves likes Sibelius and was entertained by him on a visit to Finland last summer. Her prize possession is a picture of herself with the great Finnish composer. He chose the selections from his works that she used on her Town Hall recital and which she used at the Maryville concert. Mme. Milanov's favorite is Verdi, and she is well-known for her interpretation of that composer's roles. She appeared in "Aida" just before coming here last week-end.

Asked what she thought of the suggestion Alexander Kipnis made when he was here last year, that operas should be sung in English to make them more appreciated and more enjoyed, Miss Graves felt that it would depend to a great degree on the calibre of the translation. Foreign music loses so much if it is poorly translated, and perhaps some operas would lose a great deal of their appeal if rendered in English.

Miss Graves is married to the world traveler and lecturer, Howard B. MacDonald. They took a round-the-world honeymoon and have traveled together to forty-four countries. They have a beautiful home called "Seven Pines" in Yonkers, N. Y., which boasts a rock garden with choice specimens gathered from all over the world and a room devoted to a model railroad which they and their guests enjoy operating.

Asked what is the prime requisite for a good singer, the American contralto replied, "Good health." During the years in which she was training for and following her career she has had this attribute, plus a real determination to succeed. Following her graduation from the Colorado State college where she worked her way through by playing accompaniments, she went to New York and tried to make various connections. For a time she played the piano in a dancing school, but in her second year she secured the contralto solo position at the Fourth Presbyterian church, New York. She has sung on over a thousand radio programs and regards radio as splendid training for a singer.

During the rehearsal in Voorhees chapel Monday afternoon the voice of Mme. Milanov rang through the auditorium. She showed a sincere love for her art and an almost masculine exuberance as she tried various selections to test the acoustics. She is a real representative of the dramatic soprano voice with tones that sounded true and clear. Maryville enjoyed a treat seldom equalled when it heard Zinka Milanov and Georgia Graves last Monday night.

SPORT ECHOES

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

Swimming takes the spotlight this week as everybody goes swimming. The team is on a trip, meeting three state teachers colleges in West Virginia and Kentucky. Tonight they meet Morehead, last night East Kentucky Teachers. Since this was written before I left, I don't know how we came out yesterday. That's all the swimming the team will be able to handle till next year. Here, life saving is starting under college instructors, and builds up to a finale with a national representative arriving in April for the "finals." Open periods for men and women are drawing throngs in this balmy baseball weather. Interclass swimmers have started warming up for the big meet. Biggest news on the swimming horizon, however, is the Water Carnival. Watch for the date—practice has started.

For the first time tennis news enters this column, and that's a sure sign of spring. The U.S. Lawn Tennis Association is sending to Maryville, Walter Senior, who will give a clinic on the afternoon of the twenty-eighth of this month. Senior is one of the foremost professional teachers of the United States. It's quite a privilege for the Highland team to get him. A program of the USTA is to get young players, playing better tennis, in hopes that better Davis Cup material will be available. Maryville college, through the efforts of Coach Fischbach, is one of the places which will benefit through this program by means of the clinic. The clinic will last for one afternoon, and be open to students, other than varsity men, who are interested. Theory, and exhibition matches will be in the main, the program presented by Mr. Senior.

Baseball and track beginning were evident this week. Limbering-up exercises for the cinderburners, and fundamentals for the Honaker pupils. Big squads smile upon both coaches as schedules, partly drafted, begin to loom. The first cinder engagement will be against Davidson in about a month. The baseball team hits competition much sooner. Scottie State track champs have a bigger job this year to hold their last year's record intact. Steakley, Etheredge, Baird, Lloyd, and Davies form the neucleus of a pretty well-riddled team. A freshman sprinter, or an upperclass darkhorse is our only chance for success in title defense. Orr, on the high hurdles, needs a successor; Rae, in the polevault, and Weldon Baird in the mile, half-mile, quarter-mile, discus and relays—what a life. Maybe Boydson can cover these events and broad jump a little to boot. Etheredge is swapping to dashes this year, and may be Coach Thrower's salvation. Coach seems to be pretty disturbed about the publicity he's getting in Knoxville about his '40 speedsters, incidentally. Coach Honaker has an easier spot. He hasn't lost a man, and had a hard hitting team last year when the season closed out. Further—he doesn't have to defend anything—everything to gain, and here's a prediction that the Scotties will shine on the diamond this year. Shoey Hughes, Headrick, McGaha, Wilburn, Honaker, and all the other bambinos are out for gore. LMU and Milligan look strong among other conference teams.

Four 39 Lettermen Report For Varsity Tennis Squad

The 1940 edition of the tennis team has not appeared to the public view, but practices are being held in the practice room in Bartlett. The team with Morrow, Akana, Stevenson, and Kidder back and with Van Cise, Ted Kidder, and Pratt showing up as possibilities, the outlook for the season is considerably brighter than last year when these words appeared in a write-up concerning the tennis team, "the chances for a winning team are slim."

Thus far, due to weather conditions, the team has not held any practices on the outside courts, but have restricted their efforts to the practice room on the second floor of Bartlett hall.

Interclass Sports

In the second half playoff of the YMCA basketball tournament played Wednesday evening on the Alumni floor, the junior quintet gained revenge over the senior five with a count of 28-11. The finals between the seniors, first half winners, and the juniors will be held next week.

The seniors were held to one lone point in the first quarter, while the juniors jumped to a six point lead on field goals by Cragan, Hughes, and Russell.

On a long fling from the sidelines, Cragan cut the hoop for a two-pointer, which was quickly followed by a tricky tap-in shot by Hughes. For his third field goal, Cragan tossed in a one-handed shot from short center to leave the score at 13-1. After Amos' field goal and Fleming's foul toss, it began to look like the beginning of a famous senior rally. However, Peterson's charity toss and the timer's whistle broke up serious threat.

In the third frame, the juniors monopolized the offensive as they held their elders scoreless. Russell and Cragan each scored 3 points on field goals and foul throws, and Steakley registered on a long shot from the center circle.

Kramer's tap-in goal was the first senior score in the last half. Procter added a foul shot, and Stevenson's duel shots accounted for two from the foul line. "T" Etheredge's basket in the closing seconds brought the score to 28-11.

Fischmen Leace For A 4-Day Swimming Trip

On Thursday morning, the Maryville swimming team departed on a four day trip which will include meets with Concord State Teachers of Athens, W. Va.; East Kentucky Teachers of Richmond, Ky.; and Morehead State Teachers of Morehead, Ky.

The feature of the meet with the West Virginia mermen on Thursday was that it was the longest trip ever taken by the Fischbach-splashers. The three successive meets are the most ambitious engagements ever to be undertaken in foreign waters by the Orange and Garnet swimmers.

The eleven men on the trip with Coach Fischbach are: Captain Findlay, Lee, Cross, Akana, Ritzman, Wright, Craine, Mize, Heydinger, Wilcox, and Manager Ballenger.

Pioneer Swimmers Defeat Scots 45-30

In the pool last Saturday afternoon, Tusculum's Pioneers nosed out the Maryville splashers, 45-30. This meet closed the intercollegiate swimming season for the Fisch-men in their home tank.

A new college record in the 300 yd. medley event was established by Dave Heydinger, Paul Akana, and Frank Cross. The new time of 3:42 for the opening event betters the old Maryville record by 10 seconds.

As the last two events were reached, the Highlanders were trailing by one point. Their failure to win a respectable berth in the distances gave the margin of victory to the Greeneville splashers.

Summary:

300 yd. medley, Maryville—3:42 min.
220 yd. freestyle, Whitely (T), 2:46.6
50 yd. freestyle, Morgan, (T), 26.2
Diving, Mize, Maryville
100 yd. freestyle, Morgan (T), 59.3
150 yd. freestyle, Condit (T), 2:03.4
200 yd. breastroke, Akana (M), 3:10
440 yd. freestyle, Whiteley (T), 7:05
400 yd. relay, Tusculum, 4:29.

1940 Baseball Outlook Bright As The First Week Of Practice Closes

Scottie State Champs Begin Intense Drills

Every afternoon for the past week in the wrestling and tennis practice rooms of Bartlett hall, Coach Thrower has been sending thirty varsity candidates through numerous calisthenics in preparation for the defense of the Tennessee State track title. On Monday, when members of the basketball team report for practice, the squad will reach its full strength of forty.

Although Coach Thrower has ten lettermen from last year's champions, he must find men to fill the spikes of Gene Orr, Weldon Baird, and Bob Sutton in the hurdles, distances, and sprints. In the state meet at Cookeville last spring, these three men accounted for one-half of the total Highlander score.

The ten returning lettermen are: Captain Joe Etheredge, Vernon Lloyd, Bill Baird, Floyd Green, Doug Steakley, Harlan Husk, Alfie Davies, Cecil Tipton, Bill Mooney, and Julius Nicely.

With the Orange and Garnet basketball togs packed away for another year, the interest of some of the athletes on the hill turns to baseball. The practices are being held daily in the Alumni gym under the supervision of Coach Honaker.

The Scotties did fairly well last year, if the back issues of the Echo are any guide, and they collected eight wins against three losses and two ties. This account may not be accurate, but according to the write-ups in the Echo, this is the result.

The Scotties are well fortified in all positions, as they did not lose a single letterman from last year's squad. The prospects for a successful season are very bright and if the freshmen shape up, the Scotties will present a formidable attack on the diamond when they face Franklin college on March 29.

J. D. Hughes will hold down the hot corner again this year, as he has done in the past. On the same side of the diamond, Scot Honaker will probably handle the shortstop's duties. Completing the double play combination and guarding the keystone sack will be "T" Etheredge. First base is the tessup in the infield with Lamar Russell and Tommy Cragan, the two most likely contenders for the post. Russell held down this position last year. Fred Sheifer will be varsity catcher. Nig Wilburn, mainstay of the Scot pitching staff, will see plenty of action on the mound. There is an abundance of lettermen for the outer gardens, with McGaha, Headrick, Wilburn, Kindred, ready for action.

The rest of the men trying for posts are pitchers—Short, Seiber, Rock Mair, Copeland, Hooker, and Brewer; catchers—Witt, Stern, and Justus; infield—Pierce, Sweeney, Christie, Lord, and Hodges. Some of these boys have showed up fairly well in practice and may be called on to do some duty on the slab in the coming games.

The daily practice has been held inside and if the weather improves the team hopes to get outside sometime in the next few days, and batting practice and base running will be gone into. Thus far the fundamentals of hitting, playing the infield, and fielding a ball have been shown and practiced. The squad is managed this year by Bill Walker.

LIFE SAVING

Life saving courses are being given this week, extending through May third. Coach Fischbach announced that the swimming divisions of the athletic department is stressing the Red Cross program this spring, and will train all possible swimmers in life saving service. The series of courses will be terminated in the coming of a national representative, Mr. Ellis Fysal, from Washington. Mr. Fysal will give final examinations for instructorships, beginning April 29th and going through May 3rd. His teaching and examining will be given each night from 7 to 10:00, making up a fifteen hour training period.

Preliminary to the above course, and compulsory for receiving instructorship in Red Cross life saving and water safety, will be another 15 hour course given by Dorothy Quass and Gordon Findlay, college instructors. These lessons will start on the 4th of April, and will be given an hour and a half each day.

Senior life saving is being given this week in Bartlett pool under the direction of Quass, McCurry, and Findlay. Senior life saving is a requirement for the advanced life saving courses.

For enrollment in the above courses, see Coach Fischbach as soon as possible.

Junior-Senior Girls Take Tournament Title

Although the sophs led during most of the volleyball game last Monday afternoon in Bartlett gym, their opponents, the frosh, came from behind to win the game by three points, the score being 45-42. On Wednesday the junior-senior team defeated the frosh with a score of 60-46. The junior-seniors, tournament winners, will play an independent boys team next week. Also next week baseball practice will begin.

Crothers Speaks in Chapel

Dr. William H. Crothers will be the guest speaker in morning chapel next Wednesday, March 13. Dr. Crothers served as a member of the college faculty for the first semester of this year as instructor in Bible. He will return now to speak as a well known friend of faculty and student body.

Wednesday evening at 6:45, members of the Law club will hold their bi-monthly meeting in Alpha Sigma hall. H. F. Lamon will review an important state trial, giving both sides of the case and asking for an audience verdict. After the audience opinion the verdict will be given as rendered by the court.

Nature Club Hears Short

At the regular bi-monthly meeting of the Nature club, Robert Short gave a demonstration of taxidermy. A small mammal was skinned and stuffed to demonstrate taxidermy to the club. Mr. Short also displayed the skins of a raccoon, fox-squirrel, and red fox, and a stuffed speciman of an opossum.

A "bird-walk" is being planned in the near future by the club. This will take place in the college woods, with Prof. Geor. Knapp acting as guide.

Several musical numbers by well-known local entertainers will be presented.

City. In addition to Lamont's victories at this tournament, Maryville speakers were awarded eight additional places. After the final tabulations were made last Saturday afternoon, it was found that Maryville was trailing East Tennessee Teachers of Johnson City by only three points. This was the first time in four years that Maryville has not won the tournament.

The other individual honors at the State meet include: Jeanne Stringham, third place in women's extemp and after-dinner; Lucille Lynch, second individual honors in debate and first in oratory; W. B. Felknor, second in impromptu and third in after-dinner; Henry Wick, third in the men's division of oratory; and Hilton Wick, second place in the State Peace Oratorical contest. This last victory entailed a $30 prize.

Henry Wick and Robert Lamont are scheduled to meet a team from Waynesburg college of Waynesburg, Pa., tonight at 7:00 in the philosophy class room.

Jack Zerwas and Cliff Procter will take the affirmative side of the national Pi Kappa Delta query on next Monday evening against a men's negative team from Erskine college of Due West, S. C.

Ministerials To Hear Dr. Crume Tomorrow

Dr. T. C. Crume, who is conducting revival services at the Baptist church, is to conduct a seminar at the meeting of the Ministerial association on Monday evening at 6:45. The subject is to be "The Need of Evangelism." Dr. Crume has been in the evangelistic field for eighteen years. He has conducted evangelistic services in every state in the union, as well as in many cities in Canada, Cuba and in Mexico. Dr. Crume is the holder of twelve academic degrees, among which are Ph.D., Sc. D., Th.D., D.D., and D.H. The subject will be of interest to pre-ministerial and pre-missionary students, all of whom are invited. Edward Rowley, Philip Evaul, and John Thompson will participate in the devotional program.

gar. Howard Dizney as the stubborn radical demanded his rights with typical soap-box disregard for the little public servants who represent the law.

Others of the supporting cast are also worth mentioning: those entertaining bits of dancing by the street urchins, Carmen Archilla and Kitty Bennett, the engaging Italian, John Ballenger, and Lois Thorson, the apple-seller, E. B. Smith's portrayal of the dutiful policeman and his thick-headed sergeant, Franklin Hunter. John Hawkins as the silent bodyguard of Trock and especially Bruce Walters as Carr, Mio's pal, contributed to the general effect of the production.

If it is true that the audience at times failed to catch the significance of certain passages and that lines at times sounded memorized and meaningless, it is also true that the proper atmosphere would have been difficult to create for even the most experienced actors; and lack of concentration on the spirit of the play can be laid in a large part upon the audience.

Dr. Ralph S. Collins Leads Y.M. Service

Dr. Ralph S. Collins, associate professor of German, will be the guest speaker at the YMCA worship service Sunday at 5:00, in Bartlett auditorium. He will give the third talk in the series on appreciation of minority groups, speaking on the contribution the cultured German has made to the world. While not strictly a minority group, it was felt that there should be emphasis placed in these times on the cultural gifts of the German race.

The series will be concluded next week by Dr. Ralph T. Case, talking on the Christian attitude towards minorities.

chairman that the next meeting of the club will feature an organization election. Another highlight of the evening (if tentative arrangements are completed) will be an address by a Knoxville army officer whose subject will be: "The Part of Our Air Force in the National Defense."

The chairman of the IRC announced this morning that all books, which have been borrowed from the shelf in the library, be returned at once. Also, no more debts are to be incurred against the organization by any of the members until this year's budget is balanced.

Several members of the club, John Ross, G. B. Clark, Otto Pflanze, J. Edward Thomas, and George Webster, are planning to attend the Regional International Relations Conference to be held from March 21-23 at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N. C. The general topic for the meeting's discussions will be the same as was presented here last night, "America in a World at War."

Opera

Jack Proffitt is business manager and chairman in charge of the production staff. Advertising committee is Bruce Walters, chairman, John Ballenger, Mary Caldwell, Kay Estes, Eloise McNeely, Joe Dickenson and Joe Suitor. Knoxville To Be Center Of Debate Convention Meet

Miller, Walker, Kramer and Procter To Represent M. C. in Tourney

Seven hundred students representing 130 colleges and universities from all over the United States will take part in the National Pi Kappa Delta forensic convention the week of March 24 to 30, to which Maryville college is host. This is the largest student convention ever to be held south of the Mason-Dixon line.

Representing Maryville in the convention will be Harriet Miller and Arda Walker in the women's speech division, and Arnold Kramer and Clifford Procter, in the mens speech division. Otto Pflanze, president of Tennessee Alpha chapter of Pi Kappa Delta at Maryville, will represent this province in the National Student Assembly, which is held in connection with the convention. Bob Lamont will also take part in the Student Assembly as chaplain of the meeting.

Sara Lee Hellums will act as assistant publicity dircetor of the tournament and will also have charge of the information desk at the convention. Jack Zerwas will help with the student program, substituting for Robert Hubbell, a member of the council who cannot be present.

Professor Verton M. Queener, one of the three national councilment of Pi Kappa Delta, and Professor A. F. Pieper will take part in the tournament in various capacities.

The convention will open March 24, at the Second Presbyterian church at Knoxville, when Maryville's A Capella choir will give a program for those members of the convention who have arrived at this time.

The official opening of the convention will be at 10:30 Monday morning at the auditorium of Knoxville high school. At this time Dr. R. W. Lloyd, president of Maryville college, will welcome the delegates in behalf of the host college.

Some of the other high lights of the tournament will be the tour through the Smoky Mountains, dinner at Gatlinburg, followed by stunt night and a dance Wednesday afternoon and evening. Friday evening the formal banquet of the convention will be held at Whittle Springs Hotel.

All members of the local chapter of Pi Kappa Delta will attend some part of the convention program.

Local Attorney Speaks To Club

Brother Combination Will Be Feature Of Next Moot Trial

Wayne Oliver, prominent local attorney, was the speaker at the biweekly meeting of the Maryville college Law club held Wednesday evening in Alpha Sigma hall.

Mr. Oliver spoke concerning what law is—a profession; and what law attempts to do—serve. He pointed out that law is a profession because it attempts to serve. To a business man his work is primarily a means of obtaining money. To the lawyer his first purpose is to serve society to insure each person's civil rights, and then to obtain money is his secondary aim.

Law is a vast field. It is so large that it can be broken down into 414 separate fields of study. Each lawyer must master the fundamental fields (unless he is specializing in one particular field) in order to serve society. By serving well the lawyer obtains his constructive advertisement. If he does not serve society, he does not prosper.

The mock trial committee gave its report at the meeting. The second mock trial of the year will be held in Alpha Sigma hall Wednesday evening, April 10. The two counsels will be Arnold Kramer, Robert Wilcox, and Henry Wick; and Harold Austin, Jack Kramer, and Hilton Wick. The court crier will be Jack Harwood. Other court officers have not as yet been selected. The trial will be for the members of the organization and their friends.

A preliminary banquet committee was appointed to secure a speaker for the occasion which will be held later in the spring. This committee consists of Betty Moore, Robert Wilcox, and Gordon Findlay.

Mack, Thomas, Magill Highest On First Semester Honor Roll

Ruth Mack again made the highest scholastic average in the school for the fall semester of 1939-40, with a mark of 9.03. Closely following were J. Edward Thomas and Dan Magill, both of whom had 9.0 averages.

Ruth is a senior and has often been the scholastic leader of the school during the past three years. Dan Magill, also a senior, has been among the first every semester. J. Edward Thomas had the highest average in the junior class besides tying for second place.

Although listed as honor's work, Magill's average for the classes that he received grades in was 9.0.

Marian Jenkins and Mary Jenks tied for highest honors in the sophomore class with 7.8 averages. In the freshman class, Jean Barnes was first with an average of 8.7, and Jean Patterson, second with an average of 8.5.

Thirty-nine members of the senior class made the honor roll. The freshman class was second in rank with 35 members; the juniors, third with 33; and the sophomores, last with 30 members.

The complete list for the fall semester of 1939-40 is:

Forms Distributed To Senior Class

Recommendations Based on Performances Made

Forms were distributed to members of the senior class last week by the Committee on Recommendations. These were to be filled out and returned to the office in order that the recommendations can be secured and placed on permanent file.

The plan has been used by the college many years as a convenient and permanent means by which any graduate can have a source of reference based on his performance while in college. This is similar to plans which are required by many other colleges, although at Maryville its use is optional. The fact that some schools do require it is an indication of the amount of importance that should be attached to it. With this in mind, the seniors, regardless of what present intentions or positions they may have, are strongly urged to file their recommendations.

Many times, requests come to the office for some statement about an individual from sources that the person in question may not know, and it is often a chance for the college to render effective and desirable service even thought the student may have graduated long ago.

Another fact should also be considered. The most valuable recommendations that anyone can have is from those persons who best know them. It can readily be seen that some of those under whom an individual's best record was made may move or die before many years, in which case the best the college office could do would be to give only a general or vague comment about what the person was as a student.

The plan by which the office makes several copies and keeps them on file affords a convenient means of having them mailed to prospective employers. It is much simpler to send a card requesting that the recommendations be sent from the office than to write individual letters to all the faculty members asking them for recommendations.

Faculty Members Attend Convention In Nashville

Several faculty members will attend the meeting of the college section of the Tennessee Education Association next Wednesday and Thursday at Nashville.

Dr. Frank D. McClelland will read a paper Wednesday afternoon on the "Contribution of Athletics to the General Cultural Purpose of the College." Dr. D. H. Briggs, chairman of the state association of teachers of psychology and education, states that the topic for discussion in his division is "the aims, objectives, and materials of general psychology."

Prof. H. L. Ellis will attend the college and university division meeting of the Tennessee Library association at the same time.

Student Council Plans Activity As Politicians Begin Spring Drives

A committee to amend or revise the constitution of the Student Council has been appointed by the president of the Council, Frank Morrow. The committee is now engaged in this work. The amendments or revision of the document will be presented to the Council at its bi-weekly meeting to be held Monday evening.

The amendments or revision will either be accepted or rejected by the Council at this meeting. If they are accepted, the changes will be presented to the faculty for their approval or rejection; and if the faculty approves the changes, the constitution will be presented to the student body. If the student body gives their approval by a three-fourths vote, the new revised or amended constitution will be printed in the booklet, "Standards and Regulations" for 1940-41.

At the same meeting, the Council will hear reports from the members appointed to investigate the excessive advertising in the Echo this year. Reports will also be heard concerning the proposed student body hike to the mountains this spring, concerning whether or not a public telephone could be installed on the campus, and concerning the reasons for the extra current charges. Definite steps will be taken to have the new bubbler fountain, which has been approved, installed in Fayerweather Science hall. The progress of the Council concerning these proposals will be reported next week in the Echo.

Questionnaires Show That "Echo Humor" Is Best

Column For Original Contributions Favored By A Large Majority

Last Wednesday morning at the regular chapel service, the Highland Echo sponsored a questionnaire concerning the local student publication. The purpose of this questionnaire was to take a poll of student opinion concerning contemplated improvements for the paper.

The answers to the questions concerning the Echo, already tabulated by the staff, show the following results:

"Do you usually read the editorials in the Echo?" Three out of every four senior women answered "Yes", and four out of every five senior men. This latter ratio was also true for the junior women, while the junior male answers were about equally divided between yes and no. About one-half of the sophomore and freshmen men read the editorials. The ratio of those who do, to those who do not, was seven to one for sophomore women and three to one for the freshman women.

About two-thirds of the seniors and juniors read the Commentator. The percentage was lower for the sophs and freshmen—about 50 percent of the sophomores checking yes, and a little over 40 percent of the freshmen.

Out of 85 seniors who answered the questions, 52 put a check signifying that they read Capital Corner, 67 reading Echo Humor, forty reading the News Review, seventy, the Exchange column, and 59 checking the Sports Echoes. The majority of the juniors read Echo Humor, News Review, Exchange, and Sports Echoes, with about 50 percent of them reading the new Capitol Corner. The sophomore answers showed that a majority of the sophomores read all of the articles mentioned. The freshman majority read Sports Echoes and Echo Humor with a little less than half reading the other articles listed.

The answers to the question, "Do you enjoy a column like Campus Crumbs?", showed that a very large percentage of the student body did enjoy it. In the junior women's papers, for instance, 46 out of every 47 answers were "Yes."

In every class, the number desiring a radio column far exceeded the number who would like a movie column.

Most students evidently would like more features. For, in the reckoning of the portion of the persons who wished more as compared to those who would like fewer, the ratio was found to be approximately five to one in favor of an increase in the number of feature articles. Almost everyone seems to wish to see either his own writings or the work of his friends in the Echo, because a large majority of students in all four classes voted for a column for original contributions. In the senior class the ratio in favor of this column was about 25 to one.

Passion Week Services To Be Held By Devotional Groups

Frosh Party Tonight In Alumni Gym

The freshman class is starting the season of school parties off tonight with a party for all, in the college gym at 8:00.

From 8:00 to 9:00 deck games are to take the limelight. There will be ping pong, shuffleboard, and numerous table games. During this period music will be furnished by Dan McGill.

Sunrise Services To Be Led By Choir, Glee Clubs

At six o'clock on Sunday morning, March 24th, the annual Easter Sunrise Service will be held in the amphitheatre of the College Woods. This service is one of the most impressive and inspirational of those held on the campus throughout the year, and is looked forward to with anticipation.

The ceremonies will be opened at 4:30 by the band, which will be stationed near the center of the campus and will play some of Bach's loved chorales. The procession of students will leave the campus for the amphitheatre at 5:30 in order to reach there by 6:00, at which time the sun is scheduled to rise.

Ralph R. Colbert, instructor in music, will conduct the musical portion of the ceremonies. Mr. Colbert stated that the program would be the same as last year's, which consisted of an opening song, Lowry's "Low in the Grave He Lay", by the combined glee clubs and A Capella choir, followed by the Apostles Creed repeated by the audience and then the Lord's Prayer response. Additional choral selections consisted of the familiar hymn, "Fairest Lord Jesus", and "Like a Choir of Mighty Angels" by Bartniansky.

In case of rain, the order of service will proceed as planned, except that it will be held in Voorhees chapel instead of at the amphitheatre.

Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd will entertain the choir, band, and glee clubs for breakfast.

Black Is Speaker

At the Student Vols meeting tomorrow night at 8:00, the Rev. Louis S. Black, field representative of the Presbyterian Board of National Missions, will speak. Mr. Black will be on the campus this week end in connection with the Institute for the Training of Workers in Vacation Bible Schools.

Dick Woodring will furnish the musical part of the program by singing "The Palms."

The Highland Echo is edited this week by George Webster.

EASTER SERVICE HELD

Special Music Will Be Presented at Vesper Palm Sunday Service

During this coming week which was Passion Week in the life of Christ, various devotional services will be held here on the campus. These services are divided into four main groups as follows: the general and brief chapel services each morning; the noonday services under the direction of the YMCA, the YWCA, the Ministerial association, and Student Volunteers; the Sunrise service Easter Sunday morning; and the Vesper service Sunday evening. Tomorrow evening at the Palm Sunday Vesper service, the choir will sing "Divine Praises" by Bortniansky. For special music Jean Heckman and Miss Dorothy Horne will play "The Palms."

At each of the regular morning chapel services there will be brief readings and prayers by different members of the faculty; and on Good Friday morning, there will be brief meditations by several members of the faculty. Of course, this means that there will be no chapel speaker on Wednesday. Also, Professor Colbert has arranged for the choir to present special music for these services.

The leaders and the music for the coming week are as follows: on Tuesday morning Rev. R. J. Dollenmayer will preside, and the choir will sing "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross"; Wednesday, Dr. J. A. Gates will be the speaker, and the choir will sing "Beneath the Cross of Jesus"; Thursday, Dr. E. R. Hunter will preside and the choir will give Dickinson's "In Joseph's Lovely Garden". Friday morning the service will be somewhat longer, meditations on the seven words from the cross being given by different members of the faculty, Dr. Lloyd presiding. Dr. Stevenson will speak on the first two words from the cross, Dr. F. D. McClelland on the third, fourth, and fifth, and Dr. R. T. Case on the sixth and seventh. Special music by the choir will consist of "Into the Woods My Master Went" and "Were You There?". In addition, the special Good Friday responses will be used. On Saturday morning, Dr. H. E. Orr will lead the meeting, and the choir will sing Newman's "Lead Kindly Light."

The noonday devotional meetings which are sponsored by the YM, the YW, the Ministerials, and the Student Vols, will be held from 12:40 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. in the YW rooms. This is the third year these noon meetings have been held and they are planned with the intent to be devotional services focusing attention on the Passion Week of our Lord. Comprising the committee planning these Holy Week meditations are John Thompson, chairman, Bruce Robinson, Jake Bradsher, and George Pheips.

The general theme of these services, which is "The Sufficient Christ", will be carried out in each of the weekday meetings. The program of subjects and the leaders is as follows: Monday, March 18, William Lewis will speak on "Sufficient in Triumph"; Tuesday, Vaughn Lyons will speak on "Sufficient in Authority"; Wednesday, Edward M. Thomas will take as his subject, "Sufficient in Christ"; Thursday, Roland Tapp will speak on "Sufficient in Sacrament"; Friday, Henry Millison will be the leader and will take as his topic, "Sufficient in Sacrifice"; and on Saturday Thomas Schaffer will speak on "Sufficient in Eternity." These subjects are selected to coincide with the actual events in the corresponding week of our Lord's life.

"Dating Parlor" Inaugurated At Up-to-Date Maryville

By CARSON BREWER

Recently, when I read a feature story about an old 1920 Chilhowean, my curiosity was awakened. I rubbed the sleep out of my eyes (the light had just gone out in Carnegie) and ambled over to the Chilhowean office to see for myself just how the situation stood at Maryville in 1920.

I was too sleepy, though. No sooner than I picked up the old edition, my eyelids went on a flop-down strike. Pretty soon things started doing queer movements in front of me. The "1920" on the old Chilhowean began doing crazy tricks like a scoreboard when Scot Honaker starts "busting" long ones. Instead of looking at a 1920 Chilhowean, I was looking at the 1965 edition.

I opened the book and the first picture I saw puzzled me. It seemed just a little out of place at Maryville. Hardly knowing what to think, I looked up to do a bit of meditating. However, my gaze never reached the ceiling for the very good reason that a very amply- proportioned stomach, topped off by a friendly grin and some blond hair, loomed between me and the ceiling.

"Who might you be, little boy?" I asked.

A Kentucky drawl seeped slowly out of the grin, "Who? Me? I'm Howard Clark Dizney II, photography editor of the 1965 Chilhowean."

"Oh, you are? Well, maybe you can tell me what this picture is all about."

An expression of unbelief replaced the grin. "Why, don't you know what that is? That's the football team."

"Well, what," I asked, "has the airplane to do with the football team?"

"Oh," calmly answered Diz Jr., "that picture was taken just as the team was ready to take off for the game with the Hong Kong Hurricane."

"Who's the pilot?' I inquired. "He looks familiar."

"That's Dr. Lloyd," answered Dizney II.

"Since you seem to know so much about this thing, perhaps you could tell me why this picture was put in the Chilhowean," I said. "Those fellows are only listening to a radio."

"NO", he answered, "that's no radio. Those fellows are listening to the chapel program, which comes into all the rooms in the dormitories through loudspeakers such as the one you see in the picture. If a fellow doesn't want to go to chapel, all he has to do, after his breakfast has been brought to him, is to turn on the speaker and hear the program in his room."

I turned a page and again ran into something unfamiliar.

"What's this?" I asked, pointing to a picture of a long hall, from which opened several doors, leading into small, dimly-lighted rooms.

"Those are the private 'dating parlors'. You want a date tonight, mister? I'm the secretary of the 'dating' bureau, too."

"No," I declined. "I just want you to tell me what that queer little room pictured on the next page is used for."

"That," explained Dizney II, "is one of our new carivators. It'll take you any place you want to go, to the library to get a book, to Bible class, to your room—just anywhere. All you have to do is think of what you want as you pass that little purple light at the door. Do you want to ride one? Come on. There's a carivator next door."

We entered the contraption and were off with a swish. After about thirty seconds, Dizney asked me what I had thought about when I passed the purple light.

"I don't quite remember," I said. "I believe, though, that I was thinking of how good a hot dog would taste."

1940 Swimmers Present "Wellzabubblin"

The college swimmers will present "Wellzabubblin" the 1940 edition of the annual water carnival on March 23rd. The extravaganza is under the direction of Paul Akana, three year star of the carnival, and Coach Fischbach. Akana is incorporating 25 beautiful girls in his production, and shoves the varsity men in the background in favor of an amazon pageant.

Work For Student Council

It has been noticed recently that several of the members of the faculty have kept books out of the college library for a period as long as from three to four months. Without any further examination of this question, it is obvious that such a practice is extremely unfair to every student of the college.

With a few palpable exceptions, the faculty should certainly be subjected to the same rules and regulations as the students.

Let Freedom Ring

During the past few weeks there has been some criticism regarding several of the articles written for the local news publication. Certainly, any constructive criticism is appreciated by the editorial staff, in the realization that this is one step in the correction of the admitted failings of the past.

However, let us remember, that the Echo caters to the entire student body and not to just one group or factional interest. Then, again, much of the complaint seems to have a personal rather than real foundation.

In other words, the story seems to be this: no matter how hard one may try, he or she cannot please some of the people any of the time.

Congratulations!

During the week of March 25—April 1, the local chapter of Pi Kappa Delta will be host to the national convention of this honorary fraternity. This group will convene in the nearby city of Knoxville, and all factors seem to indicate that it will be the largest student convention ever to be held south of the Mason-Dixon line.

It is a real honor that the Maryville branch of the fraternity should be chosen as the host chapter—an honor which comes chiefly as a result of an outstanding reputation built up by the local coaching staff through the successful participation in intercollegiate forensic contests during the past several years. To obtain this excellent reputation and to receive such an honor, we say—Congratulations!

Since there are only 229 more shopping days until the presidential election, and since this institution, as a whole, has lost practically all contact with the political situation of the present day and of the past few years, it would be well, before we elect Roosevelt to serve his third term, to review the most important national events of his past terms, giving special attention to those aspects which have had most influence on American civilization and culture:

1932—Franklin was elected president of the united States.
Photoelectric cell was utilized in timing the swing of a golf club.
Herbert Hoover opened the Christmas Seal sale.

1933—Old American Ford raced new Russian product from Moscow to the Karakorum Desert and back.
Franklin conducted a question and answer column in the Woman's Home Companion.
The Central Council of the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching announced as its goal a "Lynchless South."

1934—Hogs sold for $6.85.
Ely Culbertson headed the United States bridge team in London. He won.
Franklin's terrier was given the No. 1 Washington dog license.
The largest hats were worn since the European war.
The Peggy Warne Chapter of the D.A.R. dedicated a tablet in honor of eleven soldiers of the Revolution.

1935—Robert Taylor stars in "Crime Does Not Pay."
The Music Went Round.
Franklin fished off the coast of Florida.
Skirts went down.

1936—Yankees won the World Series.
Eleanor's car broke down in Dyer Brook, Maine.
GWTW was published.
The Literary Digest conducted a poll on the 1936 presidential election.
Dorothy Lamour's sarong made headlines.

1937—Literary Digest went out of circulation.
Jimmy was initiated into the Royal Order of the Moose.
Baldwin had lights all night.
Skirts went up.

1938—Franklin headed the National Committee sponsoring High School Students Textile Design contest.
Hedy Lamarr necessitates asbestos theater tickets.
Maryville college amended the Constitution and modified rule 32 to permit afternoon dating, (confined to central area of the campus and the business section of Maryville).
Skirts went up.

1939—The Dopeys came.
The Chatterbox opened.
Eleanor takes the Todhunter School to visit Ellis Island.
The Ministers defeated the Lawyers.
Here and there—????
Skirts went up.

Republicans In 1940

GUEST COLUMNIST: J. EDWARD THOMAS

There are rumors in the air that 1940 is a presidential election year, and with that in view this column has asked the Echo's managing editor and political observer to discuss this week the Republican part in the campaign and election.

In national politics, Mr. Thomas classes himself as a conservative Republican; in local politics his sympathies are likewise on the side of open and clean elections. He is a junior and a political science major.

In a subsequent issue we will have a guest columnist to bring out the part of the Democrats in the election this year. We are not planning to have Socialists or Prohibitionists defend their positions, but if the demand is strong enough we might find representatives of these parties who would like to contribute.

As the time for the party conventions approaches, the third term question draws more and more public attention toward the Democratic side of the political battle, but to many expert observers as well as to rank and file party members, the choice of a Republican standard bearer is no less interesting and no less speculative. The active interest shown in the nomination by a number of Republican leaders is probably due to greater confidence in the chance for a GOP victory than has existed in any campaign since the beginning of the New Deal regime. Their reasoning is not hard to follow. For three successive campaigns, 1932, 1934, and 1936, the Democrats won smashing victories, but in 1938 the chain was broken, and even the magic radio voice of Roosevelt did not succeed in the defeating the conservative opponents of New Dealism. To the Republican looking for a ray of light, the gains of the 1938 election and the vigorous congressional opposition to administration proposals which followed it can have but one meaning—public opinion has taken a conservative turn, and the 1940 campaign is worth some active fighting.

Among the prospective Republican candidates, Dewey of New York and Taft of Ohio outrank all others in glamorous appeal to public attention. They lead all the polls taken among the rank and file of party voters, but among the more professional politicians and more expert observers they do not monopolize attention. Neither of them has had much experience in national politics, and neither of them has as yet won the approval of the "inside" men who in reality rule the conventions and pick the candidates.

According to a recent poll taken by LIFE magazine in the United States Senate, the senators of both parties voted two to one that Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan will be the Republican nominee for the presidency. In 1938 James A. Farley, well-known for his ability to forecast election results as well as determine them, singled him out as the "Republican to beat in 1940". He has not yet announced as an official candidate, but it is a well known fact that he wants the nomination and that he has an organization working in his behalf. He apparently has confidence enough in the weakness of his opponents to believe he can be nominated with the additional political advantage of appearing to be drafted. However, some of the senator's friends have pointed out, in urging him to announce, that it was this kind of strategy that caused him to lose the 1936 nomination.

Vandenberg has had twelve years experience in national politics, and this along with his 22 years as a journalist has given him a broad understanding of national and international affairs which his younger rivals cannot have received.

He is an effective speaker and a debater much feared by administration leaders. Among senate leaders he has acquired the reputation of being able to force administration changes in policy by merely "taking aim". Last year he conducted a publicity campaign which resulted in a revision of the Social Security Law, and this year, although he lost his fight in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, it was a Vandenberg resolution that brought about the change in American policy toward Japan. As the convention date approaches the veteran senator from Michigan is likely to figure more and more prominently as the man to lead the GOP in the 1940 campaign.

With the war in Europe, international affairs will no doubt influence 1940 campaign issues, although as yet neither side has been able to evolve a clear-cut issue from the situation. The contest over the revision of the neutrality law did not follow strict party line, although the administration definitely tried to force it as an issue. Both sides spare no ink and no breath in declaring their intention of keeping America out of the conflict, but there may be some argument about the method for doing it. The main issue of the campaign will be the economic program of the New Deal just as it was in 1936. The Republicans have already begun centering their attack around the theory that experimentation, over-regulation, and wasteful spending have retarded the return of prosperity, using as proof the 44 billion dollar national debt against 10 million men still unemployed.

TALK OF THE WEEK . By Arlene Phelps

Selection of Portfolio Prints Exhibit Here

A selection of 21 portfolio prints, circulated by the American Federation of Arts, will be exhibited in the Baker Art gallery, second floor Anderson Annex, from March 20 to 28. These prints are representative of contemporary art and are the work of recognized American artists. The gallery will be open every day except Sunday, from one to five, and is available to everyone, free of charge. By arrangement with Miss Virginia Purinton, groups may view the pictures evenings, and, if desired, Miss Purinton will give brief talks about the prints.

Such artists as Winslow Homer, William Glackens, Ernest Fiene, Henry O. Poor, are represented. For a complete list of the painters represented: Henry Kellar, Millard Sheets, Franklin Watkins, Maurice Sterne, George Luks, Edward Bruce, Henry Lee McFee, Leon Kroll, Charles Burchfield, Edward Hopper, William Gropper, David McCosh, Adolph Borie, Jon Corbino, Stephen Etnier, and Cameron Booth.

Winslow Homer, whose "Turtle Pond" we shall have, was born in 1830 in Boston. He early developed an interest in art, which was temporarily interrupted by the Civil War in which he served. He has produced innumerable pictures, the best known of which are his ocean views.

William J. Glackens has said of him by Forbes Watson: "For those who enjoy good painting, intrinsic color, a singing wonder in the artist's vision, Glackens will always give special pleasure.....And though his painting tradition is French, his point of view is purely American."

Leon Kroll, whose "A Farm in Maine" we shall have, has "an art of sound discipline, a painting that is often grandly designed and always soigne", according to Frances W. Lane.

Copies of those prints may be ordered singly at 80c mounted, and 60c unmounted. The matted size is 14x17 inches. The price for the entire set, unmatted, is $9.50.

THE HIGHLAND ECHO MARCH 16, 1940

SPORT ECHOES

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

Coach Thrower's cinderburners have been having bad luck since the beginning of their training. Weather has made the track a sea of mud, and to cap that, Coach himself has been out this week—under the weather with flu. Captain Etheredge has been putting the boys through their calisthenics and laps. No sprinting or fast running has been attempted at all, so that the weaknesses from graduation are still in the dark. Five or six dash men—frosh and upperclassmen hopefuls, look good at kneebends. In the search for hurdlers, Coach has unearthed Jack Proffitt, who has the reputation at least, of being the fastest man on the campus.

This year's tennis team is setting a precedent in beginning an early season with a tennis clinic under the supervision of the National Lawn Tennis association. Coach Fischbach has great plans for his proteges, including a shot at a state title for singles or doubles. Maryville did not enter last year. Frank Morrow, who returns to the court for Maryville, looks good for another number one position, which he held perenially before he went to Auburn last year. Paul Akana is vastly improved, from a summer under the instruction of a former Davis cup player. Paul was last year's number one. Kidder, as well as Morgan and McKinnon, will be missing from last year's team. Dave and "Baby" Baird are two athletes Coach Thrower has received from other teams for his track team.

Gym practice and sloppy weather are also hampering the baseball team. Coach Honaker hasn't been able to get much practice for his fast approaching season. An exceptionally large group of pitchers is out this year. Wilburn, who assures himself a berth with hitting and pitching; Scot Honaker, a fielder and pitcher, Short, Seiber, Hooker and Copeland finish out the mound aspirants. Harold Copeland returns after an idle year, looking good. He played both his freshman and sophomore years. Cragan and Russell are having a neck and neck fight for the first sack. Cragan is stronger at the plate, and Russell in the field. Headrick, who hit over 400 last year, and Hughes, Shelfer, Kindred and McGaha make up a mighty heavy hitting lineup.

Paul Akana, who has taken an outstanding part in presenting novelties in past carnivals takes over the entire show this year, and completely revolutionizes it. He is emphasizing an amazon effect with myriads of girls, which is pretty swell. The water queen's debut will be worth the carnival admission. The proceeds, as always, are for the team's expenses during the season. The splashers finished up their season with two victories on their trip. Important in both, were seniors Crane, Heydinger and Ritzman; all three of these boys won their last race in college competition.

Interclass athletics are taking a more important role in college extracurriculars than ever before. The big football season taken by the seniors in the Thanksgiving classic, and the addition of volleyball, won by the juniors, started things off. Wednesday night the juniors staged a surprise in taking the seniors in the basketball playoff. The seniors won the first half and the juniors came back to win out in the second. Jimmy Rae is one big reason the seniors slipped. Wrestling is being run now, and the juniors look mighty good again. In the coming swimming meet Tommy Taylor will be a big weapon in giving the juniors a clinching of the interclass championship, if all goes according to the dope.

Interclass Sports

In the YMCA wrestling tournament, the semi-finalists have been selected for class elimination on Tuesday evening. This semi-final will be held between the freshmen and juniors, and between the sophomores and seniors.

Each entry must meet the three-pound weight allowance at the weigh-in before the matches. Captains Steve Amos, Gordon Findlay, George Howard, and Bill Sweeney have announced these class winners in order of their increasing weights: Seniors: Bill Mooney, J. N. Badgett, Harold Copeland, Bob Short, Howard Lamon, Cliff Procter, and E. B. Smith; Juniors: Floyd Green, Bill Felknor, Paul Akana, J. D. Hughes, Lamar Russell, Pete Peterson, and Howard Dizney; Sophs: uncompleted; Frosh: Slaton, Art Yonker, Smith, Guhl, Rees-Jones, Enrico Scapellati, and Ferguson.

The final match of the tourney between the two winning teams will be held on the canvas of the Alumni gym, March 22.

The interclass swimming meet will be on March 30, for both men and women class teams. The winning men's team will be presented a cup by the YMCA, and the members of the winning girls' team will receive prizes.

The YMCA will stage these events: 150 yd. medley, 50 yd. freestyle; 100 yd. freestyle, 300 yd. freestyle, 100 yd. breast, 100 yd. back, 200 yd. relay, diving, mixed relay.

Six events are offered by the YWCA: 75 yd. medley, 50 yd. back, 50 yd. free style, 50 yd. breast, 100 yd. freestyle relay, mixed middel distance relay.

In the final interclass basketball game played on Wednesday evening, the juniors edged out the seniors by a score of 22-18. The seniors and juniors were in the finals by virtue of having won the first and second half titles respectively.

Although the seniors lost one of their most valuable men in Jimmy Rae, another senior, Junior Herrick, was the most outstanding man in the game.

The victory for the juniors gives them titles in volleyball and basketball against the seniors' football championship.

Majoress Bowes To Broadcast At Theta

Majoress Bowes, D. J. Taylor, has Maryville as her honor city tomorrow evening. She will broadcast at 6:30 from the studio of Theta Epsilon, the sponsors of the program. A special amateur program has been arranged with the assistance of Margaret Ash and Kitty Bennett, program secretaries of Theta who have worked with Majoress Taylor in getting a group of amateurs from Maryville college.

To be heard on the amateur program are: Dave Hall and John Ballenger in a comic skit; Helen Wilhoit, song and dance; Carol Barber, song; "Ickie" Harden, tap-dance; Lucette de Barritt, piano solo; Hester and Aura Santiago, May Persing, play; Lois Thorson, reading; Terry Jones, song; and Nan Wood.

USLA To Hold Tennis Clinic Here

Because of a shortage in competent tennis instruction throughout America, particularly in the sparsely settled areas, the United States Lawn Tennis association has, adopted the tennis clinic idea from Dr. William P. Jacobs, president of Presbyterian college, Clinton, South Carolina.

Dr. Jacobs, a great lover of tennis and an enthusiastic player, was discouraged by the apparent lack of progress which the South was making in the sport and in the commercialism that was developing in the game over the nation. In 1936, the first year of the new "youth movement" in tennis, fifty players from high schools and colleges throughout the South were invited to Clinton for special training and courses in sportsmanship under leading professional instructors.

After the highly favorable report of the representative from the USLTA, the organization established a national tennis clinic committee with Dr. Jacobs as its chairman, for the purpose of establishing similar clinics all over the nation.

The clinic in Maryville will be held Thursday, March 28, from 2 to 4 o'clock on the Memorial courts. Although circumstances have arisen which make it impossible for Walter Senior to be here, Mr. John Shostrom of Chicago, a former Big Ten Conference champion and an excellent tennis teacher, will be in charge. Balls and other necessaries will be furnished to all who are interested.

Quoting from his letter to Coach Fischbach, D. Manker Patten of the Southern Lawn Tennis Association said, "I want to emphasize that this clinic is for the benefit of all of your students who are at all interested in tennis, and if in addition you wish to invite any one from the high schools, that will be fine."

Concord College Downs Tankmen

At Athens, West Virginia, last Thursday evening the Scottie splashers bowed to the Concord State Teacher mermen by a count of 18-57. This trip of 400 miles was the longest and most extensive ever taken by the Highlanders.

Paul Akana took Maryville's only first place in the meet with a time of 3:5.2 minutes in the 200 yard breaststroke. Frank Cross was high scorer for the Fischmen, with 7 points, followed by Akana with 5 and Lee with 3.

Baseball Starts In Girls' Point System

Baseball practice continues in the semi-weekly practice periods of the point systemers. On Thursday the volleyball tournament winners, the junior-senior team, played an independent boys' team, being defeated by a score of 64-11.

The college swimmers came back in their final two meets to beat Eastern Kentucky and Morehead Teachers. Eastern was beaten by a 50-25 score here, and was overcome in their own pool, 38-37. Morehead was downed in a 61 point barrage by the Scotties in the finale.

Meeting Eastern on last Friday night after an 11-hour drive from Concord of West Virginia, Maryville downed the fighting host mermen after leading from the first relay. Maryville copped four first places; Cross in the 220 and 440, Akana in the breast stroke, and Akana, Heydinger, and Findlay in the relay. Dickman took the diving and 100 for the Wildcats, for high honors. In the 400 relay, concluding the meet, Dickman of Eastern took an early lead which Maryville constantly cut down, but failed to overcome. Findlay, swimming anchor for the Highlanders, sprinted in to a hairline finish which was given to Eastern. The meet had already been cinched, however.

On the following afternoon, the team went north to Morehead Teachers in the first rivalry between the two teams for several years. Morehead was able to take points only in the 220. The 61-13 score is the highest run up by a Maryville team in recent years. Winners at Morehead for Maryville were Heydinger, Ritzman, Findlay, Lee, Akana, Crane, and Cross. Both relay events were won by Maryville to total eight firsts.

Three seniors concluded illustrious swimming careers. Crane, a four letterman, finishes another big season in totaling more firsts in his four years than any other Maryville diver since swimming started here. Heydinger, with two years at the relays and backstroke, finished his last season with three wins in his last meet. Erwin Ritzman, the third senior swimmer, completes the list of graduating men.

Losing to Tennessee, Clemson, Tusculum, and Concord, the tankmen nevertheless marked up the best record in recent years.

St. Patrick's Day Will Be Observed

Fifteen Best Performers To Be Featured In GWTW Skit

Athenian-Bainonian societies will present a St. Patrick's day program tonight at 6:15 in the Bartlett auditorium. A super-cast of fifteen of Maryville's best performers will give their version of Margaret Mitchell's famous novel, "Gone With the Wind." Several games will be played, and the members of Bainonian will serve refreshments at the close of the program.

With Hilton Wick acting as master of ceremonies, Athenian society presented an "all-freshman" program last week. Helen Airheart gave two readings, "A Mother's Rest Hour" and "Listening to a Radio." Betty Robinson played two piano selections, "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" and "Blue Skies." William Purvis gave a cornet solo from "Il Trovatore", and Perry "Ear-Muffs" Bigham pleased the hearts of jitterbug members with his harmonica rendition of "In The Mood" and the Bonnie Baker special, "Oh, Johnnie, Oh!".

Diminutive Swingster Steals Lime-light At "Professor Quiz" Show

At Alpha Sigma's "Professor Quiz" program last week in Voorhees chapel, Helen Wilhoit stole the show with her rendition of modern swing numbers such as "Oh, Johnnie, Oh!", "In The Mood," "My Prayer", "Maggie", and "God Bless America", that are dear to the hearts of young American "hepcats."

Of seemingly secondary importance to the songs of Miss Wilhoit was the Prof. Quiz program which was won by Theron Etheredge. Mr. Etheredge proved himself an educated person when he won by a slight margin over such well-informed competitors as Glenn McAfee, D. Y. Loehr, Alma Loy, and D. J. Taylor.

The Magill brothers proved themselves versatile as they played several hill-billy, cow-boy, and swing numbers on the piano and "fiddle."

John Magill (no relation to the afore-mentioned brothers), an alumnus of Maryville college, was guest artist. Mr. Magill sang his version of "Mammy's Little Baby Loves Shortnin' Bread," the song that made him famous when he attended Maryville.

Mrs. Snyder Reads Paper At Faculty Club Meeting

On Monday evening at the regular monthly meeting of the Faculty club, Mrs. Grace Pope Snyder, Dean of Women, read a paper entitled "Higher Education for Women Then and Now." This paper began with a brief historical sketch of the education of women in the United States, and enumerated various reasons why women have gone to school in America. Mrs. Snyder pointed out in her paper that in 1837 there were only one hundred women in educational institutions; now there are over half a million women in American colleges and universities. Mrs. Snyder also included in her paper the results of a survey made of the vocational choices and aspirations of the girls of Maryville college.

Kramer and Walker Orate

Last Tuesday afternoon, the Mary Blount chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution met at the home of Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd. Arda Walker and Arnold Kramer gave orations on the program of the afternoon.

Miss Walker's subject was "They Love the Land", a resume of the farmer and his place in the scheme of the country. "Stopping the Clock of Democracy" was the topic of Mr. Kramer's oration and was a discussion of the two party system and its results. These are the subjects that will be used in the national debate tournament in Knoxville later this month.

Members of French Club See Show At Knoxville

On Thursday evening, the French club attended a French picture in Knoxville at the Booth theatre. The group of twenty made the trip in automobiles.

The picture, "Betrayal of Catherine the Great", is a French production with English subtitles and starring Annie Vernay, Suzy Prim and Richard Willm.

One week ago last Thursday, a party went to see the English version of "As You Like It" featuring the famous British stars, Laurence Olivier and Elizabeth Bergner. These films were brought to Knoxville as a yearly feature of the Booth theatre.

Maryville Acts Host To National Pi Kappa Delta Forensic Tournament

College Choir Will Open Program Tomorrow Night At Second Presbyterian Church in Knoxville

KRAMER MILLER PROCTER WALKER

Tomorrow evening the national Pi Kappa Delta forensic convention, to which Maryville college is host, will open with the presentation of a program by Maryville's A Capella choir at the Second Presbyterian church in Knoxville at eight o'clock.

The official welcome of the host school will be given by Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd, president of Maryville college, at the opening meeting of the convention which is to be held at 10:30 Monday morning in the auditorium of Knoxville high school. At that time welcomes will also be made by the mayor of Knoxville and the superintendents of the schools. The convention will last throughout the week of March 24th.

Seven hundred students are expected to attend the convention, representing some 130 colleges and universities scattered through the United States. These representatives to the convention have already begun to arrive and will continue to arrive in Knoxville tomorrow. All are expected to be present for the official opening Monday morning.

Representing Maryville in the speech division of the convention will be Harriet Miller, Arda Walker, Arnold Kramer, and Clifford Procter. These will take part in the debate tournament, the oratorical contests and the extemporaneous speaking events.

Besides the speech representatives, Maryville will be represented by Otto Pflanze in the National Student Senate which is held in connection with the convention. Robert Lamont of Maryville will act as chaplain of the assembly.

Sara Lee Hellums is assistant publicity director of the tournament and will also have charge of the information desk at the convention. Jack Zerwas will help with the student program, substituting for a member of the council who was unable to attend.

Prof. Verton M. Queener, one of the three national councilmen of Pi Kappa Delta, and Prof. A. F. Pieper will officiate in various capacities at the tournament.

Some of the highlights of the tournament will be the trip through the Smoky Mountains, Wednesday evening, followed by dinner at Gatlinburg and the student program and dance. Friday evening the formal banquet of the convention will be held at the Whittle Springs Hotel.

All members of Tennessee Alpha chapter of Pi Kappa Delta at Maryville will assist in welcoming the representatives to the convention and will act in other capacities also. They will attend the Wednesday afternoon and evening programs which are to be presented at Gatlinburg.

This is the first time that the National convention of Pi Kappa Delta has ever been held in Tennessee and it is expected to be the largest student convention of any kind to ever be held south of the Mason-Dixon line. The convention is held this year in Knoxville with Maryville as host chapter in recognition of the outstanding national achievements of Maryville's forensic teams during the past.

Wick And Crawford "M" Book Leaders

Two Members of YWCA Will Be Appointed Soon

Russell Stevenson, president of the YMCA, announced today that he had appointed Henry Wick and Roy Crawford to be editor and business manager respectively of the 1940-41 "M" book. The staff will be completed by appointment of two members of the YWCA by the new president of that organization.

Henry Wick is a sophomore from Scottdale, Pa., and is secretary of Athenian as well as an active member of this year's debating squad. Crawford is a freshman from Maryville who has been active in freshman debating.

The "M" Book is issued annually by the two Christian organizations and contains information about the college which will be of interest and importance to new students. It is composed during the school year, printed early in the summer, and sent by the college to all new students along with the other orientation material. This year's book was edited by Roland Tapp, with Stanley Bird serving as business manager.

New Officers Elected For Alpha Sig Society

At the last meeting of Alpha Sigma society, Joe Etheredge, senior and number one athlete of Maryville college, reviewed sports at Maryville for the four years he has been here. Etheredge took up each phase of the sport, and also named the outstanding Maryville athletes over a four year period.

Last Thursday, in the lobby of Pearsons hall, the last election of the year was held with the following officers being elected: president, Joe Etheredge; vice president, Herschel Pyle; secretary, Douglas Steakley; program secretaries, Kemper Merriam, Richard Watkins, Ted Holman, and Leroy McGaha; sergeant-at-arms, John Baptiste; critics, Lamar Russell and Junior Harrick.

Three IRC Members Attend Conference

Webster, Clark, And Ross Go To Chapel Hill

Three members of the International Relations club are attending the Southeast Conference on International Relations at the University of North Carolina, at Chapel Hill, this week. The conference lasts for three days, from the 21-23.

George Webster, president of the Maryville International Relations club, George B. Clark, and John Ross left Thursday morning and will return sometime Sunday.

The conference will be a series of round table discussions on these subjects: "The European Theatre of War," "Our Neighbors to the South," "Powers and Policies in the Orient," "Economic Facts and Fallacies in America's Policy" and "The Peace of Tomorrow." The major speakers at the conference are Henry F. Grady, under secretary of state, and Dr. Warner Noss, head of the social science department of William and Mary college.

Mr. Grady will speak at the banquet Saturday night. The banquet will be followed by a semi-formal dance that will end the conference. Final Roles Of "Family Portrait" Are Filled

The cast of the Athenian-Bainonian mid-winter, "Family Portrait", has been working enthusiastically on the play for the past week. Clifford Procter has been selected to play the part of James, Dave Hall is to play the part of Eben, and Alice Huddleston will take the part of the little boy, Daniel. These three parts were filled only this week. There are still a few minor roles yet to be filled. Members of the cast have begun to memorize their lines, and the advertising and business staff are making plans for their advertising campaign.

YM Nominees For Presidency Are Evaul And Brown

Kidder, Wick, Tapp, And Baldwin Nominated By Committee

Paul L. Brown of East Waterford, Pa., and Philip O. Evaul of Haddon Heights, N. J., have been nominated for the presidency of the YMCA, it was announced today. Their names, along with the names of nominees for the other offices in the organization, were presented by a nominating committee to the Advisory Board and approved by that body Thursday evening.

For the office of vice president, the candidates are David Kidder and Hilton Wick; for secretary, Charles Baldwin and Roland Tapp; for treasurer, William Baird and Arthur Peterson; and for representatives to the advisory board from the class of 1943, Clyde Brown and Ralph Parvin.

Evaul is business manager of the Chilhowean, president of the Student Volunteers, an athletic director on the YMCA cabinet, and an assistant in biology. Both the candidates will be seniors next year.

Rosalyn Tureck To Appear Here Soon

Critics Proclaim Singer's Outstanding Ability

Rosalyn Tureck, pianist, will appear on the Maryville College Artist Series program April 9th. Originally scheduled for January 26th, the concert was postponed at that time because of poor traveling conditions.

Miss Tureck, it will be recalled, is one of the leading pianists of the country today. It has been said that "Miss Tureck has a wholly admirable technique—clean, fast, and controlled; an intelligent musicianship born of conviction as well as calculation; and attractive simplicity of manner."

This past Sunday, many of the students heard Miss Tureck broadcast with the New York Philharmonic symphony orchestra, and can testify to her ability and popularity. Malcolm Miller, dramatic critic for the Knoxville Journal, points out that "to have accomplished all this at the age of 25 speaks for itself. You will hear a young woman who is destined to become one of the outstanding musicians in America."

Seat reservations must be made through George D. Howell, Maryville college, phone 190-J.

Vice-President Elect Is An Honor Roll Student From Georgia

MARY ORR

On Thursday of this week, the YW CA members of Maryville college held their annual election of new officers for next year. The voting was done in the lobby of Pearsons hall during the afternon and evening.

Mary Orr, a junior from Maryville, was elected president. Miss Orr is vice president of the YW this year, and was the only member of the junior class to be elected to the 1940 "Who's Who." In addition to being activities editor of the 1940 Chilhowean, Miss Orr has been a member of the Highland Echo staff for three years and the student council for two years. The new president, who is the daughter of Dr. H. E. Orr, head of the Bible department of Maryville college, is an English major and a member of the Writer's Workshop. She is also an honor roll student.

Mary Darden of Athens, Georgia, was chosen vice president of YW. Miss Darden, a junior and honor roll student, is a member of the YWCA cabinet this year and was vice president of her sophomore class last year. Besides being a home economics major, she participates in many of the extra-curricular activities on the campus.

For secretary, the YWCA members chose another junior and honor roll student, Lily Pinneo of Newark, N. J. In addition to being secretary of the junior class this year, Miss Pinneo is president of the Nature club and a member of the Student Volunteers cabinet. She was also vice president of her freshman class and program secretary of the Nature club last semester.

"Ah, Wilderness" Chosen For Senior Class Production

Many Successful Stagings Have Been Given By Players

At a class meeting here Friday morning after chapel, the senior class selected Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness," for their dramatic production of the year. "Ah, Wildnerness," which was just recently released for amateur production, has made many successful professional appearances throughout the United States. George M. Cohan and the late Will Rogers, respectively, played the leading role of the father.

The play, a three act comedy with fifteen characters, takes place in the early 1900's. It is a brilliant reconstruction of a typical American Connecticut family who have their share of troubles with the ever present vexing high school youth. This high school senior is considered by all who know him to be a rebel, an incipient anarchist. He reads such works as Swinburne, Shaw, Wilde, and Omar Khayam, each of whom formed his own distinct philosophy. Since this young man violently hates capital of all kinds, his father is greatly worried. There is also the love touch to the story when the young rebel falls in love with a neighbor's daughter. However, everything is finally settled and the father and mother, recalling some of their youthful experiences, remember that they too were once young. All is forgiven and the play ends happily.

George Jean Nathan, dramatic critic, writes that "Ah, Wilderness" is one of O'Neill's best works. "It is as tenderly understanding a retrospective comedy as the modern stage has offered us."

Try-outs for the cast of fifteen will be announced after the Bainonian-Athenian play is produced.

Flannagan Is Notified Of Appointment With Assistant At Virginia

Gordon N. Flannagan, a senior chemistry major, was notified this week of his appointment to the post of graduate assistant in chemistry at the University of Virginia. During part of his time at Maryville, Flannagan served as assistant in physics while working on his major field of chemistry.

The income from such a position is a convenient means by which expenses are paid while the student does work leading to an advanced degree. Flannagan expects to hold the assistantship for the three or more years that he will be working for his Ph.D. in chemistry.

Paul F. Moon, also a senior, a physics major, has recently received a scholarship from the University of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio. This scholarship includes both tuition and laboratory fees and will lead to a Master's degree in physics.

Echo Questionnaire Reveals True Campus Likes—Dislikes

By BETTE UMBACH

Having been assigned to the task of tabulating the results of the Echo questionnaire, and having started the procedure, and having found the process of tabulating and tabulating and tabulating bordering on the lee side of boredom, I came to the very definite conclusion that something had to be done to keep from going to sleep on the job; the show must go on, and all that sort of thing. Almost without knowing it, I began forming a mental picture of each individual who had filled in the blanks I was working on. Ignoring such enlightening answers as "None of your business," "Who cares," "Heaven only knows," "I don't know," and other helpful bits of information, I got most of my ideas from favorite poets and authors.

For instance, the junior boy who prefers Nordhoff and Hall, as my nimble imagination pictures him, probably has a schooner tatooed on his chest, and has secret dreams of some day taking life easy on the isle of Tahiti, surrounded by a throng of admiring (and admired) honey-skinned sarongsters.

Then, the two frosh girls who cater to Carl Sandburg's poetry have minds (freshmen girls do, even though juniors wonder) that rise above the common run of things, transcending common poetic practices to bask in the triumph of mind over meter; they are non-conformists, in a mild sense of the word. Maybe they eat cucumbers with whipped cream on them.

As for the junior boy who likes the poetry of Robinson Jeffers, I stayed awake one night until 11:15, wondering what a cross-section of his mind would be like. And if the freshman boy who likes Dorothy Parker will meet me in front of the college book-

Easter Sunrise Will Be Observed In Amphitheatre

Service Climaxes Passion Week Programs Held This Week

Tomorrow morning at 6:00 the annual Easter Sunrise service will be held in the amphitheatre in the College Woods. This impressive and inspirational program is the climax to the Passion Week services which have been held by the various organizations on the campus. The service is looked forward to, not only by college students but also by many visitors in this locality.

Ceremonies will begin at 4:30 when the band, situated near the center of the campus, will play several of Johann S. Bach's beautiful chorales. As the sun is expected to rise at about 6:00, the service has been set at that hour. If the weather is favorable students will proceed, beginning at 5:30, to the amphitheatre in the woods. During this half hour parts of the band will render more music by echoing each other from different locations in the woods. In case of rain the order of the service will proceed as planned, except that it will be held in Voorhees chapel instead of at the amphitheatre.

The program will consist primarily of music, which will be presented by the combined glee clubs and A Capella choir under the direction of Prof. Ralph R. Colbert, instructor in music. The devotions will be in charge of Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd, college president, and Dr. William P. Stevenson, college pastor. Dr. Lloyd will read the scripture and Dr. Stevenson will give the prayers.

Mr. Colbert announced that the musical part of the ceremonies will be similar to last year's. The opening song will be Lowry's "Low in a Grave He Lay' by the combined glee clubs and A Capella choir. Additional selections will be "The Lord Bless and Keep You" by Lutkin; "Fairest Lord Jesus"; "Hallelujah", Happa Anna Tune, by Sergie; and "Cherubim" song by Bartniansky.

Revising Constitution Proposed At Student Council Monday Night

Amending or revising the constitution was the chief business discussed at the Student Council meeting held Monday evening in Miss Johnson's classroom. The constitution committee gave its report, and after introducing the proposed amendments recommended that the entire constitution be revised.

A lengthy discussion was heard at which time each proposed amendment was considered individually, and voted upon. It was finally decided that the constitution should be revised and made more concise in form. Each proposed amendment was voted to be incorporated into the revamped constitution. The revised constitution will be presented to the council and faculty within a month, and if it is accepted by both, the constitution will be subjected to the vote of the entire student body. Three-fourths of the student body must vote in favor of this constitution if it is to be accepted.

Reports were given concerning the student-faculty meeting of last week. Investigation of extra current charges is underway; attempts are being made to secure a public telephone for the student body (a committee was appointed to see the telephone company); and if a workable plan can be completed, a school hike to the mountains will be held later in the spring. The difficulty is the securing of sufficient transportation for the entire group. If arrangements to transport the entire student body can not be made, the senior class may go on the hike, and

Special Easter Music To Be Featured At Vespers

At the Easter vesper service tomorrow evening several selections of special music are being planned by the Fine Arts department in observance of the season. The service will begin with Miss Davies playing on the organ "Easter Prelude" by Johnson. Other special instrumental music includes "Ave Maria" by Bach-Gounod, to be played backstage by a large group of violins, and the organ solo, "The Bells of St. Anne de Beaupre" from the St. Lawrence Sketches by Russell.

The regular vesper choir will sing Sunday night in Knoxville at the religious service of the Pi Kappa Delta national convention meeting, so a special choir has been formed for this service. It is to be directed by Miss Ruth K. Thompson, instructor in music, and wil sing as its special anthem the Bach chorale, "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring." The selection will feature organ and piano accompaniment.

Dr. K. Hickok To Speak In Wednesday Services

President K. Hickok of Western college, Oxford, Ohio, will be speaker at the Wednesday morning chapel services.

Dr. Hickok, who is widely known as an educator and a religious leader, was formerly professor of mathematics at Hastings college and of biblical literature and history at Wells college in Aurora, N.Y. He has also served as YMCA religious director and pastor of several well-known churches. Since 1931, Dr. Hickok has been president of Western college, a liberal arts college for women.

Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd has been speaker at this institution on several occasions.

Notice

A letter recently received from the census supervisor of this district asks that all students have their parents report them to the census enumerator along with other members of the family.

Let's Organize

During the past few years, ever since women's struggles for suffrage, we have been hearing more and more about women's campus organizations. The organizing of a group for the women of the college is something which has not as yet been instituted at Maryville; but it would be a great step forward if we could have some such organization.

There are several reasons why such a group would be advantageous for this campus. First of all, there is at present no women's organization or group on the Hill which unifies the women into a solid body with the ability to give expression to their ideas and attitudes on various subjects.

Secondly, it would serve to give the town girls and the campus girls a much better chance to get acquainted and to know each other. This last mentioned fact—that town girls and campus girls are not as well acquainted as they could be—is one of long standing and one that should be remedied, and could be, by means of a women's campus organization. Of course, there would be a great deal of work connected with the initiation and institution of such organization. There are innumerable difficulties in the way of its success; but, nevertheless, it would be a progressive institution and one greatly needed at this time.

Books and Erasers

"A bad penny always turns up." So does a marked book. And by that we don't mean one on a forbidden list or "Index." We mean one that some thoughtless, lazy irresponsible person has marked (by pen or pencil) as once having been the property of either an ignorant or careless person. So, for the sake of future students and erasers, take on responsibility, educate yourself and bring paper to class for notes.

Tipsy Doodling

Igor and I were strolling up and down the campus walks the other evening, giving, as far as outward appearances were concerned, little attention to the various couples plastered so collegiately all over the benches. Igor, always the perfect lady, coughed regularly and almost naturally; but even above all that, I was able to catch, for your benefit, a few snatches of conversation, to show you how much some people will put up with just for a twenty-minute date. I relate excerpts to you as they could have been overheard by an innocent mousie living in the tree trunk, by an angelic birdie nesting in the branches, or, if you insist, by an eavesdropper who happened along just as that moment.

Our report is that the first conversation went something like this:

"So he grabs this lady by the hair and she kicks off, then George shoots Lennie in the head and kills him. Then this man sez get off the bus it ain't far and after they walked ten miles this man comes in the bedroom and sez it stinks lemme shoot it and this man sez no don't shoot my dog but he shoots it, then this man socks Lennie in the nose and he sez . . . "

"Wait a minute," begged a somewhat bewildered masculine voice; "arent's you a little mixed up?"

"Huh! It's not me that's mixed up!" she exclaimed. "Is was them dopes that were running the thing. Why right in the middle of the picture they stopped it and showed the cast, and prevues, and Phileo advertisements and stuff."

From around the corner of the building we heard a murmur of soft voices, and creeping up behind that couple we saw two profiles with barely six inches between them; we heard a softly caressing voice as it spoke just above a whisper:

"A dry collodion plate differs from a wet one in having the free silver nitrate washed away."

"Yes, and I find that if then dried and exposed, only a weak, useless image is obtained, as it requires something to take the place of the silver as an absorber of the liberated iodine and bromine," he sighed with deep feeling.

"A serious objection to silver bromide is the fact that it is so much more sensitive to the blue and violet than to the green and red of the spectrum as to give a very false rendering of color values or luminosities. The addition," she continued softly, "of certain dyes makes orthochromatic or isochromatic, just as the . . . "

After jumping an evergreen and crawling under a fence, we attacked the next couple; but they—well, they just weren't talking.

The conversation of the next couple was progressing something like this: He said—

"And then my grandfather on my mother's side left me another million, along with a place in Maine, a Pontiac station wagon, a winter home in Florida, a Hudson convertible, and a yacht. My brother, Harrington, goes to Yale, and the coach wrote Father and said Harrington could easily be the best player on the aerial dart team, but Harrington can't take time off from his studies for such outside activities; and anyway, he had athenopia when he was a baby, and the excessive activity would prove too strenuous. After my sister graduated from Vassar, she married Count Pantewaistie of Kobramonjidhanz . . . "

This couple seemed to have reached the stage of desperation:

"Bubber baby dumpers—budder baby dumpy rumpers—ruddy bunky burpy dunkers—buddy rady bumpy dubbers—dumper daby rubby duddy . . . "

At this point in our investigations, Igor and I, fearing for her sanity and their sanity and my sanity and his sanity and your sanity, went home.

THE COMMENTATOR

Conducted By GEORGE L. HUNT

It scarcely came to the attention of most of us that during the first week in March three well-known figures in American letters passed away. Tuesday, March 4, Hamlin Garland died at his home in Hollywood, and on the following Thursday, Dr. John H. Finley and Edwin Markham both died in New York. All three men are not great writers, but all represent the finest in the literary mind, the appeal to tradition and to standards.

Markham, poet of the people, best known, perhaps, for two poems, "The Man With the Hoe" and "Lincoln, the Man of the People," passed away in his eighty-eighth year and was buried from All-Souls Universalist church, Brooklyn. Dr. William Lyons Phelps of Yale delivered the eulogy. Hamlin Garland, born in Iowa, was author of the Pulitzer Prize winning novel, "The Daughter of the Middle Border," (1921) and of its predecessor "The Son of the Middle Border." He was a native of Iowa and a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

For purely personal reasons, this column is interested in Dr. John H. Finley. The personal reasons are that he was a good Presbyterian and a good journalist, an enviable combination in anyone. At his death he was editor emeritus of the New York Times, having served it previously as editor and having been on its staff since 1921.

Amy Loveman summarizes Dr. Finley in a few short phrases: "a scholar and man of letters, the classicist, and educator whose knowledge was lit by humanity and presented with suavity." His career is marked by signal honors: professor, college president at twenty-eight, New York Commissioner of Education, lecturer, and author. He graduated from Knox college in Galesburg, Illinois, and in his late twenties was made president of his alma mater; later he was president of the College of the City of New York. His other work in education consisted of a professorship at Princeton, the college of which his ancestor, Samuel Finley, had been president.

Dr. Finley had a great interest in the classics and was instrumental in having the Parthenon restored. Another of his hobbies was walking, and around the office of the Times he was well-known among the members of the staff, it being a privilege he reserved for himself of setting the first page of every Sunday edition.

He could well be called "Dr." Finley, for he possessed thirty-one honorary degrees; the most recent was conferred last year by Rollins college in Winter Park, Florida. He was a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters and at one time president of the American Social Science Association, as well as Phi Beta Kappa speaker at Harvard in 1925.

He had religious interests and was an elder in the First Presbyterian church in New York. At his death he was co-chairman of the Sesquicentennial Fund Drive of the U. S. A. Presbyterian church, and he had been a member of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, and at one time, lay delegate to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church.

Another of his interests was writing, especially about the racial groups that make up America. He had published a book, "The French in the Heart of America", and at the time of his death was reading the proof of "The Coming of the Scots."

All these facts simply serve to show the wide interests of Dr. John H. Finley and are presented here with a two-fold purpose. The first is to give information about him, and the second is to pay tribute to a man who was great in his time and the exemplar of what a well-developed personality should be.

TALK OF THE WEEK . By Arlene Phelps

Questionnaire

store Monday morning at 11:20, I'll lend my treasured "Enough Rope" in exchange for a chance at "Not So Deep As A Well." Which reminds me, if whoever has had "After Such Pleasures" out of the library for two years reads this, will you please bring it back?

The three sophomore boys who go for Chaucer have me on some sort of an intellectual fence. I'd like to believe they put old Geoffrey's name down because they really enjoyed the "Canterbury Tales," but my common sense and knowledge of sophomores forces me to toy with the idea that they hoped the answers might leak back to the English department. Why didn't you go on and put Longfellow, fellows; you didn't sign your names, anyway, remember?

The freshman trio who put Byron and spelled it Bryan show a deep appreciation for the heroic dramatics of the master. Might I suggest as an honors work project the influence of the Elsie books on the works of Sherwood Anderson?

When I ran onto this one, I came to the verge of yelling "Hi-yo, Silver!" Seven senior boys like Zane Grey. Shades of the purple sage! I'll bet they do things "pronto."

Now, in my opinion, the four sophomore girls who preferred Margaret Mitchell to all other writers must be pretty plastic. Of course, they're probably pretty pretty, too, but that's neither here nor there. But I suspect they're easily led and follow the common herd to GWTW. On the other hand, it takes a ragged individualist to come bravely to the fore like the senior boy who went to bat for Grace Livingston Hill. That individual probably gets sentimental over the odor of honeysuckle in the spring and likes iced tea and organdy.

No doubt, it was another nature lover who put Wordsworth, and I keep returning to the idea that the senior girl who likes Edna St. Vincent Millay is a sophisticate who, like Millay, burns her candle at both ends and enjoys the light.

There isn't much I can say about the freshman girl who likes Eugene O'Neill. It's a startling discovery and leaves me at a loss for words. Maybe she can answer the question that's been bothering me ever since Dizney brought it up last year: what do the "little formless fears" in "Emperor Jones" look like?

By the time I got to the junior boy and freshman girl who put Edgar Guest as their favorite poet, I could do nothing but quote somewhat haphazardly from Keith Preston:

Lame Byron's verses never limp,
Blind Milton's mind was never dim,
But Edgar Guest writes as he does
Though sound in mind and wind and limb.

Besides tabulating this vital data, all I finally got from all this conjecture was a maddening desire to find out why no one put Euripides for his favorite poet or Harriet Beecher Stowe for his favorite author, or Gracie Allen for president.

Le Cercle Francais met last Wednesday evening in Anderson hall. After a short business meeting, a combined Professor Quiz program and spelling match program was given. Mary Deane Allen won the Professor Quiz contest and Aline Campbell was declared the winner of the spelling match.

Members of the French club and a few prospective members as guests attended the showing of a full length French picture in Knoxville last week.

SPORT ECHOES

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

The baseball team is having a siege of practice games—Bond-Woolf again this Saturday. In spite of a pretty bumpy infield and practically no outdoor practice, the team looks like another Honaker winner. There are plenty of reserves, and power.

"Wellzabubblin" tonight. A cast of fifty will perform in a pageant full of beauty—mermaids, acts, and dancing.

Coach Thrower is having a mighty bad time of it. The flu has held him from the tutelage of his mighty thinly-clads for most of the outdoor practices, and will keep him from much work for a while. In the meantime Steak and Cap'n Etheredge are running time trials.

Gene Craine's "Wellzabubblin" orchestra heads the list of attractions for your entertainment tonight. An all-girl chorus adds sweetness to his liquid music, which carries the theme of the pageant.

As the Davidson meet slips up on the Scotties, Red Kent seems to be hitting mid-season form. He has won everything from the 220 to the two mile at some time in this week's warmups. Watch him—he's a comer. Gene Orr, Maryville all-time great hurdler, is training with the team; his working out of Steakley is something to watch for those who appreciate beautiful form.

The story of Momotaro and his adventures in an aquatic amazon paradise is the theme of "Wellzabubblin"; however, the water carnival wasn't misnamed.

Lamar Russell's banged-up elbow is going to weaken the diamond Highlander's faultless infield. It's setting however, and Russell hopes to be back in shape in ten days or two weeks. Happily the wing turned under during the interclass wrestling was his right, and it won't bother his throwing arm. (Russell's left handed.)

Coach Fischbach and Kitty Bennett star in "Wellzabubblin" interpretive dancing. The varsity swimmers with a mermaid auxiliary add water waltzes, tandem, and spectacular formations to a show studded with original acts.

Speaking of Coach Fischbach, besides dancing, he is coaching what appears to be a headline tennis team. They've had a hard time getting started however, not getting on the courts until Friday. One court has been resurfaced. Coach wants to stress the court rules this year especially on that new court.

Paul Akana, besides producing "Wellzabubblin", has been elected captain of next year's Scotty swimming team. He is a junior who hails from Massachusetts and points east, and we do mean east.

The baseballers, after pounding a strong group of independents last week and today, go into a polishing-up session at the hands of Coach Honaker for Franklin college of Indiana next Friday. The Highlanders beat Franklin last year in a hard game, behind the steady pitching of Scotsman Honaker. Nigger Wilburn will probably get the nod to show them his stuff this year.

Last and very little—the admission price of "Wellzabubblin" is 20 cents Come out and help the swimming team earn its expenses for this season's work. The time is 8:00.

College Swimmers Present "Wellzabubblin" Annual Water Pageant Tonight At Eight

The Maryville varsity swimmers present "Wellzabubblin", this year's edition of the annual water carnival, tonight at 8:00. A cast of fifty will perform in the big water show in producing, not only the customary exhibition of aquatic achievements, but a pageant portraying the adventures of Momotaro in an amazon paradise. The setting is a Japanese island and the underwater kingdom of the sea-goddess. Momotaro, a mortal, is lured away from his worldy cares and remains with the mermaids in the deep, enjoying the pleasures and festivities there, until he again returns home to find himself an old man.

The carnival is being produced by Paul Akana, newly-elected captain of the team, and Coach Fischbach. They are stressing this year, striking effects, and original water antics. The carnival is the largest show ever produced by the college swimmers, and incorporates some 25 girls in what will be an appropriate salute to leap year. Aquatic formations, novelty diving, water waltzes, comedy races, and other breathtaking swimming feats are planned in tonight's pageant. Elaborate scenery will appropriately surround the comely queen and submarine marvels.

The "Wellzabubblin" orchestra, under the direction of Gene Craine, takes an important role, with its liquid waltzes, and rippling rhythm featuring the program, and adding beauty to the pageant. A chorus of college women will add vocal music.

As in past years, the admission charge of 20 cents will go to pay the expenses of the swimming season. Tickets may be purchased in an advance sale at Pearsons hall or at the Bartlett pool door, tonight.

Among the actors and swimmers, will be Paul Akana, producer, Erwin Ritzman, as Momotaro, Gene Craine and his orchestra, with Ruth Johnson swinging the baton, Carol Barbour heading the cast of girls, Jean McCutcheon, Gordon Findlay, Barbara McCutcheon, James Lee, Frank Cross, Virginia Knighton, Tom Mize, and many other mermaids, and varsity swimmers.

Water Carnival Program

SCENE I—"Alone"*—Momotaro and the sea goddess on the beach.

SCENE II—"The Waltz You Saved For Me"—The submarine pageant dance. "The Daring Young Man on the Flying Trapeze"—Diving. "Moonlight and Shadows"—Formation swimming by the girls. "Toy Trumpet"—Calisthenics and formations by the team. "Blue Danube Waltz"—Medley, tandem, and waltz swimming. "Careless", "Gone"—Momotaro's departure for the isle.

SCENE III—"Don't Ever Change"—Momotaro's transfiguration.

Highland Track Men Point For Davidson With First Try-outs

The Maryville State track champions are fast whipping into shape for their first inter-collegiate meet with Davidson college at Davidson, N. C., on April 6. In the absence of Coach Thrower, who is ill, Captain Joe Etheredge and Doug Steakley have been in charge of the daily workouts on the cinder paths.

Home on vacation from the University of North Carolina, Gene Orr, holder of Maryville track records in the 120 yard high hurdles and 220 yard low hurdles, has been tutoring both sprinters and hurdlers in an effort to build capable men for the gaping holes left from last year's title holders.

Preliminary time trials have been staged in each event in preparation for the final trials to be held next week. The eighteen best men in this first serious test will make the Davidson trip.

At this point, the dark-horse of the cinder-burners seems to be Don Kent of Hurley, N. Y. Last year "Red" made the slow evolution from sprints to middle distances to distances, only slightly impressive in any event. However, he startled the dopesters last fall by pacing the field in the five-mile cross country meet with the U-T Vols, only to lose the lead in the final stretch to a U-T man. In Wednesday's trials, he ran a very close second to Davies in the 2-mile run, and he won the 880 yard run in 2 minutes and 19 seconds. On Thursday, he covered the 100 yard dash on the very heels of Etheredge, and he won the 440 yard dash by several yards.

Capt. Joe Etheredge seems a sure shot at the dashes unless a new man can be uncovered to relieve him. If he doesn't have to sprint this year, he will surely better his state high-jump

Franklin College To Be First Foe Of Scot Ball Club

The Maryville Scottie baseball team took to the outside for the first time this week when the skies and the ground cleared sufficiently for the team to be out. The twenty-nine aspirants for the team have been going through a week of shaping up for the game with Bond-Woolf on Saturday.

Coach Honaker has put the men through series of batting and fielding drills since they have come outside after a two week's workout in the gymnasium where the fundamentals were stressed. The pitchers have begun to loosen their pitching arms, although not much stress has been placed on curves or hooks. The batters have been getting their eyes on the ball, while the infielders and outfielders have been snagging the pellets hit to them during fielding practice.

The game with Bond-Woolf last Saturday ended with the score knotted at 10-10 after 8 full innings of play. The game was called because of the cold weather. The Scots tied the score after a big eighth inning.

Next Friday afternoon, the Scotties face their first college competition of the current season, when they face the offerings of Franklin college of Indiana. Last year the Scots tangled with the same college and won by a score of 9-8. Scot Honaker pitched five-hit ball, while his teammates behind him committed twelve errors. Scotty struck out eight batsmen and allowed only two walks.

Maryville should, by all outward appearances, turn out a good baseball team to add to the string of good teams that Coach Honaker has turned out in the past. The pitching staff is exceptionally large this year, with Nig Wilburn forming the nucleus of the staff. Supporting him are Bob Short

INTRAMURAL ATHLETICS

In the semi-final interclass wrestling eliminations held Tuesday evening on the canvas in Bartlett hall, the juniors walloped the freshmen, 19-10, and the seniors edged the sophomores, 14.5 to 10.5. The winning teams will meet tonight in the Alumni gym for the championship. A victory for the seniors would give them an even break with the juniors who already have won two titles toward the annual YMCA trophy.

An injury to his right arm forced Lamar Russell to stop the opening bout with Trevor Rees-Jones in the 165 lb. class. Both men had had near falls, and after a double roll, Russell's arm was twisted underneath his body and the muscles were torn. This regular first-baseman on the 1939 baseball team will be on the sidelines as the Honakermen open their schedule next week.

J. D. Hughes, in the 155 lb. event, took three points for the juniors as he gained a near-pin over Ed Ballenger. In the lightweight division, Floyd Green, on a near-fall over Marion Slaton, gave the juniors a slight lead for the first time in the match.

The youngsters regained the lead at 10-6 as Art Yunkers pinned Jack Hulse in 1.14 minutes. Paul Akana ended the brief threat by winning the 145 lb. class in a 5:59 minute fall over frosh Fred Smith. After six minutes of battle in the light heavyweight class, Art Peterson won the nod over "Little" Scapellati to increase the score to 14-10 in favor of the juniors.

The heavyweight battle between "Angel" Ferguson at 245 lbs. and "Baby Face" Dizney at 240 lbs., was the feature attraction of the eliminations. After four minutes of ballet dancing (at Maryville?), Dizney found himself on the top spot from which he waved and laughed confidently at his fellow-juniors. At the timer's one minute warning, however, he started in earnest and in the final seconds, won a fall over Ferguson.

After Clem Hahn relieved Phil Evaul as referee, the sophomore-senior elimination was started. The seniors won the light-weight on a forfeit, and the 135 lb. event between Bill Mooney and Harry Graham ended a draw in two overtime periods.

The 145 pounder, an all-Alabama battle, was won by Harold Copeland after a full six-minute fight with Dave Butler. This victory was decided by a near fall in the final seconds. Bob Short added three points for the upperclassmen on a decision victory over Ira Hodges.

The sophs won the 165 and 175 lb. events as Bob Jackson decisioned Howard Lamon and Cy Scapellati won a near-fall over Cliff Procter. Coming into the heavyweight class, the score

More Players Need For Point System Baseball

Elizabeth Stone, point sytsem manager, wishes to announce to all girls interested in baseball that they are welcome to come out to practices on Monday and Wednesday afternoons on the football field. The junior-senior group practices from 3:00-3:45; the sophomores, from 3:45-4:30; and freshmen, from 4:30-5:15. The junior-seniors are especially in need of players to enter the baseball tournament which will begin early in April.

Swimming tests for all point system girls will be given next week.

Campus Work Progressing On Baseball Field And Road

Work on the campus, which has recently been slowed down by bad weather, is now progressing very satisfactorily.

In the last few days, the men who have been working on the baseball field have done an excellent job of getting the field in condition for the opening of the baseball season. There is much loose dirt around the base paths now; but as soon as it is packed down, the diamond will be in good condition.

Several plantings have been made below the chapel and around the lower boundary of the campus. Soon other plantings will be made around the spot where the old power plant used to stand.

Work on the new road across the campus is progressing steadily now that the weather permits the work to be done. If weather conditions continue to be favorable, this work will soon be completed.

and Paul Seiber from last year's squad, and Harold Copeland, Bob Mair, Carson Brewer, and Les Rock. Copeland is trying a comeback after playing ball for his first two years at Maryville and then laying off a year. The others are freshmen.

The infield situation is well taken care of with J. D. Hughes on third, Scot Honaker on short and T. Etheredge on the keystone sack. The first base situation received a painful setback in the past week when Lamarr Russell was injured while competing in intramural wrestling. His right arm is swollen and will be out of commission for a week. He expects to get back in shape in ten days and again join the squad at that time. Until his return, the initial sack will be guarded by Tommy Cragan. The other players trying out for this post are Bob Lord and Gordon Bennett. Lord has shown up well in practice thus far and shows promise at this post should the present combination fail to click.

Second base has ample aspirants along with T. Etheredge. Bill Sweeney and Ira Hodges are battling for the place. Hodges was a member of last year's squad, while Sweeney is a freshman.

Lloyd Taylor, freshman athlete, is trying for the short stop position, while Jabbo Pierce is alternating between third and short. Scot, along with the entire infield, is a veteran at the post.

At third, Pierce and Christie are the chief contenders for the hot corner. Pierce is a smooth working, diminutive player, who thus far has looked good around that post.

Fred Shelfer is the veteran catcher on the squad, with Walt Starn and Jimmy Witt, along with Horace Justus trying for the replacement job. Starn has been doing a good job of belting the ball in batting practice.

The outfield is again studded with experienced men as Mac McGaha, Chuck Kindred, Bill Headrick, and Nig Wilburn who are back again for another big year. Headrick led the club in batting last year, while Mac and Chuck followed closely behind him.

The team took to the regular infield on Thursday afternoon for the first time this season and the varsity infield looked in mid-season form as they threw the ball with the speed and accuracy of veterans. Although the field is not in tip-top condition, there were but a few errors.

Since the soph heavy failed to appear for his match, Bob Wright was taken from the crowd and entered against E. B. Smith. Although outweighed by thirty pounds, Wright fought a hard battle until he was finally pinned to the mat.

Lineup's for tonight's final—

YW Election

Doris Smith, a sophomore from Cincinnati, Ohio, was elected treasurer. Miss Smith, a member of the Maryville college choir, is the secretary of the women's glee club and a member of the B. G. club.

The current leader of Nu Gamma, Anne Gammon, was elected Nu Gamma chairman. Miss Gammon, who hails from Perry, Missouri, is the secretary of the sophomore class and an honor roll student. She has been a member of the Highland Echo staff for two years, and is now the writer of the popular column, "Exchange."

Thetas Feature Easter

Theta Epsilon interrupts her series of "Majoress Bowes" programs to present an Easter program tonight in Theta hall at 6:15. A pantomime, having its setting at the empty tomb of Christ, and a number of readings make up the program. Those taking part in the program are Lois Thorson, Kathryn Estes, Lura Mae Laughmiller, and Mary Agnes Carter.

German Club Program

A program closely centered around that German comic character, Till Eulenspiegel, is in store for those who attend the German club meeting next Wednesday night at 6:45, in the fine arts studio.

A Richard Strauss symphony, concerning Till; a tone poem, telling of some of Till's pranks; and a skit about Till as the great doctor will all be featured on the program.

record of 6 feet, 1 3-4 inches. Joe hit this mark in a rainstorm in the state meet at Cookeville last spring.

Doug Steakley is showing his smooth form by consistently winning in both of his specialties, the 220 yard and 440 yard dashes. He is also under the special tutelage of Gene Orr for the 220 yard low hurdles.

"Baby" Baird is tops in the list of milers, and in all probability, he will fit nicely into the spikes of "big brother" Weldon. He paced the field in slightly over 5 minutes for the mile in the first test on Wednesday.

Husk, in the hurdles and pole vault, Nicely in the 880 yard run, and Davies in the 2 mile run are among the best men in the running events. Bill Baird, Cecil Tipton, George Morton, and Gene McCurry are the leading men for the field events. From the long list of new men, Heinze, Martz, Kidder, Proffitt, and Coulter are the most outstanding.

Men out for the following events are: dashes: Etheredge, Lloyd, Steakley, Kent, Purvis, Heinze, Coulter, and Huff; middle distances: Steakley, Kidder, Lyons, Proffitt, Kent, Martz, Miller, Clear, Pemberton, Thompson, Ballenger, and Watkins; distances: B. Baird, Kent, Davies, Green, Nicely, Mooney, Ballenger, and Foreman; in the hurdles: Steakley, Husk, Proffitt, and Boyd; field events: W. Baird, McCurry, Morton, Tipton, Ferguson; high and broad jumps: Etheredge, B. Baird, Nicely, Husk; pole vault: Husk, B. Baird, and Lequire.

A prize will be given to the owner of the smartest and most attractive hat. Incidental music will be furnished by Lucette de Barritt and the male quartet. Frances John Hellums will be the commentator.

There will be a short business meeting followed by an interesting program.

Lois Alexander Will Be Student Speaker At Service Tomorrow

Among the Easter services tomorrow the YMCA planned a devotional program centering around the spirit of the day. It will be for all college men and will be at the usual hour of 5:00.

The speaker is Lois Ann Alexander, a student who transferred to Maryville this year from Blackburn college. Her subject is "The World Meaning of Easter.

The special music planned is a solo by Ruth Woods, Maryville music major. She will sing "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth," her solo number in the "Messiah" last December.

Millison Leads Ministerials

On Monday evening, March 25, at 6:45, the Ministerial association will holds its regular meeting in Athenian hall.

Henry Millison will lead the devotions and James Yunkers will lead the invocation. The meeting will be closed with the benediction by the Rev. Leonard F. Nelson of Knoxville.

each successive senior class will do likewise.

Dormitory government and the formation of a photography club with some place to develop pictures was discussed. A committee was appointed to investigate these suggestions.

Excessive advertising in the Echo was reported upon. The committee stated that the faculty advisor for the Echo told them that the amount of advertising probably would not be so great in the future.

The Social Committee reported a profit of eighty-two dollars and fifty cents ($82.50), as receipts from the marionettes' entertainment, which the committee sponsored earlier in the year. Shuffleboards to be placed on the campus will be bought with this profit.

YM Nominations

ganization and Tapp is serving as one of the athletic directors. The candidates for treasurer are also cabinet members, Baird in charge of fellowship and Peterson in charge of the game room and maintenance of the YM equipment.

The list of candidates was selected by a committee elected by the YMCA cabinet from the cabinet and student group. John Fisher was chairman, with the other members being Charles Orr, Charles Baldwin, Philip Evaul, Percy Martin, Roy Crawford, and Warren Corbett. The election will be held Tuesday, April 2.

A change in the constitution of the organization was recently made, which moved the business meeting of the group up two weeks previous to the annual election of officers instead of on the election day. Accordingly, the annual business meeting was held last Tuesday evening at which time the reports of the president, secretary, and treasurer were read and approved.

Seniors Favor Comprehensives As Opportunity

Blondes And Wide Awake Upperclassmen Favor By 99.999 Pct.

Believe it or not! Nevertheless it's true! Seniors, or at least a majority of them, favor comprehensives. Incomprehensible? Not at all, in view of the reasons given and the good derived therefrom—from the comprehensives, I mean.

How do I know seniors favor comprehensives? I have taken the completest and most thorough census of the senior class, and have found that here at Maryville seniors do appreciate the opportunity to take these comprehensive examinations. At any rate, the percentage for, as percentage versus comprehensives, is very great, approximately 99.999 percent favoring, to be exact. Of course, we could carry this statistical figure out to the fourth or fifth decimal place, but that is a lot of trouble—writing a few more nines just for practice or the sake of argument.

There are at best only a few reasons why one would not favor comprehensives, and of course no broad-minded, wide-awake senior would offer these rather weak and definitely absurd responses to the question of favoring or not favoring comprehensives. At the same time, there are many, many reasons for favoring these final examinations covering three years' work in a major field. Some of these reasons are as follows, quoted, directly, of course, from members of the senior class, most of whom for some strange reason did not wish their names to be revealed.

Said one rather flamboyant and striking-appearing blonde in a desotto voice, "I favor comprehensives because during the years one is an underclassman, the thought of these final exams spurs one on to great heights—in the realm of study, of course. Ah—and then too," she went on, "because of the comprehensives we all do so much more studying every day than we otherwise would. As for review, we know our subjects so well that when review time comes we can go out every night and go over all the periods of world history—or someon'e history—from ancient to medieval, medieval to modern, one period or all periods on one night, of course, and then when the exam itself comes, we aren't scared or bothered even a bit."

Debaters Debated In Debate Lately

Boasting the best squad since 1819, Maryville's debate team had an outstanding intra-mural debate last Sunday evening on the National Phi Kappa Delta debate subject: "Resolved, that congress should furnish chairs to the standing army."

Upholding the affirmative side in the debate were Maryville's own——(can't use his name but he goes with Sally Hellums) and Clifford Procter. ? (he's co-captain of the football team) and Procter were using the Oxford method of debate in which each speaker disregards the speech of his colleague and says what he thinks.

? (who drives a long, black Packard) had a very effective plea in showing how the standing army was robbing poor little babies of milk and how they were crying out to every congressman for support of the bill for chairs. ? (who can usually be found in the lobby of Pearsons during dinner) showed that if soldiers are kept standing how they will wear out more shoe leather. The more shoe leather that is worn out, the more cows that will have to be killed to provide shoe leather.

Mr. Procter, following the Oxford The second speaker of the negative, Miss Miner, presented a trick case, whereby beds instead of chairs were

Reports Rampart and Rumors Running Around That Balfes' "Bohemian Girl" Probably Bigger and More Beautiful Than Past Gilbert and Sullivan Production

Sleep To Be "Order Of Day" This Morning

At a committee meeting held by the authorities of Maryville college, it was decided, after a thorough perusal of Maryville college records, that since there has been no Monday morning chapel for the past two hundred and forty-seven years and three months, a chapel service this morning will be omitted. You may look on the words of these authorities as a reliable report.

Five Possible May Queens Suggested

Beauty And Scholarship Are Qualifications

Last Wednesday night, after due deliberation and thoughtful consideration, figuratively speaking, one of Maryville's numerous nominating committees submitted a list of five girls as nominees for the 1940 May queen. Pat Kennedy, Isabelle Jay, Barbara McCutcheon, Louise Felknor, and Charlotte Moughton were the five selected by the committee.

The stated qualifications for this year's queen are theoretically the same as those of the queen of last spring. Character plays a large part toward the attainment of the chief goal of a Maryville girl. Other factors, however, do play an important part. Scholarship, religious fortitude, and the possibility of future usefulness to business and society are among the other elements which should be considered by the student body before the final vote is polled.

Nominations are to be made from the floor, also, and a good time is expected by all at this meeting of the student body. In all probability, a few amendments to a constitution will be proposed and passed.

It is the duty of every Maryville student to vote for his or her candidate and to conduct himself at the meeting in accordance with the old adage—"You win the one next to you, and I'll win the one next to me."

Mrs. Roosevelt To Visit Campus On One Of Her Numerous Meanderings

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the president, will visit Maryville college on the afternoon and evening of April 5 and will make a tour of the Great Smoky Mountain National Park on the following day.

Mrs. Roosevelt will arrive at the McGhee-Tyson airport at approximately 4:50 by an American Airliner and will come directly to the Maryville campus via the Aluminum Company of America's plants in Alcoa. Mrs. Roosevelt will attend the formal dinner in Pearsons hall preceding the presentation of "The Bohemian Girl" by the Maryville glee clubs and orchestra. She will attend the opera and spend the night as the guest of President Ralph W. Lloyd. Accompanying her will be her private secretary and probably a bodyguard.

Mrs. Roosevelt will speak at Saturday morning chapel service concerning the work of the National Youth Administration and its future. The title of the speech will be "Now Youth Advances" with some light on the NYA as it will be affected by the third term. During the rest of the morning, Mrs. Roosevelt will be in conference with members of the faculty concerning the NYA program and its benefits at Maryville.

Dick "Thaddeus" Woodring Woos And Wins His Woman In Well-loved Opera Here Friday Night At Voorhees

WOODRING WOODS

A mountain will come to Maryville and no fooling, this Friday night. As part of the set for Balfe's The Bohemian Girl", an honest-to-goodness mountain will be built on the stage of Voorhees chapel. As one of the most elaborate sets ever attempted here, it will add immensely (no pun intended) to the effect of the opera, a unique production in Maryville musical history.

And still with all jokes aside, this "Bohemian Girl" is really going to be something to look at and (unlike some women) to listen to. Prof. Colbert says its one of the best loved operas to be sung in English and he should know.

The Prof says why shouldn't we put on an opera this year? We have the cast and the ability all around. Why not? Let's try it. So he did. It's costing a lot more to produce than a Gilbert and Sulivan thing and it's taking about twice as much work for everybody including himself, but he figures it's worth a whack anyway. He wants to see how Maryville will respond to a heavier production for a change. Also he's wondering offhand how those singers can act in heavier roles.

You've all heard some soprano sing "I Dreamt I Dwelt in Marble Halls" (one of the arias from the B.G.) but until you've heard it sung in its proper setting as a part of the story it fits, well, you don't know what you've missed. That tenor solo, "Then You'll Remember Me" comes from the "Girl", too. "The Heart Bowed Down" (you basses know it) is another. Also the chorus, "In the Gypsy's Life." And those are only a few.

Dick Woodring has the lead as Thaddeus. Dick's been singing in Gilbert and Sullivan operas here ever since he came. Matter of fact, he's had the leads for four years straight and played every one splendidly. ("The Mikado", "Iolanthe", "The Sorcerer"). He's carried the drum major's baton with the band for four years stepping. Then he's been tenor soloist with the choir and for the past two years has sung tenor solos in the Messiah. And everything he's done in that line he's worked hard at to make it his best and you know that counts plenty in any performance; so if you think that Dick won't be missed after he graduates this June, you're either a bookworm or a freshman, in which case you better get a new slant on life and hear him Friday night in his final tenor role at Maryville.

Ruth Woods is a senior, too, and there's a girl that anybody, including bookworms and freshmen, can appreciate. Ruth's one sweet girl with one sweet voice and though she plays the part of a villainess Friday, don't be misled by appearances. Ruth's a music major, thank Maryville's lucky stars, who has sung solo parts in the Messiah for the past three years. She

Library Will Remain Open All Night By Act Of Student Council

After many weeks of tedious work, the Student Council has finally persuaded the faculty that their newest brain storm is a good idea. The Council has decided that the library should remain open all night. This plan was conceived in the head of one of the most formost members of the Council and will work on the following basis. It will open at 7:30 a.m. and remain open until 3 p.m. At this time it will close to allow the librarians time to catch up on their sleep. It will open again at 7 p.m. and remain open until 7 a.m. the next morning.

There will be no more dividing the library at night, but men and women may sit where they please. Back in the corner where the museum stands, there will be several dozen cots where students who get locked out may spend the night.

There are several reasons why the Council demanded that this plan be accepted. The first was because so many students complained that their studies were too much for them to get done in the few short hours the library remained open in the evenings. The other reason ties in with the first in that those who complained were the ones who worked (?) during the hours from three to six.

If the plan is successful, the college will adopt it as a permanent regulation.

Law Club Hears Shyster On "Lawyers Are Crooks"

Last Wednesday evening Dr. Skinner Shyster, Dean of Shizzler's Law School, addressed members of the Law club in Bainonian hall on the subject of "Why Not to Be a Lawyer, or If You Are Gonna Be One, What to Expect."

His first point was that all lawyers are crooks (without exception), and all expectant lawyers are even worse. After flippantly slinging this point into the audience, he unfastened his second point: "You can starve easier at other professions."

Dr. Shyster's last remark before he slipped through the curtains and off the stage was: "For these reasons folks, don't be a lawyer, and if you're determined to be one, don't come to Shizzler's Law School. It's the worst of its kind in the country."

Students Demand More Exams Here

Miss Petunia Guzzle Leads Drive For More Exams

Perhaps all of you who read the Echo (and who does) have come to know that when you want to be informed regarding the very latest in the way of news, that the thing to do is to turn through the pages of your most recent Highland Echo. It's just full of stuff and things from the first page through the very last. (Adv.)

This story comes as the result of a long series of rumors and of some indications of violence in regard to a right that students at Maryville college have considered theirs for many years. Undoubtedly most of you know of what I am speaking. The demand for more exams has been a main issue in the meeting of the Student Council and among many secret meetings at various places on the campus for several years. It was not until this school season that the subject became a matter of bitter strife among teachers and students.

Conservative Maryville, having withheld for a number of months now, takes her place among the rebellions of the sundry other institutions of the globe. This was nothing short of predestination, and the cycle could certainly not have been complete without her.

Too, the unusually progressive freshman class must be taken into consideration. Covering everything with a coat of charm by their gay, continental humor, they have succeded in winning practically the whole student body to their lovely ideas. From the first, the freshmen have fought for the most natural of rights—more exams.

Then there is Miss Petunia Guzzle. Miss Guzzle, as you probably know, is the president of the "We Want More Exams" club. Petunia—yes, I think Petunia is what she would have me call her—a transfer student from Madame Voodoo's Junior School of the Dance in Pendergast, North Dakota, came to Maryville last fall to continue her work on the B.A. degree, and is the 'brains' of the whole exam movement. She said, as I inter-

Committee Finds Communist Hotbed

Secret but aboveboard investigations of the Committee on Investigation of Nonbluebook Activities have culminated in the announcement that Maryville college is a hotbed of Communistic activity.

Among other things the investigation, which has been going on since it was found out that the college is in the red, brought out that:

1. History majors studying Karl Marx and the effect of his teachings on the reactionary policy of Emperor Gardeniavelt of Yougoslobber instigated the organization.

2. Dramatic art majors were welcomed and told to turn ministerial and use soap boxes from which to expound their theories.

3. Chemistry majors were asked to pilfer small amounts of chemicals from which explosives could be made. This plan was carried out to the nth degree until one boy tried to walk nonchalantly out of the lab with a lump of phosphorus in his hip pocket. Literary speaking, he burnt his britches behind him.

4. Psychology majors were welcomed with open arms (girls especially) and authorized to mingle in the crowds and report the effects of the speaker's words.

5. Home economics majors were asked to use their skil in the culinary arts and bake pies which would be used against dissenters. Federal authorities after testing one of these pies have placed the girls under bond until their trial when they will face charges of assault with intent to kill.

The members of this organization

Honor Roll To Be Begun For Lowest Averagers

At a faculty meeting in Memorial hall, last Tuesday night, Dr. Fred Albert Griffitts suggested that honors be given to students with the lowest scholastic averages.

Dr. Griffitts based his suggestion on the five following reasons:

1. The bravery of students who go home to face parents who have previously received the student's report card, and found it to be adorned with five "F's".

2. The helpful extracurricular activities usually carried on by such students.

3. The excellent preservation of text books used by these students.

4. The unselfishness of these students who cut classes in order to be representatives of the college at the various eating and entertainment establishments in town.

5. These students do not congregate in the library and thus cause a crowded condition not conducive to intelligent study by other students.

The meeting was fittingly closed by Dr. Lloyd, who led the faculty in the singing of the low averager's theme song, "Four Little F's and an Itty Bitty D."

Griffitts Runs As Candidate For President

Jo Blow Throws Over The Elephant After Much Disillusion

Dr. Fred Albert Griffitts, popular idol of the women's dormitories, has become the latest candidate to attempt to gain the democratic nomination for the presidency. "Jo Blow" Griffitts announced his candidacy last night after a caucas of his leading political advisors convinced hmi that he was the man to "ride the donkey" in 1940.

The latest candidate to "toss his hat in the ring" bases his entire campaign upon two fundamental principles. In the first place, the would-be-president has at long last realized a major mistake: he admits that he has been traveling in the dark for the past 37 years on the republican elephant and is willing to make amends by attempting to "match ears" with the democratic donkey.

The other fundamental principle underlying the Griffitts' campaign propaganda is that this man of the pee-pul is really one of the "smart young men" of the country. Exhibit A submitted as evidence under this point is that Freddie received his Ph.D. in less than a year's time, while it takes some folks from three to five years.

The East Tennessean's campaign promises to produce more than a pipe-dream victory, as shown by a recent poll taken by Mr. Gallup. The connatation that most Americans have in regard to Dr. F. A. Griffitts is that of a typical homespun mountaineer. He hails from Philadelphia, Tenn., which is between Loudon and Sweetwater on the Dixie (national anthem) highway. "Jo Blow's" ancestors are pure old American stock, and have been running turkey farms ever since 1819. All of these seemingly trivial factors have a definite appeal to most Americans—both Democrats and negroes.

Then, too, Griffitts promises to run the third termites out of Washington, and this will go a long way toward "swinging" that large group of old-fashioned conservatives.

To yet another class of people—the women voters—this perfect candidate would have a decided appeal. In the past, women have usually voted as

Notebooks Banned From All Classes By Faculty; Students Protest Action

The Secretary of War announced tonight that he did not believe it would be necessary to call out the militia to settle the confusion roused here by a history-making decree passed by the college faculty. The professors have banned notebooks from all classes. And naturally the students are up in arms about it—they can't be deprived of their pleasure that way. No longer will they have a chance to lug the darling things to class; never again can they experience the exciting pleasure of trying to squeeze them in the chapel hymnal racks, the thrill of balancing an umbrella on them on rainy days, and more important, the fascination of drawing artistic masterpieces of portraits in them during lecture period.

Another prof viewed it from an economic standpoint; he would hate to have some worthy student be deprived of a college education by having to purchase and continually replenish his supply of notebook materials. The students, of course, knew that they would now have no incentive to go to town and in revenge marched down en masse at night and bought out all the notebooks in town. So there, too. (And Little Audrey laughed and laughed, 'cause she knew that Proffitt's would profit.)

A third instructor was pained with seeing only the tops of his students' heads. The absorbed and expectant

We Want More Rules!

Tipsy Doodling

We're here again, folks with a welcome to this day of days, APRIL FOOL'S.

We hear from very reliable sources this week that the senior class will produce "Gone With the Wind" as the climax of their four years at college. John Wintermute, chairman of the play committee, announced that the choice was not a difficult one since the senior class did not present the problem of casting that had been found in Hollywood—there are fifty Scarlett O'Haras here.

Those two well-known couples of Akana and Carter and Astles and Abel seem to have been mixing it up a bit this week and we are wondering what's up. We've actually seen Paul with Anne several times and the same goes for Jane and Johnnie.

George Hunt and Helen Bewley seem to be back in happy spirits again. We became really worried about them last week—they looked so forlorn and lonesome. Now that their visitors are gone they are full of joy once more.

We hear that Russ and Charlie are determined not to go to Pittsburgh again. They just can't bear the thought of leaving their girls here just for a short week—and with mere acquaintances.

Ruth Green and Dick Woodring made a statement that has been expected for many months by all who know them. They denied any rumors of romance and stated "We are just good friends."

Lyn Tyndall, attired in a becoming cerise tailored suit, and open-toed sandals and chartreuse accessories, accompanied her parents to the McGhee-Tyson airport where they hopped a plane for San Diego. Miss Tyndall, who suffers acute air-sickness, will follow by trailer.

The Y stores are doing a rushing business these days. Ice cream cones have gone up to ten cents and everyone is rushing to get them.

Clyde Brown states that the announcement of his engagement in the Echo last week was false. He has been married for two months.

Nan Wood has formed a sewing club for all these stay-at-home girls who rarely get out and have fun. The club has as its project the knitting of socks for those poor active souls who wear them out so fast.

Arlene Phelps, Sara Lee Hellums, Jeanne Stringham, and Mary Ruth Copeland have formed an Old Maid's circle which will meet every night at 6:30. We hear also that Clinkman's Bachelor club is becoming more and more popular.

Memorial and Baldwin girls are forwarding a movement to have all bushes removed from the front of their buildings and they also wish that the 6:40 bell could be rung earlier as they could then send the boys home.

THE COMMENTATOR

Conducted By GEORGE L. HUNT

By FRANKLIN MOORE CROSS

While deeply engrossed in looking at the pictures in the intriguing new Webster's Collegiate Dictionary, Fifth edition, G. and C. Merriam Co., Springfield, Massachusetts, 1939, Copyright 1936, in which you too may find thought-provoking language and beautiful wording, I chanced to come across the word "music." Ah! methought, there's vital material for the Commentator. Letting my imagination make fantastic gyrations, my thoughts fell on—"The Bohemian Girl."

★ ★ ★ ★

THE BOHEMIAN GIRL

Among the feature attractions of the current music season, "Bohemian Girl", initial fiasco of the Highlander operatics, should from the outset, as Shakespeare said, soothe the student breast.

Butch Woodring, local stellarite, takes the "Thaddeus" notch with diminutive damsel, Libby Huddleston, playing opposite. The Woodring-Huddleston combine is supported by such vocal virtuosoes as Ruth Woods, Bass Dave Hall, Corny Cornelius, Louise Allen, and Long Count Birchfiel. The C. D. D.'s are coached by "Two Finger" Colbert, veteran at Maryville.

Two hundred twenty-five pound Gene McCurry acts in an official way as ticket scalper for the classic. The lyrics and arrangements are by Mike Balfe.

As Polonius said in the second scene of the second act of Hamlet, Shakespeare, 1st Folio, 1603, copyright 1603, 83 pages, "brevity is the soul of wit", therefore without so much palaver, I'll give a brief description of the opera and its story. Thaddeus, a young fellow, is dodging some Austrian adversaries, and tears into a gypsy outfit. Hall, as Devilshoof, the leader, and his wife or queen or something, Woods, accepts him. Arline, with Huddleston filling that position, is saved from death and the two play a love set. A bunch of classy hits swamp the opera, and the musical theme is not too technical for fans to follow. It,s big time stuff for Colbert's proteges. The scene of action is a mountain and a fair, and such is appreciated often at Maryville.

The players in the big show are mostly veterans. Butch is a three year man with experience in operettas and varsity roles galore. Libby Ann Huddleston, Ruth Woods, and all the rest have a good record also. The reserves are strong, all of which goes for proof that Maryville can tackle such a tough musical score.

Enough of this plugging, I must be on the usual feature of the column, this week's schedule for the Sunday Evening Hour, sponsored by Ford and Company.

In tonight's symphony hour, the orchestra will be directed by internationally known conductor, Cabski Callovitch, by special permission of the Harlem Civic Symphony orchestra. The soloist will be another outstanding contralto, Mae West. Miss West has been appearing in some of the lighter musicals recently, but her fame remains as great as any of the Metropolitans. Her rich, deep voice, and dramatic impressiveness make her a distinctive artist in her field.

The program follows:

McClellan Symphony in F orchestra
Akana—The Irish Love Song—Orchestra and Miss West
Aero-Rabbioff—On Wings of Song—Orchestra
A. B. Wagner—Schertzo from Reformation Symphony—Callovitch and the orchestra
Dizney—Every Time I Feel the Spirit—first movement—Orchestra
Handel—Bie meir Bist du Schein in A minor—Miss West and orchestra
Ford—Model T symphony in A flat—orchestra
Fish-Bach—Over the Sea Let's Go Men—orchestra
Short talk by Deems Cameroon of the Chevrolet Co.
Irwin—When the Deep Shadows Fall—Miss West and entire company

And thus we have once again a juicy resume of news from the aesthetic realm of music. All these beautiful thoughts, and others even more cultural came from the use of Webster's Collegiate Dictionary. All you need do is take down a dictionary, for there lies everything that goes in making up great literature and many of the arts. If you become proficient in its use, the world is yours.

Mr. Ralph V. Reed, campus composer of crazy cantatas, wishes to announce that he has at his disposal a copy of "How To Write and Publish A Song Hit." Mr. Reed highly recommends this publication and will be glad to answer any questions concerning it. You will find Mr. Reed either on the campus or in his downtown branch near Pistol Creek.

Reed attributes his recent fame as a composer to such popular numbers as "Sweet Bird", "Really Livin'," and "My Red Letter Day."

viewed her in Pearsons lobby last evening.

"I think those old teachers are just too, too horrid. They say that if we win in our 'We Want More Exams' fight, they'll have to have more assistants to grade papers. Nobody will be assistants, so things look awfully blue. But we'll win. O! I know we'll win."

Her eyes filled with tears then, and I felt terrible. She looked so pretty and so helpless. I made up my mind right there that everything within my powers of composition wouldn't be good enough for Petunia.

Boys, you should have seen her, and girls too, for she was dressed for the occasion. Her hat was cherry red, topped with blue birds and miniature chicken salad sandwiches. Her dress was, in brief, a very simple little affair; but she wore no shoes for, as she said, her feet were "just two itt bitsy aches."

"We think", she continued, "that frequent exams bring the student into closer contact with the instructor, and that more exams would be a great factor in promoting better penmanship."

I said that I thought so too, and that it sure was sweet of her to worry her little brain over such a big thing. She said that she didn't care about herself. No! not one bit. Her loyalty was touching, don't you think.

Then Petunia, glancing at her watch, said that she felt that I should go, because there was work to be done on the cause. I said goodbye and made way for one of the several young men who was bidding for my place on the divan.

The exchequer of this organization was formed from the funds acquired from the excessive advertising in the Echo—said excessive advertising amounting to almost 11c and three mills a week (Federal Reserve Bulletin).

The findings of this committee on investigation have been handed in a sealed envelope to the faculty club. At the next meeting of the Writers' Cramp this document will be read and action will be taken by the trustees of this college.

In the meantime all members of this organization are forbidden to attend history classes so that their minds will not be polluted by radical opinions. Also all students are warned to be on the lookout for "The Lady In Red" and any "Men That Come Around."

SPORT ECHOES

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

By GEORGE "CURLY" HUNT

An interesting and engrossing lecture was delivered in the gymnasium of Bartlett hall last Thursday by Mr. John Shostrom of Chicago, a former champion in the Large Decim Conference and a delightful, charming personality. As he demonstrated his grips and the proper way to hit a tennis ball, he appeared in a white shirt, white trousers, white shoes, and a Maryville sweater borrowed from Russell Baldwin who is likewise a delightful, charming personality when you get to know him. His machine was a clever device with a white tennis ball suspended by a cord which ran up through a hook which ran down—oh well, you get the idea. Following his lecture, Mr. Shostrom went out on the courts which adjoin Memorial hall and, with a new net initiated at this time, gave an exhibition match. Balls whizzing back and forth. Morrow returning as fast as Mr. Shostrom hurled them in his direction, high and wide—what a sight it was! With adroit skill both players dodged the drops of rain that provided obstacles to successful performance. It was real tennis weather that day—real indoor tennis.

April 6 is the date set for a track meet with Davidson College, bitter and close rivals of the Maryville sparsely-garbed. The men of the highlands will be handicapped, it is feared, by the loss of Douglas Steakley, editor of the 1940 Chilhowean, handsome, debonair, clever. Mr. Steakley stretched a muscle, shall we say, and will not be able to compete in the encounter with Davidson to the utter distress of all loyal track and field fans. Mr. Steakley is a runner. It is much to be regretted that he will not be competing in the contest, handsome, debonair, and clever as he is.

Harold Copeland, assistant in the library, likes to play baseball. He will perhaps be incapacitated this year because he has broken a rib. When interviewed regarding which rib, Mr. Copeland replied it was one of the series of paired, curved bony or partly cartileginous rods which stiffen the lateral walls of the body of most vertebrates and protect the viscera. (See Webster's New International Dictionary, Merriam Company, Springfield, Massachusetts, 1939, p. 857). He was not in Friday's game with Franklin college, and his loss was keenly felt.

Mr. Paul Akana, who, in case you haven't heard, has recently been elected next year's captain of the tennis team, was, in his modest way, the producer of the extravaganza "Well is bubbling" which was staged successfully in the college pool some weeks ago. He is not very well known around the campus, quiet, unassuming fellow that he is. This column wishes to give him the recognition he so richly deserves. Well-rounded, conscious of his place in life, varied in his interests, a writer of no mean ability and as well as an athlete whose prowess is only exceeded by his generosity, we pause to pay him honor. We say: "A tribute to you, Mr. Akana, a gentleman and a scholar."

The Young Men's Christian Association has conducted an extensive intramural athletic program this year, the latest contribution being interclass swimming for men and women. As we watched the contest last Saturday evening we saw one after another of the disciples of Neptune plunge valiantly into the foaming brine and wend their way with courage to the far end of the pool, returning madly. What was their goal, what the prize? A cup for the men, prizes for the members of the fair sex, but most of all the glow of victory, the confidence that comes when one wins fairly and honestly. Oh, the glory of the battle! It calls to mind a verse from one of our later poets—

I plunged into the pool
Got wet—
But madly did I dash
Forget?
Not I— Not I— Not I—

In this verse note the refrain effect of the last line, and the tone color and sensory imagery present in the words "dash" and "pool." The rime is unusual too, and not a bit forced. Modesty prevents me from naming the poet who, in a mad moment, aided and abetted by the presence of friends, dashed off the above ditty.

Throwermen Ready For Southern Cal Meet In M S Garden

The Maryville National AAU track champions are holding bi-weekly warm-ups in preparation for a "breather" meet with Southern Cal's cinder-burners in Madison Square Garden on April 1. The Scotties will be flown to New York by pilots Lyn Tyndall and Ruth Mack in a chartered WPA transport plane from McGhee-Tyson airport.

In the return trip, the Etheredge-men will drop in at Davidson, N.C., for a practice engagement with little Davidson college. Only the poorer half of the squad will be risked against the home team.

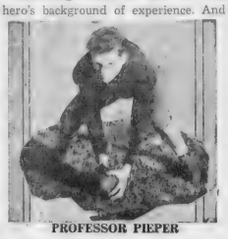
Other important meets in the U. S. will be the return encounter with the Pitt Panthers in the Olympic Coliseum, Los Angeles on April 27, and the annual Penn Relays at Franklin Field, Philadelphia on May 4. As an added attraction in the latter event, the Army-Navy football game was also featured, and was partly influential for the crowd of 100,000 which came to see Maryville's national champions.

In the uncertainty over whether Finland or Russia will hold the 1940 Olympic Games, the Highlander squad has chartered the Grace liner Queen Mary with which they will make a barnstorming tour of colleges and universities in Asia, Africa, Europe, Arctic, and Antarctic. In the event that the games are held in Europe, the tour has been planned so that the squad may participate in them.

Since Jesse Owens set a world record in the 100 yard dash while running before Hitler in 1936, Captain Joe Etheredge expects to knock several seconds from his recent lowering of Owen's record—if he runs in the presence of Joseph Stalin.

Another of Owens' records seems to be in danger. It is well known that Baby Baird can beat the present broad jump record of 27 feet set in 1936. The only essential is that it be given national recognition.

Don Kent, Maryville's one man track team, has been quoted as saying that he has definitely decided to include the pole vault, shot put, and javelin in his field. "Red" has already won the 100 yd. dash in 9.1 seconds, the 220 yd. dash in 20 seconds, the 440 yd. dash in 45 seconds, the half mile in 1:35 minutes, the mile in 3:58 minutes, and the two mile in 8:35 minutes.



Although Doug Steakley suffered a pulled muscle high on the back of his left leg in Wednesday's practice, he will be in condition for the Trojan meet in New York on April 1. In the same meet last year, Doug alone accounted for 15 points.

The following men will take the April Fool's day trip to New York in the Tyndall-Mack "taylor-cub": Etheredge? B. Baird? W. Baird? Husk? Proffitt? Lyons? Boyd? Thompson? Coulter? Butler, Clear, Huff, Smith, Rich, Pemberton, Miller, Martz, Manifold, Ballenger, Purvis, Lloyd, Steakley, Davies, McCurry, Tipton, Lequire, Nicely, Kent, Mooney, Watkins, Heinz, Kidder, Morton, Green, Foreman?

speaking lightly, we mean experience. While attending this institution in his youth, Mr. Pieper became educated in the finer, delicate art of what we humans naively call romance. Coach L. S. Honaker Praises His Diamond Dears After Yankee Fray

Baseball Team Takes Franklin 6-5—No Foolin'

We won!!! The baseball team beat Franklin college, 7-6 on Friday afternoon. Nig Wilburn started for Maryville but the reign of base hits and the rain of drops from the sky forced him from the mound after he had pitched a whale of a ball game.

The score changed hands (at Maryville too) several times before freshman Pierce drove in freshman Reek with the winning run in the ninth inning. Maryville drew first blood when they scored a run in the early innings (before The Rains Came) and tabbed two more later. Then Nig allowed the visitors, with true southern hospitality, to tie the score in one big inning. By this time Coach had torn out the few remaining hairs from his head and Scot, hating to see his dad suffer, let five or six dribble through his legs to help the cause. Walker, the manager, was seen to tear into the locker room for some headache pills for Coach. As usual he brought the wrong pills.

Tommy Cragan tagged the ball hard all day and was the leading man at

"Break up the Yankees!" A familiar cry going on in baseball circles was finally agreed to by the Yankee manager, Joe McCarthy. The job of breaking up "moiderers" row has gone to the Maryville Scotties baseball team which is studded with such colorful stars as Fred (He's always wrong) Shelfer, Nig (who dates Taylor's girl) Wilburn, "T" (Information please) Etheredge, and Lloyd (who dates Wilburn's girl) Taylor.

Chuck Kindred, when interviewed on the possibility of the college team being able to lick the Yanks, drawled, "Yankees, w-h-y it would take ten of those d—— Yankees to beat a southerner. All you have to do is ask Mr. Webster and he will tell you just how superior the southerners are over the Yankees!"

The possible pitching selection for the afternoon of the slaughter will probably be big Nig Wilburn, left-handed pitching sensation for the Orange and Garnet clad (that is if there are enough suits to go around) warriors. Most left handers are supposed to be a little on the screwball side and Nig holds up the tradition. Opposing him will probably be Daffy Lefty Gomez, pitching ace of the champs. After being questioned about the game, Nig admitted that his plan was to "treek" Gomez by hurling his own version of Spanish (ask Nig about his last test) at him.

The game is to be played on the diamond here at Maryville, and if it will skip the bad hops that are be to skip off the infield, the game sh be a good one. Third base and pitcher's mound are the only sm parts of the infield and the only son we can think of offhand for this currence is the fact that Nig and J. Hughes are the working men w fixed up the infield. Need we expla that J. D. and Nig play third and pitch

"T" Etheredge, guardian of the keystone sack and also guardian of Little Dopey, does not fear the Yankees in the least but is afraid that he might blister the champions hands if they try to field some of the terrific drives that come off his bat.

Jabbo Pierce, reserve shortsmith, third baseman, and outfielder takes time out from his occupation of breaking all of the team's brand new bats to say that the Yankees couldn't be any better than Harriman and he played for them. As soon as Nig takes his paternal eye off of his room-mate, Jabbo hopes not only to cut in on Nig's playing the outfield but also on Taylor's and Nig's girl.

Joe DiMaggio, who in case you don't know it plays in the outer gardens for the New York Yankees, has been the only one of the world's champions to venture any sort of a reply to the questions of this reporter snapped, "No spika da Anglish."

From deep in the shortstop post booms the deep, rich voice of Scot (Peg O' My Heart) Honaker. "What's Crosetti got that I haven't got?" Gee, he's got us there. The good looking Tommy Cragan on first yelped over,

INTRAMURAL ATHLETICS

In the final shooting match of the classicst tiddly-winks tournament held Saturday, March 32, on the tables of Pearsons hall, the junior panty-waists annexed their thirteenth A C M Y championship by walloping the senior creampuffs with a score of 1.9 to .80. The victory gives the P. W.'s successive titles in bingo, marbles, and tiddly-winks, and gives them a chance of lifting the intramural mortgage on the Anderson bell by winning one more top-spot in croquet, drop the handkerchief, or hide and go seek. If the freshmen or sophomore bathing beauties should win one of the remaining bone-crushing tourneys, the panty-waists will be assured of a tie without placing in another event.

Because of Coach Fischbach's "coming out" party, the events were changed from the regular order of increasing conductivity to one approved by the Good Housekeeping magazine. The 85-lb. wink division ended in a draw between William Henry Mooney and J. Benjamin Astles as both men failed to hit the circle for a pay-off shot.

Seiichi Akana won the 45 lb. pitching event after he accidentaly inflicted four broken ribs and one fractured leg upon Harold Copeland. Although Harold insisted upon resuming the fun, referee McDaniel's final decision was a forfeit in favor of the panty-waist.

The battle-ship division was won on a perfect hole-in-one-overtime flip by Lenarue Dizney over Elbert Benjamin S. Smith. Although Smith's winks were outweighed by .50 lbs., they never hit no-man's-land until the final round.

Theodore Peterson added his bit for the panty-waists as his mashie shot to the fourth green outdistanced Howard Lamon's wink for 75 lb. honors.

In the middle fifties event between Kenthe Giant Killer Duncan and Alexander Smoly Stevenson, the crowd of 50,000 witnessed the fastest, most exciting match of the whole tourney. Unlike several of the previous bouts, the coal miners hit the starting line together, and for several minutes their winks were pitched and tossed all over the ring. Finally after a marvelous comeback from near-disaster, Alex recovered his composure and calmly took full control of the mound corps.

After 6 minutes of playing time, John David Hughes worked the squeeze play on Willie Short to win the umpire's final nod. This win clinched the victory for the panty-waists.

Even in the overtime period of the baby-weight class, Goo-Goo Green and Boo-Hoo Badgett failed to out-distance each other with the 25 lb. winks. After three hours of intense shooting, the game was called on account of darkness.

also had leads in "Iolanthe" and "The Sorcerer"; and this year, bless my bonnet, she was band sponsor—um-UM. She has talent, charm, and -ersonality enough for anybody's stage. This May she'll give her senior recital. You'll want to hear her then, too.

Louise Allen, another senior, who will play the part of Mary, the mother of Jesus, in "Family Portrait" (adv.) also has a role in this production. Don't forget your books, Louise; remember, you have a date with a diploma. But we do appreciate a person who can sing and act as well as Louise, and she'll be missed as much as Dick and Ruth.

Who isn't graduating anyway?

Well, there's Libby Ann Huddleston for one. Libby Ann has gained a reputation as a coloratura soprano. She's taking the lead of Arline, Thaddeus' lambie- pie. (Thaddeus gets the lucky breaks even in the story.) Libby Ann also played with Dick last year in the "Sorcerer"; and everybody has heard those obligato parts she sings in concerts. Yes, we still have Libby Ann.

And Lynn Birchfiel, a junior, and Dave Hall, a sophomore, are both in the opera. Lynn had a role in "The Sorcerer" and Dave played the part of the Sorcerer in the opera of the same name. This year he's playing Devilshoof. There's a name with a ring to it!

The story is entirely up to date although the opera was first presented nearly a hundred years ago. Poor old Poland was being knocked around and stepped on even then. You might see history in the making Friday night. (To tell the truth, there is dancing in it! Directed by Mrs. Quesener).

Coach Thrower's little girl, Barbara Ann, will take the part of Arline as a child. Isn't that darling?

Incidentally, the director hopes the students will like it. Like it? He hopes they're crazy about it. And that's no April Fool!

the bat for the Scotties. He drove in the first run, socked several well timed hits, broke a bat and T's heart, and made many putouts at the first sack for a good day's work.

Nig forgot he was playing baseball for a split second and cut the prettiest body block on the third sacker ever to be seen on any diamond. Not content with that he tried to use the same tactics on the catcher on the next play, but the catcher used his hands on defense and stopped Nig cold.

Jabbo landed up on second and then decided that that was a good time to count the gallery. Result: the third and final out of the inning and just as the had counted up to 110.

Bob Short went in to relieve Wilburn and did a swell job of getting credit for the first win of the season.

Results of the entire game read: 7 runs, a couple of hits, and a bunch of errors for Maryville. One less run, Walker didn't keep the hits, and no errors for Franklin. We did win though.

and proudly say, "All was not in vain."

It is interesting to watch his style. But, perhaps, it would be better to just comment on his accomplishment. Mr. Pieper was an F.B.I. agent this summer, chief guardian of Miss Temple. Yes, things progressed excellently, favorably to say the least. No one got within fifty feet of Miss Temple with the possible exception of Mr. Pieper. Then came the fall. Tra, la, la, la, la, la, la, la. (In the fall a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of separation, and beginning where he left off when school ended last spring.) Both of our celebrated and honored ones decided that there should be a trial period of separation as a test of something or other. Then came this delightful day! Aw, friends, but how romantically fatal? Shirley popped the question, and Archie blushingly accepted.

The execution has not been definitely set, but it is rumored that it will be held at ten minutes past eight o'clock two weeks hence. The doors will be closed at 8:10, and the teachers will please mark their ballots at once. No recounts will be allowed!

Kentucky Gold Strike By Thomas Estimated About Twenty Billion

Reports were confirmed late Saturday evening that gold had been discovered in Kentucky in amounts hitherto unsurpassed by any other section including Alaska and South Africa.

John Henry Thomas, a farmer, reported the find to government metallurgical experts after turning up several samples on his farm. Assay values put upon the strike were at a minimum of ten billion dollars. Several calculated its value at nearer twenty billion.

Mr. Thomas was plowing Saturday morning when his plow struck several hard objects in quick succession. On looking back, he saw huge pieces of the yellow metal had been uncovered. Upon presenting them at the government metallurgy department, he was told that each piece was pure gold, weighing several pounds. Strangest freak of all in this discovery, was the fact that all were shaped in the form of ingots. A steam shovel was put to work immediately and by nightfall a huge pile of the blocks had been dug from the earth. Fort Knox residents rushed to the scene to congratulate Mr. Thomas on his good fortune.

Mr. Thomas himself has had a severe headache for the past twenty-four hours. "Think of the income tax!" he moans.

"He's got a steady girl friend!"

While this writing has been going on, the Yankees have: taken the field, stole second, run off with a score, grabbed a hot grounder, and picked up a daisy cutter and eight girls' phone numbers. "They're nothing but a bunch of crooks," shouts Walker. Walker is the Scottie manager and he takes excellent care of the boys. The team certainly misses Fergy though.

The batter steps to the platter (pome) and takes a cut at the sphere hurling down at him. In the background one can hear the white molars of Coach Honaker giving way as he gently but definitely bawls McGaha out for cutting at that first ball. Genial Mac smiles and proceeds to cut at the next two in the same manner, runs down the first base line and is waved on frantically by the Coach. Waved on to "Five laps around the big track"!

The weather has finally agreed to act as if it was really spring in Tennessee instead of a winter wonderland. Now if the kite season will only end so a fly ball will not tear through six or seven paper kites all will be fine. The next thing to gripe about is to get rid of those thinly clad track men who are constantly in the way of the baseball players. Every time Coach makes the team take their laps, those darn runners are in the way.

Another factor which smiles upon the Griffitts machine is that its candidate has a reputed ability to draw out on the last card, to fill an inside straight on the last card, and to take his 7up's neat. These considerations will help to carry the votes of the "Evil Old Men" clubs which are now being formed in all parts of these United States.

The Democrats will not go wrong if they nominate Dr. F. A. Griffitts at their Chicago convention next July. Of what more perfect candidate could they dream? Mr. Floonzie, the chairman, answered with the pun, "Mr. Procter is improcter-al", and caused another riot which only ended when the lights blinked.

In spite of the numerous disturbances the debate was rated a success as it forced the vesperites to come to terms and extinguish all lights in the chapel during the sermon.

Mr. Procter says that any who wish to hear the rest of his jokes may come around any night after supper and he will be glad to tell them.

Line Spring Will Again Be Site Of YW-YM Retreat

Cabinets And Officers Of Organizations Hold Program May 4, 5,6

Line Spring, Tennessee, in the Great Smokies, has again been selected as the location for the annual YW-YMCA retreat which will be held May 4, 5, and 6. Cabinets and officers of the two organizations and the Nu Gamma leaders of the YW will participate in the retreat. Miss Katherine Davies and Dr. and Mrs. L. L. Williams will accompany the group as the faculty chaperones.

The retreat which is a long established custom of the Y's has a three fold purpose: fellowship, inspiration, and creative planning. Each year tentative plans are made at the retreat for the following year's work of the two Christian organizations. A regular worship program is followed, and this year the installation of the YM cabinet and officers will be held at one of the evening worship programs. Games, mountain hikes, and plain rest are other activities of the retreat.

The worship programs will follow the theme, "Christ, Our Cornerstone in Leadership." This is in keeping with next year's motto for the Y, "Christ, Our Cornerstone." The principal speaker for retreat will be the Rev. Thomas B. Cowan of Norris, Tennessee, who will speak on the development of self for leadership. Other tentative student speakers will be Vernon Lloyd, Edward Thomas Helen Bewley, Russell Stevenson, and Hilton Wick. Each of these students will speak concerning some phase of Christian leadership.

Approximately seventy people will attend, and buses will leave the campus for Line Spring, near Gatlinburg, Saturday, May 4, at noon. The students will return to the campus the following Monday afternoon.

Choir Makes Two Special Appearances

Members of Maryville college's a capella choir will take part in the regular Sunday morning worship service of the second Presbyterian church of Chattanooga, tomorrow morning. The choir will sing three anthems in the service.

Dr. Robert M. Stimson, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church where the choi ris to appear, is one of the directors of Maryville college.

Monday evening, April 22, members of the choir will go to Knoxville to give a program of secular music for the banquet of the Southeastern Convention of the American Automobile Association. President R. W. Lloyd will act as toastmaster at the banquet and Senator Robert Reynolds of North Carolina, will be the speaker of the evening.

Any freshmen wishing to try-out for a place on the Highland Echo staff for next year may report to the Echo office Tuesday evening at 6:30.

"The Barber of Seville", Battista Eisenberg, Kipnis Here 1940-41

Entire Opera, Superbly Cast, Brilliantly Costumed, Opens Series November 1

The 1940-41 Artists' Series, the 10th of the Series to be brought to Maryville, is one of the most interesting and varied that has been presented at this college. Featured in the Series will be an opera, "The Barber of Seville," a pianist, Joseph Battista, a cellist, Maurice Eisenberg, and a basso, Alexander Kipnis.

The first of the Series, on November 1, will be the "Barber of Seville." The star of the opera is Hilde Reggiani, leading coloratura soprano of the Metropolitan Opera; other leading roles will be taken by Armand Tokatyan, leading tenor of the Metropolitan Opera; Carlos Ramirez, leading baritone, Teatro Colon, Buenos Aires; John Gurney, basso, Metropolitan Opera; Pompilio Malatesta, basso, Metropolitan Opera; Georgia Graves, American contralto; and Brooks Dunbar, tenor of radio and Philadelphia Opera. This is perhaps the only opera that can be presented successfully without an orchestra, so excellent two-piano accompaniments will be provided by the talented conductor, Giuseppe Bamboschek, and an assistant; from 1916 to 1929, Mr. Bamboschek was General Musical Secretary of the Metropolitan Opera. Colorful costumes and attractive settings will add visual appeal to this opera. The scenery, although simple in construction, will be unusually attractive in appearance; it will consist of a set of screens, to be interchangeable for the two scenes required. This is an entire opera production, designed for concert courses, superbly cast, brilliantly costumed, and expertly directed.

A joint concert will be presented December 10 by Joseph Battista and Maurice Eisenberg. Battista, young concert pianist, has been paid the high tribute of being called "an artist people want to hear again." Born in South Philadelphia, he received most of his training in Philadelphia. His entire career has been one of success, his technical brilliance and artistry, extraordinary technique, placing him far above the classification "just another good pianist."

Eisenberg has opened a new vista for the violincello on America by his decision to locate here, rather than in Europe, where he went, in his early twenties, to study, and eventually to rise to one of the foremost world positions of his chosen profession. After studying Germanic traditions and technique in Berlin, and composition in Paris, he was taken as the only student of Pablo Casals. Eisenberg's playing of the classics has influenced the art of many leading cellists, while his conceptions of modern composition are stupendous. He received this praise from the New York Times: "....the superior control of the instrument displayed, was in line with the expertness of this playing in technical and all other aspects..."

Alexander Kipnis, artist of the 1939-40 Series, will present a concert on March 4th. Kipnis, Metropolitan basso, was so well received by the audience of last year, that the management acceded to popular request for his re-engagement.

Music Department Holds Sophomore-Frosh Recital

On Monday afternoon, April 23, at 4:30 the second of three recitals given by the freshmen and sophomores of the music department will be presented in the Fine Arts studio. Appearing on this program will be Eloise McNeeley, Sarah Youngs, Jack Gilmore, and Charlotte Colby, singers; Katherine Crews, violinist; and Floyd Kefauver, Jean White, Janice Graybeal, and Louise Marshall, pianists.

The last of this series of recitals will be held Monday April 29, at 4:30 in the Fine Arts studio.

Pearson's Pick President

Following up a meeting held this week, the women of Pearsons hall will hold a house meeting Monday night to elect a new house president. The nominees for this office, four juniors, are Mary Mildred Hatcher, Marian Kelly, Jean White, and Mary Louise Cooper.

At this meeting a vote will also be taken as to whether to have a spring "open house" or not. Plans will be made then for a Pearsons hall all-day hike and for a supper in the woods.

Study of Honors Work Done By Visiting Prof Of Swarthmore College

On Tuesday, April 16, Maryville college had as its visitor Prof. E. Schero, professor of Greek at Swarthmore college, Swarthmore, Pa. Prof. Schero has been making a study of the honors work done by colleges in Tennessee. Dr. Frank Aydelotte, retiring president of Swarthmore college, is the originator of the honors work system and is now gathering data for the Sachs lectures, a series of three talks on honors work which he will deliver at Columbia University. To the many colleges in the United States which sponsor honors work, Dr. Aydelotte has sent fifteen Swarthmore professors to study the results of honors work. These results will be published in a book after Dr. Aydelotte has given the lectures.

Professor Schero spent part of the day in the library examining the books, records, and reports dealing with honors work done at Maryville. The remainder of the day was spent in interviewing various faculty supervisors and honors work students. Professor Schero seemed to be well pleased with the work done by the seventy-seven Maryville students who have participated in the honors work system since 1932, the year when it was inaugurated at Maryville.

Sophomore Tests Will Be Given During Next Week

On Thursday and Friday afternoons of next week all students classed as sophomores this semester will meet in Voorhees chapel to take the annual sophomore tests. The test on contemporary affairs will be given on Thursday afternoon. On Friday afternoon the English test will be given.

A slight change has been made in the tests this year. Instead of the usual literary acquaintance test, there will be a test on grammar mechanics only. This will include capitalization, mechanics of English, punctuation, grammar, and diction.

The soph test scores will be considered in counciling of individual students and in checking the general achievement of students at Maryville at the end of their second year as compared with the colleges throughout our country.

Second Midwinter "Family Potrait" Receives Acclaim

Allen Gives Outstanding Performance In Production

Last evening in Voorhees chapel, Athenian and Bainonian presented, to a large audience, their mid-winter play, "Family Portrait," a well known modern drama, by Coffee and Cowan. The play concerns the life of Jesus and of his family in their home in Nazareth. Though Christ is the central figure in the play, he does not appear on the stage.

This drama, although only a story, is forceful enough that it brings to many who are apt to think of Jesus as cut off from the usual home ties, the realization that the family of Jesus did exist, and was intimately and individually influenced by his works and manner of living. By such incidents as the loaning of the dishes and the purchasing of the shawl, we are made to see the human side of this family and neighborhood, that we might have overlooked in thinking basically of the divine side of their relationship with Jesus.

Louise Allen, star of the play, gave a superb interpretation of Mary, the mother of Jesus. In her finished performance we see the ability of talent that won for her even greater success than she has formerly won in such productions as "Our Town", "Night Must Fall", and "Pride and Prejudice."

Recognition Ceremonies Of Alpha Gamma Sig Held For New Members

Maryville college's scholastic honorary society Alpha Gamma Sigma held its annual recognition ceremonies this morning in the chapel for the newly elected members. President Ralph W. Lloyd presided, and spoke shortly concerning the history, purpose, and requirements for membership in the society. Dean E. R. Hunter, who is secretary of the organization, then called the newly elected members forward for their recognition.

The speaker of the morning was Archie M. Palmer, president of the University of Chattanooga. This is the fourth successive year that an outstanding speaker has spoken to the newly elected Alpha Gamma Sigma members.

Those chosen this year by the organization were Ruth Abercrombie from Massachusetts; Helen Bewley, Ohio; Ruth Crawford, Maryville; John Fisher, Iran, Asia; Margaret Halsey, Florida; Jane Law, Pennsylvania; Dan Magill, a local student; Ruth Mack, Florida; Harriet Miller, Florida; Thomas Schaffer, Ohio; Margaret Sisk, Maryville; and Arda Walker, also a local student. All of these students have been active in student affairs and have been especially outstanding in their scholastic records.

Theta Alpha Phi Gives New Cyclorama To Stage

The Maryville stage has a new dress, the gift of Theta Alpha Phi, national dramatic fraternity. The cyclorama, the new grey curtain, a 150 watt balcony spot and a large make-up kit have been given by the society.

The curtain was a record in manufacturing history. At three o'clock one afternoon it was still in the bolt and the next morning it was hanging on the stage. John Clark, member of Theta Alpha Phi and recently graduated from Purdue University where he was stage manager, directed the making and hanging of the curtains. The sewing was done in the College Maid Shop after the material had been bought wholesale. There are twelve panels tied to wooden battens, a total of 150 yards. This will greatly simplify staging as it can be used as an entire set or a part of one.

Twelve sections of border lights have been placed overhead and they greatly increase the lighting possibilities. They are in four foot sections and can be operated independently. These were purchased by the maintenance department.

Charlotte Moughton And James Etheredge Reign As Queen-King

QUEEN'S ATTENDANTS

Immortal Shakespeare Play Will Be General Entertainment Theme

Maryville's annual May Day celebration, a traditional spring activity here on the local campus, will begin at 2:00 on the afternoon of May 1st in the college amphitheatre.

Queen Charlotte St. Pierre Moughton, dressed in a lace-bodice, high-neck, flared, white net attire and escorted by senior class president (Dud) James Etheredge as king, will reign over the festivities which will last for approximately two hours and a half.

Action will begin with the entrance of the May Queen and her court before the natural stage. The class attendants will precede the royal pair, the girls wearing net dresses in shades of yellow, pink, or blue, according to the scholastic classification; their escorts, white linen suits. Marching in this order will be: freshman Jean McCutcheon with Dud Moore; Margie Field with Charles Foreman; sophomores, Mary Alice Grubb with Hilton Wick, Rachel McCall with David McDaniel; juniors, Louise Wells with William Baird, Elizabeth Ann Huddleston with Thomas Cragan; maids of honor, Edith Evans and Jane Law, both dressed in aqua and carrying bouquets of deep rose snap-dragons.

The general theme of the entertainment is centered around Shakespeare's now immortal Midsummer Night's Dream. It is certainly fitting that this

Renowned Czech, Novak, To Give Lectures Here

Maryville college is to have as visiting lecturer on Monday and Tuesday, April 22 and 23, Dr. Jaroslav Novak, a Czechoslovakian of wide experience in world affairs and a lecturer of recognized ability.

Dr. Novak was active in the Czechoslovak government from its launching in 1918. He was made secretary in the Prime Minister's office and was a member of the Czechoslovak Peace delegation in Paris. He served in diplomatic posts in Paris, Warsaw, Budapest and New York, and for two years just before the German occupation of Czechoslovakia was Czech envoy in Venezuela, Panama and Costa Rica.

Altogether he has been in the United States eight years and has lectured frequently in leading universities. He comes to Maryville from a week at the Uuniversity of Chattanooga.

He will speak to groups of students twice each day and will speak on Monday evening at 8:00 to a general meeting in the Voorhees chapel under the sponsorship of the college. International Relations Club. The citizens of the community are cordially invited to the meeting at which Dr. Novak will lecture on "The Trend of Russia."

The day-time meetings will be held in the YMCA auditorium in Bartlett hall on Monday at 11:15 a.m. and 3:00 p.m., and on Tuesday at 10:20 a.m. and 1:10 p.m.

Dates May Come And Dates May Go—Only Steadies Know

By CARSON BREWER

We thought you would like some honest-to-goodness first-hand information about this business, commonly termed "dating", that long ago became an established institution at Maryville.

Well, we have the information for you. You furnished it yourself when you filled out the questionnaire recently given you by the Echo.

To skim over the bare facts briefly, here they are: Thirty-one senior girls date. Seventeen of the thirty-one date "steady." Nine of the fourteen senior men who date, date "steady". Everyone of the twenty-five junior girls who date, date "steady." Thirty-six junior men date. Nineteen date "steady." Sixty-three sophomore girls say they date. Twenty-eight of them date "steady". Forty-six sophomore men confess to dating. Twenty-seven of them have "steadies". Eighty-seven freshmen girls unblushingly say they date. Twenty-four date "steady". Fifty-seven freshmen boys date; only eighteen date "steady."

After laboriously doing a bit of arithmetic, we find that 359 Maryville students date. 169 of this number have "steadies."

Now, let us dig into some of the individual answers to the questions. Volumes can be read in some of those short replys.

Let's look first at the junior girl who says she has dated thirty-three of Maryville's magnetic males. I admire that girl, because I think she has a definite purpose in her seeming madness. If she keeps up her first-semester pace until school is out, she will have dated, roughly, sixty fellows. I believe she carefully chooses each of her dates. Thus she can get vital information concerning the datibility of the most promising unattached men. After a quick dive into the flood of next year's freshmen, she will be ready to go into business.

Miles of Smiles Had By All Who See All Smirking Faces

By JEAN BARNES

"There are smiles that make us happy; there are smiles that make us sad." So the old song says. Here on the campus a much greater variety of smiles than just these two kinds can be found. As you turn curiously the pages of the new Chilhowean, you see all types of smiles. When you meet people on the way from one building to another, the greeting of "Hi, hey, hello", or a mere grunt, is accompanied by any one of a number of different facial expressions. Smile, simper, grimace, grin, smirk, or simple quirk of the mouth are all exhibited somewhere. The answers to the question, "Who on the campus has a striking smile?" showed that such smiles are quite abundant.

Someone mentioned Sara Lee Helms' sweet smile, Alfie Davies' "mama's-boy-smile", and John Wintermute's and George Hunt's rare one. Everyone knows Dr. Stevenson's kindly, benignant look. Who hasn't while walking along, happened to meet a sober, thoughtful man and then suddenly experienced the warmth of Dr. Lloyd's Stanley-finding-Livingstone-smile? Miss Hallock is supposed to possess the flickering kind. Mr. Pieper the shy, bashful sort, and Dr. McClelland the friendly-quizzical one. An attractive ear-to-ear grin is said to belong to Stanley Bird; to Miss Dexter an engaging, almost laugh, smile. Many have felt the glow of friendliness in Helen Bewley's, the Ipana-gleam of William Lewis', the demureness of Harriet Miller.

Try to think of the people around you and remembering their smiles (not but what it will make you feel [illegible] floating around in mid-air in your [illegible] Then you can picture the sunniness of Mary Ruth Baker's, the good nature of "D J." What Are Sidewalks For?

Probably it is more from habit than any other reason that we forget to take advantage of one of the provisions of our civilization—well made walks. There are a few students who, instead of walking on the numerously provided and appropriately placed sidewalks, thoughtlessly cut across the lawns. The unsightly paths thus made mar the beauty of our campus. Few of us are in such a great hurry that we cannot take the extra second to go around the corner via the sidewalk. Shall we start for chapel and classes a few minutes earlier and give the grass a sporting chance?

Let's Get Acquainted

In a school the size of Maryville one might suppose that there could be a closer bond of friendship between students and faculty. Many students we know would like to become better acquainted with members of the faculty, but they fear to seem too friendly lest they be accused by their fellow classmates of so-called "apple-polishing". This prevents any advance on the part of the students; and the teachers, having no evidences of any desire of the students for friendship, do not feel that they should presume to take the students' time.

Perhaps an arrangement could be made whereby small groups of faculty and students could make trips into the mountains on Saturday or Sunday afternoons—or perhaps picnics and other informal gatherings could be planned so that students and faculty could become acquainted in a social way.

It does seem that class discussions and lectures would be more interesting both to students and teachers if each knew something of the real personality of the other. The values of companionship, morover, would remain long after lessons are forgotten.

There Are Times—And Times

It is nice to be chatty and companionable, but we have always been under the impression that when one went to hear a speaker or listen to a musical program, the acceptably courteous thing to do was to listen to the program rather than to ones' self. We also thought that one usually went to an enteretainment with the idea of remaining until it was over. Probably it would be less disturbing to the entertainers and to those who are interested in the program if those who would rather hold a tete-a-tete and those who haven't time to listen would remain at home.

So he wrote it, cutting deep,, and like an old witch doctor
Bleeding deep its body, hoping thus to rid it of its malady.
But the choleric figure was too bloody, and it's still spurting.
It will take the sponge of sanity in the hands of a kindly classicist
To stop the blood.
And the novelist has ceased to worry, for the operation paid enough
For him to live forever on.

SENTIMENTALITY

A man making a speech got in tears over
13 stripes of red and white and 48 stars on a blue background of rough muslin.
In his audience a woman held a baby which was pressed close to her as one of her, and sobbed joyfully at what she held in love.
Over by the Legion house an unshaven man upset a rubbish can but found only soggy newspaper, and he cried in his hunger.
In an empty store a man slowly tore up a pack of papers and a photograph, moistened with tears as he threw them in the fire.
And the man making a speech said the 13 stripes and 48 stars were beautiful and the world was beautiful and Laudes Deum.

TALK OF THE WEEK . By Arlene Phelps

Dating

Go into business? Yes. When any of the girls start casting about for a man next year, they won't have to do any research work of their own. They can just amble over to this girl's office and learn anything they wish to know. Not only can she tell them how to get the man but she can also tell them what man to get. She can merely consult her chart and supply the girls with every kind of information from the size of the fellow's pocketbook to his particular style of "laying it on."

Now, suppose we consider the girl who, in answer to the question, "How many different persons have you dated this year"?, replied, "One (on campus)." What's more, she says she dates "steady." From where I sit, it looks as though some fellow is getting the old two-time.

That brings to mind the girl who is trying to remain faithful to the man back home. This is the most baffling creature any hopeful male has ever had the misfortune to become interested in. No matter what extremes the fellow goes to to please this girl, she remains cooly distant and untouchable. The man, not understanding the situation, begins to think there is something wrong with him. He starts to look for means of improving himself. Why, I've known such unfortunate fellows who, in desperation, spent their father's money for everything from Listerine and Lifebuoy to the 1929 publication of "How to Make Love in Ten Easy Lessons." However, the results always remain maddingly the same. Felows, in this case, the deck has already been stacked. You've no more chance than a smoke-ring in a West Indian hurrican.e

And then there is the fellow who answered the question, "Do you date steady"? with, "I want to." Yes, just "I want to." That's all he said. But back of those three pitifully-pathetic words, I can see sadness, heartaches, and bitterness.

This young man says he has dated four different girls this year. Obviously he was unsuccessful in each of these four quests.

I lie awake nights worrying about this rejected young fellow. In my fretful imagination I can see his dejected form moving slowly down to the river-bank. There he pauses. His sweat-streaked face glistens horribly in the pale moonlight. His knees "beat it out" to the rhythm of "How Come You Do Me Like You Do Do Do?" He sees the beauty of the night, but it only increases his feeling of irony. He sings seven verses of "Nobody's Darling." He jumps!

Girls, I implore you! Don't let this happen. Find that young man and do something—anything!

TRACK CHAMPS HIT BIGGEST HURDLE MONDAY

The University of Tennessee with a more powerful array, meets the Scotties in a sea of mud Mon. It won't hurt the powerful fieldmen as much as it will the jumps, dashes, and especially hurdles. Tennessee stands to gain an edge in the field events with a kid who is threatening records—the discus is his pet event. The Scotties with a choice herd of little fellows, haven't got the odds.

Joe Etheredge's amazing versatility may be the Scotties salvation. "Breezer" Andridge bowed to Sutton last year in about 10.2. Captain Joe hit 10.1 against the unfortunate LMU railsplitters, who would have done well to have stayed home an split rails. Etheredge, besides flirting with a 10 flat century, has been going over the decisive 6 foot mark. With better weather he might crack a state mark. A runner and high jumper rolled in one are far between.

Incidentally, besides run, jump, snag passes, and score high points in basketball, Joe plays baseball all summer.

With Steakley in the lineup against Tennessee, the Highlanders are in as sure a position to win, as Steak's leg is to hold out. We hope, however, that with the team intact at last, the cinders will be as hot under their feet as last year.

TENNIS TIDBITS FROM POSSIBLE CHAMPS

The Chattanooga match was rained out yesterday, and the University should have breathed a sigh of relief, for the Scot Courtiers are hot. Four matches on the dust of Memorial have given the Maryville lads first place in the conference and state recognition.

The doubles teams haven't lost a match this year. Morrow and Van Cise are being groomed for the State meet at Chattanooga in May. Maryville's number two team, Akana and Stevenson, who played the number one slot last year, saved the Tennessee fray for the Scot victory bag this year. In the last set of the match, thelads trailed 1-5. Practically unheard of in good competition, the boys rallied and took the next six straight; quite a feat.

Bowers of Teachers who played such a scrappy losing game to Little Kidder last week, is the same Bowers who took all-conference honors at end this year.

Six straight matches keep the team busy away from home until well in May. TPI, who beat Teachers almost as bad as we did, will prove to be the hardest competition. Tennessee again next week won't be a push over for any man's team, however.

SMC BASEBALL COMPETITION STARTS MONDAY

A fifteen game schedule lies in the way of the Scot baseball outfit. It should pan out a highly successful season, with the success they've had thus far in the campaign. Maryville has four games with LMU, the conference title defenders. LMU didn't look so good in the pre-season tangle with Emory and Henry, if pre-season games forecast as much as we wishfully think, that means a lot.

Coach Honaker plans to start Captain "Nig" Wilburn against the Eagles Monday in the outset. "Nig's" games have shown all the stuff we need for a championship pitcher, and Honaker looks like a speedy alternate. A little trouble with a sore arm ought to work out of Nig, as the season really gets under way.

Highlanders Tennis Team Blasts All Opposition; Takes Road This Week

The Maryville tennis team is undefeated in its first four matches this year, taking Tennessee and Teachers this week. The Scottie courtiers downed the Vols 4-3, in the hardest match to be played. The much esteemed and reputedly strengthened team couldn't hold a racquet to the Scotties blasts. Teachers, champions for years of the Smoky Mountain conference dropped completely out of the picture as the Highlanders won easily, 7-0. Teachers took only one set during the entire afternoon.

In the East Tennessee Teachers match Wednesday, Morrow took the lead to set Robinette of the Bucs way back, 6-2, 6-2. Robinette was a member of the State champion doubles combination last year, with Bullington. Bullington, a veteran and one of the top performers for the ex-champs, was lost this year through graduation. Morrow's victory over Robinette showed vastly improved tennis. Those who remember the Scot team of '38, remember that this same Robinette whipped Gillingham in the match which cost Maryville a perfect record in these parts.

Maryville's doubles team continued their string on the undefeated list as Morrow and Van Cise defeated Robinette and Lane 6-4, 6-2. Neither doubles team has been taken, and the number one doubles look like a State championship, if it isn't too early to start making predictions. The State meet comes early in May at Chattanooga.

Maryville hits the road now until May 10th, with six matches, and the state meet in front of them on foreign soil. Today they met TPI at Cookeville, and yesterday Chattanooga. The scores are not in on the Chattanooga match. Next week and the following, Tennessee, Carson-Newman, Teachers and Tusculum afford the opposition, With Tusculum Maryville's only hurdle, they have the best chances to come out on top of the conference heap.

The match with Chattanooga and TPI should prove the hardest along the Scotties' way. Chattanooga's number one man was runner up in the state last year, losing to a Sewanee man. TPI won easily over Teachers 6-1, this season.

Coach Fischbach is well pleased with his team's performances thus far. Unless something happens, this year's netmen should stand out as one of the all-time great teams. Complete results of the Buc-Scot match:

Singles:

Morrow defeated Robinette (ET)—6-2, 6-2.

Akana defeated Lane (ET)—7-5, 6-2.

Van Cise defeated Gross (ET)—6-4, 6-3.

Pratt defeated Rigell (ET)—6-2, 6-3.

Kidder defeated Bowers (ET)—8-6, 6-4.

Doubles:

Morrow and Van Cise defeated Robinette and Lane (ET)—6-4, 6-2.

Akana and Stevenson defeated Bowers and Gross (ET)—6-1, 6-8, 6-2.

Tennessee Topples Honakermen 10-8

On April 16th the Maryville College baseball team traveled to Caswell park in Knoxville to engage the nine from the University of Tennesse. The University took the Scots in camp, edging out a 10-8 win.

Nig Wilburn, in an effort to gain his first win of the current season was chosen by Coach Honaker to start the game for the Scotties. The Vols collected one hit and two runs in the first frame as an error and a batter hit by a pitched ball accounted for the damage done.

The Scotties came back in the second inning when Kindred blasted a long triple to right center to start the inning off with a bang. Headrick then singled to score the first run of the ball game for the visitors. McGaha flied to deep left field and then Starn, who replaced Shelfer in this game, hit into a double play to end the inning.

In their half of the second the Vols pushed four big counters across the platter when Nig showed a bit of wildness and walked three men, and hit a man. Two errors, one by Pierce and one by Hughes, were a big factor in these runs. Nig struck two men out, however, as he returned to his usual form.

The third was a big inning for the Scots and they scored three more runs. Pierce started off the inning by singling and Honaker poled out a double to score him. Wilburn kept the ball rolling and slapped a single to score Scot. The scoring for the inning ended when Nig crossed the plate on a long fly, scoring after the catch. The score thus far read: Maryville 4, Tennessee 6.

There was no more scoring for either side until the fifth when the Scots scored another run as Pierce walked and stole second, and then after Honaker struck out, scored on Wilburn's single. This ended the scoring for the Scots as Hughes grounded out, Cragan drew a base on balls, and Kindred struck out to end the inning.

The U-T nine scored in the fifth also on a single by Devins and a double by O'Neil. They scored again in the sixth, when Hughes committed another error, the man was sacrificed to second and finally scored on an infield out. The Vols scored again in the seventh when Bevins tripled and scored on a long fly.

The Orange and Garnet scored in the eighth. Hughes, first man up, grounded out, and Cragan did likewise. With two gone, Kindred drew a free trip to first, and Headrick reached the first sack via the same route. Shelfer pinch hitting for McGaha, proved himself the man for the occasion and blasted out a booming double to right field to score both men. Starn came through with a timely single to score Shelfer with the last tally for the Scots.

The Scotties collected a total of ten hits off of the offerings of O'Neil, and Nig and Hooker allowed only seven bingles.

Maryville Track Team Ties Up With Powerful Vol Outfit Monday Afternoon

Monday afternoon at the University of Tennessee Shields-Watkins field, the Maryville cinder-burners, defending state collegiate champions, will engage the Vol trackmen for their third dual meet of the season.

With the exception of Doug Steakley in the quarter-mile, hurdles, and relay, the Scotties will use the some powerful machine which mowed down LMU under a 109-16 score. Steakley has been out of the first two meets with a pulled ligament.

From last week's subtle hint at the high jump pits, it is very probable that Etheredge will crack his own state record of 6 feet, 1 and 3-4 inches in the meet this afternoon.

Should the Highlanders get past the revengeful Orange and White this afternoon, they will loom as favorites to repeat in the state collegiate meet in Cookeville on May 11. On the basis of their respective scores against LMU, the Scotties seem to hold an edge over Vanderbilt. The Orange and Garnet take to the road next Saturday when they engage the University of Chattanooga.

Scot Nine Takes Two From Hiwassee

The Maryville Scotties baseball team hung two defeats on Hiwassee college in the past two weeks when they walloped the opposing nine by the scores of 10-5 and 9-8. The first of these contests was held at Hiwassee on April 8, and the second return battle was staged on the home diamond, April 15.

The game played on foreign soil saw Honaker at short, Headrick in right field, Hughes on the hot corner, Wilburn patrolling center field, Cragan on the first, Shelfer donning the mask, Short toeing the slab, and the one newcomer in the lineup, Pierce, took over Etheredge's place on second.

Maryville tallied three times in the second inning when Tommy Cragan started off the inning with a base on balls, was balked to second, stole 3rd and scored on an error by the catcher. Kindred scored the second run of the ball game when he was hit by the pitcher, stole second and also scored on an error by the catcher. Pierce scored the third and final tally of the inning for the Scotties.

Hiwassee did not score until the fourth when they pushed across five runs before the third out came via short to Cragan.

Maryville scored two more in the third, five in the fourth, seven more in the 5th and eded up with two more runs across the platter in the sixth. The game was called due to darkness.

J. D. Hughes blasted out a home run and a triple for his share in the day's win. Kindred also laid on the horsehide for a triple and two singles to help the cause. Cragan banged out two singles before being replaced by Etheredge as a pinch hitter in the 5th.

In the game played at Maryville the Scotties were losing going into the 8th chukker by the score of seven to one. Then the bats of the Scots began to rattle along with some close decisions by the umpires and the Scots then entered the ninth with a one-run

Frosh Are 1940 Baseball Champs

Captain "Corny" Jones and her frosh baseball team are the 1940 baseball champs. On April 3 the frosh signally defeated the sophs with a score of 20-10. This past Monday the junior-senior team bowed before the frosh, the score being 26-19. High lights of this game were two home runs made by senior Lyn Tyndall and frosh Lois King. Mary Ruth Baker, frosh pitcher, allowed no walks.

Track practice has been begun and the remainder of the year will be spent on the various phases of track. Thus far the point systemers have practiced the basketball, baseball, and disc throws, the 50-yard dash, the high jump, and the standing broad jump.

should be true, since history tells us that a play was always presented on this celebrated occasion in early Merrie Englande. Furthermore, it is very definitely appropriate that a drama occurring originally in the Forest of Arden should be re-enacted next week in the Maryville college woods.

Mrs. Nita Eckles West is general supervisor of the entire pageant. Coworkers are Mrs. Evelyn N. Queener, who is in charge of the necessary dances, and Miss Ruth Katherine Thompson who will direct the music.

The pageant directors include Jane Brunson, William Gehres, James Jarrell, Cecilia Jones, Elsie Klingman, Ruth West, and Nelle Yeck. The YW controls the student phase of the production, and Katherine Ogilvie and Jeanne Stringham have been appointed to assume this control.

Summary of the pageant:

Episode I

Attendant fairies to Titania, meet Puck in the forest,
They sing,
Over hill, over dale, through bush, through briar,
Over park, over pale, through flood, through fire,
I do wander everywhere
Swifter than the moon's sphere,
And I serve the fairy queen
To dew her orbs upon the green.
The cowslips tall, her pensioners be
In their gold coats, spots you see.
And the fairies that haunt the woodland dance.

Episode II

Thesus has ordered the Master of Nevel to stir up
The Athenian youth to merriment
A group of craftsmen present the most lamentable
Comedy, and most cruel death of Pyramus and Thisbe.

Episode III

Oberon and Titiana continue their quarrel.
The fairies sing,
You spotted snakes with double tongues
Thorny hedge hogs, be not seen;
Newts and blind worms do no wrong,
Come not near our fairy queen.
Philomel with melody, sing in our sweet lullaby;
Lulla-lulla-lullaby.
Never harm, nor spell nor charm.
Come our lovely lady nigh;
So good night lullaby.
And the water spirits dance.

Episode IV

I know a bank where the wild thyme blows
Where oxslips and the nodding violets grow,
There sleeps the Fairy Queen, sometimes of the night
Lulled in their bowers with dancing and delight.
Titania awakes to Love.

Episode V

The fairies dance around the Maypole.

Epilogue—Puck

Smiles

the twinkle of the Proffitt twins, the "Hail-fellow"-smile of Dottie Jean Eslinger, and the—a—dopy smile of "Little Dopy" McKee will stand out.

It has been proved by an authority that it takes about twice as many muscles to frown as to smile. (Try to make a good, black frown and compare the effort with that for a broad grin.) That fact must have led to another old song, "Smile a while, and give your face a rest." So when Bill Mooney smiles in his happy-go-lucky fashion, Mrs. Crawford in her comforting, motherly manner, John Ballenger in his—?—way, and Miss Wine in kind interest, they are all taking an easy course.

Somebody designated Kay Estes' as the glamour-girl smile, Glenn Young's as the who-do-you-think-you-are? kind. Leonard Wood is nothing but smile; a very mischievous smile belongs to Joe Magill.

Think of Mary Alice Grubb's dimpled smile, Martha Dean Reed's everything's-O.K.-I'm- happy -smile. Lily Pinneo's very smile seems quiet and pleasant, Allan Moore's a little sheepish. Robert Schwarzwalder's has an amused twirl; Miss Davies' shows an [illegible] impartial friendliness.

freshman class, has been chosen for the lyceum position on the cabinet. His duties will consist of acting as the Y's representative on the Artist Series staff. Robert Fisher, a sophomore, will be the new maintenance director, in which capacity he supervises all the organization's property and is in charge of the game and reading rooms.

The boy's work committee is composed of Roy Crawford and Warren Corbett, whose duties will consist of work with the Hi-Y clubs in the local high schools. Because of the increased size and importance of the Y sports program, the athletic committee will again be composed of three men. These three men will be Allan Moore, Stanley Menning, and Vernon Lloyd. They will have charge of the scheduling of all interclass competition, the making of rules, and the announcing of winners.

Henry Wick, a sophomore and political science major, will represent the Y on the "M" book board. He will also be the Y's representative at the IRC.

A pre-retreat meeting will probably be held in the near future to formulate the policy of nd lay plans for next year's YMCA.

Family Portrait

Cleophas, gave a sincere portrayal of the unassuming and understanding sister-in-law of Mary.

James, Juda, Joseph and Simon, brothers of Jesus, were excellently characterized by Clifford Procter, Robert Schwarzwalder, Charles Fish, and Jack Zerwas; and the sister and sister-in-law of Jesus, Naomi and Reba, given by Troy Moore and Ruth West, were done equally well.

The two outstanding, though relatively small, roles of Mary of Magdala and Judas Iscariot were taken by Carol Dawn Ward and John Wintermute, both of whom acted the parts with exceptional ability. Both were rather dramatic parts, deeply significant, and calling for sincerity and conviction.

The remaining parts, although minor, were quite important in the production of the play. These parts were admirably filled by Alice Huddleston, Percy Martin, June Morley, David Hall, Robert Wilcox, Ruth Sutherlin, Joseph Suitor, Annalyn Ramey, George Tibbetts, Stuart Schimpy, Marianne Coleman, Robert Fisher, Brasher Bailey, Irma Russell, Ernest Stoffell, and Doris Murray. Stuart Schimpf, especially, in the role of Rabbi Samuel, did a bit of outstanding acting.

The stage settings for "Family Portrait" were simple, but very effective. The most beautiful of all the scenes was that of the Upper Room, in which simplicity was the most striking feature. The fountain scene, also, was attractive and unique.

The reception given "Family Portrait" was gratifying to the staff and to the cast. The audience seemed to catch and to appreciate the feeling and atmosphere the actors were so efficiently creating by their interpretations. The direction, production, the acting, and the audience all helped to make "Family Portrait" one of the best events of the season.

Wendt's Class Visits T.V.A. In Knoxville

Nine members of Prof. Paul F. Wendt's accounting class traveled to the nearby industrial center of Knoxville yesterday afternoon in order to study the accounting system that is now being used by the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Mr. E. L. Kohler, controller of the TVA, explained the system very thoroughly to the members of the class. Mr. Kohler is an authority in his own right in this particular field, being the most prominent man in the entire country in governmental economics, particularly in governmental accounting.

This trip was very beneficial to this class since its members have been studying all year the various theories in relation to this subject.

lead. However, in their half of the 9th, the visitors with two timely singles pushed the tying run across the plate.

Going into the tenth inning of the ball game, the Scots started out when McGaha singled and stole second. Then Starn walked and when Steele, the visitors' catcher, attempted to throw Starn out stealing second, he overthrew the bag and McGaha romped home with the winning tally.

In this game the hitting of the Scotties was few and far between as the Hiwassee pitcher gave up but eight hits in ten innings of play. Hughes gathered a double and a single, and Rock gathered a double for the only extra base hits of the ball game for the Scots. Hiwassee on the other hand gathered 15 bingles off of Short, Rock, and Hooker.

Shuffleboards To Fill Definite Campus Need

Through the efforts of the social committee, two shuffleboards are being constructed near Pearsons' hall. These were planned to fill a definite need for some activity of this nature. The boards will be ready ofr use in a week or two.

The boards are of the best possible construction and have cues and discs of the latest construction. Two score boards with porcelain finish will be set up.

Shuffleboard was originated in England and became so popular that it was outlawed by Henry VIII because the people neglected the practice of archery. The game is now very popular on shipboard and is fast spreading over the south.

The students on the social committee who are responsible for the new boards are: Charles Baldwin, chairman, Ruth Woods, Ruth Abercrombie, Jeanne Stringham, Gordon Findlay, Ralph Reed, and Joe Swift.

Senior Play Cast Picked By West Announced Today

Wintermute Plays Leading Role in Milne's Play To Be Presented

Mrs. Nita E. West announced today the casting of the senior class play production "Dover Road." John Wintermute, veteran of many stage roles since his starring in "Danny Boy" in his sophomore year, has the leading male role of Mr. Latimer, the elderly gentleman in whose home the action of the play occurs. Russ Stevenson is cast in the role of the butler, the tall, stout, and grave major-domo of the Latimer house. There is also a staff of the house which has not been selected yet. These parts are very minor roles.

The parts of the four guests to the Latimer household are filled by Louise Allen, Esther McCollum, Charles Fish, and Bruce Walters.

Louise Allen has the role of Anne, the young, pretty, and self-confident lady. Esther McCollum is cast in the part of Eustasia, Leonard's wife, the type who people call "a nice little thing." She is also described as being near enough thirty to wish that it were twenty. Leonard is played by Bruce Walters. He is a big man with a black toothbrush mustache. Nicholas, the part played by Charles Fish, is that of an attractive young man.

The production staff was also announced this morning. It includes Glenn Young as production manager; Harold Austin, stage manager; Paul Moon, business manager; and Dale Mathias, advertising manager. The remainder of the production staff has as yet not been selected.

Maryville Represented At Convention of Theta Alpha Phi By Brink

Frank Brink, member of the Theta Alpha Phi chapter at Maryville college, was chosen to represent Maryville college at the annual Theta Alpha Phi convention. The convention this year was held April 26th, 27th, and 28th, at Bloomington, Illinois. Normal and Wesleyan acted as host chapters.

Special honor was given Maryville in the selection of John Wintermute's one-act play, "Seventy Times Seven", to receive first prize; "Seventy Times Seven" was chosen from original plays submitted by the various attending chapters, to be judged at the convention.

The purpose of this annual convention is to discuss the programs carried out by the various Theta Alpha Phi chapters, and to revive the chapters, instilling in them new, creative work. The theme of this particular convention was that the production of the play was the whole thing—the individual, merely a part of that production.

Many other features were enjoyed by the members at the convention; among them were an address by David B. Itkin, associate director of the Goodman theater of Chicago, who spoke on Stanislavsky's system of

Athenian To Elect New Officers Next Saturday

Athenian society will hold its election for next semester's officers Saturday, May 11, at 6:45 in Athenian hall.

Those nominated for the offices are Harold Austin and Paul Brown, president; Warren Culver and Henry Millison, vice president; Don Kent and George Tibbetts, secretary; and Bob Fisher and Allen Moore, treasurer. The retiring officers are George Hunt, Arthur Peterson, Henry Wick, and Paul Brown.

At a special meeting of Athenian held Thursday evening the society decided to investigate the possibility of presenting again "Family Portrait", the mid-winter production of Bainonian and Athenian societies this year. A committee was appointed to consider the possibility of presenting the play in Knoxville before the school year ends. At the election meeting to be held next Saturday further reports from this committee will be heard. It is reliably reported that the treasurer, Paul Brown, will gladly accept any semester dues of the various members of the organization.

Fun Program At Theta

Theta Epsilon promises every attendant to its weekly meeting tonight a really good time, for Theta is playing hostess to all the other societies on the hill. The program, beginning promptly at 8:00 in the chapel, was arranged by Paul Akana and will be presented by John Wintermute and Gene Craine.

YM-YW Retreat At Line Spring

Installation To Be Held At Sunday Afternoon Service

Cabinets and officers of the YM and YWCA's with YW Nu Gamma leaders left today for Line Spring, Tenn., where the organizations are holding their annual retreat. Almost seventy-five students are participating in the three day program of fellowship, inspiration, and creative planning.

Following the theme "Christ, our Cornerstone in Leadership", the Rev. Thomas B. Cowan of Norris will speak on the development of self for leadership. Probable student speakers on similar subjects will be Vernon Lloyd, Edward Thomas, Helen Bewley, Russell Stevenson, and Hilton Wick.

Proposals for the coming year's activities will be considered and tentative social and worship programs will be drawn up. Installation of YM officers and cabinets will also take place at an evening worship service. Mountain hikes and various games furnish relaxation to those present and afford opportunity for friendly wholesome associations.

The group will return to the campus Monday afternoon.

Maryville College Club From Knoxville Elects

Last Wednesday night the Maryville college club of Knoxville held a picnic supper in the tea room of the home economics department.

It was originally planned that the meeting should be held on the same day as the May day program. However, when the May day program was postponed, the club decided to go through with its meeting, anyway.

New officers were elected for the club. The newly-elected officers are Reverend Hugh Powell, president; Mrs. Claiborne Anderson, vice president; Mrs. Dave Marston, secretary; and Charles Ellis, treasurer.

Dinner For Faculty Club

The Faculty club will meet for dinner as usual at 6:30 o'clock on Monday evening, May 6, 1940, in the Home Economics dining room.

The speaker of the evening will be Professor W. G. Smythe, of Knoxville; his subject will be "The Junior High School and its Place in our Educational System".

Queen And Court Reign at May Day Pageant in Woods

Midsummer Night's Dream Produced in Natural Stage Setting

Yesterday afternoon at 2:00 in the college amphitheatre, despite a rather chilly wind and damp ground, the annual May Day festivities were held. The audience, seemingly as large as ever though weather conditions were unfavorable, was highly appreciative of the efforts of the participants who certainly did belong in the sylvan setting.

A background of very appropriate music was furnished both before the program and as the King and Queen preceded by their attendants walked down to the bridge and crossed it. The attendants, by alternate couples, reached the diaz first from one side and then the other.

King Joe Etheredge and Queen Charlotte Moughton made a charming couple as they slowly marched along the path, across the bridge, and directly to the throne which was on a long, white diaz in the midst of the natural sylvan setting of our college woods. The Queen was dressed in a white lace dress over taffeta, and carried a large bouquet of deep red roses. With her dark hair and red roses in contrast to the white dress, with her quiet dignity and stateliness, Miss Moughton truly deserved the title "Queen." King Joe Etheredge in his white linen suit was a very fitting escort for the Queen as well as King in his own right.

The two senior attendants, Edith Evans and Jane Law, wore gowns of aqua net over taffeta and carried mixed bouquets of yellow flowers, and directly preceded the royal couple.

First in the procession were the

New Echo Staff Chosen On Monday; Editor To Be Elected This Week

At a meeting Friday evening of the Highland Echo staff for the purpose of electing an editor for the coming year, the votes were so cast that a majority was received by neither of the candidates, J. Edward Thomas and William Felknor. Another election will be held to determine the new editor.

At a meeting held Monday afternoon in the Echo office the publications committee chose the editorial staff of the Echo for the coming year. Those members remaining on the staff are: rising seniors, J. Edward Thomas, William Felknor, and Jean White; rising juniors, Don Kent, John Ross, Bette Umbach, and Hilton Wick; rising sophomores, Jean Barnes, Carson Brewer, Phyllis Ann Cain, Charles Foreman, Jean Patterson, Bill Sweeney, and Trevor Rees-Jones. This staff in addition to the graduating seniors will publish the Highland Echo for the remainder of the school year.

Eighteen Will Do Special Honors Work Next Year

Pupils To Do Research In Twelve Fields Of Study

Eighteen students have been approved by the faculty committee on honors work for the next year. These seniors will do specific research in twelve different fields as preparation for further research or to gain fuller knowledge of material.

The applicants are selected on grade average and on genuine interest in college work. These students will work equivalent to one three or four hour course, as specified by the supervisor, for their last two semesters. Honors work involves the mastery of the library as a working tool and each person is extended the stack privilege beyond that of other students. Certain other privileges are also extended in the courses that honors work is being done.

The following people have been approved by the faculty committee: Frank Brink, dramatic art; Charles Baldwin, mathematics; Philip Evaul and Harvey Lehman, biology; George Webster, political science; Margaret Peters and Edna Manrose, German; John Thompson, sociology; Kathryn Ogilvie, home economics; Ruth Gordon and Ann Biggs, French; Alfred Davies, Bible; Warren Corbett, history; Aline Campbell and Elizabeth Moore, English; John Ballenger, economics.

Since there is a rule that at least one semester's work must have been completed before final acceptance these students have been accepted tenatively: Lois Ann Alexander, biology; and Lura Mae Laughmiller, in French.

Senior Art Exhibits by Jensen and Norton in Baker Gallery, May 1-18

Two senior art exhibits by Marie Jensen and Stone Norton are being shown at the Baker art gallery, second floor Anderson Annex, from May 1 to 18, one to five o'clock each day. The exhibits show a portion of the work completed during the past four years by these two students, the first art majors to graduate at Maryville.

The work of Miss Jensen includes 23 exhibited pictures, done in oil, watercolor, tempora, titled "Tennessee". In it she has depicted various scenes and peoples from Tennessee; making a composite picture of impressions. Norris Dam, the Smoky mountains, cotton, negroes, and several other scenes make up the composite.

Another unusual piece is a fresco, "Russia". This is done in the typical fresco technique, powder paint applied to wet plaster, drying and incorporating the whole thing within itself. "A New Jersey Church", done in oil, is a fine example of another phase of Miss Jensen's talent. There

Drive Now Underway For New Community House To Replace Old One Here

A drive is now underway to obtain money with which to construct a new community house to replace the old one, which is situated on Parham St.

The old building, which has been in use for approximately eighteen years, is now inadequate for the present needs. It contains only five small rooms. Since it was built, the needs of the town have grown as the town has grown. If these needs are to be met, it is necessary that a newer, larger, and better equipped building be constructed.

The Maryville ministerial students, and especially Floyd Loperfido, who has a full-time job at the community house, are very much interested in this project.

Objects of the community house are: to distribute clothing to the poor, to give permits for food orders, to encourage cleanliness in the community, to encourage religious living, to be self-supporting, to find houses for the homeless, to find employment for the unemployed, to administer to the sick, to promote Christian social activities, and to afford a recreational center.

After the banquet part of the program several members of Pi Kappa Delta will speak. The general theme of the program will be the qualities which public speaking fosters in developing personality and general intellect. The student speakers will be representative of the sophomore, junior, and senior members of Pi Kappa Delta. Arda Walker and Arnold Kramer will speak for the seniors, the graduating members of Pi Kappa Delta; Vernon Lloyd will speak representing the juniors; and Lucille Lynch will be the sophomore speaker.

At the same banquet new members of Pi Kappa Delta will be initiated into the fraternity. The new members who were just recently elected, are Elizabeth Moore, Bill Felknor, and Jack Zerwas from the junior class; and Janet Lindsay, Lucille Lynch, Henry Wick and Hilton Wick, all sophomores. Following the initiation of the new members the annual election of Pi Kappa Delta for the 1940-41 school year will be held. The retiring officers are Otto Pflanze, president; Arda Walker, vice president; and Harriet Miller, secretary. The coaches of Maryville forensics are Prof. Verton M. Queener, chairman of the social science department and Mr. Archibald Pieper, professor of political science.

Tall, Dark, And Handsome Preferred By Majority of Maryville College Damsels

By CARSON BREWER

Who are the most popular characters of the comic strips? Who are the most popular motion picture stars?

Well, we are in no position to answer these questions for the whole country, but we can give you the vital statistics on Maryville's favorites.

Yes, you guessed it. You brought this on yourself when you innocently filled out the Echo questionnaire a few weeks ago.

Maybe it doesn't mean a thing, but both in the funny paper and on the screen, Maryville's men and women want their men big, dark and brawney and their women slender, blond, and beautiful.

Now that, of course, does not mean that coalblack locks are absolutely essential to the fellow who wishes to help hold one of our benches down. I expect that Richard Greene, that young lad with the curly brown scalp adornments, could secure unlimited aid if he wished to warm up a cold bench. And, on the other side, the Maryville men will make a few allowances for a dark-haired lass if she can make up for this defect some way. I'd be willing to bet my two postage stamps that the matrons wouldn't have the slightest worry about getting the girls out of that cold air by 7:00 if a few copies of Loretta Young were suddenly scattered around the campus.

However, those are exceptions. Day in and day out and in most circumstances, the men must be dark and the girls fair. Here's the proof:

Twenty-five freshmen say that Li'l Abner, the dark lad who carries his approximately 190 pounds of bones and biceps with such pleasing naivete, is their hero. Thirty-five freshmen declare that Blondie, that domestic little lady who keeps Dagwood from missing his breakfast, is absolutely wonderful.

And twenty-four of these same freshmen say that Clark Gable cannot be surpassed. Bette Davis is the female favorite of twelve freshmen. Alice Faye, another blond, runs a

Only One Maryville Woman Intends To Make Marriage a Career For Future

By JEAN WHITE

"What work do you plan to enter on leaving college?" Rather a searching question and one of the utmost interest in Mrs. Snyder's survey of what the girls of Maryville college are planning to do after they have attained the position of proud possessor of a B.A. or A. B. degree.

Mrs. Snyder has been interested for some time in relationships between girls in dormitories and their accomplishments and eventual goals, and those of the girls living at home or boarding in town. So, since we have some rather peculiar and interesting responses in answer to this particular question of possible future vocations, a few of the most outstanding will be cited.

There are 446 women in school this year at Maryville. Out of this number 418 answered the questionnaire, 23 of these failed to answer the question on vocation, and 25 were undecided as to the vocation they wished to enter. Some of the answers to this question of vocational work were rather unusual in many instances, careers ranging from aeronautical work to that in a department store, from teaching to marriage, from further training for a Master's degree to being a French interpreter.

A most surprising thing, and a rather revealing fact, is that the largest percentage of women plan to enter one of the various divisions coming under home economics. 87 out of 395 who answered the question are in this category which is closely followed by the 83 who are planning to teach. Of those who are planning to be teachers, there are 35 who want to teach home economics; and by this sign, if it is representative of the United States' colleges as a whole, there should be no dearth of home economics students or teachers in the schools of America for years to come. Neither should there be a lack of home makers, if one cares to carry the situation a bit further.

Of this 87 in the field of home economics, there are the 35 who want

An Excellent Beginning

The shuffleboards installed by the social committee near Pearsons have been the most popular innovation that we have witnessed on the campus for many months. The need for some such equipment has been felt for a good while and now that the popularity of the sport has shown that there is an overwhelming interest in it, we feel that perhaps there might be a movement to secure more features of this sort.

This sounds like the trite saying about never having what you want after you get it. We have two shuffleboards and we want more, but we feel that anything which holds the interest of so many students should be encouraged.

To the social committee who financed the plan and the boards we give our hearty approval and congratulate them on the start of something which we have felt has been needed on the campus for several years—more means of recreation.

ECHO-HUMOR

By DON KENT

Dr. Adam Smaasher
117 Element Avenue
Compound, California
Dear Dr. Smaasher:

The bearer of this letter is my daughter, Hilda. She is interested in seeing your cyclotron at work as she is studying physics at present in our university. Kindly show her every consideration.

(signed) I. M. Hedmann
President, Griper U.

★ ★ ★ ★

"Well, Dr. Smaasher, here I am."

"I'll gladly do what I can to help you in your work. How long have you been studying Physics, Miss Hedmann?"

"Oh, dear, do you have to study Physics? I've just been going to class like in my other courses. But I guess you can tell me all about it, can't you?"

"Well, I—"

"What's this absurd thing here?"

"That's the cyclotron, Miss Hedmann. You se—"

"Oh, just call be Hilda and I'll call you Adam, shall I?"

"As I was saying, the cyclotron is a machine for disintegrating atoms. Atoms are the invisible particles that make up matter, as you know."

"Oh, Adam, let's not be superstitious about this. If you can't see them, how do you know they're there? That's silly. It's like voodoo religion or Buck Rogers or something. That's just being absurd."

"Indications all point to their existence, Miss—ah—Hilda. For this disintegration millions of volts are required."

"Who counts them, Adam. It must be dreadfully tiresome."

"The particles are speeded up by means of electrical energy until they emerge from this point at a rate of six hundred million million a second traveling twenty-five thousand miles a second."

"From that little hole? Adam, you're just being absurd again."

"And as they fall on a piece of beryllium, the beryllium disintegrates."

"But how do you know it comes apart if you can't see it. O, Adam, I think you've been fooling my daddy all this time. It's so absurd."

"As the bombarded element disintegrates a new element is produced. Thus I have succeeded in changing nitrogen into hydrogen and I can change mercury into gold."

"Mercury into gold? Oh, no, you're just trying to kid me again. We learned in grammar school that nobody could do that. It's absurd."

"Just a minute, Hilda. Will you stand here a minute?"

"Yes, but—"

"Just until I turn on this switch. There. Do you notice anything?"

"Yes, I feel light and airy. Why—my body is disappearing! It's disintegrating! Adam, what's happening? What are you doing?"

"Just being absurd, Hilda. Just being absurd."

THE COMMENTATOR

Conducted By GEORGE L. HUNT

As a follow-up to the article on the Republicans in 1940 which this column sponsored some weeks ago, the Democrats now have their inning with the following excellent article by Arnold Kramer. Brother Kramer needs no introduction, although it might be a surprise to his many friends that such a nice fellow should be supporting the Democrats.

★ ★ ★ ★

THE HULL TRUTH

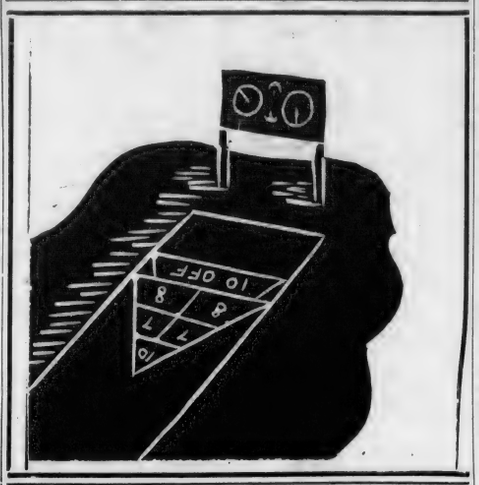
By Arnold Kramer

Thus far the news of candidates and elections for the year 1940 has been very uncertain, much more uncertain than in most election years. The lone fact that seems clear is that a Democrat or a Republican will be elected next November. Candidates on both sides of the fence are far from settled, but the Democratic picture is the one that is, at the present, causing the most discussion because of failure to know or even guess the President's position. The nomination of the Democratic candidate undoubtedly rests in his hands. Most people are agreed that Franklin Roosevelt can have the nomination for himself on the first ballot, if he wants it, and that no one else can get that nomination without his sanction.

Will Roosevelt run for a third term? That is what every one wants to know and what no one can possibly foretell, perhaps not even Mr. Roosevelt himself. He may be certain now that he does not want the nomination, but he may yield to the pressure of friends. If he makes no definite statement concerning a candidate before the convention, he may not be able to withstand the ovations, the popular acclamation that will be his when his Democratic colleagues assemble, to pay tribute to their leader and to make plans for the future. The President himself has said, "No man who has been in public life can resist the lure of public acclamation. It always gets them." That is merely one force that urges for a third term, but there are others. The New Deal is a philosophy that Roosevelt is wrapped into, and in order to insure its permanence he may run again, if he cannot get the man he wants or if he decides he should continue the program himself. Then there is the situation in Europe which may cause him or more likely his friends to decide that he is needed in the complicated international scene. As Tom Corcoran cracked, "The Democratic convention was held in Copenhagen." Then there is another force that is unseen by many. The President loves a fight, and he likes to be in the middle of it when the going gets the toughest. The election of this year promises to be the closest that a Roosevelt machine has experienced, and he knows it. He is still the greatest campaigner in modern U.S. history and he likes to fight against the throng, which may throw some influence into the events of the next few months.

There are two main forces working to discourage a third term, the tradition that is against it and the trend toward the right or away from so much liberalism. As far as the tradition goes that could probably be overcome if that were all Mr. Roosevelt had to fight, but the other factors combined with that makes the road to victory more difficult. The Democrats are in the campaign to win, not just to run a race. As for the trend away from liberalism, the Democrats perhaps see that a man who is a little more conservative, such as Cordell Hull, might stand a better chance, especially in the conservative East (if there is such a place.) In all there seems to be more sentiment against a third term than there is for it.

One other factor in the picture is the President's health. He may feel just as good as ever, but it hardly seems likely. Eight years in the White House is a terrible strain on any man, especially a man of his energy and determination. It seems doubtful that he would want to try for four more years in which the party battles will be more difficult than they have been in the last two terms, for the strain would be terrific. It now appears that Franklin D. Roosevelt will not be a candidate for a third term because of several reasons, but he may be a candidate by next week for no one can determine his plans; no one can determine what will happen in World War II and what its influence will be.



If the President decides not to run, then the picture becomes even more complex. Vice-President Garner would like very much to get the Democratic blessing, but at this stage he appears to be little more than a trading block to be used in the convention. He certainly will not get the sanction of his boss for he has fought Roosevelt too often.

James A. Farley, the man who knows the first name of 15,000 people in this country and is sorry he doesn't know 40,000, stands a distinct chance of getting the President's coveted blessing, for he is the man who has done the most for Franklin Roosevelt. He is now trying his best to live down an unearned reputation of a perfect politician and therefore a low fellow. His Catholic religion hurts his chances, but no man deserves to be held down because of his religion. Yet he realizes as well as others that that may keep him from becoming the presidential candidate. However, his chances of becoming the vice-presidential candidate are better than the average.

Two dark horses in the race are U. S. Attorney General Jackson, whom Mr. Roosevelt would probably rather have than any other man as the next president of the United States, for he is a thorough idealist and a loyal New Dealer, and Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, whom Mr. Roosevelt would not like to have but might consent to. Jackson is one of the ablest trial lawyers of the present generation and a wonderful speaker. He might be a good choice for he could probably get more of the Negro vote and farmers vote than most potential candidates, and labor would also perhaps support him more solidly. His difficulty lies in securing the nomination even with the President's support. Watch Jackson four, eight or twelve years from now. As for Wheeler, his friends are just plain people and his falling out with Roosevelt has cost him much.

The last candidate in the picture is Cordell Hull who stands the best chance of carrying the Democratic banner next November. This seems true because he is conservative enough to meet the trend, and still popular enough with his boss to get his unrestrained support. Hull's foreign policy is for the most part satisfactory with Big Business in general, and thus he would pull many votes that would otherwise go Republican. Contrary to what some people think it now appears that he can effectively carry labor with him, and since he knows more about foreign policy than any other American he seems to be the man to keep us away from the European mess. Hull's age and his failure to say he is even slightly interested might hurt him a little but not much, especially if Mr. Roosevelt gives him the go-ahead sign.

How Will You Vote?

M——C

With all the talk about politics which has been particularly strong and prominent this week, we imagine there are a good many of you who wonder whether campus politics have come to some terrible crisis. Perhaps they have but it is not such a great crisis that your changing your vote under pressure would make any great difference. The matter is one between two factions and does not involve the merits and worth of the candidates running. If John Jones is a friend of yours but belongs to the other party, you vote against him regardless of the feeling you have that he would make a better officer than the fellow you are supporting. This is all wrong!

You will hear the arguments against a candidate or for a candidate but regardless of the fact that you are opposed to the so-called "dirty" politic group or on the other hand to the "clean" politics group why not consider the office and the value and worth of the candidates for that office. Don't vote for John Jones because you know a fellow who knows a girl who said he belonged in the opposing party. You may be sorry when the election is over and you see how poorly representative of the group John Jones proves to be.

No amount of pressure can make you sign a ballot on which you have written your own choice if you have backbone enough and will-power enough to exert your rights of sufferage and to vote as you please. You owe nothing to the fellow who asked you to vote for his political ally if you do not approve of the candidate for the office. Use your own mind. You have a right to vote as you please and this would be a better country if more people would follow this thought and consider merits instead of parties. Too much stress has been placed on the latter and it is this stress which seems to have reached such a climax this week on the campus.

We'd like to see you fellow voters putting the best men in office instead of the men of what you think is the better party!

SPORT ECHOES

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

It seems that the Scotties are out for championships this week end from what we see and hear, and are about to win them. Yesterday LMU was downed twice. Today, Frank Morrow and company will try their luck against state competition, and the trackmen are out for their SMC title today.

The baseball nine showed brilliant hitting yesterday. The hits ran into three numbers regularly. Wilburn, Hughes, and Chuck Kindred blasted as they haven't been blasting this year. Chuck's timely blow won the first game. Wilburn and Hughes, in a slump until lately, have been running the outfielders ragged. Nig and Shoey both have several homers to their credit now Nig blanked Tusculum the other day to boot.

Shelfer, incidentally, is still pretty lame. He ought to be back next game now, and that'll round the team into real shape.

A new record of six feet, two inches at Chattanooga, broke all records again. Little "Joe" seems to pull greater feats as one season goes into another. Running a pretty consistent 10.1 century now, Joe has removed that weak spot from today's defenders. We hope somebody doesn't break an ankle pole vaulting, Joe isn't so good at that.

The conference setup is all Maryville this spring. The Honakermen have defeated the leaders. LMU has victories over Milligan, Maryville's only unknown, and potential foe. The Fischbachers are at the top easily, with almost no threats, a tie is possible—if Morrow breaks an arm. The Etheredge-Hitch-Steakley outfit should have a sure shot today after their terrific walloping of LMU; Milligan, from reports, is not much strong than last year.

Coach Honaker must have felt pretty good the other day when his all-freshman ball club was scoring on the Carson-Newman Eagles. Jabo, Rock, and Taylor looked pretty classy out there, for future reference.

Frank Morrow and Frosh Van Cise should set the pace in the state tennis tournament. They haven't been winded by any duo this year so far. They'd be a cinch to beat last year's Teacher's doubles team this year, anyhow. Chattanooga, TPI, and Vandy, let alone Sewanee (who produced the state champ last year) will be stiffer opposition than anything our boys have seen tho.

If the rain, cold, and general orneryness of the weather continues to plague our thinly-clad heroes, we'll have to postpone everything till next year, and order an indoor track and tennis court, and this certainly isn't baseball weather. We'll risk this forecast: Three spring athletic championships, and the wrestling that is over to make four championships for the scrapping Scotties. This would give them athletic superiority over everybody in the conference.

Interclass athletics is going into a fight for the cup. Usually about decided for this time of year, the juniors and seniors decide their year-long siege for top honors. At present it looks like the juniors will take over. Whether they lose or win baseball, as long as the seniors don't win, they're out ahead.

Etheredge Breaks High Jump Record As Trackmen Edge Moccasins 68-62

In their final intercollegiate dual track meet of the season, the Maryville college Scotties traveled to Chattanooga and mauled the University of 'Nooga by a score of 69 to 62. The Highlanders victory over the Moccasins gives them an intra-Tennessee record of two victories against one defeat.

Captain Joe Etheredge, already holder of the state high jump record at six feet, 1 and 3-4 inches, cracked his year-old mark by leaping the bamboo at six feet, two inches. Although the pole was set at six feet, 3 inches, an eagle-eyed official scorer and timer called for an exact measurement and found a slight sagging in the middle which lowered the record to six-two. Besides grabbing the record victory in the high jump and runner-up honors in the broad jump, Joe sewed up the century dash in 10.1 seconds, 1 tenth second over a new Maryville record. Incidentally, it will be interesting to note how many new records Etheredge will have written in the little red "M" book after the conference and state meets, today and next Saturday.

Harlan Husk, lanky sophomore star from West Point, Miss., hit the old stride which made him one of the two freshmen lettermen with last year's state title holders. Husk cracked the scoring chart for 11 precious points to snatch runner-up laurels for the Scotties. He won the 120 yard hurdles in 17 seconds, and he floated over the pole vault bar at 10 feet.

"Baby" Baird's flashing spikes were good for victories in each of his two specialties, the half-mile and the mile. In the half-mile which "Baby" won in a time of 2 min. and 5 seconds, brother Willie and Cliff Procter followed in that order for the Highlanders. Floyd Green and Don Kent trailed "Baby" in the mile to take the one, two, three spots for Maryville in that event.

Carrot-topped Don Kent copped the 2 mile race at 10 minutes and 50 seconds in a record time for this season's kiltie-klads. Like the half-mile and the mile, the Scotties placed a man in each of the first three positions. Bill Mooney and Alfie Davies followed Kent in the eight-lap grind.

The Scotties' margin of victory was not established until the final event of the meet. As the mile relay came up the score stood Maryville-64; Chattanooga-62, with the winners to be decided in a storybook finish. The fancy sprinting of Vernon Lloyd, Cliff Procter, Bill Baird, and Doug Steakley dragged down the essential first honors to put them ahead 69 to 62.

Scot Courtiers To Play In State Tourney Today

Boasting of an undefeated string of six impressive victories in collegiate opposition, the Maryville tennis team, one of the all-time greats, is risking a perfect record in the state tournament this Friday and Saturday at the University of Chattanooga.

Although the Scotties have taken everything within sight in this section of the state, their greatest competition for the state title will come from Vanderbilt, Sewanee, and Chattanooga. For many years the Commodores have monopolized the doubles championship, and likewise this year, their twin racqueteers are rated near tops to lift the laurels. In the star-studded singles field both Chattanooga and Sewanee will re-offer the same men who last year finished runner-up and champ respectively in the state finals. The men on the squad most likely to take honors in the state heap are Frank Morrow and Paul Akana, number one and number two men for the Scotties. Morrow and Van Cise will run together in the first doubles berth and Akana and Pratt will crack at the opposition from a booming number two slot.

After winning decisive tennis matches from East Tennessee Teachers and Tusculum in the first part of this week, the Fischbach-swatters are more than sure shots to displace Teachers as holders of the Smoky Mountain conference. Although the "tutors" have held the SMC crown for many years, they haven't been able to take a single first in either of the Buc-Scot matches. Continuing their string of victims at the expense of Tusculum, the Orange and Garnet dropped only one singles event to the Pioneers.

Highlander Ball Club Downs Conference Leading LMU In Doubleheader Friday

Yesterday afternoon on the Maryville diamond the 1940 edition of the baseball team clinched first place in the Smoky Mountain conference by defeating LMU in both ends of a twin bill. The first game went to the Scotties by the score of 5-4 and the second by the score of 7-5 after four and one-half innings of play.

The first game was a thriller with the Scotties pulling the victory out of the fire in the eleventh inning. Nig Wilburn got credit for the win and he pitched a wonderful game, allowing only seven hits in eleven innings while striking out 13 men. Nig kept the hits well scattered and in his one bad inning where the visitors scored three runs he allowed only one hit as the rest of runs were accounted for by errors.

In the first frame, Nig started his strike-outs by fanning two of the 4 men to face him and forced the last man to ground out second to first. Nig had at least one strikeout in every inning except one and then he retired three men in a row forcing them to ground out and pop up.

Maryville's big bats were silenced for three innings as Sowder pitched airtight ball for the Railsplitters for three innings, striking out one man and forcing the others to ground or fly out. Then in the fourth J. D. Hughes blasted out a booming smack to left field for a triple, but was caught sliding home as he tried to stretch it into a home run.

In the third the first man up for LMU reached first on the second error of the ball game by Hughes, reached second on an error by Kindred and scored the first run of the ball game when Nig let up the second hit of the ball game. That was the final scoring in the inning as Nig forced one to ground out and he accounted for one by continuing to shoot them by the batters. At the end of this inning, Nig had five strikeouts.

Maryville went scoreless and hitless until the ninth inning when things began to pop for the Highlanders. Meanwhile in the eighth the Railsplitters had secured three more runs and entered the ninth with a comfortable lead of four runs. These runs which crossed the platter were the results of an error by Headrick which started off hte proceedings. This man advanced to see third on en error by Hughes which put the hitter on second. Then another single scored these two runs. The final run was scored against Maryville as the result of another erro. In this inning Nig only gave one hit but three errors in back of him did the damage.

In the big ninth inning the Scotties started off when pinch-hitter Hodges drew a walk; Taylor ran the sacks for him. Scot banged out his second single of the day to place the run in position on second. Nig immediately scored these two runs by blasting out a big triple between right and center fields. Hughes kept the ball rolling and a sizzling double to score Nig with the third run of the inning. Cragan next man up cracked a single to score Hughes with the tying run of the ball game. The crowds were in an uproar by this time, but the next three men were retired in order to end the inning.

The tenth inning was uneventful as far as scoring was concerned, though two consecutive singles by LMU gave the Maryville rotters a few bad moments.

In the first half of the 11th, Nig stroked out another man to run his string to thirteen and gave up another single. He was never in trouble and the last man grounded out, Honaker to Taylor.

In Maryville's half of the 11th, Wilburn first up reached first on an error but was out at second on a fielder's choice on the next play. Cragan made the second out but advanced J. D. to second. Chuck Kindred who hadn't had a hit all day stepped into one and rode it far out into right field to score the winning run in the 11th.

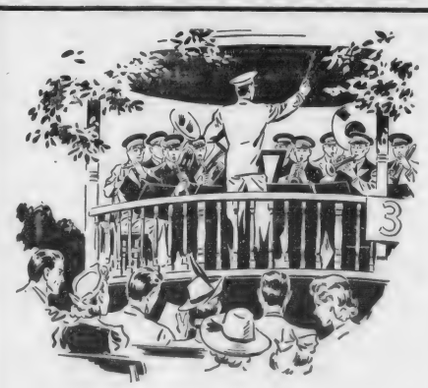
Scots Favored To Repeat In SMC Track Meet



This afternoon on the cinders of the Roosevelt municipal stadium in Johnson City, the Maryville kiltie-klads are being favored to win the Smoky Mountain conference championship. Unless their virtual track and field monopoly is over-turned by some SMC dark-horse, the Thrower-Hitch machine will take the title for the fifth time in six years.

The Scotties enter the meet in the peak of condition after having walloped the University of Chattanooga 69 to 62 last Saturday afternoon. Joe Etheredge, Harlan Husk, Don Kent, "Baby" Baird, and Doug Steakley loom potentially as the greatest bread-winners for the Orange and Garnet this afternoon.

Doug Steakley is ready to show his wares after having taken things easy for a while following a badly pulled muscle, Etheredge may very likely top his week-old record of six feet two inches in the high jump, and "Baby" Baird waits almost too eagerly to take his fling at the dutsy SMC record ledgers.

The meet in Johnson City will have teams representing the following colleges in the Smoky Mountain conference: Maryville, Lincoln Memorial, Milligan, and East Tenneseee Teachers.

freshman attendants, Margie Field and Charles Foreman, Jean McCutcheon and Dudley Moore. The girls were dressed in blue net over taffeta. The sophomore attendants were next in line and were Mary Alice Grubbs escorted by Hilton Wick and Rachel McCall with David McDaniel. The sophomore girls were dressed in pink net, while the junior attendants, Ruth Andrews and Elizabeth Ann Huddleston, escorted by William Baird and Jack Proffitt, wore yellow net. All carried mixed bouquets, the colors of which blended well with the dresses.

Trumpeters Bill Hargrave and Vernon Lloyd were resplendent in their white suits, and heralded in the procession. Mary Mildred Hatcher, Elizabeth Stone, Barbara Ann Swift, Ruth Mack, Margaret Knox, and Joy Corrigan dressed in white held the emblems of royalty to form an arch under which the procession passed.

The procession having reached the throne, action of the play began. Shakespeare's immortal "Mid-summer Night's Dream" could well be played in such a setting which must have been similar to other settings used for a like purpose in England. Cherie Curtis took the role of Puck with inimitable spirit and aided in the mischief to be found. Peg Carter as Titania made a charming fairy queen, and Charles Fish as Oberon made a most irate and revengeful fairy husband and king.

The other actors entered the spirit of the old-fashioned drama as in Merry England and acted accordingly. Titania's attendant fairies sang several delightful bits of melody and the fairies gave several dances. The watersprites in their blue green costumes did a special dance which was very gracefully executed.

The story of the love potion was portrayed from the time of the quarrel between the King and Queen to the time when they made up; and of course, as is customary, the fairies followed this with the annual May pole dance, streamers of blue and pink adding to the color of the occasion. Then came the recessional.

The event was well planned and executed, and the audience appreciated the fact that the performers could not have been any too warm considering the March weather.

Community House

Local ministers are unanimously endorsing the movement. Dr. Lloyd has this to say about it:

"The new community house is worthy of the support of all who are interested in the improvement of conditions and the helping of people in Maryville. Those who have conducted and supported the program for these years have rendered a telling service with very inadequate equipment. The new location, building, and arrangement will mean an added value and service far beyond the money invested. This is a practicable community enterprise."

The proposed location for the new building is on McGhee street, near Sunnybrook chapel.

Mr. Loperfido says that students wishing to make contributions to this cause may do so by giving such as they may wish to E. C. Brown, director of campus work.

directing; and a radio broadcast, The Wesleyan Hour, on which was given the play, "Romeo and Juliet." Frank Brink was starred in the role of Romeo.

The final convention activity was the performance of the American passion play, at the Scottish Rite temple. This play, produced by the natives there, is presented annually.

Tall, Dark, Handsome

close second with nine votes.

Fifty sophomore boys read the funnies. Thirteen of them like Blondie, and ten of them prefer Li'l Abner.

Sixty-four juniors read the comics. Nineteen of the sixty-four like Blondie. Little Henry, that helpful little chap with the bald head, slips ahead of Li'l Abner by a five to four count. Dick Tracy also comes in for four votes.

Although the juniors let Little Abner down, they still upheld the supremacy of that amply-eared Gable guy by giving him fourteen votes, eight more than Spencer Tracy received. Bette Davis continued towards a clean sweep by polling eleven junior votes, four more than was received by domestic-looking Myrna Loy and seven more than smokey-eyed Hedy Lamarr could get.

Out of the forty-seven seniors who read the funny paper, twenty-one of them say that Blondie is their favorite character. Dick Tracy is second with seven backers.

There's the proof. Blond men have two strikes on them before they ever go to the platter. So what? So we've got to do something about it. The time has come to forget political differences. Our very existence is threatened. A meeting of blonds will be held at 2:00 Sunday morning, in room twenty-eight. You know where it is. Come one, come all. Wear green and purple hoods, and bring scissors. There's work to be done!

Art Exhibits

are several landscape pictures, as well as designs and sketches, all showing her mastery of the techniques involved.

"Seated Man" by Mr. Norton, a sculptured figure in marble, shows an understanding of the principles of sculpturing and of the thought necessary to produce such a work. Mr. Norton is also exhibiting a sculptured plaster piece called "Knight in Armor". In addition to these he has 19 exhibited oils, sketches and water-colors. Throughout these pictures can be seen the gradual development of Mr. Norton's original and unique style, rather an emotional and dramatic one. This is particularly noticeable in his figures, especially so in "Western Front" in which the figures of two men are struggling against a scarlet flame-like background.

The next exhibit to be held at the art gallery will be a General Student show, showing the work done by all the college art students during the current year. This will be from May 29 to June 6.

Lura Mae Laughmiller Heads French Club

At a meeting of the French club, held last Wednesday night, the officers for next year were elected: president, Lura Mae Laughmiller; vice-president, Mary Helen Caldwell; secretary, Margaret Kern Hodges; treasurer, Harvey Lehman; program secretaries, Lucette de Barritt and Curtis Wright.

Fourteen new members were admitted into the club, at the same meeting.

Marriage A Career

to teach that subject, and there are twenty dietitians. Other workers in that field are specifically, one buyer, four designers, one food chemist, two housekeepers, one interior decorator, and one nutritionist. There are twelve interested in the general field of home economics, eight in home demonstration, one in institutional management, and one in extension projects.

To leave home economics we find in the various divisions of medicine and nursing that there are 51 who wish to become nurses, doctors, or technicians of various kinds. They range from anasthetists and blood technicians to medical missionaries and X-ray technicians.

Church work and social service seem to be tied with twenty-five women interested in each field. The remaining fields are divided among the women in interest as follows: 21 interested in mission work, 19 in business, seventeen in drama and art, 16 in science, and nine in music.

Under business we find no startling division; but church work is something different. One wishes to be a church secretary, another a church assistant, seven want to do general church work, eleven are interested in religious education, and one—here's the startling thing—one wants to go on to seminary. When it comes to that, the men had best watch for their laurels, even though public sentiment is now in their favor. Then, in addition to these, there is one who wants to become a choir director, and another, a church organist.

We have among us one who is seriously air-minded, and we can easily guess who. However, in other instances it is harder to place name and career together. In the field of government we have two who intend to enter the civil service, one foreign-office correspondent, and one who wants to enter the foreign service. We have two linguists, one interested in being a French interpreter, and the other, a French translator. We have a home maker, journalist, lawyer, photographer, psychologist; and one woman who intends to make marriage her career. Just one— and that fact is, we think, and we are sure all the ladies will agree with us, a striking refutation of the old-fashioned accusation that women come to college to "be went with" or catch a husband.

And in conclusion, there are many other vocations which have not been mentioned for lack of space and time; but this census of what the women of the college intend to do is certainly varied and interesting, and one that the men could scarcely beat. Could they?

Baseball

It is needless to say that the crowd went crazy as this game dropped LMU from the conference lead and Maryville now led the pack.

In the second game of the chilly afternoon, Hooker was selected for the starting task. He gave up one run in the first when he allowed two singles. He was relieved by Short in the second.

In the Scotties' half of the first their bats were still warm from the first game and they started right in where they left off with a single, Wilburn walked putting Scot on second. Hughes cracked a single scoring Scot with the first run. Cragan followed with a single scoring Wilburn. Kindred cracked another booming hit in the same place as his winning hit in the first game to score Hughes and Cragan. This drive was one of the longest of the entire afternoon and he pulled up easily into third for a triple. Headrick kept it going and he hit a single to score Kindred. This ended the scoring for the inning. However, at the end of the first inning the score read Maryville 6—LMU 1.

In the second LMU scored another run on a base on balls a field's choice and error. Hooker was relieved by Short in this inning. Hooker was pitching good ball but didn't seem to have his control down perfect. The visitors scored again in the third. The first man up walked. On another error and a stolen base two men were in position to score. They did when the fourth man up hit a single to score two runs and he himself scored a moment later on another error. The score read at the end of the third inning: Maryville 7—LMU 5.

This program climaxes the year for the orchestra. The complete program was announced last week in the Highland Echo.

The last program observing Music Week is the senior recital of Ruth Woods, soprano, and Louise Felknor, pianist. This will be held Monday evening at 8 in the chapel, and its program was likewise given last week in the Echo.

One more recital rounds out the series of programs that the music section of the Fine Arts department has presented this year. It is the joint recital of Miss Dorothy Horne, violinist, and Miss Ruth Thompson, soprano and pianist, both members of the music faculty. It is to be held Friday evening, May 17, in the chapel, and includes as well as two groups by each artist, a sonata for violin and piano by Delius in which Miss Horne and Miss Thompson combine their talents.

Steakley Elected Head of Recently Organized Group

Camera Club Selects Dizney Vice-President; Hellums As Secretary

An organization meeting of the Camera club was held on Tuesday evening of this week. The new club is composed of students especially interested in photography and has been formed for the discussion and improvement of technique in the various phases of taking pictures. The newly elected officers of the organization are: president, Douglas Steakley; vice president, Howard Dizney; secretary, Frances John Hellums; and treasurer, John Ballenger.

The club will hold its next meeting in Alpha Sigma hall at 7:00 on Tuesday evening, May 14. At this time, Carlos Campbell, Smoky Mountain photographer and an authority on picture-taking, will speak to the members.

Future plans of the club include a photographic exhibit to be given before the end of this school year and programs giving general pointers on the elements of picture taking. The club also plans to start a "dark room", an essential feature in developing negatives.

Members of the organization were active picture-snappers at the recent May Day festivities and function at various other school activities.

Miss Henry Returns From Northern Trip

Student-Help Director Attends DAR Meeting and Alumni Banquet

Miss Clemmie J. Henry, director of Student-Help, returned last week from a trip to the north where she attended a Maryville College Alumni association banquet in Philadelphia and the D.A.R. national convention in Washington.

Miss Henry attended the Atlantic Highlanders Alumni dinner, an annual affair, at the Robert Morris Hotel in Philadelphia Saturday evening, April 13. At this time the Atlantic Highlanders, an alumni chapter including as members Maryville college alumni in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and some of the nearby New England states, elected George Osborne, class of 1932, to succeed Ingram Fell, class of 1929, as president of the association.

The program of the banquet was very interesting, there being among the speakers several prominent Maryville graduates. Since the Atlantic Highlanders as an organization takes the Highland Echo, Mr. James A. Cox, '29, gave a brief review of Echo Highlights, going through the Echo's of the past year. Mr. Albert Murray, '15, a radio consulting engineer who was here at Maryville last year, spoke to the Highlanders of television. There were vocal selections by Roberta Hargrave and dramatic readings by Mrs. Betty Jane Harold. Miss Clemmie J. Henry gave the main address on some of the most recent development of the College and the relationship of the alumni to the college.

After the banquet Miss Henry went to New York and New England making arrangements concerning engagements for next fall; and then she returned to Maryville from Washington by plane.

An invitation has been received by the College to present the work of Maryville college at the New York state D.A.R. meeting at Utica, in the fall. However, the work of the college is already well known and highly respected in the D.A.R., and many chapters have contributed to the Student-Help work for more than a quarter of a century.

National Music Week Observed By Fine Arts Dept.

Music Majors Present Joint Recitals During Week

National Music Week which is observed annually throughout the United States was participated in by Maryville college students and faculty during this past week, May 5 through the 12, by special music features each morning in chapel and by two joint recitals by senior students during the week. This evening in the chapel the orchestra will hold its annual concert, and Monday evening, May 13, Louise Felknor, pianist, and Ruth Woods, mezzo-soprano, will appear in a joint recital. Concluding the program of the week, Friday evening, May 17, Miss Ruth Thompson and Miss Dorothy Horne, members of the faculty, are to give another joint recital, this one of violin and piano music.

Monday evening, May 5, Bernice Cathcart, soprano, and Ralph Reed, bass, were presented in a joint recital in which they gave excellent renditions of some very well known pieces as well as some not so familiar. With this recital, a fitting beginning for a celebration of the National Music Week started the program.

On Tuesday morning the choir was featured, singing the Corinthian arrangement of the Twenty-Third Psalm, "The Lord's Prayer", and "Holy, Holy Lord God" by Noble Cain. Wednesday morning the program consisted of Mozart's concerto in D minor by Anne Abel and Schubert's "Ave Maria" by the string ensemble. Thursday, Ruth Mack played on organ solo.

YM-YW Sponsor Racial Meeting

Intercollegiate Council To Meet Tomorrow In Bartlett Hall

At three o'clock Sunday afternoon, in Bartlett auditorium, the East Tennessee Intercollegiate Christian Council will have its last meeting of the year. This meeting will be under the joint sponsorship of the Maryville college YMCA and YWCA.

Representatives from Knoxville college, Morristown college, and Tennessee Wesleyan will attend this meeting. Two speakers from each of these colleges will make addresses.

"World Fellowship Movements" will be the general theme of all the addresses. Sub-topics of this general subject will be "Economics", which will be discussed by the representatives from Morristown; "Religion," which the Knoxville college representatives will discuss; "Culture", which will be discussed by the Tennessee Wesleyan representatives; and "Politics", which is to be discussed by Bill Mooney and Vivian Moore, Maryville representatives.

In the discussions of these subjects the speakers will emphasize the significance of the similarities of problems arising from these subjects for the white and the colored races. The purpose of the council is to draw the two races more closely together by discussing and placing emphasis on problems common to both races.

Before the meeting is closed, progress made during the past year and plans for the next year will be talked of in an open discussion.

The program for the meeting at Bartlett will include, in addition to the speeches of the visiting representatives, the regular YM program and a violin solo by Jean Heckman.

Bill Mooney, Maryville representative to the council, reports that very

Henry Wick Elected As New President For 1940-41 Year

Dr. George Allen Knapp was the honored guest at the Pi Kappa Delta banquet held Thursday evening at Chilhowee Inn in the mountains. Both freshman debaters and members of Pi Kappa Delta were present at the banquet. Faculty members present included Dr. R. W. and Mrs. Lloyd, Dr. E. R. Hunter and Mrs. Hunter and coaches Mr. A. F. Pieper and Professor Verton M. Queener and Mrs. Queener.

At the banquet Dr. Knapp was elected honorary lifetime president of the Tennessee Alpha chapter of Pi Kappa Delta. Lower Classmen Elect Officers

Nominations Will Be Made From Floor By Students

Dispensing with nominating committees, the freshman and sophomore class presidents have announced the elections for next year's officers to be held Wednesday morning after chapel. All nominations will be made from the floor and the voting will follow. In addition to its next year's officers the sophomore class will elect the editor-in-chief and the business manager of the Chilhowean, the annual publication of the junior class.

The junior class will also hold its elections of next year's officers next Wednesday but the nominations will be made by a nominating committee selected by the president, William Baird. Nominations will also be made from the floor.

Maryville Seniors Matriculate In Institutions of Higher Learning

Seniors come and seniors graduate, but some seniors continue their study in the higher fields of learning so the old adage says. Maryville's seniors are no exception to the rule as many of them are planning to matriculate in other schools after their graduation.

While nosing around the campus recently, I discovered these following choice bits of information. Some are facts; others fall under a different classification and might even be called propaganda. They all concern the hopes, aspirations, and plans of some of our wisdom gaining seniors, who plan to continue their life of ease a few more years.

Miss Arda Walker will attend the University of Tennessee as she has secured a readership there. She will work in the history department, but has not definitely decided what her specialty will be. In her own precise words Arda says that she will either investigate the evils in the present administration, or she may issue propaganda for her favorite party and vote the right ticket in the coming presidential election.

Several of the seniors plan to attend seminary. George Laird Hunt, Bill Mooney, William Lewis, Vaughn Lyons, and Ed Thomas will enter Princeton. Different reasons are given by these men for their choice of school. Hunt wishes to be near Bruce Morgan and Eddie Brubaker, Maryville students who are now at Princeton. Mr. Lyons has a feminine interest near Princeton. The other men have similar interests there and other places.

It is rumored that Earl Tweed will work at the University of Tennessee as a WPA chemist. At the same time he will work on his M.A. degree. Further verification of this rumor can be had from Mr. Tweed himself.

Paul F. Moon has secured a scholarship at the University of Cincinnati Mr. Moon (that campus sport!) was not available for a press comment. Other science students receiving scholarships were Gordon Flannagan and

J. Edward Thomas And Bill Felknor Are Co-Editors

Dual Editors for First Time In Echo's History

At a meeting of the Highland Echo staff last Monday evening J. Edward Thomas and Bill Felknor were elected co-editors of the paper for the coming year. This is the first time that there have been co-editors on the Echo and this decision was due this year to a tie vote. Neither candidate had a majority vote; so it was agreed to elect co-editors. J. Edward Thomas will edit the paper the first semester and Bill Felknor will take it second semester.

J. Edward Thomas from Maryville, Tenn., is a high rating junior on the honor roll and a political science major. He was associate-editor of the Chilhowean this year, and was recently elected vice-president of the Law club and to Writers' Workshop. He has been on the Echo staff for three years and was managing editor this year.

Bill Felknor, from Meridian, Miss., is an economics major. He is also a varsity debater and was initiated into Pi Kappa Delta this week. He is a member of the Law club, has taken several leading roles in college dramatics. He was manager of the tennis team last year. He too has served on the Echo staff for three years.

Hovel Sings Lead In Knoxville Civic Opera Comedy

Professor Ralph Hovel will sing one of the leads in the Knoxville Civic Opera club production of the "Chocolate Soldier" at Knoxville high school auditorium. The opera will be given at 8:15 on May 13 and 15.

Professor Hovel sang the role of Faust in the combined production by the Knoxville Symphony and the Civic Opera club last winter. Eight Maryvillians are taking part in the "Chocolate Soldier", a musical comedy by Oscar Strauss. Three of the leads are being taken by Maryville people; Robert Claflin as Kernel Popoff, Don McArthur as Masacroff, and Professor Hovel as Major Alexius. Mrs. Hovel, Mr. and Mrs. Wagner Newberry, Andrew Alexander, and Ed Hamilton are also singing in the opera.

Lloyds Are Host To Honor Society This Wednesday

President and Mrs. R. W. Lloyd will be hosts to the Alpha Gamma Sigma society at their home on Wednesday, May fifteenth. Those attending will be all newly elected members of the society, former members who now live in Maryville, faculty members of the society, and the present staff.

A banquet similar to this has been given each year since the organization of the society, and is given in special honor of the new members in the society.

Evaul is the president-elect of the YMCA and has served in a number of Y offices. He served on the athletic committee for interclass athletics for the past year. He is a member of the wrestling team and holds the particular distinction of having won every match during the past season. Evaul is a biology major and is an assistant in the biology department.

Ada Summers, sophomore and choir member, was re-elected to the board. The other sophomore member is Fred Shelfer, president of the Florida-Georgia club and political science major. Shelfer is first string end on the football team and catcher on the

Bainonian-Alpha Sig Meet Tonight In Joint Program

Unusual Experiment To Reverse Precedent

Alpha Sigma society and Bainonian society will meet in the philosophy classroom Saturday night at 6:30 for a joint meeting.

This meeting will be a departure from the customs usually adhered to by the societies on the hill. Alpha Sigma and Theta Epsilon are corresponding societies, and joint meetings are usually held by these two. The same custom holds true for the Athenian and Bainonian societies. However, as a means of creating more interest in the meetings, it has been decided to reverse the order of the meetings.

A promising program has been prepared by the Alpha Sigma program secretaries. "The Purple Doorknob", a short play, and a scene from the play, "Call It A Day", will be featured on the program.

Troye Moore, Marianne Coleman, and Josephine Farr play the three roles in "The Purple Doorknob". Irma Russell and Barbara Swift will portray the two characters in the scene from "Call It A Day."

Jean Heckman, who was very enthusiastically received when she played at the last meeting of Alpha Sigma, will open the program by playing a number of popular songs on the violin. The last numbers on the program will be popular songs sung by Glenn Winkel.

Both Miss Heckman and Mr. Winkel will be accompanied by Eldon Seamans.

Open Politics The Solution

Recent interest in campus politics indicates that an increasing number of students are concerned about who fills campus offices, and are becoming conscious of their responsibility for the democratic selection of those qualified for places of leadership. This is a wholesome attitude and should be constructively encouraged, because the success of democracy on a local or a national scale depends upon the willingness of informed persons to participate in politics.

Political activity is a co-operative matter which naturally assumes organized form, and the fact that Maryville students have made their "parties" open to public knowledge instead of keeping them disguised in some unusual way is a tribute to their sense of fair play. On the surface, arguments against party politics, which often lauds "voting for the man instead of the party" sound convincing, but in practice they are untenable. It is a well known fact that the bitterest periods of political history have been periods of personal politics in which there was no group solidarity.

Today, more than ever before, political scientists who are interested in making democracy work, are convinced that the two-party system is essential to the free expression of political preference, and this is no less true of campus than of national politics.

In reality there is only one alternative to competition between parties, and that is a situation in which one party, usually a minority, maintains a monopoly to the exclusion of everyone who is not approved. Few people want this arrangement in any group of which they are members. Every individual is entitled to the expression of his choice in all elections, and whether he wishes to exercise it independently or as a member of a co-operative group can make little difference in the quality of campus political activity. After all, the character of each individual determines his tactics, and he will employ them regardless of whether he is affiliated with a clique or is going his way alone.

If those interested in politics cannot justifiably take part in group expression of their interest in campus affairs, they are likely to have little influence in society after graduation, because certainly all outside political activity is highly organized. As long as those who participate maintain their sense of honesty and their sense of humor, there is no reason why campus politics should not take the form of openly recognized parties which conduct open campaigns and which take responsibility for their candidates. It is only through such a system that the evils of personal politics can be avoided.

By DON KENT

An acquaintance reports having seen recently the sign "Small Animals Hospital. Animals with disagreeable traits our Specialty."

It won't be long now until we have sanatariums for nervous kittens and insane asylums for mad dogs. Imagine visiting "Fanny Feline's Sanatarium For Melancholy Mousers. Feeling frowsy? Frisk up at Fannie's."

Two old cates are being very catty:

"There's that Polly Persian cutting up again. I should think at her age she'd be a little less kittenish."

"And here comes that Mr. Angora up to purr with her. The old fool! Why he hasn't a whisker left to wiggle!"

"They say he was wealthy until he started taking too much catnip. I dare say he still likes it when he can his paws on it."

"Look at the hussy playing up to him! Hm!"

"You mark my words. Soon now they'll be going off to play Puss-in-the-Corner."

• • • •

Or we might visit the "County Kennel For Punchy Pooches. Padded cells at Popular Prices." Let's talk with an inmate:

"Hello, what's your name?"

"Mike Murphy. Lately, though, they calls me The Terrible Terrier."

"How did you happen to get in here?"

"Well, they says I'm crazy, but I ain't. I'm just mad."

"Just mad? Why?"

"Well, a few weeks ago I falls in love with a sweet little spaniel. I knows it was the real thing this time. No more puppy love for me. Then one day last week she meets a big, burly, German police dog. 'Listen,' I yaps at her, 'Listen, just because I ain't got no blue collar with brass studs, ya think ya can throw me over for that flat-footed hunk of Hitler-heilin' hound! Well, ya can't, see!'"

"Then what happened?"

"She did. I got mad. Not crazy. Just mad! And they kicked me in here. And if I ever get out of this flea-infested excuse for an insane asylum, I'll—I'll—"

"Yes?"

"Hm?"

"What will you do?"

"If I get out?"

"Yes, if you get out."

"Don't be silly. I can't get out."

"Then move over and let us in. We must have been batty to have read this far!"

THE COMMENTATOR

Conducted By GEORGE L. HUNT

IN DEFENSE OF SIMPLICITY

Come read to me some poem,
Some simple and heartleft lay,
That shall sooth this restless feeling,
And banish the thoughts of day.

I happened to be skimming the pages of a book of poetry the other evening and renewed my acquaintance with the above lines from Longfellow. I am more and more coming around to a strong affection for the bard of Haverhill. Is it a sign of old age? I think not. It is just I have gotten sufficiently far away from the compulsion of high school poetry reading to appreciate Longfellow on his own merits.

But this column is not to be about Longfellow. He is only the diving board from which I plunge into the idea the title indicates, a defense of simplicity.

We live in a time that worships the god of the spectacular. The World's Fairs are a case in point, for what were they, partially at least, but an attempt of commercial enterprises to outdo each other in the unusual, the gigantic, the bizarre? As the guide took us around at New York he pointed out what exhibits were permanent and what would be abandoned at the end of the season, and the transitory outnumbered the permanent. The large buildings erected for a season, torn down, a monument to the world of tomorrow with its quest of the bigger and secondarily of the better.

And it is the same in literature that has momentary appeal. "Gone With the Wind" first achieved notoriety for its length and later for its content. People flocked to read it because they could then boast of how much they had read. The same thing was true of "Anthony Adverse." I am not saying that these books do not have literary excellence, for they certainly do; but a certain amount of their appeal lay in their voluminous quality. Naturally the motion picture version of "Gone With the Wind" had to live up to the book, so we have a four hour extravaganza widely acclaimed. But how long will it last? It has been well-planned publicity that has kept GWTW alive. I believe that in the future days when we come to look back at our literature, we will remark on the phenomena of the Civil War epic, but we will read the simpler, less gargantuan works. What would I suggest? Purely my own idea, but I look to the works of James Hilton to live longer than Margaret Mitchell.

I have a strong admiration for the works of Mr. Hilton. Three I like in particular are "Good-bye, Mr. Chips", "Lost Horizon", and "We Are Not Alone." Of course they are not the greatest works of our generation, but when I want to return to a book for relaxation, I will reach for one of the three Hilton books. Simple, charming, but in their way possessing the elements of permanence, they will always have a handy position on my library shelf.

Is this not after all a characteristic of books that have survived through the centuries? My acquaintance with literature is so slight that I cannot speak with much authority, yet it seems to me that what has lived has not been the spectacular but the work that possesses dignified, elevated language and inspiring thought. the work that achieves grandeur through simplicity.

Now what are called "great" works might have elements of the showy in them, yet I believe they live for the other virtue of their simplicity.

We could look at drama. In this field especially the contemporary looks for the thing that will be different. There is ceasing to be any audacity involved in being different, for everything that achieves rave notices is "different", whatever that means. Kaufman and Hart are examples in point, writing comedies which are bizarre and grandiose in production and thus educating a public to look for such things whenever they go to the theatre. To me the tragic thing is that anything not a high scale production is considered poor comedy and, what is a grievous fault in any college dramatics: highschoolish. A simple, charming, delightful comedy with no other purpose but to amuse people who will come expecting to be amused by nothing more than a simple charming, delightful comedy is written off the books because it does not have the elements of Brooklyn-bridge backdrops and ethereal blank verse. Why, I ask, can we not have both? There is a place for heavy drama, certainly, but heaven help us when there is no longer a place for simple comedy.

So this is a defense of simplicity in a time when simplicity is a crime and the superstructure the order of the day. Longfellow tired of the big names of his day and cried for "simple and heartfelt lays," and I too ask, hoping that I will not be accused of senility before my time, for a just appreciation of what is simple and, I believe, permanent for its very simplicity.

TALK OF THE WEEK By Arlene Phelps

Higher Learning

William Bell. Flannagan received a fellowship at the University of Virginia and will continue work for advance degrees in the Old Dominion state. Bell who received a fellowship at Tennessee will also work on advance degrees.

Several of the class plan to attend law schools. In continuing family tradition, Arnold Kramer will attend the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, Mich. Charles Aubrey Sullivan will go to the University of Texas law school. J. N. Badgett will commute to the university. Mr. Badgett states that he will definitely attain scholarship achievements and will allow no obstacle (even that of matrimony) to stand in his path of success and happiness.

A number of students are going to Chicago seminary. Among these are Dick Heydinger, Bruce Walters, and John Wintermute. Charlie Fish will attend seminary in New England; scholar Thomas Anton Schaffer will be at Louisville seminary; Bruce Robinson hopes to attend Western seminary in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Milton Schreiber may attend medical school in Toronto, Canada, and David Heydinger will enroll at medical school in Western Reserve in Cleveland, Ohio. Another Western Reserve student will be Mary Bell Parks who will study liberal science. John Fisher will work for his M. A. degree if he can decide where he will attend school. Otto Pflanze hopes to go further in the study of history, and eventually he plans to teach. Ruth Mack may attend Kathryn Gibbs Secretarial school in New York City because she would rather do that than something else. Some of the home ec girls also plan to attend different schools. Dan Magill will continue his study. Jane Law may go to business school. Our retiring editor, Miss Abercrombie is interested in securing a position on a magazine. Jessie Curtis will do social work in Philadelphia, Pa., and may attend night classes at the University of Pennsylvania. Louise Allen may go in training as a nurse. Others will just be married.—At least they've been doing their best for four long years.

Russell Stevenson who plans to attend Xenia seminary in Pittsburgh, Pa., would issue no formal statement for this sheet. When I queried him, he remarked that he had to do his sweeping now and besides he was a man of few words.

Thus ends this discourse. If we have missed anyone, please send an uncancelled stamp to the Echo office and we will have your picture published when you become president. If there have been any misquotes, please see a lawyer. Best wishes!

Would I trade my girl for his girl?

THE HIGHLAND ECHO MAY 11, 1940

SPORT ECHOES

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

The Highland nine took their first defeat this season to the Eagles. Somehow the oft drubbed lads got their bat to the Scotties and clouted steadily. Our boys fielding wasn't what it should have been either, by the statistics. Of course these out of town games are mostly what we hear and read in the papers, and we can't defend or criticize the boys. Nevertheless, the loss doesn't hurt the record book particularly, except that it puts LMU one game closer in the record book.

The doubleheader last week put a kink in the Railsplitters title defense, and gives the Maryville team an unchallenged lead, however. Milligan has only one defeat, but they haven't met the mighty Maryville outfit. The Teachers game yesterday showed the Scots at their best again with a new pitching staff trying out. McGaha and Honaker sound rather strange, this year, for moundsmen, but we hope they can bolster that crippled department of the nine.

The real calamity in the loss to Carson-Newman wasn't just a first defeat, but a real threat to the Highland hopes. Nig Wilburn's shoulder will probably hold him out for the season, at least from pitching. His cleanup position and pitching turn can't be filled adequately. We hear however that Nig went out with flying colors. His catch was something sensational when he had the crackup.

Title defense is a hard thing to face this afternoon at U-T on the Shields-Watkins track. The relay team should hold their supremacy over the state's best, and Joe Etheredge will be in there to break his state record, but other than that, the honors point heavily to the Tennessee Vols.

Last week's meet will help ease any pain that might come this afternoon, however. Maryville walked away with everything and broke two records to boot. If anyone can find any records in the Conference which don't belong to the homelings, they are something of dectectives. Tipton, and the famed Scot quartet lowered the marks. Tipton is a boy that hasn't been written up much in track, but he really showed his wares at Johnson City. We'd give a lot to see him humiliate the highly touted Vol tosser today.

Highlanders Club Buccaneers 15-3

Yesterday the baseball team journeyed to the diamond of the East Tennessee Teachers and returned home with another triumph under their belts. The Scotties jolted the Teachers by the score of 15-3. The batting of the Scots had improved over the other game this week and though keenly feeling the loss of Nig Wilburn the team gathered 13 safeties off the offerings of the Teachers.

Short toed the mound for the Scotties at the start of the game and McGaha and Honaker came in to take their urns. Mac's appearnce on the mound was his first thus far this year and although he pitched but two innings he showed some possible talent. Scot showed up well on his initial trip to the slab and Coach has two possible twirler ready for action.

The first man to face Short in the ball game blasted out a booming home run to start the scoring for the home team. It was the last hit allowed until the fourth and the last run allowed the home team until the seventh. The teachers gathered but six hits off the offerings of these three men. Maryville went scoreless in the first inning though there was a man on second.

Headrick singled to start the hitting in the second and scored a few plays later with the first Maryville run of the game on two costly errors. Headrick stole second and third on the opposing pitcher and catcher to bring the Scot's total of stolen bases in the game to three. Maryville scored once more in the third when Hughes singled, stole second and scored on Kindred's single.

In the fifth Maryville drew blood again when Short singled to start things off and scored after three more errors had been committed.

In the big sixth McGaha doubled and it was underway. Rock walked and Short scored McGaha with a single. Honaker walked and Cragan followed him to first as he was hit by a pitched ball. With the bases loaded, Hughes stepped to the platter and belted out a home run to score four more runs. Kindred followed him with a triple and McGaha got his second hit of the inning as he singled, scoring Kindred. The scoring ended here.

The Teachers got their second run

Morrow-Van Cise Duo Win State Tennis Crown

In fitting climax for the most successful tennis season in the history of Maryville college, the Scottie netmen scored third place honors in the Tennessee state meet held last Saturday at the University of Chattanooga.

The high-light in the fine showing of the new Smoky Mountain conference champions at the 'Nooga tournament was the bagging of the state doubles championship by the ace Orange and Garnet diadem, veteran Frankie Morrow and frosh Oliver Van Cise. After losing the first set in the final round by the extended count of 5-7, Morrow and Van Cise polished off the favored pair from Southwestern, Robert Meacham and Cecil New, by the decisive scores of 6-2, 8-6.

Van Cise advanced to the quarter-finals in the singles tourney before he fell to Robert Meacham of Southwestern 0-6, 2-6. The semi-final winners were teammate racqueteers, making the finals for the singles championship an all-Sewanee affair. Gordon Reynolds, lanky sophomore, went on to edge out a close victory over his team mate, Paul Thrasher, by a count of 7-5, 0-6, 12-0.

The Fischbach-swingsters can now boast of the most enviable records ever turned in by a Maryville team. After two clean smashes at the defend SMC title holders, East Tennessee Teachers, the Scotties have annexed the laurels which have been monopolized in Johnson City for six successive seasons. The grand showing in Chattanooga marks the first time in hitory that a Maryville team ha placed in a state meet.

On Tuesday afternoon at the University of Tennessee, the Scotties continued their scorching pace by trimming the Vols by the same score that they beat them at home, 4-3.

Frank Morrow blasted out a victory over U-T's Gillespie 6-1, 6-4; Paul Akana won over Slatery 8-10, 6-3, 7-5; Ted Pratt whipped Carradine 6-2, 6-4; and state doubles champs, Frank Morrow and Oliver Van Cise trimmed the Vol number one diadem by a score of 6-2, 7-5.

Yesterday afternoon on the Memorial courts, the Scotties tied at 3-3 in the meet with Tennessee Poly. The final doubles match, which would have decided the meet, was called on account of darkness.

Maryville Speedsters Annex SMC Title As Records Fall At Johnson City

Track Champs Defend Laurels This Afternoon

This afternoon at the University of Tennessee's Shields-Watkins field, the Maryville college tracksters will defend their championship in the state intercollegiate track and field meet. Although the Highlanders are defending state champions and will be the host team this year, the meet will be held at U-T's track because the Scottie track is not large enough to accomodate a meet of this size.

Although the Highlanders are hardly the team they were last season as they upset all precedent in winning the state championship, the first feat of its kind by one of the smaller colleges in the state, the kiltie-klads are highly respected by rival teams as possible dark horses of the TSM. (Tennessee State Meet).

The loss of the record-breakers from last year's titlists will knock the Orange and Garnet from the top of the dope-bucket. In the state meet at Cookeville last year, Gene Orr, Weldon Baird, and Roy Sutton accounted for over half of the total Maryville score. Although these men's absence will be keenly felt, the squad's biggest blow in defense of the title is the loss of Coach Bob Thrower, who became ill shortly after track season got under way.

In practice last Thursday afternoon, the unlucky Scots were dealt another fateful blow. Doug Steakley injured his leg again, this time in the right thigh. The muscle-strain will keep him from traveling the cinder paths for the remainder of the season.

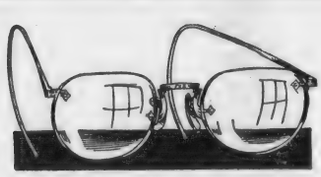
Captain Joe Etheredge is ready, willing, and able to throw everything he has into this last track meet in his remarkable college career. It was just one year ago at the state meet when Etheredge leaped through the rainy ozone to cross the bamboo bar for a new state record of 6 feet, 1 and 3-4 inches. Since he cracked his own record two weeks ago at the Chattanooga dual meet, Etheredge's chances are excellent for as high a mark as 6 feet and 4 inches this afternoon.

Harlan Husk, second highest Scottie point-getter, is all set for great things in the hurdles and pole vault. Don Kent and "Baby" Baird are ready to flash their distance runs in winning fashion, and the big guns in the field events, Gene McCurry, Bill Baird, and Cecil Tipton are expected to continue their fast paces.

The colleges in the state meet will be Maryville, Tennessee Poly, Milligan, LMU, Chattanooga, Sewanee, Tusculum, Tennessee, and Vanderbilt. The Vols will send their chief point-getter, Willis Tucker, to the Cotton Carnival relays in Memphis, as will Vanderbilt with a squad divided between the relays and the state meet.

Tennessee And Tenn. Tech Furnish Stiff Matches

Last Saturday afternoon in the Roosevelt stadium in Johnson City, the Maryville cinder-burners snatched the Smoky Mountain conference track and field championship for the fifth time in the last six years. The Highlanders successfully defended their laurels by more than doubling the score on the Milligan Buffaloes, the closest competitors. The defending champions of the SMC led by a score of 99.5, Milligan was second with 45, and Lincoln Memorial followed with 18.5 points.



The kiltie-klads nicked two new records on the Smoky books last Saturday. Cecil Tipton's toss of 168 feet was good for a new mark, and the Maryville relay team of Bill Baird, Vernon Lloyd, Cliff Procter, and Doug Steakley sprinted the mile in a new record time of 3 minutes and 35 seconds.

Joe Etheredge easily won his high jump, century dash, and broad jump without being pushed, and Don Kent and "Baby" Baird scored impressive honors in their respective events.

Four Junior and Senior Women Entered in Bates Contest Tuesday, May 14

Although six orations are necessary to constitute the Bates Oratorical contest, the quality of a smaller number warrants the holding of this contest in the philosophy classroom of Thaw hall, Tuesday evening, May 14, at 7:30 p.m.

The Rev. William H. Bates of Greeley, Colo., contributed the sum of one thousand dollars to form a fund, the annual income from which is used to provide a prize in oratory. The contest is open to the men of the junior and senior classes in one year, and to the women of the junior and senior classes in the next year. This year the contest is open to women.

The following girls, all juniors, have submitted their manuscripts and will deliver their orations at the contest: Marianna Allen, majoring in education, "Christian Youth and War"; Mary Mildred Hatcher, majoring in home economics, "Medicine Socialized"; Elizabeth Moore, majoring in English, "Creative Living"; Katherine Ogilvie, majoring in home economics, "Keeping the Best."

Catherine Davidson Only Lassie to Earn Top Award

Catherine Davidson, a senior from Cooperstown, New York, is the only point systemer this year to win the coveted sweater and letter. Five hundred points are required to win this award. Catherine's total number of points is 501. Willie Williams had the second highest score with 470 points.

Besides Willie Williams there are nine other new members in the "M" club. These new members, having won above 400 points, are Jo Gillette, Jeane Stamp, Marguerite Taylor, Clara Jean Conrad, Ina Jussely, Margaret Bailey, Vivian Moore, Eleanor Steinbrink, and Jean White. There are also ten girls who, having earned 300 points or above, are entitled to an MC. They are Mary Ruth Baker, Anne Halabrin, Virginia Fuller, Becky Jones, Lois King, Jac Klauber, June Stewart, Natalie Yelton, Dorothy Barber, and Cornelia Jones.

The "M" club members left the campus today for their annual week end in the mountains. They will return tomorrow afternoon.

in the seventh when they walked a man and he scored as the result of an error. They scored for their last time in the eighth when the first man up singled, went to second on an error and scored on another single.

Maryville added two more in the seventh. Rock got on through an error, Pierce singled, and Taylor followed him with a single to score Rock. Pierce scored a moment later to end the scoring for another inning.

In the ninth the Scotties piled up three more runs to add up to 15 markers. Hodges walked and followed by two walks, a single by Cragan, and a fielder's choice, Hodges, Taylor, and Honaker crossed the platter for the last runs.

The hitting honors went to Hughes with his home run and a single, while McGaha with a double and a single, closely followed him. Kindred with a triple and Short with two singles were runners-up.

Steakley Elected Senior President, Baird, Treasurer

SECOND VOTE WED.

Two Candidates Fail To Poll Necessary Majority For Election

Last Wednesday morning after chapel, members of the class of '41 elected Douglas Steakley of Jefferson, Ohio, president for next year and Boydson Baird of Kilbourne, Ohio, treasurer. Both of these candidates received a majority of the votes cast for these offices.

The run-off for vice president is between Anne Abel, Knoxville, and Louise Wells of Maryville. Jean McCammon, Maryville, and Katherine Ogilvie of Allisona, Tenn., are the two remaining candidates for the office of secretary.

Steakley, an English major who is president-elect of the class of '41, has held several important positions on the campus during his three years here. He has been on the Echo staff for all three years, one as reporter and two as sports editor. The first of this year he was elected editor of the 1940 Chilhowean. For two years he has lettered in track, and this year is in charge of cross-country and is publicity manager for athletics of the college.

Boydson Baird, a major in history, has been one of the most outstanding athletes on the campus, having lettered in football, track, and basketball.

Elizabeth Moore Contest Winner

Oratorical Contest Held In Philosohy Class Room

Elizabeth Moore won the William H. Bates oratorical contest which was held in the philosophy classroom at 7:30 Tuesday evening.

Marianna Allen, Mary Mildred Hatcher, and Katherine Ogilvie also participated in the contest.

Moore's oration had as its subject, "Creative Living". It was a very well thought out piece of work, simple and practical. She spoke of "creative living" for the simple, every-day type of people. Her sincere, matter-of-fact manner of presentation was extremely well suited to the content of her oration.

"Religion in a World at War" was the subject of Marianna Allen's oration. It was a timely subject, beautifully treated both in content and in presentation.

Hatcher chose as the subject of her oration "Medicine Socialized." "Keeping the Best" was the subject of Ogilvie's oration. Both orations were concerned with the methods of administering medical aid. Hatcher argued for a "socialized" method of giving medical aid. That is, she advocated the federal government's taking over the profession of medicine in order that underprivileged classes of people might have more sufficient medical treatment.

Ogilvie's "Keeping the Best" was an argument in favor of keeping the medical situation just as it is.

The prize money for this contest is the annual income from a one thousand dollar fund, which was established by the Reverend William H. Bates, D.D., or Greeley, Colorado.

The contests are open to the men of the junior and senior classes in one year, and the women of the junior and senior classes in the next year.

Sophomore Class Chooses Wick For Executive Office

MOORE, TREASURER

Long, Wynn Picked For Vice-President, Secretary Positions

Henry M. Wick, Jr., of Scottdale, Pa., was elected president of the sophomore class at a class meeting held Wednesday morning after chapel. Other officers elected for next year were Johnye Sue Long of Churchhill, Tenn., vice-president; Ruth Wynn of Lafollette, Tenn., secretary; and Allan Moore of Baltimore, Md., treasurer.

The new president has been active in several campus activities. He has been a member of the varsity debate team for the past year, being recently initiated into Pi Kappa Delta, honorary debate fraternity, and elected its president for the coming school year. He is editor-in-chief of the "M" book and a member of the YMCA cabinet. For this semester he has served as secretary of Athenian society and is active in the Law club. Wick is a political science major.

Johnye Sue Long, the new vice-president, is a music major. Miss Long has been very active in the music department of the school, being a member of the Maryville college band and orchestra. She is also a member of Bainonian society.

Ruth Wynn, new secretary, is also a music major. She was a YWCA Nu Gamma leader this year and is a member of the YW cabinet for the coming year. She is also a member of the "M" club, winning her membership last year. Ruth is a member of Theta Epsilon society.

The new treasurer, Allan Moore, is a biology major. He is a member of the YMCA cabinet, and is student ticket manager for the Artist Series next year. Moore is also a member of Athenian society and the Ministerial organization.

Faculty Recital Presented Friday

Miss Thompson And Miss Horne Join In Recital

Miss Dorothy Horne and Miss Ruth Thompson, both members of the music faculty, appeared together in a joint recital last night in Voorhees chapel.

Miss Horne, violinist, accompanied by Miss Thompson at the piano, opened the program with Beethoven's "Romanza in F". "Romanza in F" is free in form, but classic in spirit.

Miss Thompson, pianist and soprano, played Schumann's "Faschingsschwank", a loosely connected group of five freely constructed movements. The first movement, the brilliant "Allegro", is followed by the lovely and lilting "Romanze". Then come the tripping "Scherzino" and the gayly interesting "Intermezzo", followed by the "Finale".

De Falla's "Pantomime from l'Amour Brujo", played by Miss Horne, is a free arrangement from the ballet, "Love the Magician". Of peculiar interest is its use of 7-8 time. Miss Horne also played a brilliant concert piece, "Guitarre", arranged by the Spanish violinist, Sarasate.

Miss Thompson, returning to the program, sang four songs of the late American composer, Charles T. Griffes. The first two numbers, whose English titles are "By a Lonely Forest Pathway" and "The Dreamy Lake", are simple, beautiful compositions, written in German. The last two numbers, "Thy Dark Eyes to Mine" and "The Lament of Ian the Proud", reflect Griffes' style as a modernist. Miss Thompson was accompanied at the piano by Miss Davies.

Dramatic Art Students Present "Gallant Lady"

Dramatic art students will present a recital of drama and acting in the Fine Arts studio on Saturday, May 25th, at eight o'clock. The program is under the direction of Mrs. Annarine Hamilton, instructor in dramatic art.

Freshmen Select Witt As Head Of Next Year Class

DEBATER, ATHLETE

Classmates Give Offices To Russell, Cain And Crawford

Out of sixteen nominees, the freshman class at a meeting last Wednesday morning in Bartlett auditorium elected the following to serve as class officers for next year's sophomore class: James Witt, president; Irma Russell, vice-president; Phyllis Anne Cain, secretary; and Roy Crawford, treasurer.

James Witt, the new president, hails from Madisonville, Tenn. Witt is a letterman of the 1939 football squad. He has had considerable experience this year as a freshman debater.

Irma Russell, the newly-elected vice-president, is from Rockford, Tenn. She has served this year as Student Council representative for the freshman class as well as being chairman and active member of the entertainment committees for the two freshman parties.

Phyllis Anne Cain, secretary for next year, is a member of the Highland Echo staff. She was one of the few girls to be selected for the freshman debate team and in this position gained state honor. Phyllis' home is in Morristown.

Roy Crawford, treasurer, like his fellow-officers, is also from Tennessee, living here in Maryville. Roy also gained state honor in freshman debate and is a business assistant on the Highland Echo staff.

Milne's "Dover Road", Senior Production, Is Typical English Play

"Dover Road", to be produced June 3rd, in Voorhees chapel, by this year's senior class, is a basically English play, written by an Englishman, A. A. Milne, and given an English setting. "Dover Road" is a play in which there is meaning in every line, and in which subtle humor is one of the outstanding characteristics.

Harold Austin, stage manager, and Stone Norton have charge of the stage settings, and are working toward different, as well as beautiful, settings, which the occasion demands.

The plot of "Dover Road" is built around the hobby of Latimer, middle-aged gentleman of unlimited wealth, who is interested in his fellow-men and who says: "It is my hobby to prevent people, or to try to prevent people from making unhappy marriages."

Latimer, wealthy owner of his establishment, is portrayed by John Wintermute, talented performer of many college dramatic productions; the part of his major-domo, in reality only a glorified butler, is taken by Russ Stevenson.

The remaining four speaking roles in the play, those of the two young couples upon whom Latimer practices his happy-marriage theories, are those of Anne, played by Louise Allen, who has established a name for herself by her former excellent dramatic interpretations on Maryville's stage; Eustasia, played by Esther McCollum; Leonard, played by Bruce Walters; and Nicholas, by Charles Fish.

"Dover Road" is an outstanding play, written by an outstanding playwright, and is due an outstanding performance by the members of the senior class.

Annual Recital Of Glee Clubs To Be Presented May 24

Program Features Seniors Of Music Department; Woodring Ends Career

Friday evening, May 24 at 8:00 the Maryville college glee clubs will present their annual recital in Voorhees chapel. The program will be in the form of a radio broadcast and will feature the graduating seniors of the music department. Outstanding among these seniors have sung many important solo roles in various music productions of the college. Especially outstanding of this group is Dick Woodring.

Woodring has had solo leads in the four Gilbert and Sullivan operas which have been presented here during his college career. He has been tenor soloist with the choir, and for the past two years he has sung tenor solos in the Messiah. Dick has been drum major of the band for the past four years. The glee club recital will be one of his last public singing appearances at Maryville.

The program will be light music. It will be planned to suit a gay, jovial mood, and is planned especially to provide relaxation for the audience. Prof. Ralph C. Colbert, director of the program, says that the soloists will be glad to sing encores, and will sing what the audience wants to hear. Among the numbers that are to be presented are the Czechoslovakian Dance Song, a folksong; Hospodi-Pomilui, a Russian sacred number; from the Bohemian Girl by Balfe, In a Gypsy's Life, and the finale from Act III with Elizabeth Ann Huddleston as soloist. There will be a Fred Waring arrangement of Night is Young; a Romberg number, the Donkey Serenade; also, the Serenade from the Student Prince by Romberg; Ave Maria by Schubert; and I'll See You Again from Bittersweet by Noel Coward. The male quartet will also render a couple of numbers. Another senior, Louise

Theta Alpha Phi Dramatics Award Presented Athenian Banonian Production Again

Dr. Harcourt Morgan, TVA Chairman, Will Be Commencement Speaker

Dr. Harcourt A. Morgan, chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority and former president of the University of Tennessee, has been chosen as the speaker for the 1940 commencement exercises.

Dr. Morgan was born in Ontario, Canada, and is a graduate in entomology from the University of Ontario. He did his graduate work at Cornell University and was director of the Louisana State University Agricultural experiment station until 1905. Dr. Morgan came to the University of Tennessee as the director of the experimental station there. He later served as the dean of the College of Agriculture.

In 1919, he became president of the University and held this office until his appointment to the Tennessee Valley Authority. The same year Dr. Morgan became president of the University of Tennessee, Maryville college awarded him the honorary degree of LL.D.

Kent, Wick Named Chilhowean Editor, Business Manager

At a meeting of the sophomore class, held Wednesday morning in Voorhees chapel, Don Kent was elected editor and Hilton Wick business manager of the 1941 Chilhowean.

Don Kent, future editor, from Hurley, New York, for the past two years has been on the staff of the Highland Echo, becoming known through his work as a columnist. He served as staff assistant for the 1940 Chilhowean. Next year he will take over the position of secretary to the Athenian society, and will begin regular work in the Writer's Workshop, to which he has recently been elected. The 1941 Chilhowean editor is also a letter-man in track and No. 1 runner on the cross-country team.

The business manager, Hilton Wick of Scottdale, Pa., has also taken an active part in many college activities; during his first year at Maryville he acted as class treasurer; in his second year he was a member of the Student Council; and next year he will fill a position on the Y cabinet. He has lately become a member of Pi Kappa Delta, and next year will be president of the International Relations club. For two years he has been student assistant in the Treasurer's office, and for the past year has been a reporter for the Highland Echo. Aside from his other activities, he holds memberships in the Law club and the French club.

The appointments to the remaining positions have not yet been officially made, but these positions will be filled in the near future.

"Family Portrait" Given Unanimous Judges Decision

PLAY RATED HIGHLY

Third Win By Athenian—Bainonian Gives Them Cup Permanently

Theta Alpha Pi will present the cup for the best production of the year to the Bainonian and Athenian societies for the play, "Family Portrait". The cup will be presented tonight at a joint meeting of the two societies at 6:15 in Bartlett auditorium. The cup will be presented by John Wintermute, president of the Theta Alpha Pi chapter here.

This is the third consecutive year that these societies have won the cup and it now becomes their permanent possession. This year's play, "Family Portrait", won unanimously over the Alpha Sigma-Theta Epsilon production of "Winterset". "Family Portrait" by Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Cowan depicted the family of Christ and his home in Nazareth. The leads were played by Louise Allen as Mary, Robert Schwarzwalder, Charlie Fish, Jack Zerwas, Mary Frances Spurlock, and Carol Dawn Ward.

The 1938 production "Night Must Fall" won over "First Lady" and starred John Wintermute and Lois Black. Last year, "You Can't Take It With You", with John Wintermute and Sara Bolton, won over "Quality Street."

Special certificates will be awarded to the seniors and honorary ones will be presented to Jane Law and Margaret Knox. Bainonian nominations and a discussion of the Athenian picnic will follow the program.

Ray H. Jenkins Spoke At Law Club Banquet Held Wednesday Night

Ray H. Jenkins, prominent East Tennessee criminal lawyer and Republican, was the principal speaker at the Law club banquet held Wednesday evening in the Masonic hall. Mr. Jenkins spoke of the present situation and the opportunities we in America have. He said that our success here is limited only to the extent of our character, ability, and initiative.

George Webster, the retiring president, was the toastmaster of the evening. Dick Woodring, accompanied by Lucette de Barritt, sang several numbers. Miss de Barritt also played other numbers. Mr. A. F. Pieper, faculty adviser for the club, gave a short talk; and the graduating seniors of the club also said a few words.

There were forty-five members present, including Mr. and Mrs. Verton M. Queener, Mr. A. F. Pieper, and Mr. and Mrs Ray H. Jenkins. At the conclusion of the program the officers of the club for next year were introduced. They include Robert Wilcox, president; J. Edward Thomas, vice-president; Elizabeth Moore, secretary; and Henry Wick, treasurer.

Politurmia Political Practices Put Polls In Paramount Position

By JOHN H. ROSS

POLITURMIA, May 18: "Things have taken a sudden change here with the election returns today. The 'sneaks' and the 'anti-sneaks' have divided today's elections." This is a special release from the Politurmia publicity bureau.

The democracy of Politurmia has recently become a figure in international affairs. This country and its history is almost as unbelievable as those visited by Gulliver in his satirical journeys to fantastic lands.

Politurmia (many troubles or political turmoil) has the jump on either the floating island or the home of the giants, because it actually exists. My short visit to Politurmia a few weeks ago was a very unpleasant one and I am glad to be free of its troubles. No one is very happy there because every one is either trying to get something, keep someone from getting something, or trying to keep completely isolated.

Everyone in this small country of some eight hundred people is set off into some faction, either voluntarily or involuntarily. The three main divisions are the sneaks, the anti-sneaks, a misnamed faction, and the rubber stoppers, named for their main characteristic.

There is at least one election every day in Politurmia and on some days there are three or four. For a number of years, the majority party has been the sneaks, who attempt to control elections by natural multiplication, a chain letter system in which one influences two and two talks to four and four to eight in an ever-increasing stream. Lately a new faction, the anti-sneaks, have begun to use like methods and are having some success.

The rubber-stoppers faction is not an organized group but is the term used to designate those who try to remain isolated. As a protective measure, they carry two huge rubber stoppers fastened around their necks. These baseball size stoppers are fastened to a string and are always ready to be inserted in their ears when any sound of politicing is heard.

The attempt by the various parties to gain control of the largest number of offices has thrown the country's electoral system into near ruin. When groups meet to elect section leaders of various types, the whole situation is run to absurdity. Some of the elections come to a stalemate and are decided by flipping a coin. Other elections are so fixed before hand that one side wins by a plurality, a major-

FRED HOPE FUND...

Early this year, students at Maryville were asked to pledge support to the annual drive for the Fred Hope Fund which helps to maintain the Frank James Industrial school in the French Cameroons, Africa. All contributions were made as voluntary gifts and no attempts were made to gain money by canvassing or compelling students to make donations in any way.

$546 was pledged to the fund by students of the college. At the present time only $419 has been received by the Student Help office where donations are received, leaving $120 overdue on the pledges which were made by the students.

Following the spirit in which the Fred Hope Fund was established, no attempts have been made to "high-pressure" students who have failed to meet payments on their pledges. Yet, it seems that those students who have not met their payments have failed to recognize voluntarily assumed obligations or have over looked the fact that they are contracted duties.

The Echo brings this matter to your attention with the hope that the oversight will be remedied.

MUSIC WEEK...

Maryville's celebration of National Music Week proved to be more than a success with its carefully planned and well arragned program for the entire week through the efforts of Miss Davies, Miss Horne, Miss Thompson, and Professor Colbert.

The senior recitals of Ruth Woods and Louise Felknor, Ralph Reed and Bernice Cathcart were probably the highlights of the program. Each of those presented was a credit to the music department which is becoming more and more one of Maryville's stronger departments. Equally successful was the orchestra concert presented Saturday evening.

One feature of the Music Week program which proved to be quite impressive was the daily presentation of special music features each morning in chapel, especially effective since they reached every member of the student body and brought music week to all.

ECHO-HUMOR

By DON KENT

With the graduation of Vaughn Lyons, the problem of hiring another bell-ringer comes before Miss Henry. Now if we were in her place:

"You want the job of ringing the bell, is that right, Mr. Bangbang?"

"Yes, sir."

"What experience have you had?"

"Well, I was bugler at Boy Scout camp for two weeks."

"And did you blow the bugle on time?"

"No, sir, never."

"Good. If you are supposed to ring the six o'clock bell, what would you do?"

"I tell somebody to wake me up at ten of six."

"Then—"

"I lock the door so he can't get in and set my alarm for six o'clock."

"Why?"

"Well, five minutes out of an hour doesn't make much difference; so I use that five minutes and get up at 6:05; in that way the bell is always rung by 6:10."

"Unless—"

"Unless I forget it."

"Then what do you do?"

"Ring it twice as long the next morning."

"Excellent! Now what would you say if the clapper were stolen?"

"What's the matter, baby? Haven't you any tongue?"

"Magnificent. Do you know Alfy Davies?"

"Of course."

"Well, Alfy says he hopes that this year someone will be hired who is punctual. But Maryville tradition must not be so lightly set aside. You're hired, Mr. Bangbang."

Or we might interview someone to take the place of John Fisher in the library. "Not that anyone could take my place," says John, "but that's beside the point, isn't it?" Anyway—

"Your name is Checkemoff and you want to work in the library? What are your qualifications?"

"I got fired from my last job for always bringing back the wrong thing."

"What was your last job?"

"I was a gigolo."

"If someone asked you for a certain book every day for six weeks and it wasn't on the shelves, what would you say?"

"Professor Skuggs has had that out since January."

"Supposing someone were making a lot of noise in the library?"

"Please explain your question."

"If someone started throwing chairs at the windows, what would you say?"

"Go ahead and have your fun but don't disturb the other students."

"What would you do to pass the time when things were slow, while everyone was busy studying?"

"Go around and shove the windows up and down every few minutes."

"Well, I guess the job is yours."

"I wonder if you'd mind putting a bowl of pretzels on the desk for me. I get-ah-homesick sort of easy, and that desk and all reminds me—"

"I don't think we could do that, Checkemoff, but you might try periodical slips. You'd better salt them well, though. That is all, Checkemoff. Report in September."

THE COMMENTATOR

Conducted by Hilton Wick

Events of the past week have clearly demonstrated the momentous times in which we live. In just the space of a few days a powerful aggressor nation of the world has terrified most of the civilized peoples of the earth.

Fourteen short months ago Germany occupied Czechoslovakia, and since that time step by step she has increased her territory at least one hundred per cent (including those recently conquered lands). Countries which have been victims include Poland, Denmark, Norway, Luxemburg, Netherlands, and Belgium. Three-fourths of the peoples of the world are at war. The United States is the only democracy and only powerful nation of the world which is not fighting for its existence.

One week ago yesterday Germany began her assault on the "low countries." Resistence is now practically nullified there, and the great drive is on France. Altogether in the past few weeks Germany has added almost seventy million people under her control and almost 250 thousand square miles of territory. In other words Germany has doubled her population and territory. Norway is divided from the compact Germany, but otherwise Germany's territory is unified. It seems as if Hitler is out to make Napoleon look like a pacifist.

After logically considering the resources, land, air, and sea power of the two forces, we can only conclude that Germany has attempted too much. What will Germany do with the territories that she has conquered? Netherlands and Belgium are especially densely populated and will only add to Germany's food problem. Norway cannot contributed greatly to the food resources of the German nation. It is probable that Paris will not fall in six weeks. If Paris is not taken within this time, I believe that Germany's cause is lost. Her only salvation is a speedy victory which I believe will not occur. Governing these newly acquired lands will also prove quite a problem to the Hitler regime. Military control in all of these territories will almost be essential if Germany is to hold them. To maintain military control Germany will have to sacrifice soldiers which she could use to far greater advantage some where else.

The Allies have the power to win. They are not characterized so much as the side which wins battles, but are the side which wins wars. Somehow they will muddle through! At the present writing the predicted "greatest battle in history" has not occurred. If it should come, it might prove a vital turning point in the war. Russia is still a great mystery, and Italy has not yet entered the conflict.

What is occurring here in America? Thursday our President asked Congress for one billion dollars additional defense appropriations. Airplane production is to be greatly increased. From all indications our people are becoming concerned about our security. Today, leading Republican leaders endorsed the plan for increased defenses. All of this agitation and armament may have a dissasterous effect on us. It may subconsciously instill in us a desire to go to war. It is regrettable that such could become our reaction. Lessons of the past are slowly being forgotten.

Seemingly Germany's power has been underestimated. From indications that news reports give us today, Germany has penetrated the weakest part of the Maginot line, the Sedan region. The extent of this drive is unknown. The most reliable sources say that the Germans are within one hundred miles of Parris. This would indicate that the advance has been almost thirty miles into French territory. Expectations are that a great battle will soon occur between the two armies.

The overwhelming odds are still against Germany. With her additional food problems, governing problems, the Allied navies, the Allied land forces, and the total resources of the Allies, the Germans will have quite a time.

Perhaps it is rather optimistic to say the following, but I believe that Germany's moves through the "low countries" and France this past week is the beginning of the decadence of Hitlerism. Morally Hitler's invasion was wrong; practically it will prove to be wrong also.

ity, and a landslide.

Among the many unusualities of the country there is the fact that no one speaks above a whisper. This is the outgrowth of years of participation in whispering campaigns. There is no cheering at athletic contests because no one will speak above a whisper. I heard one man speak in a natural tone and those around him dropped dead as if a bomb had exploded among them.

We can all be glad that no such situation exists here, because the whole set up is most unpleasant. The defeated go around with their heads down and their lower lip dragging on the ground. The victors fly about and are always bumping into the ceiling as they try to keep going up.

BALL PUNISHERS

Maryville clouted the Railsplitters to the tune of 20-6 yesterday, returning to the head of the conference. Freshman Rock and Shelfer took care of the hurling and catching duties, and Nig's understudy, "Ha Ha" McGaha, knocked out a four bagger. The boys left again at daybreak today, so that the minute details for the paper were unavailable.

NEW TALENT

McGaha's turn to the pitching staff aid hasn't turned out at all bad. McGaha turned back the Scotties' arch rivals from Tennessee here this week, and did some of the run making to boot.

Nevertheless in the grind to hold our precarious lead, the team will miss J. Q.'s big bat and trusty wing. There may be a possibility that Mr. Wilburn may get into uniform, and take his turn on the big end of the lineup, but pitching again is out.

BLACK CREPE AND STUFF

The loss to Milligan came as a shock to each and every one of us—Mourning over the unfortunate, and sinister event was heard over the usual calm and serenity of Carnegie. The lads returned with determined and long faces; and proceeded to batter every pitcher and ball they've seen since. Only one more tie up will come between the two enemies, and that meeting will be colossal, in its effects.

TWO TO THE TOP

Two matches lie in front of the tennis team before they'll mark down the best record ever made in Maryville tennis as far as the records go, and certainly the best of recent years. Asking Coach about his boys the other afternoon, we heard some pretty enthusiastic statements about the lads. Morrow and Van Cise, as a doubles team and their state victory certainly gives ample grounds for a coach to grin. Coach is well pleased with the chances of an Akana-Van Cise combination next year, too. Paul's playing in doubles has become very good of late.

NOT BAD

The track team's second place in the state meet, any year but this, would have called for all kinds of celebration. The letdown from last year has sort of cooled our praise in the athletic talk around school, but it's not very often a school our size can man-handle all these other big Tennessee squads.

Tennessee Falls To Scotty Nine's Booming Bat 12-6

On Tuesday the Maryville college baseball team trounced the team from the University of Tennessee by the score of 12-6 behind the four hit pitching of McGaha on the diamond at Maryville. It was Mac's second trip to the mound for the Scotties this year and he turned in a commendable job.

The Scotties big bats were booming once again as they collected a total of eleven bingles off the offerings of the Orange and White. Of these, 11 were singles and McGaha had a double to account for the hits of the day. On the other side of the field O'Neil slapped a four bagger, while the other hits were two singles and a double.

Scot walked to start things off for the Highlanders and stole second. He came home with the first run for the Scotties on Hughes' single; Hughes himself scoring a moment later on a stolen base and an error.

U-T scored their run in the first on another error, a stolen base, and two wild pitches. They scored again in the third on a walk and two more miscues.

The Scotties scored four more in the second inning when Headrick walked, Shelfer singled and 2 stolen bases Honaker walked and loaded the sacks and Cragan got a single to score two runs. Hughes got on via an error and went to second on a wild pitch.

The third inning the Scotties continued on where they left off and gained five more runs.

McGaha doubled to start things off in the fifth and was followed by Headrick who singled to score Mac. Fred Shelfer slapped a hard single to place Headrick "on the pond". Pierce came through and singled to score Headrick and advanced Shelfer. Taylor struck out but Scot walked to load the bases. Cragan again came through and scored two more runs. Hughes followed with another single but Kindred ended the inning a minute later.

Mac had only one bad inning when he allowed four runs to cross the platter. He walked the first two men and then the next man up knocked a long home run to score the three runs off the bat. Another run followed before Mac quenched the fires.

The Scotties were held in check for the next three innings and it was not until the seventh that they scored the last run of the ball game. Hodges again came through with his second straight single of the game and his third hit in a row and scored Pierce with the final run.

The hitting honors went to the winning pitcher as Mac collected a double and a single for the afternoon. Hughes got two singles as did Hodges and Cragan.

Tennis Stars Win Three Matches

The prides of the Highlands turned in another brilliantly mon match yesterday, humiliating Tennessee Wesleyan 6-1. It maintained their record of no defeats all year.

In the entire play no match went more than two sets; Akana turned back the Wesleyan No. 2 man in love sets, Pratt gave his man one game, and Van Cise dropped two games during the play. The first doubles was won by the champions 6-1, 6-0. May and Forester took the first game of the match and then scarcely earned a point. The only good match of the day was between Morrow and Forester in number one position. Forester showed a brilliant set of shots at times, but was too erratic to cope with Morrow's smooth play after the first set. Morrow won 7-5, 6-1. The loss Maryville was marked up with in the one-sided affair was the second doubles. Scot tennis hopes for next year in the form of Dooper and Felknor, lost to Anderso and Ellis.

The high-flying Highlanders blasted TPI off the court in Cookeville, Wednesday, bringing home a perfect record over all opposition, and a 5-2 score against the Engineers.

TPI stood out above all the teams Coach Fischbach's tennis stars have met this season. In the first dual meet, the two teams left off with the matches split. The win in Cookeville was a real victory. On the day preceding, Tech had downed the state champions from Sewanee, the Sewanee winner in Chattanooga being beaten in straight sets by Beerman of TPI. Morrow licked Beerman in turn in straight sets.

TPI put up an extrordinarily tough match in the doubles, managing to run the play into three sets. Morrow and Van Cise showed the kind of play in the last set which made them state champs, winning 6-love.

Maryville copped the number three and four singles, with Van Cise beating English of TPI, and Pratt winning after three sets of tight tennis over Hambler. Akana and Stevenson won easily in the second doubles match to complete a 5-2 final score.

Tuesday against Milligan, the home lads had a typical conference field day, whitewashing Milligan 7-0. Frank Morrow revenged his only defeat this year outside of the state tournament, beating Hyder 6-4, 6-3 in a match which was all Morrow. Two other matches went to three sets but the champs weren't threatened with an upset at any time during the afternoon.

Next week Maryville will meet LMU and Tusculum. Maryville has not met LMU this year but expects little trouble in defeating them for a perfect season. Tusculum, defeated early in the season 6-1, stands little chance in worrying their mighty foes on the dust of old Memorial.

Archery Tourney Initiated Today

The athletic department is holding an archery tournament this year in answer to the new interest in archery on the hill. The tournament is planned to be an annual athletic event, and is to be held this afternoon on the football field.

Scottie Runners Drop To Second Place As Vols Win State Track Meet

In the state intercollegiate track and field meet held last Saturday afternon at Tennessee's Shields-Watkins field, the Maryville college tracksters relinquished the crown to U-T but heaped up 21 points for state runner-up honors.

Tennessee, with the best cinder-burning squad in a decade, monopolized the scoring by capturing 13 of 15 first places and setting two new state records for a commanding total of 97 points.

In bagging second place honors for Maryville, the kiltie-klads outscored Vanderbilt, Chattanooga, TPI, Milligan, Sewanee and LMU, with those trailing in that order.

The most outstanding man for the Orange and Garnet was Captain Joe Etheredge in this, his last intercollegiate competition. Etheredge, although nursing an injured foot, crossed the bamboo at a height of 6 feet to lead the pack in the high-jump. His broad jump distance was good for a fourth place.

"Baby" Baird turned in a thrilling second in the mile event after being nosed out at the tape by Austin of U-T. The Vol runner missed a new state mark by less than one second. The standing mile record is held by Paul of Maryville who ran it in 4 minutes and 37.4 seconds in 1934.

Bill Baird ran a good race in the 880 yard event losing out to Captain Warren of U-T whose time was 2:02.2. Vernon Lloyd, Bill Baird, Cliff Procter, and Baby Baird won runner-up honors in the mile relay, which was also clinched by the Vols.

Summary: Tennessee 97; Maryville 21; Vanderbilt 15; Chattanooga 15; TPI 7; Milligan 5; Sewanee 5; LMU 0.

Maryville Hopefuls Drop Heartbreaker To Milligan 7 To 6

On Monday the Maryville college baseball team lost their second conference game of the year to Milligan college by the score of 7-6. The other game of the year lost by the Highlanders was the trouncing received at the hands of the Carson-Newman nine. The visitors collected a total of 9 hits off the offerings of Short and Rock, while the home club gathered five safeties from O'Donnell.

Errors were again the cause of the downfall of the Scotties and there were no less than nine miscues made during the game. The visitors scored the first thing off the bat in the first inning when they scored one run without a single hit. Two errors and a play at second scored the first run.

Maryville tallied also in the first. Cragan singled after Scotty had been retired, after flying out to deep center field. Tommy stole second and scored on Kindred's single. Maryville also scored in the second without a single bungle. The opposing pitcher allowed two walks and an error was committed to score Headrick with the second Maryville run of the ball game.

Milligan got back a run in their half of the second when they took advantage of two more errors, a single, and a base on balls. Until this point, although four runs had been scored, there had only been two hits; one by each team.

In the fourth and fifth, Milligan scored four runs. An error followed by two straight singles score several runs in the fourth, and three errors and another single scored two more in the fifth. The score at this point read: Maryville 4, Milligan 6. The final tally for the visitors was made in the eighth on two singles.

The Scots scored a run in the fifth with Tommy Cragan's double and an error allowing Cragan to score the run. Thus far Tommy was the only man to have a hit off of O'Donnell.

In the exciting ninth the Scots came to bat with the score 7-4 against them. Headrick, first man up, flied out. Then Starn, pinch-hitting for Shelfer, was hit by a pitched ball. Ira Hodges, who batted for Taylor, stepped into a high pitch and drove it to deep center field for a big booming triple to score Starn. Honaker then drove in Hodges with a timely single. Cragan struck out to end the scoring, but the score now read: Maryville 6, Milligan 7.

"Sketching Personality" By Eleanor Long Tonight

Eleanor Long, in her original talk, "Sketching Personality", will outline to Bainonian members tonight the difficulties that an artist meets in trying to catch facial expressions and portraying personality. Miss Long, a junior, will illustrate her talk by the means of her own freehand drawings. All those who know of Miss Long's drawing ability and her witty conversational way know that the program will be interesting as well as informative. A very important business meeting will follow the program. The meeting will begin at the regular time, 6:15, in Bainonian hall.

Writers' Workshop Will Have Picnic

Initiation of the fifteen new members of Writers' Workshop will take place Monday evening at the annual picnic in the College Woods, Howard Dizney, chairman of the initiation committee, announced in a press conference recently. "The neophytes," he said, "will be requested to act in an, shall we say, unorthodox manner to amuse us more experienced writers." Dizney, a stickler for parliamentary procedure, will also require the reading of the Constitution, it is reported by a usually dependable source.

Old and new members will meet at four o'clock in front of Thaw hall. The graduating members of the organization are John H. Fisher, George L. Hunt, Ruth Abercrombie, Isabelle Jay, Stephen Amos, Jane Law, Clifford Procter, Elizabeth Seel, Mignonne Myers, Charlotte Moughton, Otto Pflanze, Jr., Harold Copeland, John Wintermute, and Mabel Ennis.

Play And Article By Wintermute and Brink Printed In Periodical

Last month's issue of "Cue", the national Theta Alpha Pi magazine, had two articles by Maryville college students. The play by John Wintermute that won first prize in national competition was reprinted and an article by Frank Brink on makeup.

Brink's article is called "So You Want To Make Up." It is a new idea based on the theories of the cubist artists and has been studied very carefully by him. Brink is a dramatic art major and is planning to do honors work next year. He recently was a delegate to the national Theta Alpha Pi convention.

The national prize-winning play by John Wintermute called "Seventy Times Seven" was given at a studio tea last fall. It is a one act religious drama. Wintermute has been active in dramatics at Maryville. He has played five leads, with numerous minor roles and is president of the Theta Alpha Pi chapter here. During the past two years, Wintermute has directed and staged two successful senior class plays at a high school here.

"Devil's Million" To Be Given Tuesday

John Wintermute, dramatic art major, will present his honors work play Tuesday evening at 8:15 in Voorhees chapel. The play is a three act tragedy called "The Devil's Million". There will be no admission charge.

The play, "The Devil's Million", is in three acts with a prologue and an epilogue and will run for approximately two and a half hours. It is a tragedy based on the philosophy that wealth and power, in the hands of the ignorant, lead to no good end. The leads will be played by Frank Brink as James Moore and Marian Northup as Margaret. The supporting cast will include Bobby Butts, Bill Lewis, June Morley, George Phelps, John Hawkins, Gordon Bennett and Charles Hutchins.

Frank Brink is serving as assistant director and the staging is being done by Harvey Lehman and Lloyd Shue.

VOLUME 25 MARYVILLE, TENN. JUNE 1, 1940 NUMBER 30

Wintermute, Allen, Walters, McCollum, Fish To Appear in A. A. Milne's Play "Dover Road" Monday Evening at 8

Three-Act Comedy Will Be Presented by Seniors

As its annual dramatic production the class of 1940 is presenting A. A. Milne's three-act comedy, "The Dover Road", Monday evening, June 3 in Voorhees chapel. This presentation will be one of the principal activities of commencement week.

In what its author calls an "absurd comedy" the plot centers around events that transpire in the spacious home of a Mr. Latimer on Dover Road. Here travellers about to be indiscreet in their actions are brought to be the guests of Mr. Latimer who will show them the error of their ways. The part of Mr. Latimer is played by John Wintermute, who in this role climaxes four college years that have been crowned with dramatic successes. The guests are portrayed by Charles Fish as Leonard, Louise Allen as Anne, Esther McCollum or Eustacia, and Bruce Walters as Nicholas. The staff of the Latimer household is headed by A. Russell Stevenson as Dominic, the butler, and Milton Schreiber, James Jarrell, Nell Yeck, and Cecelia Jones as the servants.

A. A. Milne is one of the leading writers of modern light comedy and is the author of a recently published autobiography. He was for a number of years an editor of "Punch", outstanding British humon magazine, and is the author of the well-known comedy, "Mr. Pim Passes By." "The Dover Road" was first produced in New York in 1921.

Glenn Young heads the production staff for the senior play. The rest of the staff is composed of Harold Austin, stage manager, assisted by Stone Norton; business manager, Paul Moon; advertising manager, Dale Mathias; costume mistress, Elizabeth Stonc; and properties manager, Elsie Klingman.

The stage set for "The Dover Road" has been designed by Miss Virginia Purinton, instructor in art. The one set, that of the interior of the Latimer home, is done in ultra-modern style.

Tickets for the production are fifty cents and have been on sale since early this week. The proceeds from the play are used to defray class expenses and to provide for a gift from the class to the college.

Dr. H. A. Morgan, TVA Official Speaks To Nearly 140 Graduating Students At 121st. Commencement program

DR. HARCOURT A. MORGAN

Almost 250 Persons March In Annual Processional

On Wednesday, June 5, the one hundred and twenty-first annual commencement exercises of Maryville college will be held at 10 a.m. in Voorhees chapel. The speaker will be Dr. Harcourt A. Morgan, one of the directors of the TVA and a former president of the University of Tennessee.

In the commencement processional and recessional will mark almost two hundred and fifty persons. This number includes the vesper choir, the directors of the college, the faculty, and the students who are graduating. Following the address by Dr. Morgan, President Ralph W. Lloyd will confer degrees, Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science in home economics to members of the senior class and honorary degrees to those so recognized by the college. The board of directors of the college will meet Wednesday morning at 8:30 a.m. to award the degrees.

The musical part of the commencement program includes four numbers, the processional, played by the organ and by trumpeters, is the hymn "God of Our Fathers." The choir will sing "Holy Lord God" by Cain, and "The Creation", by Richter. The recessional hymn is the Austrian hymn, "Glorious Things of Thee Are Spoken."

A regular part of the commencement program is the recognition of honor students. In addition to announcing those who graduate magna cum laude and cum laude the college recognizes the members of Alpha Gamma Sigma and students who have done honors work. The members of Alpha Gamma Sigma this year are Ruth Crawford, Helen Bewley, Ruth Abercrombie, Jane Law, Arda Walker, John Fisher, Dan McGill, Ruth Mack, Thomas Sshaffer, Margaret Sisk, Harriet Miller, and Margaret Halsey. The honors work students are John Fisher (English), John Wintermute (dramatic art), Mignonne Myers (English), George Hunt (English), Barbara McCutcheon (home economics), James Montgomery (sociology), Dan McGill (economics), and William Mooney (psychology).

Dr. Morgan, the commencement speaker, is an honorary alumnus of Maryville college having had the degree of doctor of laws conferred upon him in 1919, the year that he became president of the University of Tennessee.

Fourteen women of the junior class will carry the traditional daisy chain through which the procession will pass. Louise Darden, vice-president of this year's junior class is in charge of the daisy chain. She has selected the following girls to take part in it: Mary Orr, Lois Ann Alexander, Miriam Nethery, Lily Pinneo, Mary Louise Cooper, Edith Hitch, Jean White, Virginia Wheeler, Barbara Swift, Vivian Moore, Eleanor Steinbrinck, Jane Corbett, Jean McCammon, and Helen Williams.

Sophomore Cooperative Test Grades Released By Dean of Personnel

Results of the sophomore cooperative tests have been tabulated, showing how 199 Maryville sophomores compare with the average American sophomores. The test, which was divided into three main parts, was given to all sophomores who did not take the exam last year.

The English test was rated with the national norms, which are based upon returns from fifty thousand sophomores in ninety colleges over a period of five years. The average national score is 59.3; the average Maryville score is 59.3. Following are the names of those sophomores who rated highest in the English test, and their national percentile rank:

Marian Jenkins, 100; Charlotte Colby, 100; Donald Kent, 100; Lola E. Ball, 100; Irma Criswell, 99; Louise Marshall, 99; Dorothy Barber, 98; Curtis Wright, 98; Anne Gammon, 97; Elizabeth Pascoe, 96; and Bette Umbach, 96. There were three ties in the group, made between Criswell and Marshall; Barber and Wright; and Pascoe and Umbach.

The general science test shows the average Maryville medjan to be higher than the national median; the nation median is 51.0, while that of Maryville is 54.21. The national norms of this test are based upon returns from 8000 sophomores from fifty colleges. These are the highest ten and their national percentile rank:

William Headrick, 99; Glenn McAfee, 99; Quentin Myers, 99; Dudley Moore, 98; Lloyd Shue, 97; Fred Snell, 97; Edward Wiezalis, 97; Warren T. Culver, 96; Paul E. Sieber, 96; and Charles Eble, 95.

Since the contemporary affairs test is made up new each year, no national norms are available until the scores from all colleges this year have been completed. Although Maryville college sophomores cannot yet be ranked with the average American sophomores, they can be ranked with other Maryville sophomores. These are the highest ten, and their Maryville percentile rank:

William Headrick, 100; Glenn McAfee, 100; Donald Kent, 99; Henry Wick, 99; David Kidder, 98; William L. Walker, 98; Louise Marshall, 97; Jack Gilmore, 97; John Hoelzer, 96; and George Tibbetts, 96. One tie exists, between Kent and Henry Wick.

William Headrick and Glenn McAfee rate special distinction in ranking first and second in both the general science and contemporary affairs tests; also, Donald Kent, who ranked third in the English test, and in the contemporary affairs test.

Dr. and Mrs. R. W. Lloyd Entertain Senior Class

Dr. and Mrs. R. W. Lloyd entertained the senior class at a breakfast on the lawn of their home last Tuesday, May 28, at 8 o'clock. Tables were spread on the front lawn and were gayly decorated. After breakfast had been served, cards were passed out and four conversational periods were designated in which some certain topic of conversation had to be carried on. Dr. Lloyd also showed pictures of May Day and other events on the campus.

Senior Chapel Section Is Given Junior Class In Impressive Ceremony

Wednesday morning the seniors, wearing their caps and gowns, and led by the class mascot, Bobby Seaton, took their seats in chapel and in a short service gave those seats to the incoming senior class. President Joe Etheredge made a short speech presenting the seats to the juniors, and the speech of acceptance was made by Douglas Steakley, president of the incoming senior class.

The service was conducted by members of the senior class. Richard Heydinger read the scripture, and he was followed by Bruce Robinson who led the group in prayer. Steve Amos, whose poetry was voted one of the best pieces of work by the Writers' Workshop for the last semester, read several of his poems. Ralph Reed, accompanied by Louise Felknor, sang a solo. After his selection, Ruth Woods and Bernice Cathcart rendered a duet.

The ceremony of exchanging seats was conducted next, and when the juniors had moved to their new places, Russell Stevenson led in a prayer for the college which was followed by the singing of the Alma Mater. The seniors led the recessional from the chapel.

Tribute Paid On Death Of Coach Robert C. Thrower

The death of Mr. Robert C. Thrower, a member of the faculty and assistant coach of athletics, came as a shock to the entire campus on Monday, May 21. Mr. Thrower had been very ill for several months. The funeral was held on Wednesday at 3:30 from the college chapel. The men of the faculty served as honorary pall bearers while two representatives from each of the teams that Mr. Thrower had coached acted as pall bearers. Students from athletic teams and gym classes lined the road from the chapel to the north gate through which the funeral procession passed.

Mr. Thrower was born in Texas and grew up there. He became a student at Southwestern University, Texas, where Mr. Honaker was athletic coach. It was through this connection that he came to Maryville college as a freshman when Mr. Honaker came to coach in 1921. He was a student here for four years, graduating in 1925. In all four years he was on the varsity football and track teams and for one year on the varsity basketball team.

In the fall of 1925 Mr. Thrower was brought back to the college as instructor in Spanish and assistant director of physical training and athletics. He had been an instructor for two of his student years.

The following paragraphs are from the tribute paid to Mr. Thrower by President Lloyd at the funeral service:

"I Cor. 16:13-14: 'Play the man, be strong! Let all you do be done in love.'

"In Robert C. Thrower's death a strong man has gone from our midst.

"I. He was a strong man physically.

"For nineteen years his tall, powerful form has been familiar and admired not only at Maryville college but throughout this part of the South. He has been an example of great physical strength. This has made his illness and death at the early age of 39 so surprising, almost unbelievable.

"As he grew older, he retained the strength of his youth. God gave him strength above the average, and this Bob trained and disciplined.

"II. Robert Thrower was a strong leader.

"This was recognized while he was yet a student. He was captain of the football team one year. In the 1925 annual his picture fills a whole page in the feature section with the inscription 'Maryville's Favorite'. While popularity is often shallow, it was in his case on solid foundations.

"As a leader, he has had the respect of his men, has known how to put them where they would contribute most to the teams, has been a good counselor and teacher of individuals, and has won the confidence of the youngest and oldest alike.

"III. He exerted a strong influence.

"His own strength and fairness won the respect of all. He was reserved and did not wear his sentiments on his sleeve. But in his heart was a real motive of love and service. Many a boy discovered this and confided in him and depended on his help. He stood for clean living and fair play. He influenced boys whom many could not influence, and we were all influenced by his modest and wholesome strength.

"IV. Robert Thrower grew in strength of character and achievements as the years went by.

"His academic record shows it. He was the first to recognize that in his personal bearing, outlook, habits, intellectual and cultural life, and in his religion the influences of the years and his own efforts brought marked development.

"He has grown in strength of many kinds. That is one of the most glorious things one can say of a man. And it has been growth toward the spiritual life into which he now has entered fully. Maryville college has lost a son and a leader. I am sure he would wish to say to us who remain what he had heard:

" 'Stand firm in the faith, play the man, be strong!

Let all you do be done in love'."

We Appreciate It All!

Since this is the last issue of the Echo for the year and the last one that this editor will "put to bed", it seems only fitting that we should show our appreciation for the cooperation and work which has been given by all the members of the staff and to congratulate the new co-editors, Thomas and Felknor. To the senior members of the staff—George Hunt for his weekly column and Arlene Phelps for her "Talk of the Week"—the editor is grateful for their assistance and willing help in regard to the paper.

To J. Ed Thomas, the managing editor, we wish to express our thanks for his diligent and consistent work, and to Frank Cross, the sports editor, for his faithful service in editing the sports page. Other members of the staff should be duly recognized for their services not alone in writing the news but in reading proof and in writing heads.

To others not on the staff who have offered constructive criticism regarding the paper we express our sincere thanks. We could not hope to voice student opinion or follow student needs without this aid.

To Dr. Griffitts, the faculty adviser, who has been helpful in advising in many matters and who is in no way what might be termed a "censor", we wish to show our appreciation.

We could not have hoped to have attempted to put out a paper without the cooperation of all these and we are truly grateful for the work they have done.

ECHO-HUMOR

By DON KENT

Oh, Them Carefree College Days!

At this time of year it becomes the custom to heap praise on the leaders of the senior class prominent in athletics, scholarship, the arts, and general all-weather culture. This task we leave to other members of columny. We would like our parting words to be in praise of the "unsung hero." We don't refer to the Stage Screws: Dizney is fond of pointing out that after you've sung of yourself as an unsung hero for a few years you aren't unsung any more. No, we use the term to designate the forgotten man of the Class of 1940—the laddie who has never made the honor roll, helped to run the college, or held an office, even down to a class presidency.

The fact that, academically, his decimal point comes before rather than after the nine does not mean that he has made no contribution to intellectual life here on the hill. He for four long years has clung desperately to the lower end of the normal curve, holding it down for his more publicized brothers. While others have climbed happily up the ladder of success, his arms have grown weary anchoring it at the bottom.

But, you ask, how about the finer things? True, he gave no senior recital. Indeed, the odds are rather high that he didn't even go. Where was he? Why, down at the Chatterbox making his fellow humans happy by slugging the jook box organ with the business ends of wooden ice cream spoons for round after round of "Row, Row, Row" and "You Are My Sunshine."

He is not known to many of you, for his are the quiet sacrifices. He didn't get to go to Retreat, but it is he who keeps the Y game room supplied with cue balls and chalk from the downtown pool halls. He didn't rate free meals in a Knoxville hotel for a week, like the varsity members of the local Liars" Club, but you should hear him debate about a shuffle-board score! He deserves the praise of all of us for relieving the journey to the business district of the stench of at least one mule. Yet he wants no thanks for his act. He seems willing, almost anxious, to have the thing forgotten.

We have intended not to disparage the achievements of the recognized campus leaders, but merely to tell you that the other half have also served. And, to paraphrase the Bard of Cambridge, currently being patronized by another column under the alias, "Bard of Haverhill":

Tell me not that Maryville College
Is a place for work, not play,
For these lads gained little knowledge
As they sleep 'till ten each day.
Lives of these guys all remind us
We can cut and waste our time,
And still have no cares to bind us
Although we are six themes behind.

Have you heard about Little Alfy at the supper Mrs. Walker gave for the 1940 Chilhowean staff Tuesday night?

The fried chicken had been cleaned up, the mashed potatoes were all gone, and Alfy was stubbornly finishing up his last few spoonfuls of ice cream.

Just then Miss McCampbell, who was assisting the hostess, approached the table and remarked, "Right outside the door, there is a nest of little woodpeckers."

"No, thanks," said Alfy, "I just couldn't eat another thing."

THE COMMENTATOR

Conducted by Hilton Wick

LOOKING BACKWARD

President Lloyd looked back on the year a week and a half ago and reminded us of decorated mules and other things. For the third year the Echo columnist has also examined the year in retrospect.

The first issue of the Echo carried among other stories the news that Maryville was to have a course in aeronautics for eligible students, that Thetas rush week was to be in the form of a trip to Hawaii, and that the corduroy had been completed as the gift of Mrs. John Walker. On September 30, President Lloyd talked from the New York's World's Fair over the Mutual Broadcasting System. Dan McGill got the highest average for the previous semester, and Mr. George Drury Webster assured a breathlesly waiting public that he hated war (courtesy Commentator). On the sport's page there was a full page article about "Johnny Stone Day," a celebration of the Washington American League baseball team in honor of Johnny Stone, Maryville graduate and outstanding big league player until his illness two season ago. Alpha Sig also beat Athenian at football, 20-0.

In the month of October there was the usual busy social round. Dr. Charles Washburn of Nashville spoke at the YMCA and dedicated the new hymnals. Professor Queener's chickens won the Grand Prize at the Blount County fair, the Highlanders football team eased out a 26-0 victory over Tusculum, the Disc club heard Carpenter's "Perambulator Suite", there was a joke in the Exchange column, H. V. Kaltenborn appeared on the same program with the college choir in Knoxville, and Founder's Day honoring Prof. J. T. Lamar was held. "Nancy Drew and the Hidden Staircase" was playing at the Park theatre. Then Hallowe'en came October 30. Just one big thing after another.

Let's look at November. The College Players presented "Our Town", Alexander Kipnis scored an outstanding success as the first Artist Series number, the New Forward Fund campaign began, the Law club held its first mock trial, the Johnson City Buccaneers handed the Scotties a 20-7 defeat, there was quite a furor when FDR mixed up the Thanksgiving dates but it did not prevent us from getting 550 pounds of turkey at the orthodox Maryville celebration, and five new members were elected to Theta Alpha Phi.

January began in a big way with Dr. and Mrs. Collins becoming the proud parents of a seven-pound baby girl on the 3rd of the month. Miss Virginia Purinton came as the new art instructor, and Leap Year was observed by many optimistic hopefuls. The second semester began with the February Meetings under the inspired leadership of Dr. Louis H. Evans and Dr. Sidney E. Stringham. The Tony Sarg marionettes came the day between semesters. Prof. Hovel sang the leading role in a Knoxville performance of "Faust." and the debating team captured six places at Appalachian Mountain tournament. On February 17 President-Emeritus Wilson celebrated his 82nd birthday, and up to February 24 seven students of the aeronautics course had taken their solo flights. According to the headlines, the student council came to life by getting a water fountain installed in Fayerweather. (Seriously, we do appreciate their efforts that resulted in the senior mountain trip.) The most dastardly deed of the month was the capture of the bell clapper. The most obvious filler of the month was the Commentator's review of the dictionary.

Three months to go. March: Milanov and Graves appeared in a very enjoyable joint recital, "Winterset" was presented by Theta and Alpha Sig, the wrestling team won the state title, there was a faculty round table discussion at IRC on the subject "America in a World at War", and throughout the month junior members of the Echo staff edited the paper. Ruth Mack, J. Ed Thomas, and Dan McGill topped the first semester honor roll, and the swimming team presented "Wellzabubblin". Maryville college was host to the National Convention of Pi Kappa Delta, and it snowed Easter Sunday. There were welcome visitors to the campus over the Easter week end.

April: Maybe we'd better forget the April 1 issue of the Echo, although the sport's column far exceeded itself for that one week. The Glee clubs presented Balfe's "Bohemian Girl", the other two social societies presented "Family Portrait", and Dr. Jaroslav Novak of Czechoslavakia spoke to various groups. Comprehensives were given the seniors and they accepted them. And the shuffleboards came! The tennis team began the best season it has ever known.

So far this month we have enjoyed a charming May Day with a beautiful Queen, an unusually good Music Week, Echo editor selections, good columns by Don Kent, and John Wintermute's original honors work play. For some of us there is a lot to look forward to in the next two weeks, and also there is the sober thought that soon we will be leaving Maryville. If you don't know what we mean, you will when you are seniors.

All this has happened while the world outside is in unspeakable turmoil. Let us hope that college life next year will go just as smoothly and not be disturbed by the things that are so external to the pursuit of learning.

The COMMENTATOR expresses his appreciation to all who have read this column.

Mrs. Walker Entertains 1940 Chilhowean Staff

Mrs. John R. Walker, gracious benefactor of the college to whom the 1940 Chilhowean was dedicated, was the hostess at her home in the college woods at a dinner Thursday evening for the Chilhowean staff.

After the dinner, which was held in the Morningside tea room, the group was shown through the gardens and through Mrs. Walker's home. They listened to a recording, and then sang folk songs.

Faculty guests present included Dr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Lloyd, and Dr. and Mrs. Fred A. Griffitts. Dr. Griffitts is the faculty adviser for the Chilhowean.

A Great Athlete, Athletic Coach
True Friend—Representative

Spirit

By Joe Etheredge

MAY 30—The Scotties started off the athletic season with a bang by winning over a tough Union college eleven in their first football game of the season by the score of 7-0. The following Saturday, the fighting Scots ran wild over the Pioneers of Tusculum college and downed them by the very decisive score of 26-0. This victory was not without its cost however, as George Morton received a severely sprained ankle during the first quarter and was out the balance of the season. The Scots met the highly-rated eleven from Milligan on Wilson Field and the Milligan team lived up to advance notices to down the Scotties in a close, hard-fought game by a score of 7-2. The Scots likewise lost the following week in their engagement with the Tennessee Wesleyan Bulldogs by a score of 26-19. The homecoming game between Maryville and Carson-Newman was the highlight of the season for the Scots. The Eagles scored first and failed in the try for extra point. The Scots scored in the third frame and failed on the try for extra point. The game ended in this 6-6 deadlock. This was also a costly game fo rthe Highlanders because of the injury of Bob Jackson. The following week, King college scored twice in the last three minutes to defeat the Scots 13-0. The Scots outplayed the King Tornado until those last three minutes and gained much recognition by holding the powerful team to such a low score. The Bucaneers from Johnson City gave the Scots the biggest upset of the season by defeating them 20-7. The Scots were handicapped from injuries in this game and were unable to present as strong a team as usual for the game. The Scotties came back with a vengeance the following week to down the Lawyers from Cumberland by the score of 20-0. For the final game of the season, the Scotties journeyed to Newberry, South Carolina, for a post-season game. The Scotties were completely out of their class, but managed to score twice on the "big" lads of South Carolina. The final score was 40-13.

Considering the size of our team, and hard luck caused by injuries, I think we had a very successful season and I'd like to take this chance to give all the honor to Coach Honaker and the late Coach Thrower.

BASKETBALL

Coach Honaker took a small squad and built them into one of the best teams in the Smoky Mountain Conference. The "hardwood" boys beat everyone in the conference at least once. The Scotties finished second in the conference standings. The Highlanders had a total of 20 wins to 4 losses and scored 617 points to their opponents' 567.

Again, I'd like to say that all of the credit for the team's showing goes to Coach Honaker and his ability to make something out of nothing.

TRACK

The thinly-clad lads had two strikes on them at the beginning of the season because of the absence of Coach Thrower, but through splendid cooperation of all the members of the track team, the Scots ended with a fairly successful season.

The Scots lost their first meet to a highly-rated team from Davidson, N. C. The following week the Highlanders took every first place from the Lincoln Memorial University "Railsplitters." The Scots met the University of Chattanooga "Moccasins" next and defeated them in a close meet. The Scots again dominated the conference meet by scoring more points than any other two teams. The final meet for the Scots was the State Meet at Knoxville. The Highlanders were not good enough to take first place, but won a second place in spite of tough competition offered by the larger schools in Tennessee.

Again, I'd say we had a very successful year in spite of all the handicaps. The Scotties should "go places" next year and I am counting on them to be champs in every way.

Maryville Places Second to Milligan In Baseball Race

The Maryville college baseball team finished in second place in the conference standings. They lost the lead to Milligan college in the last game of the year which the Highlanders lost at Milligan by the score of 8-7. LMU finished behind the Scotties, in third place.

In twelve games the Highlanders scored 117 runs and allowed their opponents 66 tallies. The Scotties had seven men batting over .300 and three of these were hitting above .350. Hodges led the batters with an average of .500, but he was only at bat ten times during the season. McGaha led the regulars in the batting column when he slapped the pill for an average of .387. Mac gathered 24 hits out of 62 trips to the plate. Wilburn followed him with an average of .367. Nig blasted the ball 18 times for 49 times at bat. Hughes was next with an average of .321. J. D. hit 26 times out of 81 times at bat. Hitting 23 times out of 75 trips to the platter, Cragan was next in line with an average of .307.

The team held victories over every team in the conference except Milligan. They defeated Carson-Newman twice, and dropped only one to them. They defeated East Tennessee Teachers twice and Tusculum once. They beat LMU three out of four games, but lost two to Milligan. They ended up the season with a fine and impressive record of eight wins, and four defeats in the conference race.

The two dark spots on the record for the season was the loss of Nig Wilburn, due to a painful injury suffered at Carson-Newman when he tried for a sensational catch in center field, and the loss of Lamar Russell. Nig batted .367 and was the mainstay of the pitching staff, turning in several fine games. The arm seems to be better now, but Nig hasn't tried it out as yet.

Russell, regular first sacker on last year's nine was hurt at the outset of the season and was unable to break into the line-up again for the rest of the year. His arm was injured in a wrestling match and although the trouble seemed to clear up he couldn't get back in.

The discoveries for the year were Jabo Pierce on second, and Tommy Cragan on the first sack. Pierce is a freshman and was new around the keystone sack while Cragan had seen service on the bag. Jabo consistently played second and Tommy's hitting proved a big factor in the winning ways of the Highlanders. Les Rock's pitching also was a new edition as was the hurling of McGaha. Mac turned in a fine ball game against U-T and Rock pitched in several good ball games and also roamed the outfield.

Wilburn and Kindred are the only men that Coach Honaker will lose this year and the prospects for next season are particularly bright. Several freshmen have shown up well and Taylor will be a possible contender for a post next year.

Maryville Wins 2 Out Of Three On Final Road Trip

The Maryville college baseball team lost two out of three games on their three day trip to LMU and Milligan. They lost the first game of the series to LMU by the close score of 4-3, won the second game the following day by the score of 20-8. The following day the Scotties lost the crucial game to Milligan, 8-7.

In the first game, Maryville scored their first run in the fourth inning when Hughes started the inning by flying out to center, and Kindred followed him to the platter and grounded out to second. With two men gone McGaha got on base via an error. Headrick, the next man up, pounded out a booming triple to score the first run.

LMU scored one in the second on two walks and a fielder's choice. They scored again in the third on an error and three solid hits. They scored another run in the fifth inning when Walker of the home team blasted out a four bagger. In the seventh they scored their fourth and final run when the same Walker doubled and scored a minute later on an error.

The Scotties scored their final runs in the seventh inning. Pierce singled to start this uprising; Short followed him but failed to reach first, although he advanced Pierce to second to put him in scoring position. Honaker singled to score Jabo with the second run of the ball game for the Highlanders, and scored himself a minute later on an error.

The batting laurels for the game went to McGaha who hit a single and a double in two times up. Pierce also had two hits, two singles for three trips to the plate. Headrick had a triple to add his bit to the cause. The home team collected seven hits off Short.

The second game of the series Maryville ran roughshod over the victors of the previous day, and behind the pitching of Rock the Scotties collected 21 bingles and 20 runs off the opposing pitchers.

In the first inning Honaker reached first on an error, Cragan struck out, but Hughes followed with a single, and McGaha followed him with a single to score Scot and place J. D. in scoring position. Headrick kept it going and scored Mac and J. D.

In the third the Orange and Garnet scored again when Cragan walked and stole second, and then Hughes got his third straight bingle, a triple to score Cragan. In the fourth the visitors scored another run as Headrick reached first on an error. Kindred singled and Headrick scored a little later on Shelfer's long drive.

Netmen Finish Most Successful Season In History

Since winning third place honors in the state tennis meet a few weeks ago, the Maryville college swingsters are now the new champions of the Smoky Mountain conference. East Tennessee Teachers, who have monopolized the SMC race for the last four successive seasons, fell far by the wayside as the rambling Scotties overwhelmed everything in sight.

The kiltie-klads set up a record this year which will doubtless hold the spotlight for many years to come. Not only did the Fischbach-men sweep away all SMC competition, but also they placed in the state meet, a feat never before accomplished. Never before in the history of Maryville college has a Scot team captured the coveted state crown, but this year the number 1 doubles diadem, Frankie Morrow and O. Roosevelt Van Cise, scored a stunning victory over a more highly favored Sewanee duo to win the state doubles championship.

Thus, the final record is listed as a perfect season with one small exception. Tennessee Poly managed to be in a 3-3 tie with the Scots when the final and deciding set had to be called off on account of darkness. However, on the following week in a return match at Cookeville, the Scotties smashed their way to a thrilling 5-2 victory, which erased all doubt as to the superiority of the Fischbach-men.

On this championship team, which was runner-up to the runners-up in the state heap, only two of its players are seniors. Frank Morrow, number 1 man for the Scotties, and Russ Stevenson, another veteran in the doubles realm are the only men to be lost through graduation. The remaining four lettermen, Paul Akana, Roosevelt Van Cise, Ted Pratt, and Ted Kidder will return to form the nucleus of next year's title defenders. Capable reserves are also coming along for next year's crown defense; Bill Felknor, John Hoelzer, Arthur Rowan, and Ken Cooper, with another year's experience will be strong bidders for the starting berths next spring.

Coach Fischbach is quoted as having said: "As far as I know, we have just completed the most successful tennis season in the history of the college; and, although we are losing two of our best men, I think we can hold the title for a good long time."

Marriages

McGill—Corrigan

Patricia Joy Corrigan, '40, of Toronto, Canada, and William O. McGill, Jr., '39, of Baltimore, Maryland, will be married at one o'clock on June 5 in the amphitheatre in the college woods by Dr. Horace Orr, Maryville religious education professor. The wedding will take place in the lower level of the amphitheatre, surrounded by the rocky stream, and against a background of spring foliage.

Miss Corrigan will wear a white lace and net dress, tightly fitted. She will carry bridal flowers. The bride has chosen as maid of honor her cousin, Grace Hilford, of North Carolina, who will wear an aqua marquesite dress and carry appropriate flowers. Dorothy Quass and Elizabeth Stone will act as bridesmaids, wearing dresses of pink net. The best man will be John Fisher, and William Gehres will serve as usher.

Mrs. Carol Corrigan, the bride's mother, and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. O. McGill, Sr., will be present as well as many college friends. Music will be furnished by a string trio under the direction of Robert Lucero. Sam Cornelius will sing "Because."

Miss Corrigan and Mr. McGill have both been prominent in college affairs. In her senior year Miss Corrigan was elected vice-president of her class. Mr. McGill was for several years an assistant in the psychology department, and in his senior year did honors work in that field.

Following a brief wedding trip they will take up residence in Chicago, where Mr. McGill attends Chicago Theological seminary and has a student pastorate in East Garry, Ind.

Seely—West

Ruth Louise West, '40, will become the bride of Francis McLain Seely, '41, on June 5 at 1:45 in Voorhees chapel, with Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd officiating. Miss West will wear a white silk wedding dress with lace inset and a short veil of matching material. She will carry a hand bouquet of flowers.

Miss Jane Brunsen will act as maid of honor, wearing a sheer blue embroidered dress and large darker blue hat. James Garvin, cousin of the groom, will serve as best man.

Bernice Catheart, soprano, will sing "Ave Maria", and Ruth Mack will play the organ for the wedding marches and ceremony music. Following the ceremony the couple will leave for Florida, where they will take up permanent residence.

Miss West has been active in college dramatics, taking part in many of the more recent productions. Mr. Seely is a noted violinist, and plays with the college orchestra.

Student Art Exhibit Displayed in Pearsons Hall and Art Studio

A general student art exhibit is being shown from May 26 to June 6 in the art studio, third floor Anderson annex, and in Pearsons lobby. This represents work done by some of the 1939-1940 art students. Again exhibited are the two prize-winning senior works; Marie Jensen's "New Jersey Church", an oil that won the senior award for popularity; Stone Norton's "Seated Man", a marble sculpture that won the senior award for quality.

Students whose work is exhibited includes: Marie Jensen, Stone Norton, Eleanor Long, James Lee, Robert Schwarzwalder, Elva Joyce Henry, Ruth Von Cannon, and Virginia Beth Sperry. Pastel, oil, pencil, watercolor, conte crayon, and tempera represent the mediums used in these 27 pictures being exhibited. These students have been studying under Miss Virginia Purinton, who came to Maryville as art instructor at second semester. Previously they studied under Miss Marguerite Dolch and Mrs. Frances Rich Patterson.

He graduated from Maryville college in 1935, and from Columbia Theological Seminary, Decatur, Ga., in 1938. He became a member of the faculty in August of this year and began work here at that time. Mr. Smith.

Ruth Grierson And Nathalin Wright Are On Library Staff

Two members have been added to the staff of the Lamar Memorial Library. These two full-time assistants are Miss Ruth Grierson, who will fill the position formerly occupied by Mrs. Anna Lee (Fortner) Guest; and Miss Nathalia Wright, who will fill a recently created position.

Miss Grierson comes to Maryville College after holding a position for five years with the Board of Foreign Mission of the Presbyterian church. After attending Alma College, in Alma, Michigan, she was sent to India by the Presbyterian Board. There, for five years, she taught in the schools of India. Returning to America, Miss Grierson took up Library training at the University of Michigan. She has had three years experience in college teaching, but she begins, at Maryville, her first work as a librarian.

Miss Wright, who graduated from Maryville College in 1933, also begins her first work as a librarian at this college. A few years after her graduation, she became a graduate student at Yale University, where she worked toward a M. A. degree in English; she received this degree in 1938. Miss Wright taught here at Maryville College for one school year, during which time she was teaching freshman English. In 1938-1939 she worked with Henry Seidell Canby, a prominent writer when she filled the position of research assistant. Since then she has been residing at her home, which is in Maryville.

CAA Flying Course Will Be Given Again

At the time of this writing definite information as to the civilian pilot training program to be taught at Maryville for the second year has not been received from the authorities. The information which is lacking concerns the cost of the course and the number of students which will be allowed to participate in the flying. Also it is not known whether or not freshmen will be allowed to take the course, and elegibility of women is also in doubt. Last year Maryville College started this Civil Aeronautic Authority course under the direction of Miss Cora Louise Carson and was given a quota of twenty. Freshmen were allowed to take the course; two senior girls figured prominently in the group. The cost of the course last year was $35. This small fee included the cost of individual accident insurance and the rigid medical examinations given in Knoxville.

The course is divided into two parts. A 72 hour ground course will be given at the college, probably in Science hall. This course includes the history of aviation, meteorology, navigation, flying regulations, and the study of engines, parachutes, and instruments.

The second part, a 35 hour flight course will be given at a nearby airport by an operator whom the college wil select.

At the completion of the course if a satisfactory grade on the examination is receive, a private pilot's license is issued to the student. This license permits the owner to pilot a privately owned plane and to take passengers into the air.

Maryville College Opens With Annual Convocation Service

The 1940-1941 academic year of Maryville College was formally opened at the annual Convocation service Friday morning, in Voorhees Chapel. The first Convocation service at Maryville was held ten years ago, the first year Dr. Ralph Waldo Lloyd served as president o fthe college. Since the first service, each college year has been opened with a similar service.

President R. W. Lloyd, Dean E. R. Hunter, and Dean F. D. McClelland, academically costumed, took part in the service; the choir, fully robed, presented several musical features.

The address was given by President Lloyd. He spoke on a quotation from Tennyson, "O loyal to the royal in thyself." This was the theme of his series of morning addresses when he led the February meetings during his first year as president, ten years ago. He gave four things as necessary if one is to be loyal to the royal in himself:

1. Self-Reverence.
2. Self-Reliance.
3. Self-Discipline.
4. Self-Dedication.

The order of the Convocation service was as follows:

Processional hymn.
Invocation and Response.
Scripture—Dean McClelland.
Anthem—The choir.
Prayer — Dean Hunter.
The choir.
Hymn.
Address—President Lloyd.
Recessional hymn.

Five Faculty Members Shot During Summer—By Cupid

During the summer five members of the Faculty of Maryville College were married. Two of them will live in New York having resigned their places within the College. They are Ruth Katherine (Thompson) Evans who was Instructor in Music, and Anna Lee (Fortner) Guest who was Assistant Librarian.

Three men of the Faculty were married and will continue to teach at the College having brought their brides to Maryville to live. They are Archibald F. Peiper, Instructor in Political Science, who was married on June 5, to Miss Gladys Brown ('36) of Elizabethton, Tenn.; George F. Fischbach, Instructor in Physical Education who was married on August 11 to Miss Catheryn Bernice Smith ('36) of Tampa Florida; and Ralph R. Colbert, Associate Professor of Music, who was married to Miss Anna Mae Bruce of Morristown, Tennessee on August 31.

That Freshman Is Here— Have You Seen Him!

Behold—the Maryville College meeting pot. They come by ones, by twos, by droves. Some have come by train, automobile, and bus. They arrive as individuals and leave still more individualistic; but in each case there is a certain metamorphosis.

Freshmen—300 strong. And of this group there are always a few who typify some certain types into which all of them fall during the first few days of their stay on the campus. Here are some you will easily recognize:

Hillbilly—Up from the country, he is the farm's contribution to higher education. He might make a good cheerleader; all summer he's been hollerin' "Let's go team." His will be a big time at college and he will get a lot out of it because he will put a lot into it.

Football—Brawn and more brawn (very rare). He slapped a 6 ft 210 lb. figure on his application blank, got a letter from the coach, and reported in early September to "do or die" for the Scotties. Usually a good natured, likeable fellow; college wouldn't be complete without him.

Timid, shy, and bashful (homesick) —Wonders why he ever came to such a place. No refrigerator to go to once in a while; no rug on the floor; and his roommate is for Roosevelt. Poor boy—everything is against him. He wishes with all his heart that he were home with ma and pa. Being forced to wait in endless lines doesn't help his case any other. He'll probably stick it out, but right no whe doubts it.

Bookworm—He was probably valedictorian of the local graduating class. The curse of the less studious, he will end up with a grade point average that will pale 9.00. A wizard—he will undoubtedly be drafted into Alpha Gamma Sigma if he stays here that long (and he will). His essay "In accuracies in Shakespeare" won the gold medal in high school and he chose Maryville because he wants to turn the same stuff in for honors work. After graduation he will probably be a filling station operator or a drug store clerk.

Wise Guy—He's doing the college a favor to come here. If you don't believe it, ask him—he admits it. Within a few weeks he intends to really start out and tour the country. Studies are not important to him because he is already too smart to learn anymore. Unless he changes, he's good for about one semester—or less.

Podunk Center—Podunk Center isn't very large; about 150 inhabitants in all. College looks like a pretty impressive place to him. But he is worried; he doesn't know where to buy his mattress covers, books, or chapel seat. He likes the Hill though and goes from one end of the campus to the other with an ever gaping, astonished expression on his face.

City Slicker—Just the opposite of his Podunk Center contemporary. He looks on college as a necessary evil and figures that one school is as good as another. He is usually pretty serious about his education. He wants to get the stuff and get into the so-called great beyond of the business world.

So there they are — seven types that will emerge four years hence (or some of them will at least) as Mary-

NOTICE

All freshmen interested in working on the business staff of the Echo this year, please hand your application to Bob Moore, business mgr., or Dr. Griffitts in Science Hall as soon as possible.

Returning Students Now Find Numerous New Improvements

Anderson And Dining Hall Much Improved

Returning students are finding many improvements in the various buildigs on the campus. Anderson Hall is one of several that are newly conditioned. All the rooms on the third floor of this building are now being used as class rooms. This was made in order to accommodate the increased number of students enrolled this year. Four years ago not one of these third-story rooms were used as class rooms. This increase is an indication of the increased student body.

Reconditioning of the basement has made it possible to turn this part of Anderson Hall into a files department. In addition to the permanent files situated in the basement there are rooms which have been made available for printing operations. There is no more space available in Anderson.

Other improvements with which the students have been confronted consists of work done in the dining room and kitchen, in Batlett Hall, and in the Hospital. In the dining room students will find a complete redecoration job, which has added a refreshing atmosphere. The wall and woodwork have been refinished while the draperies and the equipment in the kitchen have been renovated and refinished. The first contingent of one hundred new chairs have been placed in the hall as the beginning of a policy to replace the chairs in the dining room with new chairs each year until all old chairs are replaced.

Bartlett Hall has been overlooked by the people in charge of the improvements. Replastering has been done, making the building much more attractive to visiting athletes as well as our own students. Shower rooms and locker rooms have been refinished. The Bartlett auditorium is glistening attractively, a completely new room adapted for many new uses. Adjacent to the building is being erected new brick garages for the college truck, station wagon and the athletic bus.

More attractive, clean and sanitary conditions at the hospital are now to be found by students who become ill.

Five hundred new large hymnals have been added to the College Chapel equipment. The new hymnals are finished in garnet covers with gold embossing which carries out the College colors of orange and garnet.

Y. W. Coming Out Party Is Tonight In Front Of Thaw

The Y W reception will be held at 8 o'clock this evening on the lawn in front of Thaw hall. At this time the debutantes will entertain the sub-debutantes at the first coming out party of this season. The attending debutantes are those who will be part of next year's select four hundred, and it is expected that a large number will be present.

The coming out party will be somewhat different from the usual coming out party in that it will be very informal with games on the lawn, entertainment by the debs for the sub-debs, introduction of the most prominent debs o fthe past year and also those who are leaders in the four hundred at the present time. Refreshments will be served by the debs.

To make this party the best of the season all debs (big sisters) are asked to bring the sub-debs (little sisters) whose names they have drawn. In this way this coming-out party should be the most successful and colorful of this season.

Major Charles Price To Speak Tomorrow Afternoon

Major Charles Price of Sweetwater, Tennessee will be the speaker at the YMCA meeting to be held in the newly renovated Bartlett auditorium tomorrow afternoon. Major Price who has always presented excellent talks for the Y will speak at 1:15 in the afternoon. His topic will be "Faith."

Other programs for this month include Dr. John A. McAfee of the New Providence Church and a musical program to be presented the last Sunday in September. Dr. McAfee will speak on September 22 and his topic will be "The Enemy." The program of music for the 29th will be announced at a later date.

An Unusual Privilege

Maryville College begins its one hundred and twenty-second year in a period that is one of the most crucial in world history. Since the last college year closed, nation after nation has fallen before the brutal forces of the Nazi war machine, until continental Europe has become an enslaved empire. Today one of the world's oldest and greatest democracies is engaged in a life or death struggle with the odds of military strength against her, and here in the United States we are in the midst of a feverish effort to expand our defensive forces.

It is not a time that is most conducive to a program of higher education, but it is a time when engaging in such an activity is a real privilege. We who are here are enjoying an opportunity available to the youth of few other nations, and it is available to us only because we live in a country which still practices democracy.

We are still permitted to study in an uncensored educational institution, listen to uncensored speeches, and read uncensored literature. We are not afraid to attend political meetings, or tune in our radios on a foreign station. These privileges are ours because we live in a constitutional democracy.

The system of government, the way of life that is ours deserves our best efforts for its total defense, and no group in the nation should be more enthusiastic for the job than American youth. Unfortunately there are those at the head of various "youth movements," some of them allegedly sponsored by religious organizations, who encourage extreme pacifist attitudes. Some of them have even declared that they would not fight if America were invaded by a foreign foe.

It was movements like these and attitudes like these which contributed to the collapse of France and other democracies of Europe. When any people become so unappreciative of freedom that they no longer consider it worth protecting perhaps they deserve the fate that awaits them when those who believe in totalitarian philosophies carry their plans to their conclusion.

Unless we come to a realization that if we believe in democracy we must have the same zeal for its defense that its enemies have for its destruction, no amount of arms or munitions will save America from the fate of France. If democracy is not worth defending it is not worth enjoying.

ECHO-HUMOR

By DON KENT

YOU MUST HAVE NOTICED . . .

The sophomores trying to impress the freshmen and frosh trying to impress each other; the mellowing influence of the moon at the community songfest where the singing of the alma mater found a tear lurking in every eye, and a couple in every shadow; the new roads, obviously not WPAved, because they weren't there three short months ago (besides we all know how the local Administration leans—toward the Fresh Shuffle); the hand shakes, greetings, and salutations—and the well-intentioned but sometimes awkward opening remarks; the old lovers taking up where they left off last June—in the middle of a kiss; Webster's new suits—he's worn them both already; Freshman McCord—his hair is definitely RED; those few of last June's can't-bear-to-leave-the-place seniors—but just wait till January; Doctor Lloyd's new smile—it rivals Roosevelt's .

• • • •

Freshmen being the butt of all jokes for the first three days on the campus perhaps no further inferiority complexes will develop from these rather revealing anecdotes—revealing in that they show somewhat the ingenuousness of the average first year student.

Coming down on the bus from Philly or points north was one of those freshmen who just had never been told about fried chicken and other southern customs. After crossing the Tennessee line at Bristol, he noticed with increasing wonder along the road and in the towns several women with children in their arms. On every street corner it seemed he spied a women toting a baby and every mile or so along the open road he'd sight another. Finally the answer came to him. Piped he, "Looks to me like there's been an epidemic down here!"

• • • •

One of the boys from New York City stopped in Cole's yesterday for a soda, and being homesick etc., he started talking with the Girl Behind The Counter. Being a friendly girl, and a good saleslady, The GBTC remarked:

"Ah reckon you-all must be from the No'th."

"Yesbuthowintheworldcouldyoutell." rattled the freshman.

"Eh?"

"Howjuknowwhereiwasfrom?"

"Well, ah could tell from youah accent."

My accent!" sputtered the indignant youth. Not me, goil! Not ME. YOU got the accent."

And sucking up the last of the soda, and I mean the very last, he strode out, his own honor, and that of his native land, New York City, upheld.

• • • •

One senior has an idea worth looking at. He figures that since for three years his room started off in perfect order and was a complete mess by the next June, he will start off this year by throwing every thing out of the trunk and letting it lie. Then having begun with the aforementioned mess, by next June, everything will be in perfect order. An interesting experiment indeed. Meanwhile if he's missing for a few days, we'll know he's in there fighting!

THE COMMENTATOR

Conducted by Hilton Wick

Ye Olde Commentator extends its welcome to (for the three-hundredth and sixty-fourth time you've been greeted) all the returning Maryvillians and those who are here for their first time. It may be superfluous to say, but there are many new faces and less of the old, but very interesting and entertaining—thanks to the freshmen.

• • • •

I imagine the average freshman is blister worn by now. He starts from home; rides to Cincinnati; walks the Cinnci' streets until bus time; rides to Knoxville; walks the streets just to see the places; rides to school; takes his tests; stands in line to get his room key; stands in line to register; stands in line to pay his bills; and completes his early orientation by limping into his first class with blisters at every turn.

• • • •

It is said that Prof. Queener spent his Labor Day in the Smokies at Newfound Gap from breakfast time till sun down. Dr. Griffitts spent his Labor Day at the local Willkie headquarters. Evidently both men are strong supporters of our two major presidential candidates. At present it is difficult to find a real difference between the policies and theories of Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Willkie. However, both men say that each can do a better job at the same thing than the other is able to do.

• • • •

Many momentous events have occurred since school closed in June. Italy entered the war; France fell; Britian began her fight for freedom; America began to sing "God Bless America" and began a great preparedness program; the national guard to be called; a two ocean navy to be built; a great airfleet under production; a five million man army to be raised by conscription; joint hemisphere defense; Rumania is partitioned by the dictators; playboy King Carol II abdicated; and Britain fights on while the Yankees Tigers, and Indians fight for the American league pennant. I hope the Yankees win.

wille exes. But four years won't change them much. Not basically although the veneer may be somewhat different and the edges might be a little more polished than now.

In spite of your pecularities and high school ways, freshmen, our hats are off to you. We are really glad to have you here, and we hope that you will learn to love the Hill as much as we do.

You may be discouraged at times; you may occasionally think that the bottom has fallen out of things. There will probably even come the time when you will want to call the whole deal quits and return to the home fold. But all in all you'll find your college career one of the best periods of your lifetime. So, last but not least, a word of welcome to the incoming "Fish."

Law Club Business Meeting

A business meeting of the law club will be held in Athenian hall on the evening of September 25.

A new treasurer will be elected to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Henry Wick.

The officials of the organization extend a cordial invitation to all students interested in the profession of law, regardless of whether or not they plan tc enter into that vocation.

SPORT EHCOS

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

DOPE WE HOPE

Everybody's talking about football.

The concensus of opinion reveals unanimous hopes for a big year with a strong Scottie outfit. Two full teams of backfield lettermen adorn the roster. Hughes, Honaker, Morton, Garner, Witt, "Baby" Baird, etc. The best part of the bill are the heavy-duty line coaches.

LINE STRONG IN COACHES

Coach Davis of Everett, and Maryville of course, and Coach Al Thomas of Tennessee and Pasadena are really putting the gang through the mill. But the boys seem to like it and admit they're getting into shape a bit earlier this year.

LOST

With two new coaches working raw beef into the glaring holes in Scotty forewall, everything looks rosier. They've got some job though with Jim Etheredge graduated, and Wilburn, two Kramers with a total of five letters to their credit, and Henschen. That means the teams short on tackles and ends.

WON

Speaking of Etheredge, "Little Joe" deserves our congratulations on winning his first, in his new capacity of coach at Townsend. Townsend beat Sevierville 14-6, last night.

INTRAMURALS BOLSTERED

The intra-mural system at Maryville is taking on new importance this year, with Coach Fischbach taking over. The "Y", of course will continue its work, but with a faculty man in charge. Complete plans will come out in our next issue

TIMES TO SWIM

The swimming team this year has lost nearly all its last years stalwarts; so Freshmen take notice. Open periods and their regular meeting times are elsewhere on the page.

HIAWASSEE TIGERS, FIRST VICTIMS

The Scots begin against Hiawassee next Saturday night. They took their first scrimmage Thursday, and looked good. The games will be played here on Wilson field. The Tigers were good last year, and will afford good competition for the Highlander debut.

BASEBALL CHAMPS AGAIN

An item of the most popular talk we hear circulating concerns the grand mess in SMC baseball ratings last year. The unverified report is that the Honaker Nine finally came out on top of the pile with another big championship. Milligan it seems, disqualified themselves, and LMU were two down with the Scots.

Big Football Squad Gives 1940 Highlanders Impressive Place in SMC

Fresh Crop Looks Good In First Scrimmages; Scot Backfield Strong

The coaches have been hard at work since Wednesday morning, September 4th getting the squad ready for this first encounter. With practice being held twice a day until Tuesday the injuries have been very slight, consisting of the routine bruises and sore spots. McCurry suffered a rib injury, and Cragan a painful leg injury, but both have seemed to come around all right in the past few days. For this early date the squad appears to be in good condition. The spirit among the members of the squad is good with the new comers giving the old me na run for their jobs. Although they have been through a tough session of conditioning the will to work seems to show more this year than in the past.

There has been only one scrimmage held to date, and as would naturally be expected in this case, there is not much to report o nthis. The weakness of the team, however, lies in the lack of ends and tackles. Fred Shelfer is the only end remaining and the shoes of Capt. Joe have to be filled. Henschen and Kramer, both varsity tackles are gone. The reserves are plentiful, but untried in their jobs as college football men. Several of the freshmen have shown up consistantly well in all the practices so far and may be able to step in when they are called upon.

The backfield is well stocked with experience and talent. Scot Honaker, diminitive back will return to make good use of his talented toe and arm; J. D. Hughes, hard-smashing, pugnacious backfield star of the past three years will again bear the brunt of the running attack. Baby Baird, who covered a total of 152 yards against Cumberland last year, returns as does Lloyd Taylor, long, lanky, soph., who was the last year. Morton, who suffered a leg injury in the second game last season and was unable to return to action, returns well mended and ready.

With twelve lettermen returning to form a nucleus for the 1940 edition of the Maryville College Football Team, Coach Honaker and his two new coaches are rapidly rounding the team into tip-top shape fo rthe opening game with Hiawassee.

The huge loss of Joe Etheredge, stellar end of last year, the steady playing of Nig Wilburn, Arnold Kramer, E. B. Smith, and Chuck Kindred all lost in graduation; and the services of Hal Henschen, and Jack Kramer due to illness, and the failure of Glenn Gable, and Bob Jackson to return to school heve left many holes to be filled this year.

Coaches Davis and Thomas Added To Athletic Department Staff This Year

Both Take Over Line Coaching Duties; Have Impressive Record

Assistant coaches appointed by Maryville college official sto fill the vacancy in the athletic staff caused by the death of "Bob" Thrower are "J. D." Davis, Maryville, 1930, and "Al" Thomas, Tennessee 1940.

John Arthur Davis, B. A., M. A., new instructor in physical education and assistant athletic director, grew up and attended grade and high school in the cit yof Maryville. He was graduated from Maryville college in 1930 with the distinction of being an eleven-letter-man. In his senior year, this "most outstanding athlete on the Hill" was captain of the football team and all-conference guard on the Scottie hardwood squad. Coach Davis won three letter son the diamond and he also served for two years on the Athletic Board of control being secretary of the organization in his sophomore year.

After his final college playing days were over, Davis served as assistant Orange and Garnet coach for one season. In the fall of 1930 he became football coach and instructor in Everett high school and served in that position for two years. Although he left Everett to become head coach at Hickory high school, North Carolina, Davie returned to Blount County in 1934 where he has consistently turned in an enviablerecord each season. His return to the Hill after an absence of ten years makes the Scotties loom extremely high in the coming race fo rthe Smoky Mountain Conference championship.

"Big Al" Thomas, former line stalwart from Major Bob Neylands 1939 undefeated and unscored-upon Volunteers, has been appointed head line coach for the Scrappy Scotties.

Although his team defeated by Southern California in the Pasadena Rose Bowl game last New Year's Day, Thomas wound up a career which caused him to be hailed as one of the finest reserve linemen ever produced at Tennessee. Since hanging up his cleated shoes, Thomas and his wife, a former Maryville college student, have settled on a farm near Maryville.

Epidemic Strikes

A peculiar malady has struck some twenty of the recently arrived students at Maryville college. The physician has been unable to determine the exact source.

Adding the services of coaches Al Thomas, late of the University of Tennessee, and well known and liked, J. D. Davis; this year has bolstered the stock of the Highlanders. The quality o fthe Everett High School teams turned out in the past few years and the Rose Bowl performance of Thomas is proof enough of the fitness of the two men for their posts.

The first game of the new season will be held on the Maryville field next Saturday night. Last year at Madisonville the Scotties romped almost at will over the Tigers. Taylor, Hughes, and Etheredge were the stars of this out of conference battle. With Etheredge the only missing person in this high scoring trio the hopes for the outcome of this contest are very high.

Jimmy Witt, backfield utility man returns for more action this year.

The remaining lettermen consist of Taylor, McCurry, Cragan, Honaker, Baird, Hughes, Shelfer, Morton, Tipton, Duncan, and Hooker. Bill Overly seems likely to take over Nig's spot at center, although Hooker also has an eye o nthat spot. The new men trying for the backfield are Spears, Garner, Saffeild and Graham. The tackles are Rogersville, Mitchell, and Roberts. The guards truying for posts are Cunningham, Clanninger, Murr, Garvin. The ends are Lillard Herzberger, Bennett. After an absence of two years Garner returns to try for a place in the backfield.

Climaxing the opening week events will be the faculty reception on Monday night from 8:00 until 10:00 in the library. The line will include all the faculty members and their wives in order to acquaint the students with them and they to the students. The line will be headed by the president of the YMCA, Phil Evaul and the president of the YWCA Mary Orr. Light refreshments will be served following the reception.

Due to the cool night it should be remembered by old students and observed by new that it is not necessary or convenient for all the students to come at eight o'clock.

Bainonian's Rush Week Has A Southern Atmosphere

Bainonian invites all new girls to a southern plantation next Tuesday at 3:30. At this time the society is opening its rush week with a tea in Bartlett Auditorium. The tea will feature a fashion parade of old and new costumes. Mary Mildred Hatcher is in crage.

Rush week festivities will be continued on Thursday at 3:00 with a feast of watermelons, a typical southern delicacy. This annual picnic will be in the College Woods with Virginia Wheeler in charge. She is planning special entertainment for the occasion.

Climaxing the week's activities, Bainonian will have a formal opening in the gymnasium at 8:00 on Friday night. An old-fashioned garden party will present a southern atmosphere.

NOTICE

"We, the officers of the Maryville College Young Men's Christian Association, hereby notify all concerned that no one will have the authority to charge goods, service rendered, or the like, to the organization without written order which must be signed by at least three of the four executive officers; namely, Philip Evaul, President; David Kidder, Vice President; Arthur Peterson, Secretary; William Baird, Treasurer."

Athensian To Give Stunt Tonight at YMCA Pow Wow

According to reports given out by usually reliable sources,Athenian society will present a stunt to end all stunts tonight at the annual YM Pow Wow.

It is a secret. No one is to know any of the particulars of this epic event until time for the unveiling of what "will astound, flabbergast, and floor you."

The first regular meeting of the society will be held in Athenian hall on the evening of the twenty-first.

Honaker And Watermelons To Be Feature Attractions At Annual YMCA Pow Wow

Coach Honaker will be the principal speaker and watermelons will be the principal food at the annual YMCA pow wow to be held in the College woods tonight at eight o'clock. There are 85 watermelons to be eaten. Come one and all and bring your roommate.

In addition to the watermelons and Coach Honaker's talk will be skits by the two men's societies Athenian and Alpha Sigma, songs by the group, talks by members of the team and other coaches, a few words by the YM officers, and a few yells for the team.

All men of the school are urged to attend this first YM sponsored meeting of the year.

Choir Fills Vacancies

Prof. Colbert announced Thursday that there were fifteen vacancies in the choir. Tryouts to fill these places were held Thursday and Friday. Although last year's graduates left a big gap, prospective replacements are promising. The glee club will not be organized for a week or so yet. A difference in their joint program this year is the date of the Messiah. Since December comes in on Sunday "The Messiah" will be on the third rather than the second Sunday.

VOLUME 26 MARYVILLE, TENN. SEPTEMBER 21, 1940 NUMBER 2

Jean McCammon Chosen Band Sponsor To Succeed Ruth Woods is Given Leash Of Scottie Jr. At Pep Meeting Thursday

Parks, Freshman From Maryville, Is New Drum Majorette

BAND HAS 50 MEMBERS

Dudley Moore Succeeds Dick Woodring as Head Drum Major For Season

JEAN McCAMMON

Jean McCammon was chosen as band sponsor by the members of the band in a meeting held in the chapel last Tuesday night at seven o'clock.

Other students elected and appointed to various positions were: Dean Stiles, band president; Dudley Moore, head drum major; Priscilla Parks, drum majorette; and Mae Persing, secretary.

Petite, red-haired, blue-eyed Jean McCammon is a senior who lives in Maryville. She is a member of the French club and belongs to Bainonian. In her freshman year, she was class sponsor and a member of the student council. She was also a member of the student council last year. Miss McCammon succeeds Ruth Woods, band sponsor last year. She made her debut before the students at the pep meeting Thursday night, and drew a big hand from the audience as she came up the field on the arm of Dudley Moore, head drum major.

Dean Stiles, newly-elected band president, is a junior from Beverly, Mass. For the past two years, he has been a valuable member of both the band and the choir. Last year he played in the college orchestra; but this year other activities will prevent his being able to have the time to lend his trumpet lip to that organization. His deep bass voice makes him an extremely important member of the college quartet. Stiles is a member of Alpha Sigma society and is a biology major.

Dudley Moore, head drum major who succeeds Richard Woodring, is a junior from Lorain, Ohio. He has been an outstanding campus figure since his freshman year, when he was president of his class. Although he is kept almost constantly on the run as he goes about his duties at the book store and post office, he manages to find time to take an active part in the work of Alpha Sigma society and the Pre-Med club. Also, he finds time to be advertising manager of the year book. Chemistry is his major.

Slight, vivacious Priscilla Parks is the new drum majorette. She is a member of the freshman class, and her home is in Maryville.

Mae Persing, new band secretary, is a junior from Churubusco, Ind. She is majoring in biology, an honor-roll student, a Bainonian member, and a member of the Pre-Med club.

This year's edition of the Maryville college band made its debut, along with that of Miss McCammon, at the pep meeting Thursday night. The band, according to Professor Ralph R. Colbert, band director, has now about fifty-one members. Very little time has been had for band practice as yet. But, nevertheless, it left little to be desired at the pep meeting. Its next appearance will be at the football field at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, when it will parade to town as a prelude to the opening football game of the season.

Cheerleaders Elected

Preliminary tryouts for cheerleading were held Thursday afternoon on Wilson field under the auspices of the Athletic Council. From a large group of contestants the following students were chosen to further try out at the pep meeting Thursday night: Ben Lynt, Mary Lou Holmes, Ruth Carter, Marian Stout, Sarah Jo Bowlin, freshmen; Ann Mikulich, junior; Bob Mair Nan Wood, Norma Perry, and Bill Sweeney, sophomores; Clem Hahn, senior. The two freshmen and four upperclassmen chosen by ballot at the pep meeting are Ben Lynt, Mary Lou Holmes, Norma Perry, Nan Wood, Bob Mair and Bill Sweeney.

YM membership cards will be distributed soon, and all men of the College are invited to become a member of the Maryville Young Men's Christian Association. Likewise all men of the College are urged to join in all of the YM functions.

Student Help Dept. Starts System For Grading Workers

The Student Help office has inaugurated a system of grading for the quality of work performed by students taking part in the student help program, Miss Clemmie Henry, director of the office announced today.

The new system will enable college officials to keep an accurate record of each worker, and his grade will be filed with his other permanent records for reference in making recommendations. When a worker is assigned to a job a white slip will be sent to the supervisor of the job, who will give a grade of A, B, C, or D on the quality, quantity, regularity, initiative, and attitude. In addition to this there will be space for any comment the supervisor wishes to make. These slips will be gathered and combined into a complete record which will be expanded to include all four years of college employment. The records will be available in the Student Help office, and may be examined by the individual worker at any time.

The college staff believes that the system of checking student work will serve as a valuable aid in evaluating the quality of work done. It will also enable the college to furnish more complete recommendations for students who apply for jobs after graduation.

$350 Valuation Put On Summer Book Purchases Ready at Library Soon

Nearly 175 books purchased this summer are being catalogued this week by the library staff. They represent an investment of approximately $350.

Although many of them are books of a specialized character for use in connection with classwork, several of the better-known recent novels are included. Among them are: Walter D. Edmond's "Chad Hanna"; Conrad Richter's "The Trees", R. Wright's "Native Son", R. Llewellyn's "How Green Was My Valley", N. Smith's "Burma Road", and H. Bellaman's "Kings Row."

"A Smattering of Ignorance", by Oscar Levant, musical genius of "Information Please"; "American White Paper", by Alsop and Kintner, who, according to TIME, must have slept under the President's bed to get such inside accounts of a crucial period in recent affairs; "The Voice of Destruction" by H. Rauschning, at one time in Hitler's "inner circle"; "Failure of a Mission" by Neville Henderson, British diplomat; "The Art of Living" by Andre Maurois, well-known French essayist, recently come to the United States; Snyder's "Captalism the Creator"; and M. J. Adler's "How to Read a Book" will all be found among the summer's purchases.

Several of these have already been placed at the disposal of those who request them, and all but a few will be out by next week, Professor Ellis told the Echo yesterday.

Twelve New Choir Members Added

These new choir members were added Wednesday. They are: sopranos: Ruth Guinter, Frances Harris, Joan Human, Helene Smith; altos: Dorothy Barbour; tenors: Neil Proffitt, Harold Lloyd, Dave Kidder, Melvin Vaughn; basses: Jack Lippard, Carl Miller, Carl Best, Jr. Ralph Colbert, choir director, announced that this would complete the list of new members unless a good first tenor, second alto, or second bass is called to his attention. The Glee club will not be organized for a week or two.

Theta Has Splash Party Tuesday

Variety Program And Tea Fill Opening Week

Theta Epsilon will begin its rush week activities next Tuesday at 3:30. The theme of the week's program, the presenting of all new girls to Maryville college society, will be unfolded at that time with a "splash party" at the college swimming pool. Entertainment will be provided by a fashion show and by exhibition swimming. The performance will be followed by a free-swim-period for the girls who wish to participate in the plunging and splashing.

On Thursday at 3:30 the society will continue the phase of introducing the girls to the informal side of society life. Thursday afternoon an informal tea will be held in the YW rooms. Here new girls will be shown how college society people have a good time.

The week's events will close Saturday night at 8:00 in the gymnasium. A program similar to those enjoyed at the regular Theta meetings will be presented. It will be in the form of a variety program planned by Miss Garnet Manges, resident of Maryville and college alumna, who is popular for her clever program arrangements. At this occasion, the formal opening of Theta, the officers of the society will be presented to the girls. Refreshments will be served by members of Alpha Sigma, brother society of Theta.

IRC Plans Debate At Opening Meeting

Varsity Debaters Will Wrangle Over 3rd Term

Four varsity debaters, Vernon Lloyd, George Webster, Henry Wick, and Jack Zerwas, will initiate the Maryville International Relation Club's year, with a debate Thursday evening at 6:45 in the philosophy classroom, Thaw hall. The question for debate is, "Resolved, That President Franklin D. Roosevelt should be elected for a third term as President of the United States." Neither the affirmative nor the negative teams have been chosen as yet. It is hoped that George D. Webster will be one of the debaters upholding the affirmative of the question.

Thanks to the entertainment across the ocean and our own President, the IRC hopes for a full year as far as programs and outstanding speakers are concerned. It is hoped to present to the students of the college pertinent discussions twice a month. The second meeting of the club to be held early in October will feature a round table discussion on the "question of the week" by several of our faculty members. In November the club will sponsor a straw vote to elect a president for the United States.

Mr. Archibald Pieper again will be the sponsor of the organization. No membership is needed for attendance; no dues are paid. All are invited to attend the first IRC meeting of the year this coming Thursday evening.

Dr. William P. Stevenson Resigns

By JOHN ROSS

For over twenty years, Dr. William Patton Stevenson has served as the college pastor. President Ralph W. Lloyd announced last week that Dr. Stevenson had requested that the college release him from active preaching duties. With regret by both students and the administration this request was granted.

Though past the retirement age of most men, Dr. Stevenson is continuing his duties as pastor of the Shannondale Presbyterian church of Knoxville, Tennessee.

Dr. Stevenson is a widely traveled man, a noted golfer and has been the pastor of a number of leading churches throughout the eastern states. He came to Maryville in 1917, twenty-three years ago, from one of the strongest churches in New York, and at the height of his career to become the college pastor. He built his home in the college woods, "The House in the Woods" and served these twenty-three years without salary. His first interest came through Dr. Samuel T. Wilson, then president of the college who had just published his book "A Century at Maryville College."

While a young man Dr. Stevenson spent a year traveling on a high-wheeled bicycle with a companion through Great Britain and the continent. Since that time he has visited nearly all the countries of the world. With Mrs. Stevenson he made a trip around the world in 1937-38. It was after this trip that Mrs. Stevenson had the sickness from which she never recovered. She died in December of last year.

Dr. Stvenson is still widely known as a golfer throughout this area. Several years ago one of the Knoxville papers featured him as the only man in Tennessee who could play a round of golf in his own age. This was when he was seventy-seven.

Dr. Stevenson was born in western Pennsylvania and graduated from Westminster college of that state. He later attended Western Theological seminary in Pittsburgh, later becoming a pastor there. He also served at Mauch Chunk and Titusville, Pa., Syracuse, New York and Yonkers, New York, where he served the fifteen years previous to coming to Maryville college.

Few people realize that our pastor will be eighty on the twenty-fourth of December because even now he is an eloquent man that has no need for glasses or notes in the pulpit.

The student body will hear Dr. Stevenson on special occasions in the future. He will remain a part of the college and will continue to live in the "House in the Woods."

DRAFT PROVISIONS RELEASED

For the first time in American peace-time history, men between the ages of 21 and 35 have become liable for twelve months compulsory military training, as a part of an intensive program to expand our national defense. In view of the fact that many college men are affected by the draft law, a summary of its outstanding provisions is printed below.

All men between the ages of 21 and 35 must register at their voting precincts on October 16. No more than 900,000 conscripts can be called in any one year. After a year of training they will become members of the enlisted reserve, subject to emergency recall for ten years or until they are 45. They will not be periodically recalled for training.

Prospective conscripts may volunteer for a year's service if they dislike being drafted.

Ordained ministers and theological students must register but will not be drafted.

COLLEGE STUDENTS MUST REGISTER BUT WILL NOT BE SUBJECT TO DRAFT UNTIL JULY NEXT.

Objectors by "reason of religious training or belief" will be classified for non-combatant service. If they prove their sincerity they will not be forced to train for military duties, but may be drafted for "work of national importance".

No one can pay a forfeit to avoid the draft, or pay a substitute to serve for him; nor can the United States offer special bounties to any conscript or volunteer.

After a conscript fulfills his training period employers are legally obligated to give him his old job unless "the employers circumstances have so changed as to make it impossible or unreasonable to do so."

From an estimated 16,500,000 registrants the army expects to get about 5 million class 1 prospects. A system of local boards will be used to determine the qualifications of those whose names are called up.

Jackson Awarded M.A. Degree at Mich.

During the summer, Miss Elizabeth Hope Jackson, who has been in the Maryville college English department for the past five years, was awarded her Master of Arts degree by the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

Miss Jackson has been working for four summers at the University of Michigan on graduate work. While there she has served on the editorial staff aof a "Middle English Dictionary" that is being prepared at the university. Miss Jackson did her graduate work in the field of English language and literature.

For five years befor coming to Maryville, Miss Jackson served on the editorial staff of "Webster's New International Dictionary". Her picture is in the editorial section at the front of the dictionary.

Miss Jackson's home is in Windsor Locks, Conn., and she received her B. A. degree from Smith college, Northampton, Mass. While at Smith she was active on the college paper and later wrote regular and feature articles for the New York Herald Tribune. After finishing college she was offered a Pulitzer scholarship in journalism but this was declined.

A sister, Shirley Jackson, graduated from Maryville college in 1937.

Increases of Student Body Affects Dining Hall

Owing to the large increase in the enrollment of the Maryville college student body, many arrangements have been made to take care of the extra number. This large unexpected number of students is made up partly of new freshmen, and party of last year seniors who have returned, as well as transfer students who entered this year. Several buildings have been affected by the increased enrollment.

On the corner of Indiana Avenue and Court Street, a residence belonging to Maryville college has been transformed into a dormitory which houses around sixteen freshmen girls. This dormitory is under the supervision of Mrs. Evans, who was formerly a matron at Baldwin hall. The girls in this home are under the same rules that apply in the dormitories on the campus.

The dining hall in Pearsons has also been affected by the increase in the student body. Formerly there were 78 tables, each seating eight students. Two additional tables have been added to accommodate the extra twenty-two students now eating in the dining hall.

NOTICE

Two junior vacancies exist on the Echo staff due to the resignation of Don Kent and Hilton Wick, who resigned to take up their duties as editor and business manager of the 1941 Chilhowean. All juniors desiring to try out for these positions please report to the staff meeting Tuesday evening, Sept. 24, at 6:45 in the Echo editorial office.

McAfee To Speak At YMCA Worship Service Sunday

Annual Autumn Hike Set For October Fourth

Dr. John A. McAfee, minister of the New Providence Presbyterian church of Maryville, will be the speaker at the YMCA worship meeting Sunday afternoon at 1:15. Dr. McAfee will speak concerning "The Enemy." Special music will also be presented in the Y'S redecorated Bartlett auditorium.

Last Sunday afternoon Major Charles Price of Sweetwater, Tenn., spoke to the Y organization. Major Price said that in crises like the present all college students should place faith, work, and love foremost in our thoughts and deeds.

On the 22nd of this month the Y will have a musical meditation program. About that time the programs for the month of October will be announced. This year a schedule of the Y programs one month in advance will be given to all men of the college.

The week end of October 4 is the tentative date set for the fall hike of the YM. All freshmen and upperclassmen are invited to go on this trip.

Physical Education Begins Next Week

Among the physical education classes to begin their regular schedules next week are several courses to be offered for the first time at Maryville. These new gym classes have been put into the curriculum in response to definite requests for these particular sports. A fencing class for men and women, taught by Mr. George Fishbach, is one of these classes. Students taking fencing are responsible for purchasing their own foils, while the rest of the equipment will be furnished by the college. A new course for the men of the college is the theory and practice of games, the purpose of which is to train students in the art of leading games. Archery, introduced in the physical education department last year, is again offered to both men and women.

Three more classes for men, tumbling, speedball, and six-man football, will be given next semester, all to be taught by Mr. J. D. Davis.

Former Missionary To Speak to Student Vols

Sunday evening at 8:00, Miss Lois Wilson will address the Student Volunteers, who will meet in the YWCA rooms. Miss Wilson is the daughter of Samuel Tyndale Wilson, president-emeritus of Maryville college; and she was the seventieth foreign missionary to be sent abroad by this college. In 1916 Miss Wilson graduated from Maryville, and in 1919 was sent to Syria, where she became principal of the Sidon Girl's School. For the past year she has been studying in America.

Aid To Britain Is Needed Now

OFFICIALS IN Washington, including prominent military leaders, have unofficially suggested that American ports and shipyards be opened for refueling and repairing British warships. No action has as yet been taken on the suggestion, but several observers believe this will be the next step in an intensified program for aiding the English. It has also been proposed that British orders for aircraft be given precedence over some of our own orders because of the RAF's imperative need.

THESE EFFORTS TO aid in winning the Battle of Britain are timely and may prove to be the decisive factor in the outcome. Those who object to these plans have criticized them on the grounds that they will cripple our own defensive program. These objections are not valid, because of the definite relationship whcih exists between American defense and the outcome of the present conflict. If Britain wins, the urgent need for re-armament will be relieved; if she loses, the implements of warfare which we have sent to Britain will have been employed in weakening the enemy America would then have to face.

IN A DAY WHEN the status of entire nations change overnight we hesitate to make military predictions, but from all reports that have been available here, it seems evident that the war against England will not be brought to the swift conclusion that has characterized former Nazi conquests. Traditional British tenacity is living up to its reputation, and Herr Hitler is already far behind in his schedule of invasion. It is true that casualties and destruction are large and widespread in the Isles, but compared to England's total population and wealth, they are by no means overwhelming. The Navy is still intact, and the success of the RAF combined with intensified aircraft production has brought the relative strength of the opposing air forces closer together.

IF BRITISH MORALE holds up in spite of aerial attack, the preponderance of strength is likely to increase throughout the winter, because the sources of supply for England's war effort, the United States and Canada, are not open to attack by the Nazis. It is imperative that we give all the aid at our command now, while the outcome is still in the balance rather than postponing help until it is too late. A German victory would confront the United States with an economic war of proportions yet unknown, and would lead us eventually, if not immediately into armed conflict. On the other hand a British victory may usher in a new era of closer cooperation between the two great Anglo-Saxon powers, which would mean greater prospects for peace and prosperity.

ECHO-HUMOR

By DON KENT

This week, without any further remarks, we turn the column over to two of Maryville's better-known m. c's, tall, thinimitable John Ballanger and short, stoutstanding Bob Welden. Whose the poetry is, both refuse to say. Small wonder! Take it away, men!

(All names mentioned of this broad (blondes preferable)-cast are merely incidental, and are meant to add enjoyment to the program.)

Humming down melody lane at the Student General Mix-up was our versatile young barrell-tone, Vernon Lloyd. The ever popular song that he introduced as the number one tune of the week for the campus co-ed went something like this: (Of course, those guys that wrote "Blueberry Hill" stole the tune.)

My heart stood still
At old Maryville,
At old Maryville
When I first met you.
They moonshine still
On the old college hill,
And linger until
The matrons say shoo!
The wind in the willows played
Love's sweet melody;
But all of those vows we made
Were never to be.
Though we're apart
You're part of me still,
And I'll meet you again
On the old campus hill.

Do you remember that bunch of feminine pulchritude that gathered on the lawn in front of "Ye Olde Thawe Halle" last "almost-full-moon" Saturday night? Well, passing by, your reporter heard one of these beautiful creatures bragging (or complaining):

When I was young and happy,
It was my fond delight
To go to "As You Like Its"
And stay 'til ten at night.

THE COMMENTATOR

Conducted by DON KENT

TIME magazine, TIME after TIME, has vociferously maintained its non-partisan nature; nevertheless, its reporting from the political front shows an increasing tendency to deprecate the New Deal and puff the Willkie forces—a privilege it has in this American democracy. But last week's issue, it seems, has stepped beyond the bounds of privileged reporting and taken to, if not misrepresentation, at at least distortion of facts. It states, "When ... Publisher Milton had to sell his Chattanooga News ..., he made himself a martyr to New Dealers. Because Milton had fought Tennessee Electric Power Co. (subsidiary of Wendell Willkie's Commonwealth and Southern) and T.E.P. had fought back, leftist journals like The Nation and The New Republic printed tearful articles implying that T.E.P. was largely responsible for driving Milton's News to the wall." In the foregoing sentence by the use of the word "implying", TIME itself implies that these "leftist journals" had stretched the truth. Yet figures support their contention that unfair business methods by T.E.P. were a big point in forcing the News to suspend publication.

The American press, like the American people, has long been confused over the difference between liberty and license in a democracy. This was recognized when laws were passed prohibiting false or misleading advertising. And yet in the columns of almost any newspaper and magazine, false and misleading ideas are conveyed to the reading public. One of the New York City tabloids, a fanatically pro-Roosevelt paper, is a notorius offender. Its editorials time and again mention just enough of a situation to tinge the affair to its benefit, regardless of other items involved. Its "news" will be found to be little more than polite propaganda. And in view of its vast "common person" circulation, its influence can be nothing but strong.

The average voter has neither the time nor the desire to wade through columns of material, to sift and strain the true from the false, to balance rumor against rumor. It would seem, therefore, that some restrictions should be placed on American journalism. This is not an attack against "freedom of the press"; it does not advocate muzzling or cencorship. But the American public must be protected. If advertisers are forbidden to use misleading statements, is it not just as important that newspaper readers should not be forced to read in part and infer in part? Much evil is done in the guise of "protecting the public", it is true. But what goes into newspaper and magazine columns for public consumption should be, as nearly as possible, starightforward, honest representation of facts. Democracy MUST make plain where license ends and liberty begins. The consequences, otherwise, are evident. Meanwhile let's continue to read both TIME and THE NEW REPUBLIC.

I asked him for a eeat.
I knew he was a junior
For his loving couldn't be beat.
His shoes were neatly polished;
His hair was nicely combed,
And when the party was over
He asked to see me home.
As I was walking by the dorm,
I heard my roommate say,
"There goes darling Nellie Being led astray."
Take advice from me young freshwomen,
Take advice from one who knows,
Never trust these juniors
Who wear such fancy clothes.
They'll whisper to you in the moonlight,
And promise to be true;
But at the next night football game
They'll have another date to woo!

With Glenn Miller's band coming to our first big shindig of the year, the "Harvest Formal", it is particularly noticeable that most of the energetic students are practicing that new dance fad—"The Johnnie Trot."

A flash from the front! The eminent General Erwin brought up reserves to out-flank the activities of a blisskreig that speckled the campus last Monday evening after the Faculty Deception.

It is rumored about that due to the overflow of students returning this fall (to escape the draft), there will not be enough chapel seats to satisfy everyone. Also, because of their respected position, the seniors will be allowed unlimited cuts from chapel. Knowing the fickle mindedness of seniors anyway, their seats will be occupied by the junior class instead. However, when the ten after eight bell rings on chapel mornings, any stray senior standing up will be allowed to dash to the nearest vacant seat which is neighboring a freshman belle. Of course, freshman girls are allowed to sell reservations any evening before seven. Box office will be located where "Ye Olde Bushes" used to be!

Next Week "Ye Olde Sucker Bites Again."

Bainonian Closes Rush Week In Southern Style At Opening Last Night

Bainonian's rush week came to a close last night with the society's annual formal opening, which was held in the gym. In keeping with the rush week theme, an old southern plantation, the decorations in the gym consisted of a cabin and field scene.

Freshmen along with upper classmen aided in presenting the program. Priscilla Parks, freshman, represented her class in a tap dance. A duet was sung by Doris Smith and Charles Orr, and June Morley gave a reading. Soloists on the program were Libby Ann Huckleston and Charles Orr. The orchestra was under the direction of Jean Heckman. Guests were served by Negro waiters, i.e. blackened Athenians.

Earlier happenings in Bainonian's rush week were its tea and fashion show on Tuesday afternoon and its picnic in the woods Thursday afternoon. At the picnic, games were played, following which the group witnessed a burlesque, "Gone With the Wind", in the amphitheatre. It was written by Don Kent and directed by June Morley. Back at the picnic grounds again watermelon was served.

Helen Wilhoit To Be Featured At Alpha Sig

Alpha Sigma will hold its first regular meeting of the new school year tonight at 6:45 in Alpha Sigma hall, third floor of Anderson. Mr. E. E. McCurry, honorary member of Alpha Sigma, will welcome the new members. H. Gordon Findlay, president, will introduce the outstanding members and a general mixer will follow. At this time all old members will renew acquaintances as Alpha Sigs and also meet all the new and prospective members.

The main feature of the program as planned by Richard Watkins and George Phelps will be a group of songs and dances by Helen Wilhoit, noted local entertainer. After the program refreshments will be served by Theta Epsilon girls.

All new students are cordially invited to attend and enjoy this first meeting of Alpha Sigma. The meeting will be over in time for all to get their dates and go to the football game.

Ministerials Meet In Anderson To Hear Dr. H. E. Orr Monday Evening

The Maryville college Ministerial association will hold its first regular meeting of the new year Monday evening, Sept. 23. Dr. Horace Eugene Orr, who attended the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church U.S.A. last June, will speak on the subject "The Christian Minister and War."

One of the largest meetings in years was held last Tuesday evening in Athenian hall. New students were invited and a general mixer was the main feature; also, plans for the year were discussed.

The Ministerial association, organized in 1900, is composed of students who are candidates for the Christian ministry and its various branches. It has for its object the enlistment of its members in various forms of active Christian work and the discussion of themes relating to the work of the ministry. Meetings this year will be held in Athenian hall on the second and fourth Mondays of each month.

This year's officers are Henry Millison, president; Roland Anderson, first vice president; Robert Watt, second vice president; Allen Moore, secretary-treasurer; and Alfie Davies, janitor.

Disc Club Plans Meetings

Music lovers on the campus are making extensive plans for improved programs of the Disc club for the coming year. Students interested in hearing symphonic masterpieces have been asked during the past week to sign a paper signifying their wish to belong to the Disc club, an informal society devoted to the playing and appreciation of recorded works of the musical masters. Seventy-five students have signed.

A committee will meet next week to prepare for the first program of the year to be held about October first.

Members have been pleased by the addition of improved equipment and the prospect of a new machine for the better transmission of sound from record to audience.

SPORT ECHOS

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

ALL THE TRIMMINGS

Football spirit soared at Maryville this week as Prof. Colbert, the cheerleaders, majors and majorettes, Jeannie McCammon, and the little mascot, Scotty began to warm up for action.

TALKING US UP

And another thing, have you noticed the publicity that our football team is receiving? Half a page of Scotty stellarites appeared the other day. Public Relations Director Smith is responsible for the mounting prestige.

RED HEAD

Our beautiful new band sponsor, Miss McCammon is gonna look mighty pert leading little Scotty around. Priscilla Parks, frosh twirler, can cut some mighty fancy didoes, too.

TAKE THAT TIGER

Hiwassee is always tough. The big game tonight is going to answer a lot of questions everybody is asking, and we think their gonna be the right answers. The squad looks great. If the line holds that Tiger, that herd of pony backs will run all over the field for the Orange and Garnet.

SHOEY

Hughes is in there driving again this year. We saw him run over a man the other day, and leave a pile of woozy lads behind. He hasn't forgotten how to black, either.

TIP

Tipton looks as tough and aggressive as any man tearing the turf of old Wilson this year. He'd make a wow of a guard, too. Cecil's got a whale of a load to carry in the green line.

MERC

Big Gene will be rarin' to go after being hampered with cracked ribs this week end. He's a boy who's had a lot of tough luck with the Highland injury jinx.

BACK FOR MORE

George Garner and George Howard are two big boys who are back in there in Highland moleskins after a year's absence. They claim they're sorta soft, but they both are coming back nicely.

TAYLOR IN STRIDE

Lloyd Taylor hit his old stride the other day in football practice, around the track. Taylor loves to lap up punishment. No kidding though, the loosehipped lad oughta come into his own this year. He's tops in the broken-field department.

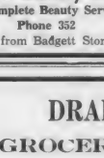
TUMBLING

Clemmy Hahn tumblers are preparing to have a real team this year will all season practices. See Clem if you know or wanta know anything about tumbling or any type of gymnastics.

Officers of Theta Plan Big Rush Week

Theta Epsilon's officers and committees have let no grass grow under their feet during the past summer. Kitty Bennett, president of Theta, says that her summer's correspondence (which, incidentally, reached from Maine to Florida and to the west coast(with other officers have developed plans for "rush" week and other early fall activities. Kitty wants every girl to watch this column next week for Theta's plans, but all she fill divulge now is that a splash party, tea, and formal opening awaits prospective members in two weeks.

Faculty Club To Meet



On Monday evening, October 7th, the Faculty club will hold the first of its regular dinners and meetings held the first Monday of the month here on the campus.

Speaker of the evening will be Dr. Augustus Sisk, professor of mathematics and physics of the college faculty. Dr. Sisk will address the club on a topic included in his field of teaching. The subject of his speech is "Functions and Graphs."

William B. Bankhead

This study of William B. Bankhead is one of the latest pictures taken of the Speaker of the House, whose death in Naval Hospital, Washington, shocked the nation. The Alabaman had been ill for almost a week but it was believed he was recovering. Death was due to a ruptured artery in the abdomen.

THE HIGHLAND ECHO SEPTEMBER 21, 1940

Coach "Al" as A Vol

The Highlanders new line coach, "Big Al" Thomas, late of the Vol football champions, has his first taste of watching his own proteges as a coach, tonight.

Coach Thomas is working into the hitherto weak forewall, some of the stuff that made him Major Neyland's most dependable guard in such crucial tests as the Orange and Rose Bowl games.

After graduating from U-T this year, he became a country gentleman south of Maryville, with his bride, the former Joyce Carson of Madisonville. Mrs. Thomas was a student at Maryville several years ago.

Come out to the Scottie practice field some afternoon and watch Coach Al show our grid aspirants how to bowl em over. He'll be the fellow who looks like he's wearing shoulder pads and isn't.

Nu Gamma on Y Program

Nu Gamma girls will have entire charge of the program to be presented at the YWCA Sunday afternoon in the Y rooms. Miss Anne Gammon, who is Nu Gamma chairman, will be the speaker at the meeting; her topic will be "My Utmost for His Highest." There will be special music on the program. This meeting will be held at 1:15.

Scot Eleven Looks To A Great Season

For the first time in a number of football seasons, the Maryville Scottie eleven is rated tops in the Smoky Mountain Conference. Although many of the sideline phophets are attributing the definite climb of the Orange and Garnet to the pair of new assistant coaches, J. D. Davis and Al Thomas, the fact remains that the triple-threat backs lined three-deep should prove to be the vital cogs in bringing the championship back home to Maryville.

Of the eight backfield lettermen from last year's SMC runnerups, six veteran ball carriers are ready, willing, and able to make this year's squad the most formidable in a decade. Because of a weakness at the terminals, Honaker is fortunate in having so many experienced ball carriers to make up for a tendency to under-emphasize the same stylish passing of last year.

Downfield blocking in the manner which has made the Tennessee Vols so powerful for a number of years is one gift which "Big Al" Thomas has instilled in the Scotties. His system has taken a marked incline already, for, although the line is slightly lighter than last year, the men are throwing blocks and tackles which can be felt all over the field.

In the lead for varsity positions among rookies are two upperclassmen, George Howard and Leslie Rock, candidates for end and backfield respectively. Howard, outstanding athlete in intramural competition, is considered to be the leading substitute for one of the end positions. Leslie Rock, pitcher and letterman on the diamond, is tasting his first college football and is already slated to be a tail-back of the swivel-hipped Scottie Honaker variety. Although Rock weighs only 150 pounds, he is considered one of the fastest men wearing the Orange and Garnet. In practice Wednesday afternoon Rock chased and tackled from behind one of the veteran backs who had shaken loose for a seemingly unprotected goal line.

Indications from this week's practice would seem to point out the following men for starting berths against Hiwassee college tonight: ENDS: Shelfer and Cragan; TACKLES: Tipton and McCurry; GUARDS: Duncan and Mitchell; CENTER: Hooker; BACKS: Hughes, Honaker, Baird, and Morton.

Scottie Jr. Brings Highland Atmosphere To Scottieland

DuBarry, although she had a play written about her, had nothing on our Scottie, Jr., for Scottie, too, is a lady. Beginning her second year as mascot of the Highlanders, the black little Scotch terrier has won all hearts, hands down, with her polished aristocratic bearing. At the end of the last school year, she moved from her home with President R. W. Lloyd to the residence of Miss Jessie Heron, where she has lived all summer.

Coming as a gift of Drs. Hays and Queener, veterinarians of Knoxville, Scottie attends Maryville college by the subsidation route. It was through the efforts of these two friends that our new mascot was obtained as the property of the students. Having spent the first two of her three and one-half years in the Scottish Highlands, our new friend gives a definite touch of Scotch on the campus.

Scottie spent two weeks of her summer vacation in the hospital. She was taken first to Dr. Queener's hospital, on the Knoxville-Maryville highway, then to a hospital in Knoxville, where she was treated for the remainder of the two weeks. Although she has been a very sick little dog this summer, she is now feeling fit again, and ready to perform her duties for the Highlanders.

One of the sweetest dispositions in the world belongs to little Scottie. She is no prude or coward—she stands up for her rights in a case of necessity—but barking and biting seem to be beneath her dignity. Her only meal of the day, which she receives in the evening, consists of such delicacies as cereals, green vegetables, and meat; which just shows that being the Maryville mascot would be no grind. Constant applications of "Listerine", for her dandruff, and mineral oil, for her coat, help to make Scottie the most attractive little number in the Smoky Mountain Conference.

Thursday night, at the pep meeting, Scottie donned her little plaid jacket and made her first official appearance of this school year; she will appear again at the football game tonight and will take her place at each following game.

Any college students who wish to help in giving Scottie her daily exercise may have that privilege, after first making arrangements with Miss Jessie Heron, her present guardian.

Scotties Clash With Hiwassee Tigers In Season Debut On Wilson Grid Tonight

This Saturday night on Wilson field, the 1940 edition of the Maryville college football team will play host to Hiwassee college. It will be the first game of the current season for both contestants and thus the power of the two teams is untried and unknown as yet.

Last year the Scotties traveled to Madisonville and spanked the Tigers by the score of 19-7. With two of the three high scoring men of that evening back for the Highlanders this year the outcome looks bright for Maryville. Only four lettermen returned for Hiwassee while Maryville has twelve previous lettermen ready for action when the two teams clash under the lights.

The Scotties will start a line which averages around 181 pounds, ranging from McCurry's 218 pounds down to Hooker's 164. The probable starting backfield will average about 155 lbs. Morton will be the heaviest man in the backfield, carrying 170 pounds, while Scott Honaker will be the little man, weighing but 138 pounds. The visitor's line will line up ranging from Sprinkle at tackle weighing 187 to Galyon at guard weighing 159. The line as a whole will average 8 pounds less than their hosts or 173 pounds. The backfield will outweigh the Scot's by 15 pounds, they will average 170 pounds.

The word from Madisonville seems to indicate that Hiwassee will present a scrappy band of Tigers on the field to avenge the setback suffered last year. The score of last year's game does not do them justice as they placed a smooth looking team on the gridiron. All reports state that the visitors have been pointing for this game. Their team will be lighter than they have placed on the field in the past few years, but having only four returning lettermen the majority of their key positions are being filled by untried men.

The Scotties have two first class backfields that can be used interchangeably without loss of strength or power. The starters will in all probability will be Honaker, Hughes, Morton, Witt, while the reserves ready for action are Baird, Taylor, Garner, and Spears. Of these two backfields there are six lettermen from last year and a former one returning for another year after a few years lay off. The Scots are weak on end material with Fred Shelfer the only remaining first team end. Tom Cragan, however, lettered last year and George Howard is back after a years layoff. It is a toss-up for who will get the starting berth on Saturday night. Coaches Honaker, Davis, and Thomas will probably start nine lettermen and two freshmen when the team lines up for the kick-off.

Hiwassee will start only four lettermen. Two in the front line and Capt. Steele and Kilbourne in the backfield. Both these backfield men caused plenty of trouble last year and are reported to be doing well so far this year.

Intramurals System Being Developed By Coach Fischbach

The 1940 edition of the tennis tournament will get underway next week when the first match will be played on the college courts. The blanks for all those wishing to participate were placed on the bulletin boards yesterday and will be removed on Monday. All those wishing to take part in this tournament are reminded by Coach Fischbach to be sure and have his signature on this list by Monday. The competition will probably get underway the following day at noon.

A definite schedule will be made out with the time designated when the participants are to play and the opponents name. This schedule must be followed, according to Allen Moore, with the penalty of a forfeited match if the participant fails to report at the designated time. The rounds will be filled out after each day's matches are completed.

The rules state that no letterman from Maryville college tennis team may participate in the play, nor may any letterman of a tennis team of any other college. Another change in the rules over last year is the new ruling that a man entered in the single play MAY NOT enter in the doubles play. This is to keep the tournament wide open and to create as much interest as possible.

Next Saturday is the time set for a formal announcement of the entirely new intramural program which will be inaugurated for the first time about the first of October when the touch football will begins.

Freshmen Get New Dormitory in Town

The women's newly acquired residence hall at the corner of Indiana and Court Streets is the outcome of a last minute plan to take care of the unusually large enrollment of this semester.

The increase in enrollment was not due so much to transfer students as to the number of old students who wanted to return. By the time all old students were assigned rooms in the dormitories there was not room for the full quota of the freshmen, so the College decided to take over this house which already was part of its property. The buiding is being redocorated and furnished in preparation for its new use as a dormitory. It will take care of sixteen students, and will be part of the campus, regular dormitory rules applying. The experiment of student supervision may be considered by putting two upper classmen in charge of the hall.

New Courses Added To Curriculum

A number of new courses have been added to the Maryville curriculum this year and some slight changes have been made in previously -existing courses.

In the Economics department, the Development of Economic Thought has been added. This course is a history of economic thought from the early merchantilists of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries to present day economic writings.

Some new education courses have been added in order that teachers who graduate from aMryville College may be better prepared for elementary teaching. These new courses are: Materials and Methods of Art Instruction in the Schools a two-hour course; Children's Literature a two-hour course; Health, a three-hour course; and Georgraphy, a two-hour course.

Two new courses have been added to the language epartment. They are German Literature of the Eighteenth Century an German Romanticism.

During the second semester, a three-hour course called Family Relationships will be given in the Home Economics department.

PPhilosophy, for the first time, is now being offered as a major subject. Two new courses, Aesthetics and Logic, have been added; and History of Philosophy, formerly a noe-semester course, has been made a year course.

Comaprative Government, a Political Science subject, is now a year course instead of a one-semester course.

New courses that the being offered in Socology are Social Origins, a three-hour, first-semester course; and History of Social Though, three-hour, second semester course.

1941 Chilhowean Deposit By Junior And Senior Classes Nears Completion

Henry Wick, president of the junior class, announced this morning that the two hundred dollar deposit which the junior and senior classes are raising for the 1941 Chilhowean has not yet been completed. Altogether one hundred and seventy dollars has been received. All juniors and senior are urged to pay this deposit at their earliest convenience. This dollar will later be used as a payment on the 1940 Chilhowean as both classes decided at the end of last school year. In case a student paying the dollar deposit should not buy a Chilhowean, the dollar will be refunded at the end of the school year. Payment of the deposit can be made to any of the junior class officers or to any member of the Chilhowean staff.

Triangle Club Pays For Scottie Jr.'s Illness

Last night at 6:45, in Bartlett hall, the Triangle club held a special meeting, the purpose of which was to raise money to pay the medical expenses of the recent illness of Scottie Jr., the little fellow who parades with the band at football games and other events of importance.

Members of the Triangle club are hoping for a very successful year for their club, and plans are being made to bring about that success.

French Club Plans Picnic

Members of the French club met for their first meeting of this year in the Y room Wednesday night. Plans were made for the next meeting which will be a picnic in the college woods on October 2. New members will be taken into the club at this meeting.

Cradle of World's Democracy—Bombed

Here is the great House of Parliament, cradle of the world's democracy, symbol of liberty and the right to free-thinking. All England is fearful that the building will be demolished, since Germany has now gone in for wholesale bombing of important public buildings in London. Fire started by an incendiary bomb which struck the House of Lords, in the west wing, was quickly extinguished.

Freshmen Get Eye And Ear Tests in Laboratory

Under the direction of Dr. David H. Briggs, head of the psychology department, eye and ear tests are being given to all freshmen. These tests will continue all next week.

For several years the college through the department of psychology has offered a testing and corrective program for freshmen. This year tests are being made of sight and hearing to be followed by a remedial course for those needing it. The tests are being given in Thaw hall in the psychology laboratory by Dr. Briggs and a number of assistants. A schedule has been posted on the door showing the times that the tests are given. All freshmen are required to take these tests by the end of the week.

The "Iowa" reading tests of speed and comprehension are nearly completed and the remedial courses will start sometime in the next two weeks. These courses will meet at times scheduled for orientation groups for those needing it.

Very probably the question to be debated will be: "Resolved, that the power of the federal government should be diminished."

At the end of the semester, tryouts will be held for all the members of the class, and from the class will be chosen the members that will compose the two freshmen debate teams.

Faculty Reception Climaxes Opening Week

On Monday night between the hours of eight and ten the faculty entertained the student body with a reception in the library. The receiving line extending around the right side of the library included the faculty members and their wives, and was headed by the president of the YMCA, Phil Evaul, the president of the YWCA, Mary Orr, and Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd. This end of the room was simply but beautifully decorated, banked with poly-poly ferns. On the other side punch and cookies were served by Rosemary McCartney, Ed Vaughn, Meredith Preston, Bob Martin, Virginia Williams, Bill Sweeney, and Mary Darden.

Athenian Meets At 6:15

Tonight at 6:15, Athenian will hold its regular meeting in Athenian hall. The meeting will end by seven o'clock in order that members may go to the Maryville-Hiwassee football game.

On the Athenian program will be a reading by George Tibbitts. His selection will be Carl Sandburg's "The People, Yes." Also featured on the program will be two songs by Charles Orr.

Athenian members will, in addition to the usual program, hear the latest football scores of all games played about the nation today.

Twenty-Three Members Come To First Meeting Of Freshman Debate

Twenty-three freshmen attended the first meeting of the frosh debate class, held Wednesday night in the philosophy classroom of Thaw hall.

This group will be divided into two classes, one of which will meet at "e" period on Monday and another which will meet at "f" period on Thursday. In addition to these two meetings, there will be another meeting, which will be held at night.

Although only twenty-three reported to the initial meeting, more are expected to join the class very soon. Some that did not attend the first meeting have already told Mr. Archibald Pieper, coach of the freshman debate class, that they intend to become members of the group.

Freshmen Take Reading, Scholastic Aptitude And English Placement Tests

The three prime ordeals of every freshman's first week at Maryville now belong to history for this year's freshman class. The English placement test, ordeal number one, was given Wednesday morning in the chapel.

The individual student's placement in his particular English section is determined by this test, and according to Dr. E. R. Hunter, head of the English department, this year's class as a whole did especially well on the test. About fifty per cent of the class is in 103 English of which there are four sections. Twelve per cent is on 103C English, the highest class. All four sections of 103 are taught by Miss Jessie Heron. All other students are in 101 classes taught by Miss Elizabeth Jackson. The highest grade made this year was 220 points.

Results of the reading and scholastic aptitude tests given Thursday, have not yet been released by the psychology department.

VOLUME 26 MARYVILLE, TENN. SEPTEMBER 28, 1940 NUMBER 3

1941 Chilhowean To Open Big Subscription Drive Tuesday

Wick and Kent Promise Enlarged and Improved Publication This Year

PRICE OF BOOK IS $4

Maryville's 1941 Chilhowean, the annual junior class publication, may be subscribed to beginning after chapel Tuesday, October 1. At that time all students will be handed subscription contracts which each may sign for a copy or copies of the 1941 Chilhowean.

The price for the annual is four dollars. To enable each student to buy a Chilhowean, this amount is divided into three payments. The first payment is due on or before October 11; the second payment is due on or before February 1, 1941; and the final payment may be made on or before the delivery of the book about April 1. Beginning Tuesday afternoon from three to five p.m., payments may be made to a member of the staff outside the treasurer's office.

This year's Chilhowean will follow and amplify a similar idea as that of the 1940 Chilhowean. YOU will be the feature of the book. Your picture will be in the annual as many times as possible. It will be in your class section, the extra curricular section and the big photography section of the '41 Chilhowean. The staff is planning to know when the photographer will be here to take informal pictures of you and all of Maryville's campus life. Bob Calvesbert, student photographer, will be at all campus functions to get pictures of all of the student affairs. According to a statement by Don Kent, editor, a host of surprises are planned in order to make the 1941 Chilhowean the biggest and most complete record of Maryville college life ever compiled in one book.

This year's staff is composed of Don Kent, editor, and Hilton Wick, business manager. Assisting Kent is Bette Umbach, associate editor; Irma Criswell, the new features editor who replaced Charlotte Colby; Frank Cross, sports editor; and Bob Calesbert, student photographer. Assisting Wick is Doris Smith, assistant business manager; Dudley Moore, advertising manager; and Bob Fisher and Charles Orr as subscription managers. Next week a member of the sophomore class will be selected to assist in the publishing of the Chilhowean. This person will help on both the editorial and business staff. Dr. Fred A. Griffitts is the faculty advisor for the publication.

Class sponsors will be elected by the classes in the near future. These young ladies will have special pictures taken for the annual which will be published in full page style. It has not definitely been decided as to whether the successful candidates will be announced immediately after the election, or whether the winners will be announced in the spring when the Chilhowean is delivered to the students. It has been suggested that each class sponsor actively represent her class at all class functions.

Senior pictures will be taken within the next few weeks. The dates for this photography work will be announced soon. Club and organization pictures will also be taken very soon. You will all be given the necessary information for these events.

The "Chilhowean year" will officially begin Tuesday, October 1. From then on all of the students will contribute something toward making the 1941 Chilhowean a successful publication.

Pi Gamma Sigma To Have Charge of Y W Tomorrow; Mrs. Cummings To Speak

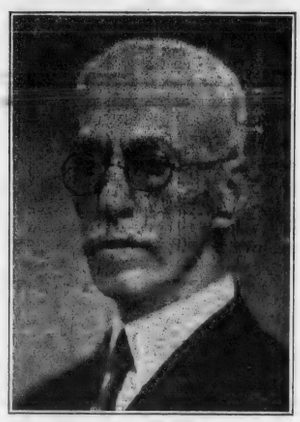
Pi Gamma Sigma will conduct the YW service tomorrow at 1:15 in the YWCA rooms. Mrs. Margaret McClure Cummings, who has this year joined the Maryville college faculty as instructor in Bible and religious education, will be the speaker. She will lead the worship service by a discussion bearing the title of "Singing in the Rain."

Music for the program will be furnished by Eugene McCurry, soloist, Katherine Crews, violinist, and Dorotha Jean White, pianist.

This service will be the first meeting of the year for Pi Gamma Sigma, new YW society organized to increase the friendship and contacts between town and campus women.

Varsity Debate To Hold First Classes During Next Week

Announcement of the beginning of the varsity debate class will be made by Prof. Verton M. Queener next week. Members of the class will meet two periods a week, and will work toward preparing for the annual varsity debate try-outs to be held shortly before Christmas vacation. Prof. Queener urges that everyone who is interested at all in public speaking of any description enroll for the class. Six members of the varsity squad graduated last year and positions on both the men's and women's teams are open. Two hours credit is given for the course the first semester, and if one makes the squad, one hour's credit is given the second semester.



Annually members of the team enter the state tournament, the Smoky Mountain tournament, the Boone, N. C., speech tournament, Pi Kappa Delta district and national tournaments, individual speaking contests and debates, and all types of competitive public speaking. Last year Maryville was the host school to the Smoky Mountain tournament and the National Pi Kappa Delta tournament. Prof. Queener and Prof. Archibald F. Pieper are coaches of the squad.

YM Musical Program

A musical meditation program will be presented by the YMCA, Sunday afternoon at 1:15, in the Fine Arts studio.

The program, which will be predominately musical, will be interspersed with readings of scripture and poetry. Religious and classical pieces of music will be used on the program.

President-Emeritus Still Active At 82

DR. SAMUEL TYNDALE WILSON

By JEAN WHITE

As the college starts its 122nd year Dr. Samuel Tyndale Wilson, president emeritus, is one of the persons most interested in its work. Dr. Wilson is now 82 years old and lives in his home at the far end of Indiana Avenue in the large white house with the Spanish name, Casa Blanca (The White House). This name reveals one of Dr. Wilson's life-long interests. When he finished theological seminary in 1882 he went to Mexico as a missionary and instructor in the theological seminary there, and remained until the coastal fevers forced him back to the United States. Later that year after he regained his health, he became the first professor of English literature at Maryville college and served for seventeen years as professor. Not only did he teach English literature, but, because of his interest in the Spanish language, he taught Spanish during most of those years. President Lloyd and other members of the faculty studied their Spanish under Dr. Wilson while they attended Maryville college.

Dr. Wilson became president of Maryville college in 1901 and served for 29 years. In 1930 at the age of 72 he retired because he felt he could not carry the burden longer. He was made President Emeritus at that time.

During the first year after his retirement he was in England, Europe, and Syria, spending most of his time in Syria where his daughter, Miss Lois Wilson, now on furlough, has been a missionary for many years serving as head of the girls' school at Sidon.

Dr. Wilson's parents were missionaries to Syria early in the last century and Dr. Wilson was born there, Feb. 17, 1858. Because of his mother's health, his parents came back to their old home in Cincinnati when he was quite a young boy. His father was later a pastor in Tennessee and sent his son as a student to Maryville college from which he graduated in 1878.

It was in Samuel Tyndale Wilson's room that the YMCA was organized. He also organized and printed on his own printing press the first student publication of Maryville college, of which the Highland Echo is a descendant. A great many of the things of the most value at the college started in some way in connection with Dr. Wilson as a student, as a professor, as president. At one time he was a professor, the registrar, the dean, the librarian, and the assistant treasurer all in one.

During his presidency the college made its greatest growth in strength.

Large Increase In Number of Students Doing Honors Work

Fifteen Do Special Study In Eleven Major Fields

Fifteen seniors have begun work on Honors Work for this year. This number is larger than last year, when 8 students did Honors Work; and is much larger than the number participating in this program in 1939, when only seven took part.

Following is a list of this year's Honors Work students, with the field in which they are doing the work, their supervisor, and their special subject in the field:

Lois Ann Alexander, in biology, under Miss Green, on "Advanced Study in Embryology"; Charles E. Baldwin, mathematics, Dr. Sisk, "Line Integrates and Green's Theorem"; John J. Ballenger, economics, Mr. Wendt, "The Wage-Hour Law and Conditions of Employment in East Tennessee"; Ann E. Biggs, French, Miss Cowdrick, reading course: "Works of Emil Zola"; Frank Brink, dramatic art, Mrs. West, "History of Stage Make-up"; Aline Campbell, English, Dr. Shine, "Charles Reade, A Realistic Novelist"; Alfred Davies, philosophy, Dr. Orr, "The philosophy of Plotinus"; Ruth Gordon, French, Mr. Hovel, reading course: "Works of Moliere"; Lura Mae Laughmiller, French, Miss Wilkinson, reading course: "Works of Victor Hugo"; Harvey Lehman, biology, Dr. Williams, "Comparative Embryology"; Edna Manrose, German, Dr. Collins, "The German Sources of Wagner's Music"; John H. Thompson, sociology, Dr. Case, "Sociological Aspects of the Maryville College Parish Program"; Philip Evaul, biology, Mrs. Brown, "Study of Local Fungi"; Katherine Ogilvie, home economics, Miss Meiselwitz, "Standardization of Grades and Quantities of Canned Goods"; George Drury Webster, political science, Mr. Pieper, "Monroe Doctrine, 1918-1940."

Training Program to Be Intensified, Say Washington Officials

Course in CPTP Will Be Completed by January

Following close on the heels of the passing of the conscription law, word comes from Washington of intensified training of students under the Citizens' Pilot Training Program, introduced last year in colleges and universities throughout the country.

The complete course will be finished by the middle of January instead of June as it was last year, thus doubling the pace of ground school study and actual flying instruction. Although last year the Civil Aeronautics Authority stressed that no military obligation was involved, this year's applicants are being requested to sign a pledge to apply for advanced training in the United States Air Corps. It is too early to state yet what effect this will have upon enrollment in the course.

Maryville's quota of twenty last year may be continued again, but the high percentage of students satisfactorily completing the course here may induce officials to raise the quota if it is believed there will be enough applicants to fill it. To date, about fifteen have applied. Although neither preliminary nor advanced medical examinations have been taken, it is planned to start ground school work next week, with Miss Louise Carson as instructor.

Social Committee Plans Outdoor Movie For Next Saturday

At 8:00 next Saturday evening, the social committee will present its first entertainment of the year with the showing of a moving picture on Wilson field. The committee hopes to secure the film owned by the University of Tennessee athletic department showing the 1940 Rose Bowl game between U-T and Southern California.

The social committee, which has as its purpose the providing of entertainments on those Saturday evenings on which there are no other scheduled activities, has been an active organization on the Hill for a number of years. The committee is composed of five faculty members and eight students, two being elected from each class by the members of that class. Faculty members on the social committee this year are Dean McClelland, Dean Hunter, Mrs. Grace Pope Snyder, Miss Jessie Johnson, and Mr. Raymond J. Dollenmayer. The officers of the committee elected at a recent meeting are co-chairmen, Joseph Swift and Stanley Menning; secretary, Jean Stringham; treasurer, Wesley Lockhausen. During the first semester Joe Swift will serve as chairman, while Stan Menning will serve in this office throughout the second semester.

Movies shown on the football field have always been enjoyed by the student body, and the Rose Bowl game will certainly be no exception. In case of inclement weather the picture will be shown in the chapel.

Theta Ends Rush Week With Variety Program At Formal Opening Tonight

Theta Epsilon's social whirl gets well under way tonight with a formal opening, which will be given in the Alumni gymnasium, at 8:00. Blue and white, Theta Epsilon colors, will be the central note of the elaborate decorations. A variety program has been planned, which will bring to the visitors several town artists to entertain them with vocal and instrumental music, as well as exhibition dancing. The evening's activities will be climaxed with the presentation of Theta Epsilon and Alpha Sigma officers.

The rush week, which started Tuesday night, began with a splash party at the pool. The entertainment, which was supervised by Kathryn Estes and Alice Jones, consisted of two main features; a fashion show, presenting fifty "Morning to Evening" costumes, with comments by Kittie Bennett; and a swimming and diving exhibition, arranged by Gordon Findlay, president of Alpha Sigma.

An informal tea, presented in a "South of the Border" atmosphere, was given for the new girls Thursday afternoon in the YW rooms. At this event, Margaret Ash and Lura Mae Laughmiller were in charge. A program of special music was featured.

New Public Address System To Be Installed At Wilson Field And Used At Next Home Game

Battery of Booths Will Accomodate Operators And Radio Broadcasters

SPEAKERS COMPACT

New System Superior To Those in Use At Knoxville Stadiums

According to an announcement made Thursday by college officials, Wilson athletic field will soon be equipped with three new style speakers for the public address system and a new battery of booths for public address operators and radio broadcasters.

Work is to start immediately in order that the new system may be ready for service in time for the next home game, with King college, October 12. Blueprints have already been drawn and work will start as quickly as materials can be obtained. The exact amount of materials needed for construction of the project is not yet known; and, consequently, no estimate of the cost involved in the building can now be made.

New style Jensen loud speakers which are to be installed are of the latest design, weather-proofed for use in any weather, and extremely compact. They are of twenty-five watts each and so designed that the full capacity of a fifty-four inch speaker is produced by an overall length of twenty-four inches. One speaker of this type, report the officials, would be sufficient to cover the entire field; but three are to be installed in order to eliminate sound channels or feed back effects, which sometime occur when only one speaker is used.

The new speakers will be mounted at the south end of the field and at the east corner. This location of the speakers will make possible a clear, distinct account of events of the game for all people in the stands.

A new set of broadcasting booths, which are to be built on the east side of the field just behind the bleachers, will make it possible for local stations to broadcast Maryville's football games to all parts of this section. It is not yet known what stations will broadcast the games; but it is probable that WROL, the Knoxville station which last year broadcast some of our games, will take advantage of the new facilities and again send out play-by-play accounts of the games. WNOX, too, may broadcast some of the games.

Plans, as they are now worked out, call for at least two booths: one for broadcasting and one for the public address announcer, and possibly a third booth for the press or a second radio announcer.

President Lloyd sent members of the staff to Knoxville to study the booths used there by the University of Tennessee, by Evans-Collins field, and by Caswell park in order to avoid any possible structural mistakeks, and to take advantage of the experience that has been gained in public address announcing at those stadiums.

Those who made the trip to Knoxville report that the new system to be installed at Wilson field will be superior to those in use at Knoxville. The public address system now used at the University of Tennessee, home of the Tennessee Volunteers, is, of course, more extensive than ours will be. However, the one to be used here will give equally good service to the smaller number of people who attend our games.

The new booths, which should be in use by the time King comes here for a game, October 12, will be eight feet long and six feet wide. The whole structure, which will include all three booths, will be twenty-four feet long.

President Lloyd and Louis Black, Director of Maintenance, have passed on all the plans; and work will soon be started under the direction of Ernest Brown, college engineer, and Walter Morton, who will assist with the work.

Point System Starts With Meeting in Gym Tuesday Afternoon

Ruth Wynn in Charge of Program For This Year

A program of girls' sports under the point system will be outlined at a meeting Tuesday afternoon at 3:00 in Bartlett gym. Ruth Wynn, in charge of the point system this year, urges all women interested in athletics to attend this meeting.

Inaugurated several years ago, this intramural program corresponds to the intercollegiate contests of men's athletics. Women are given an opportunity to participate in every sport and those who earn the required number of points are awarded an "M" with a sweater. For fewer points, an "M" or monogram "MC" is awarded.

By qualifying for basketball, soccer, indoor baseball, and volley ball teams, a girl may win thirty points for each team. Additional points are awarded for sportsmanship, captain or manager of a team, and perfect attendance. In swimming, track, tennis, hiking, and aerial dart tournaments, fifty points each may be won. The observance of health rules may total 25 points for each semester. Other phases of the system will be discussed more fully at the meeting Tuesday.

Mrs. Queener, instructor of girls' athletics, suggests that those who can not come at that time should send their names with another person.

"Little Stage" Soon To Open Season With Two Plays

The Maryville college Stageshop, as the YMCA auditorium has come to be called when used by the dramatic art students, will be the scene of two plays this month—"Maizie", by Ruth Gioroff, and "Are Men Superior?" by Harriet Ford. These plays will be presented at the formal opening of this season's Stageshop series. The general theme for the season's series is "America". The tentative dates as given in the following list, will emphasize each a different aspect of this nation's ideals:

Oct. 11—America, the Land of Equal Opportunity.

Nov. 9—America, the Home of Unique Ventures in Poetry.

Nov. 23—America, the Land of Liberty.

Jan. 18—America, the Land of Vital Principles.

March 1—America, the Land of Inheritance.

March 22—America, the Melting Pot.

April 19—America, the Land of Creative Endeavor.

Participants in the programs are exclusively members of the group who take private lessons in dramatic art. Each member will extend personal invitations, and the faculty is invited to attend. It is requested that replies to invitations be made either to Mrs. West or to Miss Seedorf of the dramatic art department in person or by way of the faculty mailbox.

Dr. H. E. Orr Will Lead Vespers Tomorrow Night

Dr. H. E. Orr, professor of Bible and religious education, will lead the vesper service Sunday evening. Dr. Orr's topic will be "Three Lessons from a Story Jesus Told." The text is taken from Matthew 29:14-30.

Ruth Andrews will sing the alto solo in "Now Arise My Soul" by Bortnianisky from the repetoire of the Latvian Singers. The chapel choir, led by Prof. Ralph Colbert, will also sing "Fairest Lord Jesus."

LOST PURSE

A black change purse, containing a sum of money and another item of identification, was found about a week ago in the College Book Store. The owner may claim the purse by coming to the store and offering a satisfactory description of the contents.

Writer's Workshop Opens

The first meeting of the Writers' Workshop will be held Monday afternoon in Room 213. Thaw hall, at four o'clock. A brief business meeting will be held. Readers will be Miss Johnson and Vernon Lloyd.

New Programs Appreciated

The program of music presented at the Wednesday morning chapel service was thoroughly appreciated by all those who heard it. Such a service, when well directed, as this one certainly was, is more conducive to an attitude of reverence and real worship than are many of the addresses delivered by visiting speakers.

We have a choir and a music staff of exceptional ability. While most of us recognize this fact, we all have a tendency to fail to appreciate fully what, by its very familiarity, becomes commonplace to us. Those of us who do not participate often fail to consider the hours of practice necessary to the successful production of a choral number, or the time and effort spent by Mr. Colbert, Miss Davies, and the other members of the music staff in making possible the quality of music to which we are accustomed. The Maryville choir is one of the best collegiate choirs in the south and we are fortunate in having its work available to us.

More programs in which the musicians of the college take a prominent part should serve to bring their worth to the attention of the whole student group. Wider use of church music in the weekly chapel hour is a step in the right direction. In addition to giving recognition to those who take part, it will improve and enrich some of those programs which all of us must attend.

—The Editor's Viewpoint—

BATTLE OF BRITAIN

It is believed in some quarters that Herr Hitler does not want the invasion and conquest of Britain, but rather prefers a Nazi-dominated government in London which would fit the Empire into his plan for a new world order.

The principal reason advanced for this theory is that should the German dictator succeed in reducing England, he would not have the resources to regiment the people into one of his enslaved units. If this idea is correct, the Germans may continue their "war of nerves" in an effort to break the morale of the country, and to overthrow the Churchill cabinet.

On the basis of British conduct thus far, the prospects for such a defeat are not likely to develop. The history of England is filled with examples of British love of liberty and self-government. More than Nazi bombs and propaganda will probably be needed to prove that this generation of Englishmen is not as determined as those which have gone before it.

• • • •

PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN

The presidential campaign between Franklin D. Roosevelt and Wendell L. Willkie still lags. As yet the main issue given extended consideration is whether or not the President's speeches are political.

Both political camps are reported to be loaded with plenty of "dirt", each waiting for the other to begin throwing it. The Republicans are prepared to blast at FDR with the "dictator line", with charges of class prejudice, and with accusations that he sacrificed preparedness to political expediency. The Democrats are ready to launch their own variety of campaign ammunition with thrusts at Mr. Willkie's record as a utility executive, and at his relations with labor.

FDR STRATEGY

Interesting is the President's own campaign strategy. He is attempting to create the impression that he is too busy with emergency business to bother with politics and that he is leaving the third term choice entirely up to the judgment of the voters. He is also attempting to belittle his opponent by ignoring him, leaving the bulk of the political wrangling to lesser lights.

This type of strategy is extremely difficult to meet, and so far Mr. Willkie is the only member of the opposition who has been making any real effort to meet it. The minority group in Congress has been slow in giving support to the Republican nominee for political reasons of their own.

Republican strategists working close to Willkie think that he should refrain from making many radio speeches, since this invites comparison with Mr. Roosevelt's radio charm. They plan for him to concentrate on shorter speeches throughout the country, leaving most of the radio work to Dewey and others who are better fitted for it.

This great care on the part of campaign managers for playing up their candidate is indicative of an increasing danger in American politics, that of choosing between men instead of between parties. The two-party system by which our government really functions is based on the theory that there are real differences of policy between the voters who compose the two groups, and that the candidates as individuals merely represent the will of their party organizations.

Of course no one can find a party which exactly fits his own ideas, and since he cannot cast an intelligent vote simply on his judgment of a candidate's personality, it is to his interest to select the party to whose program he can most conscientiously subscribe, and to vote for that party's candidate whether he has a good radio voice or not.

It is only by replying on something more fundamental than personality that the voter can safely select the men who make democracy work. In the midst of campaign propaganda it is impossible for the average voter to determine the true character of the opposing candidates. Many of the best of them secured their nominations by skilfully manipulating party machinery; others by the chance that attends the game of politics. They are interested primarily in being elected, and if it were not for the restraint placed on them by party responsibility, they would disregard an even greater number of campaign promises. Party loyalty is not just prejudice; it's good political theory.

THE COMMENTATOR

By HILTON WICK

Since winter seems to be with us already, it is high time to pause and talk of vacation times and vacation spots.

CHAUTAUQUA—"Where Education and Entertainment Meet."

Chautauqua Institution, the summer entertainment spot of America, is located on the western side of Lake Chautauqua, four miles from Mayville and sixteen miles from Jamestown in the state of New York.

Chautauqua has been a famous vacationland since the late "eighties". It was founded as a Methodist institution, but since its founding in 1872, it has grown to be a secular institution with influence exerted by many churches. This is the original Chautauqua from which many imitations have been created.

Chautauqua is world famous for its outstanding programs. Annually there are operas, plays, symphony concerts, artists, speakers, lecturers, ministers, dances, and water and land sports of all descriptions. There are clubs of all nature—women's, mens' sports, college, children's, nature, the oldest book club in America, and so on. There is a library, a summer newspaper, an art gallery, a book store, grocery stores, an original rug store, and everything that a modern small town would need. Each day of the two month season (July and August) is crowded with entertainment.

During the winter, Chautauqua is a typical upstate New York town of about 1000 population. "Come Spring" and then summer and vacationers. Overnight this little community becomes a town of (I would guess) 20,000 people during the best part of the season. With the opening of the season about July 1, activity begins. The numerous hotels, apartments, boarding houses, restaurants, cafeterias, and tea rooms open for business. The greatest part of the work in these places is done by college students.

The Chautauqua Program Begins Immediately

Six operas and plays are presented each season. The operas are given by the Chautauqua Opera Association in conjunction with th Metropolitan Opera Association. The plays are presented by the Cleveland players. So far most of the opera work has been in the field of light opera, but next season extensive grand opera may be tried. This season "The Gondoliers", "The Devil and Daniel Webster", "The Inquisitive Women", "The Bartered Bride", "Carmen", and "Faust" were presented. The plays were "Whiteoaks", "What a Life", "You Can't Take It With You," "Twelfth Night" and "I Killed the Count."

Among the artists appearing in the operas and with the orchestra last season were Rose Bampton, Grace Moore, John Gurney, Muriel Dickson, Harriet Henders, Charles Kuhlman, and Donald Dickson, all of the Metropolitan Opera Association. Others were Gertrude Gibson, Pauline Pierce, Donald Dame, Hardesty Johnson, Joan Peebles, David Otto, and John McCrae of the Chautauqua Opera Association. Gertrude Gibson, Donald Dame, and Hardesty Johnson will all be heard much more in the future. All may some day be in the Metropolitan. Rosalyn Tureck, Alec Templeton, and others performed for Chautauqua audiences. Among the speakers were Julien Bryan, Elmer Davis, William Lyon Phelps, Sir Wilfred Grenfell, Edward Howard Griggs.

Chautauqua is truly a place of education entertainment. For entertainment Chautaqua is an ideal place for one to spend his vacation.

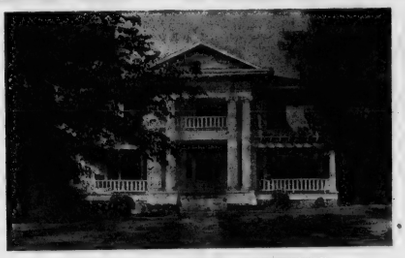
Four Uniforms For Band

Four new uniforms have been purchased for the band and a new cape for the sponsor.

The fully uniformed band will make its second appearance at the Maryville-King college game next Saturday night on Wilson field. The increased number of band members has necessitated the buying of additional uniforms. The sponsor, Jean McCammon, will wear a cape to match that worn by the drum major, Dudley Moore.

Wednesday Chapel To Be Led By Dr. C. E. Barbour



Wednesday morning Maryville college will again be host to Dr. Clifford E. Barbour, Knoxville, who will give the address at the morning chapel service. Dr. Barbour, who is a director of the college, was the leader of the 1938 February meetings, and has been guest speaker at the college on other occasions. He is the present pastor of the Second Presbyterian church in Knoxville, which is one of the largest in the south.

Dr. Barbour was born in Pittsburgh; he graduated from the University of Pittsburgh, and attended the Western Theological seminary there. Two degrees have been received by him, a Ph.D., which he received in Edinburgh, Scotland, and a D.D., an honorary degree conferred on him by Maryville college.

James R. Smith To Speak At Student Volunteers

James Rhodes Smith, new public relations secretary of Maryville college, will be the speaker at the Student Volunteer meeting tomorrow evening at 8:00.

Mr. Smith, joining the college faculty after two years in the ministry, is an experienced public speaker. He will be remembered as one of the visiting ministers who conducted chapel services in the spring. He will speak tomorrow on the subject of "Christ and the Christian."

NEAR FALL

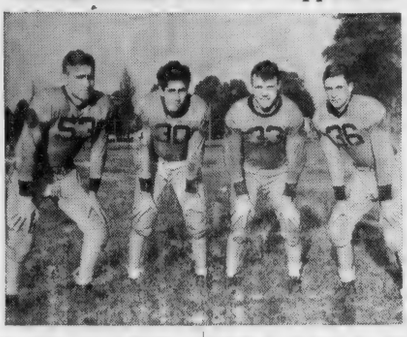
What a thriller last night's game turned out to be. According to Coach Honaker, after Cumberland had run down the stunned Scotties in five minutes for two touchdowns (during which coach no doubt sat calm and quiescent) the scrappy, enraged Highlanders went to work and eked out success in the last quarter. Coach's call had nothing to say about who did all the ball toting, but he did mention one happy note of the tremulous victory. Nobody got hurt. That speaks for the extra fine shape that the coaches have been knocking the lads into.

RFPORT

The News-Sentinel reporter, a Mr. Steakley, was standing on the highway, with some boy with a U-T cap topping his immensity, and a third, a handsome fellow with a roving eye. They were waiting on the bus, I suppose, to go to the Cumberland fray. Suddenly Mr. Steakley remembered his aviation physical, to be taken last night. After danny demon persuaded Douglas to "go on", "GO ON", his true angelic self told little Douggy to go straight home. Doug went to the fair.

SEEDY

After the seeded lists were posted on the Carnegie bulletin board, everybody wanted to know what "seeded" means. So a straw vote was taken by the Echo to decide. According to Mr. Felknor, in No. 2 position, the first two seeded positions are designated so that the two best players will meet in the finals. "No. 1" or "No. 2" is the position on the top or bottom bracket, and seeded means you're tops. Mr. Cooper says, "I was plenty smooth last year, but look at me now. I hope Coach sees that list." Mr. Webster in No. 3 says, "I'll beat that pot Felknor. I'm 3 because I haven't been on the court in a year." Coach says, (as usual) "Look at those freshmen."



LAST PLUG

With a last plug for the swimmers, both girls and boys, I'll close out my column writing in a typical way. A girl's swimming team, or club, similar to Dave Heydinger-er's club, is going to be organized in open periods soon. Come out any afternoon. Further, swimming season is not far away, you lads come over and learn some essentials early.

THE HIGHLAND ECHO SEPTEMBER 28, 1940

Veteran Backs Terrorize Opposition

George Garner, George Morton, J. D. Hughes, and Scott Honaker, a quartet which has been poudning the turf of Wilson field for the past three years, are "the big four" of the backfield aces upon whose skill and brute strength the success of the Honaker-Davis-Thomas machine might easily balance.

Already the value of the newly found backfield aerial combination can be determined. In the Hiwassee game last Saturday night, the completion of two pay-off tosses of fifteen and thirty yards respectively hints that Captain "Shoey" Hughes on the flinging end and Co-captain Scotty Honaker on the snagging end might develop an ozone offensive even equalling or surpassing the famous Honaker -to -Etheredge thrillers of last year's eleven.

All four of these stylish pigskin-carriers are gridironed eterans of several Smoky Mountain Conference campaigns. Although George Garner has been idle from the game for a fullseason, he is back this year, punting, slinging, and lugging leather in the same brilliant manner which formerly won him a berth in the first-string lineup. As a matter of fact, Morton and Garner are the only members on this year's squad who were starters in the mud-choked tussle with Cumberland two years ago tonight. According to an account in a 1938 Echo, Morton trotted off of the Lebanon field with the coveted distinction, "most outstanding player."

Since the Scotties boast of a wealth in triple-threat backfield candidates, the ball-toters seem to answer for the Scotties dfinite spurt toward the championship. Backed up expertly by such stars at Witt, Baird, and Taylor, and by a big, bruising line, all-conference nominees Garner, Morton, Hughes, and Honaker should make this the year in which we bring the championship back home for a long stay.

Honaker Eleven Flattens Hiwassee By Score Of 14-7 In Season Opener

Last Saturday night the curtain was raised on the Maryville Scotties football team for the current season when the Tigers of Hiwassee college were beaten by the score of 14-7 at Wilson field. Scott Honaker scored both touchdowns for Maryville as he gathered in two perfect passes from the arm of J. D. Hughes, to scamper across the double stripe.

The opening of the season was delayed 45 minutes by the failure of the officials to arrive. Finally one arrived and two spectators were pressed into service and the game got under way. Approximately 3000 people in the stands spent the 45 minutes cheering, listening to the band, and watching the new majorette go through her paces.

Steele kicked off for the Tigers and Morton received the kickoff on his own 15 yard line and tore up the field until he was finally brought to earth on his own 43 yard stripe. Here the ball changed hands and the visitors started a sustained drive straight down the field which ended on the Scot's 10 yard line where two attempted tries for field goals were unsuccessful. Steele tried for the first one and the Scots in their eagerness to stop the boot were offside. The second one went wide of the uprights.

The Highlanders took the ball then on their own 20 and started their own march straight back up the field. Witt and Morton toted the leather for a first down, Scott and Morton rolled off another one, Hughes and Morton chalked up another one on more power plays. The big three in the backfield gathered in another one for the 4th straight movement of th sticks, but finally were held and the ball turned over to the visitors who immediately punted.

The Orange and Garnet clad warriors started to chalk up more first downs on their second drive of the evening as the second period started. Hughes drove through for a first down, Scotty got loose and showed some fancy stepping as he circled the opposition for 15 yards, he carried the ball a few plays later for another first. Hughes took his turn and was followed by Morton. With third down and still plenty to go, J. D. faded back and rifled a 15-yard heave straight into the outstretched hands of diminutive Scott Honaker, who crossed the goal line standing up for the first score of the evening. Morton booted a pretty extra point square between the goal posts. Score: Maryville 7, Hiwassee 0.

With the second backfield in, the Scots kicked off to the Tiger's ten-yard line where the hard driving Scotty line brought the man down almost in his tracks. The visitors failed to gain and kicked to the Scots. Lloyd Taylor lost a few yards for the Scots when he was unable to find a receiver for an attempted pass. Baby Baird on the next play, however, picked up 7 of these yards as the half ended.

During the half the traditional race of the freshmen took place and was enjoyed by all (the upper classmen). It was during the half that the band presented its new sponsor with Scotty Jr., to the crowd and he received a large hand.

Maryville kicked off to Hiwassee's 4th straight movement of the sticks, 10 yard line and Steele pranced up the field to his own 40 yard line before he was brought to the earth. A pass netted the enraged Tigers another first down, and then Steele picked up another on the next play.

Two long passes then placed the pigskin down on the Scotties' three yard line, and then Steele plowed through for a six pointer. The try for the extra point was good and the score became deadlocked at 7-7.

Hughes kicked off to start the fourth quarter which was played deep in Hiwassee's territory. The Scots were started on another touchdown drive late in the quarter which was stopped when an intended pass for Scott was just inches too long for the little man to get hold of. Hooker intercepted a pass and took off down the field for 15 yards. The game ended with the ball in Maryville's possession deep in the visitors' territory after the Highlanders had scored again and made the extra point. The score reading: 14-7 in favor of the Scotsmen.

Steele was outstanding for the visitors while burly George Morton was the most consistent ground gainer for the Scots. J. D. Hughes' passes and little Scott's all-round play were outstanding for the victors. The line played well and the many replacements that Coach Thomas put in showed up well in almost every case.

Scotties Edge Cumberland Gridsters 19-18 To Start Conference Campaign

After spotting the Cumberland Lawyers two touchdowns during the first five minutes of the first Smoky Mountain Conference tilt of the season last night, the Maryville College Scotties rallied brilliantly in the second and fourth periods to squeeze out a thrilling 19 to 18 victory.

Much protest was raised when the Lawyers, contrary to SMC regulation, started the game using an ordinary football instead of the required white pigskin for tilts under the spotlights.

After the Scotties recovered from the disastrous first quarter in which they were so confused by the absence of the regulation ball, the Orange and Garnet machine started rolling and was never threatened until just before the final whistle.

Third Term Question Debated At IRC By Varsity Debaters

Zerwas and Webster Hold Roosevelt's Policies Vs. Willkie's by Wick, Lloyd

National politics blazed into flame on the campus last night, when Jack Zerwas, George Webster, Vernon Lloyd and Henry Wick debated the hotly-contested third term issue in Bartlett auditorium, at 6:45.

Zerwas and Webster, affirmative speakers who presented the New Deal side of the question, confined their arguments to a strong defense of the Roosevelt record of the past seven and half years and a blistering attack on Willkie's record as a business man and as a presidential campaigner.

Lloyd and Wick, debaters on the negative side, struck back with an assault on the Roosevelt attitude toward business and the idea that any man is indispensible.

"A grave and important question faces the American people," said Zerwas in the opening speech, "whom shall we elect to guide the destinies of our country for the next four years."

Later, while speaking of the benefits of the Roosevelt administration, Zerwas said, "Many of you who are listening to this debate would not be in college today if it were not for the federal government. Yet, some of you are anxious to defeat the administration that has made your college career possible."

Wick, second speaker of the debate, strongly attacked the present administration's strict control of private industry. "We believe," Wick said, "his (Roosevelt's) system of taxation has been unjust to the business man both large and small; that he has kept business from expanding and hindered the expanding of new industries."

Webster, hitting at the Republican philosophy of government, declared, "We believe the most important issue of this campaign is the philosophies of government as advocated by the Democrat and Republican parties. We tried their (the Republican) philosophy for three years and four months under Mr. Hoover, and even the Republicans haven't forgotten the results. That plan failed once and we say it would fail again."

Centering his attack on the idea that FDR is indispensible, Lloyd asserted: "Roosevelt is doing exactly the same thing that every other modern dictator has done at one time or another. Roosevelt is trying to make the country feel that he is indispensible. No man is indispensible!"

Presenting the idea that Willkie advocates the same fundamental ideas that held sway under the Hoover administration, Zerwas said near the end of his speech, "Oh, how easy it has been for us to forget just how bad conditions were in 1932."

In reply to the idea expounded by the negative side that a third term for Roosevelt will mean dictatorship, Webster said, "It is not a matter of a third term. It is a matter of who is the best man."

Roosevelt's foreign policy was vigorously upheld by the affirmative; but most of the argument was centered around Roosevelt's domestic policy record, which was bitterly denounced by the negative. Roosevelt's failure to keep previous campaign promises and balance the budget received much criticism from the negative speakers. There has been and there will be, so they claimed, no limit to Roosevelt's spending program.

This attack was countered by the affirmative with the fact that 12,000,000 men have been put to work in private industry under the Roosevelt administration.

Lloyd and Wick supplied comic relief touch to the occasion with the use of a Willkie tie. Wick would wear the tie while debating and then pull it off and give it to Lloyd before it became his time to speak.

Y Hikers To Visit The Smokies Next Week End

Saturday, October 5, a group will leave Bartlett hall for the YM's annual hike to the Smoky Mountains. This year's hike will include a visit to the Chimney, one of the scenic spots of the Smokies, where a base camp will be formed. From here the hikers will push on to the top of LeConte to spend the night.

Saturday night after a hearty supper of steak and potatoes and the trimmings, a program of individual skits, songs, and Dave Hall, all skillfully mixed, is planned.

Sunday morning a sunrise service is planned with songs and a short talk by Phil Evaul. Next on the program is a breakfast of eggs, sausage and coffee, after which individual hikes to points of particular interest can be taken.

After a final meal Sunday noon the hikers will return to the base camp and then to the college campus.

The Y hike is one of the year's outstanding events and those who go on these trips remember them as one of the high spots of their college career. While this is specially designed for the freshmen and transfer students, old students are welcome also.

French Club Picnic In College Woods

French club mademoiselles and messieurs will try their hands at a bit of French cooking "au naturel" Wednesday when they have their annual picnic in the college woods.

Lucette de Barritt and Bob Wilcox have completed plans for the initiation of new members, fourteen of whom were elected last spring and two this fall. The new members are : Ruth Wynn, Howard Long, Scott Honaker, Betty Pettry, Bob Calvesbert, Bob Weldon, Elizabeth Prater, Betty Robinson, Betty Clevenger, Pat Kinne, Edna Manrose, Jean McCutcheon, Mary Felknor, and Wesley Masters.

Miss Catharine Wilkinson, sponsor of the club, will chaperon the outing. Margaret Ash, Jean McCammon, and Bob Calvesbert form the committee in charge of the picnic.

YMCA Sets Membership Goal At 215 Members

The Maryville college YMCA this year is striving to secure 215 members and thereby pass all previous records. Their goal is in view as well over 100 membership cards have already been received and all the men of the college have not yet been visited. Members of the Y cabinet are visiting the rooms of Carnegie.

To become an active member of the Y, all the applicant need do is fill out a small card on which is a pledge to support the activities of the Y, to promote growth in Christian character, and to live a life worthwhile socially, mentally, physically, and morally. Only active members may vote and hold office it. the Y cabinet. Town students who have not joined yet should come by the president's office in Bartlett and receive their card.

Chapel Window Breaks

A short time after vespers last Sunday evening one of the small stained glass windows in the chapel fell out and was damaged considerably.

A representative of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company's Knoxville plant was consulted, and not only the damaged window but also a duplicate window to be used as a pattern were sent to Knoxville. Within a week both of these windows will be re-installed in the chapel.

Its financial results were multiplied eight times over, and under his leadership the institution assumed its present form and proportions. Dr. Wilson came to be one of the principal leaders among the presidents of Christian colleges and in the Presbyterian denomination. He held various high offices in the church and in the educational field. President Lloyd, his successor, calls him the greatest character and influence in the history of Maryville college, and those of us who have had the good fortune to meet and become acquainted with Dr. Wilson agree heartily to this tribute paid our President Emeritus.

The various writings of the history of the college have come from Dr. Wilson's pen. In 1916 he wrote a "History of Maryville college," and in 1935 he added six chapters and had the book republished. He has written a biography of the founder of the college, Dr. Isaac Anderson, and various other histories connected with the college, the church, and other historical interests in this area of the United States.

Mrs. Wilson died in 1937, but Dr. Wilson has six children with all of whom he keeps in constant contact. Of these six children who graduated from Maryville college, one, Mrs. Clyde T. Murray, lives in Maryville where her husband is a business man. Her daughter is now a sophomore in Maryville college, and she herself is recording secretary of the Maryville college Alumni Association.

Dr. Wilson has not attended public meetings at the college or at church for a number of years, but until a year ago he was very active in his writing and interested in meeting alumni and others who would call upon him when in the city. His frail health keeps him from doing active work now, but he may be seen almost daily walking to the college cemetery where Mrs. Wilson is buried, or on some country road near the town.

Faculty Committee Appointments Issued Recently By Lloyd

Davis, Hunter, Queener, Howell Are Members Of Discipline Committee

President Ralph W. Lloyd has just issued his appointments of members of the faculty committees. These committees, composed entirely of persons on the Maryville college faculty, are formed to serve as advisory boards as well as to plan the various events and phases of college life covered by their particular field. Through their work, campus activities are intended to be run more smoothly and satisfactorily. There are seventeen of these general committees.

The Artists' Series committee is composed of Professor George D. Howell, chairman, Ralph R. Colbert, Miss Katharine Davies, and Miss Elizabeth Hope Jackson. This committee has as its work the deciding as to what guest artists will be featured in the Maryville College Artists' Series and making contacts and arrangements about the programs.

Committee on athletics consists of Chairman Frank D. McClelland, Louis A. Black, Lombe S. Honaker, George D. Howell, and Fred L. Proffitt. This board is interested in the scheduling of athletic events and in dealing with problems arising in the field of athletics.

Prof. Edgar Roy Walker and Miss Clemmie J. Henry are the auditors for Student Organizations and Publications.

The Discipline Committee is formed by Chairman Edmund W. Davis, Dr. Edwin R. Hunter, Prof. George D. Howell, and Prof. Verton M. Queener. Their activities are concerned with the formation and observation of the rules of conduct constructed for the students.

Problems of "entrance and advance standing of students" are considered by the committee of that name, composed of the Dean of Students, Dr. Frank D. McClelland, President Ralph W. Lloyd, Dean E. R. Hunter, supervisor of curriculum, and secretary of the faculty, Dr. Edmund Davis.

Dr. Horace E. Orr, Miss Susan A. Green, Miss Mary M. Keller, Miss Gertrude E. Meiselwitz, and Dr. Lyle L. Williams form a group which plans the activities engaged in by the Faculty club, the monthly dinners and discussions.

Classes Elect 15 Student Council Representatives

Henschen, Cragan, Tontz, Long Named by Seniors

New members of the Student Council were elected last Wednesday morning after chapel by their respective classes. From the senior class Hal Henschen, Tom Cragan, Bernice Tontz, and Eleanor Long were chosen. Hal Henschen is president of the Pre-Med club and a varsity wrestler; Tom Cragan plays baseball for the Scotties at first base and is end on the football team; Bernice Tontz has been active since coming to Maryville in girls' sports and in Theta Epsilon; Eleanor Long is an art student, Bainonian, and has entertained at many public meetings as an imitator. Mary Orr, president of YW and Mary Darden, vice-president of YW, and Bill and Boydson Baird remain on the Council from last year. The Baird brothers are both Maryville lettermen; Boydson is a varsity member of both the football and basketball teams, and Bill is on the varsity of the latter and is also a member of the Athletic Council.

Elected for a two-year term last Wednesday to present the junior class are Lucille Lynch, varsity debater; Mary Proffitt, active in Bainonian and YW; George Howard, a Scotty football player; and Stan Menning, who is also a member of the Social Committee. Juniors on the Council held over from last year are Jeanne Stringham, active in YW, and Dave Kidder, choir member and active in YM and Student Volunteers.

Representing the sophomore class are Mary Ruth Baker and Jim Garvin for two years, and Mary Morgan and Wesley Lockhauser for one-year terms. The freshman class has not yet elected its two representatives.

525 Chilhowean Subscriptions Taken As Senior Section Opens And Plans Made For Election of Class Sponsors

Sponsors Will Be Announced Early

Although the senior portrait section of the Chilhowean has been open only three days, a gratifying number of pictures has already been received by the editorial staff. The senior section will remain open until Wednesday evening, October 16; the junior section will open the following day. It should be noted that all pictures must be glossy prints, size 3½ x 5, and should have the subject's name and class written on the back of the photo. These can be turned in to any member of the staff or left at the bookstore or Chilhowean office.

It is important that each person who wishes to have his portrait in the class section should turn in the picture by the announced deadline. The pictures, arranged alphabetically, are glued to a mat as they will appear in the annual, then sent to the engraver and reproduced on copper plates for the printer, one plate for each page.

Class meetings for the election of sponsors will be held this week. In former years, it has been considered announcing the class sponsor in the early functions as class sponsor and be recognized in that role. No notion has been taken, however, by preceding classes. This year, the Chilhowean plans to announce the sponsors formally at the class parties on Hallowe'en night.

Students will be notified when the photographer is expected on the campus. To date, no definite word has been received from him.

Opening Drive Sets A New Record

The Chilhowean's initial subscription drive, which began Tuesday morning after chapel, is progressing very well. To date the business manager, announces the sale of 525 copies, a record sale for the first five days.

While the results so far have been very satisfactory, more books must be sold if this year's Chilhowean is to surpass to any great extent last year's publication. A canvass is now being made of all the faculty and students who have not as yet subscribed to the 1941 Chilhowean.

Again the book will emphasize the student life on the "Hill." You will be the feature of the entire book. YOU—your picture—will be in the book as many times as the staff's photographer is able to take it.

A Chilhowean costs $4.00, and to enable each student to have this book, the cost is divided into three different payments. The first payment is due on or before October 11; the second due on or before February 1; and the third and final payment due on or before the delivery of the book, about April 1, 1941. The business manager says, "In breaking down the cost of the annual, we find that it costs each student only a fraction over 11 CENTS per school week. Any student will be glad to have such a complete, interesting, and entertaining record of his school year as well as that of his friends, at such a low cost. So we suggest that you all subscribe early so as not to get caught in the seasonal rush."

75 Men Go To Mountains For Two-Day Stay

Group Plans To Hike To Chimneys Saturday P.M.

Seventy-five men out of the total ninety-four who signed up for the annual YMCA hike left this afternoon for the mountains. The group plans to climb Mt. LeConte and maybe the Chimneys on their two-day stay. They will return Sunday evening to again take up their campus duties after the vacation.

This afternoon at one o'clock, approximately seventy-five men with blankets and other luggage left for the mountains on the annual outing. Over ninety men signed up for the trip, but only 75 of these could be taken. About one-half of that number are freshmen and the other half are upperclassmen. The group this year exceeds the group last year by at least ten men. One bus and ten cars driven by faculty members were available for transportation to the foot of the Chimneys where the main camp will be set up.

The group plans to take a hike up the Chimneys Saturday afternoon and to return to the main camp that evening in time for supper. Chef Charlie Baldwin has promised that the meals will be as good as last year's. At least one of the meals will be a steak dinner with potatoes and the side dishes.

Before breakfast Sunday morning, a worship service will be held at the main camp. Communion will be observed with Dr. R. T. Case, associate professor of socoliogy, in charge, with Dr. F. D. McClelland, Dean of Personnel, assisting. Paul Brown and Hilton Wick, members of the worship committee, are in charge of the arrangements for the service.

The worship service will be followed by a hearty breakfast. After the meal the group will hike to the top of LeConte or at least those who are able will. LeConte is the highest point in the Smokies and it takes a man to reach the summit. Dinner will be served at the main camp about 2:00 Sunday and the group will return to the Maryville campus in time for supper at Pearsons.

The arrangements for the hike are in charge of the fellowship committee of the YMCA. Besides the hike the committee is in charge of the Pow-Wow, the parties, and the other social activities of the Y. Members of the committee are Charlie Baldwin and Clem Hahn.

Theta Alpha Phi To Give Milne's Comedy

"Mr. Pim Passes By" In Production For 2 Weeks

The play, "Mr. Pim Passes By", is to be presented by Theta Alpha Phi on Friday evening, October 25. It was written by A. A. Milne, the English author of "Dover Road" which was presented by the senior class of last year.

"Mr. Pim Passes By" was the first play of this talented playright to be presented in this country. It is the play that brought Milne his well-deserved fame, and has been and is, one of the most popular of the modern comedies.

It is a comedy of character, full of unexpected and whimsical turns. The play also has much that is fantastical which may be compared with the fantasy of Sir James Barrie.

The past two weeks have seen the cast practicing their lines and the production staff beginning their work. The cast is as follows:

George Marden, J.P., Fran!: Brink; Olivia (his wife), Marianne Coleman; Dinah (his neice), Troye Moore; Lady Marden (his aunt), Virginia Berg; Bryan Strange, William Gehres; Mr. Pim, George Tibbetts; Anne, Frances John Hellums.

The production staff was chosen and members of that are stage manager, Floyd Shue; assistant stage manager, Elizabeth Glover; business manager, Harvey Lehman; assistant business manager, Ruth Sutherlin; advertising manager, Sam Cornelius; property manager, June Morley; costumer, Helen Airheart; and electrician, John Hawkins.

Pieper Conducts Course In Parliamentary Law

A new class dealing with parliamentary law has been inaugurated here. It is a no-credit course taught every Monday night in the philosophy classroom, by Archibald Pieper, instructor in political science.

Twelve students have signed up for the course. They are George Webster, J. Edward Thomas, John Ross, Carson Brewer, Trevor Rees-Jones, Fleming Griffith, Warren Corbett, Don Kent, Hilton Wick, Charles Foreman, and Arling Kresaler.

Pieper says the class will probably meet six or eight times. As soon as the members of the class learn enough about parliamentary law, programs will be held in which proper procedure will be used.

Queener To Receive Ph.D. In October From Indiana Univ.

Thesis Assigned, "The Republican Party In East Tenn., 1865-1900"

On October 15, Prof. Verton Madison Queener, chairman of the Division of Social Sciences and professor of history at Maryville college, will receive the Degree of Doctor of Philosophy from the University of Indiana, having completed there this past summer his work on this degree.

Mr. Queener was graduated from Maryville in 1924; he received his M. A. from the University of Tennessee in 1930. He has been at Maryville college since 1927. In 1934-35 Mr. Queener secured a leave of absence from the college to begin work on his doctorate at the University of Indiana. His work was done in five different fields: American, English, and Modern European History, being major studies; Government and Economics, being minor subjects.

In the thesis assigned, "The Republican Party in East Tennessee, 1865-1900", Professor Queener's development of the subject involved the following points:

"In the Democratic solid South, there are areas in practically all the southeastern states which are consistently Republican. This study is a consideration of one such area, that of East Tennessee. The first object was to investigate the changes from the pre-Civil War Democratic and Whig parties, including the successors of the latter, namely, the Know-Nothings and Oppositionists, to the post-Civil War Democratic and Republican parties. A second purpose was to study the Republican Party from its origin to the end of the century, considering such phases as the party in control of the state and its loss of that control; the party as it has been affected by certain national issues, particularly that concerning Negroes; the attitude and position taken by the party on certain state issues; the relation of the party to third-party movements; and, finally, the position of East Tennessee Republicans in reference to the political control of the state and of the nation."

"M" Club Holds First Meeting This Week

"M" Club members held their first meeting of the year on Tuesday evening, October 1, in the Y rooms. In charge of the meeting were the newly elected officers of the organization, president, Bunny Tontz from Washington, Maryland; vice president, Ruth Wynn from LaFollette; secretary, Virginia Margaret Williams from Alderson, W. Va.; Josephine Gillette, treasurer, from Vineland, N. J., and the two program secretaries, Jean Stamp from Lynbrook, N. Y., and Jean White from Wakefield, Mass.

In order to encourage those who go out for point system and fail to gain the number of points required for a letter, the "M" Club is planning to award a pin or badge as a reward to all of these women and also to give them a picnic or hike.

Psychology Department Has "Lie Detector" For Experimental Work

By BETTE UMBACH

The psychology department of Maryville college has recently secured an affectometer, which will be used in various experiments conducted in the psychology laboratory. It is valuable for use in psychological research, as well as for classroom demonstration. This machine, which is popularly called a "lie detector", is designed to determine the relative emotional stability of an individual, the emotional response to various stimuli, the resistance indexes, and similar emotional reflexes.

Instead of a complicated and inconvenient apparatus operating from pulse or blood pressure changes, the affectometer operates with small, comfortable electrodes easily strapped in the palm of the hand. It works on the principle that the sweat glands in the palm of the hand react to emotional stimulation; these glands which produce an electrical potential, serve to lubricate the surface of the skin, thus affecting the circuit of the affectometer through the connecting electrodes. The changes in the circuit are then amplified and recorded on a large meter on the affectometer.

The psychology behind the use of the affectometer as a "lie detector" is that of changes in the body processes attendant upon the excitement of deliberately telling a lie. When the subject is on the defensive, and is emotionally concerned with the outcome, results from the "lie detector" are more definite. Physiologically, the sweat glands in the palm of the hand have been connected directly with the sympathetic nervous system in such a way that when the individual is on the defensive and all his instincts for self-preservation are aroused, changes occur in these glands. Therefore, best results are obtained when the subject, if guilty or involved, is forced into making a deliberate and conscious statement that is either positively false or positively true; he should not

Maryville College Choir Inaugurates Series of Educational Programs To Be Broadcast Over Station WNOX

All Colleges, Junior Colleges, Universities In Range of Knoxville Station To Broadcast Soon

Professor Ralph Colbert will take the college choir to Knoxville, Thursday, October 10, to initiate a series of broadcasts to be given by colleges in this and surrounding states. WNOX will carry this series, the purpose of which is to make the people of htsi section better acquainted with and more interested in our colleges.

The Maryville college choir, which is considered one of the best collegiate choirs in the South, has been chosen to inaugurate this series.

Colbert has been working with the choir industriously in order to have an excellent program on the air next Thursday. Eleven numbers are being prepared for the broadcast. They are: "Finlandia", by Sibelius; "Send Forth Thy Spirit", by Schuetky; "Were You There", arranged by Burleigh; "Hallelujah", arranged by Sergie; "Holy Lord God", by Cain; "Cherubim Song No. 7", by Bortniansky; "The Lord Bless You and Keep You", by Lutkin; "Today There is Ringing", by Christiansen; "Now Arise My Soul", arranged by Wihtol; "Open Our Eyes", by Marfarlane, and the Maryville College Alma Mater.

This new series of broadcasts, which will originate at WNOX, will be called "Your College Speaks." Other colleges in this vicinity will be given the opportunity to present programs during this semester. Next semester, Maryville will again be one of the colleges represented in the series. The exact time for Maryville's next broadcast has not yet been announced.

The choir will be in charge of the chapel program next Wednesday morning. Part of the radio program, which they will present the next day, will be included in the chapel program.

"Your College Speaks" is under the direction of K. E. Huddleston, educational director at WNOX. Huddleston has asked all the colleges, junior colleges and universities within range of WNOX to present one program each during this semester. This procedure will be repeated next semester.

Our choir now consists of thirty-nine members from elevent different states. The states represented are Tennessee, South Carolina, Kentucky, Delaware, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Illinois, New Jersey, New York, and Florida. And China is represented by Dave Kidder.

Maryville was selected as the first college to present a program because of our nearness and our ability to make ready a program by October 10, the time of the first broadcast.

All the programs given in this series will be educational in nature.

Outdoor Movies Tonite

News-reel shots of the University of Tennessee-Southern California football game played at the Rose Bowl last New Year's day will be shown on Wilson field tonight at 8:00.

This is the first time this year Maryville students have had the opportunity to view outdoor movies. Improvements have been made in the projection facilities since last year.

In addition to the football pictures, several comedy features will be shown. In case of rain the movies will be shown in Voorhees chapel.

CAA Examinations Taken In Knoxville

Flight Instruction Will Begin In Two Weeks

Ten aeronautics students received their final physical examination last Thursday night in Knoxville. The examination was given by Dr. E. L. Grubbs, who is the approved medical examiner of this section. These ten students had successfully passed the first examination, in which several applicants were eliminated because of eyesight, weight, or other disqualifications.

The quota this year, ten students, is just half as large as last year's enrollment. This year there will be no alternatives; last year alternatives were accepted. Another change is that the present course is under the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Ground school in this course began October first, and will be finished by January fifteenth. Miss Louise Carson will be the ground school instructor. The students will receive seventy-two hours in ground school; the college will be responsible for 48 of those hours, and the flight instructor will be responsible for 24. Mr. Ferris Thomas, who is flight contractor at the Tyson-McGhee airport, was here Wednesday afternoon, when he interviewed the students. Each pupil was given an individual interview concerning the aeronautics course, in which Mr. Ferris Thomas will be the flight instructor.

Flying will begin in about two weeks; and flight training will be completed with the ground school, by January 15. From thirty-five to fifty hours in the air is the average amount received by the aeronautics pupils.

The ten students who received the advanced examination Thursday were: Douglas Steakley, George Mosteller, Tom Taylor, Fred Shelfer, Floyd Green, Lamar Stewart, Jack Harwood, and Leon Thomas, who is not a student of Maryville college.

War Prevents Purchase Of Garnet Stones For 1941 Senior Class Rings

Gordon Findlay, chairman of the senior ring committee, announces that orders are now being taken for 1940-41 class rings. Due to the European war, garnet stones are unavailable to this year's graduates. Other members of the committee, Helen Williams and George Haynes, have sample rings and will take orders.

Orders will be sent on the first of each month and delivered to the purchaser within two weeks. This quick delivery service is not guaranteed during the Christmas season. A deposit of $5.00 must be made on each order, and the remainder paid on delivery of the ring. Postage will be prepaid only when the ring is entirely paid for before the order is mailed.

Prices vary from $9.75 to $15.60 for women's rings, and from $12.00 to $19.75 for men's rings. The design selected has a stone in the center which may be chosen by the purchaser.

Information concerning class pins will be given out soon.

Class jewelry is being purchased from the Charles H. Elliott Company in Philadelphia.

Wise Choice Needed In Activities

Participation in some of the extra-curricular activities available on every college campus is a definite and valuable part of a college education, but it is by no means an education within itself. The number and variety of "outside" programs make it necessary for those who would do justice both to the organizations they join and to their regular course of study to use discretion in the number of activities which they enter. The purpose in joining an organization should be more than just trying to get a picture in as many places as possible in the Chilhowean; it should include an effort to co-ordinate work and to undertake only what can be well done.

A few years ago it was suggested in an editorial in the Echo that a limit be placed on the number of campus offices any one student could hold. Such a regulation would probably be impractical, but obviously a limit should be self-imposed by the individual, if the circumstances of campus politics do not make it unnecessary for him to impose it.

Quite as important as the leadership experience or the value of association that may be obtained from extra-curricular activities is the value of the courses in the curriculum itself. No club, organization, or athletic program can be made an adequate substitute for the training of the classroom.

The average student can avoid overloading himself only by determining early in his college career the number of activities to which he can reasonably devote some of his time. It may require resistance to high pressure salesmanship which forms a part of the annual drives for new members, but it will be much more worthwhile to join only those organizations which can be entered into with enthusiasm, and which will not become handicaps as college work becomes heavier.

—The Editor's Viewpoint—

JAPANESE—AXIS TREATY

The treaty of alliance concluded last week between the Axis powers and the Japanese government brought together the European and the Asiatic brands of totalitarianism, and made more ominous the threat of the dictators to divide the world among themselves.

It is aimed at disrupting American aid to Britain, and at frustrating Anglo-American cooperation in the Far East. The dictators are applying power diplomacy to do what propaganda and warnings have failed to do. By turning attention to the situation developing in the Orient and to defense in the Pacific, they hope to divert attention from giving practical help to the British.

The resort to this kind of diplomatic warfare against the United States may indicate that the German-Italian military authorities have come around to the belief that the Battle of Britain may be a long one after all, that it may be the beginning of a long drawn out war. If they still held the theory that it would be only a matter of days or weeks until they would have Britain at their feet, they would see no need to bother about the aid that can be given to England by America.

In the face of pointed threats and interpretations from both European and Asiatic sources, the State Department has made it clear that America intends to continue her present foreign policy. Also the government's determination to give even stronger help to the British cause is shown by the embargo placed on scrap iron shipments to all warring nations except Great Britain. This important war material has been supplied to Japan by American dealers.

• • • •

TALK OF BASE AT SINGAPORE

It is believed in some quarters that the next step in closer Anglo-American cooperation will be the basing of American warships at the great British naval base at Singapore. Although the State Department refrained from comment, some news sources report that the U. S. Battleship "Augusta" has already gone to the Singapore drydocks for repairs. Another question now receiving consideration is the possibility of establishing a naval and air base somewhere on the western bulge of Africa. Such a location would be strategically important in warding off any Nazi threat to South America.

One thing is evident in American foreign policy; that is the steady consistency with which we are moving toward a closer unity with the whole British Empire. We are now nearer to an alliance with England than we have ever been with a belligerant power without being actually engaged in war with its enemies. This means that we are taking greater risks of becoming involved in World War II, but in view of the alignment of totalitarian vs. democratic states, it seems impossible to avoid sharing the responsibility for the defense of democracy. For many years we have enjoyed the protection of the British fleet in the Atlantic, and even today it is that fleet which lies between the Western Hemisphere and the expansion of Axis power.

"CHIP" ROBERT OUT

With the resignation this week of Lawrence W. "Chip" Robert, as secretary of the Democratic National Committee, one of the last of the "Farley Bloc" quit the campaign. Pressure because of the number and amount of government orders recently received by Robert & Company, engineering firm headed by Robert, and continued dissatisfaction on the part of the anti-Farley politicians prompted his resignation.

THE COMMENTATOR

By TREVOR REES-JONES

Aristotle's Politics or something got me started thinking about the coming election. Maybe it was that bird who came up to me and quipped: Are you a Democrat or a Christian? Anyway, the important thing is I was thinking.....

We thought he was the grandest thing
Way back in thirty-two
He had us flabbergasted by
The things he said he'd do.
He said he'd ease the taxes on
Our somewhat skinny backs
But failed to mention that our necks
Were where we'd get the axe.
He closed the banks and grabbed the gold,
Oh, what a lovely thrill.
He led the hungry Democrats
Up old Softsoap Hill.
And laughingly, by radio
He gave his dupes the news
That all would be well with Uncle
When we got legal booze.
We are a patient people;
It takes us years to learn
That a good live, able spender
Can blow all we can earn.
And now he's broken precedent
(That's just another thing.)
By tossing that old derby hat
Once more into the ring.
But eight long years of planning,
Or priming cannot dim
The simple and untarnished fact—
We're rather sick of him.

This affectometer, as well as being useful in the classroom and in criminology, is finding a definite place in other fields. Although there is extreme specialization in all diseases and ailments today, there is a trend toward recognition of the psychological and subjective aspects of the patient's condition. The tempo of modern urban life, the increased nerve tension and strain has caused a marked increase in heart diseases and in high blood pressure. There is a growing realization on the part of the public that many of these current ills and ailments are not organic, but purely functional with a psychological background. The affectometer, then, offers a practical measurement of nervous and muscular tensions and the degree of successful relaxation. To the physician who must probe the psychological background and antecedents of a patient's ailment, the affectometer can be an extremely useful tool for dissecting the truth, for determining emotional and nervous stability, for studying tensions or teaching a subject how to relax.

The affectometer is also used by large advertising companies in measuring the relative "eye-appeal" and emotional effect of colorful and attractive packaging of different renderings of a page of advertising copy. In the field of advertising, the emotional effect of the presentation or display on first glance determines its effectiveness. The exact effect of this first glance can be quantitatively measured with the affectometer.

This machine is becoming of fundamental importance in the research field. In the psychological laboratory, the affectometer can be used as the yardstick of measurement of emotional response to varying stimuli in diverse subjects. In demonstrating to groups the varying responses to emotional stimuli, it can be used effectively in lecture halls or for small groups. In addition to its usefulness in measuring extent of emotional reaction, it can be used in classifying types and determining relative emotional stability in various individuals.

NEW INTRAMURALS LAUNCHED

A renaissance in intramural athletics has been introduced into the physical education department of Maryville college whereby the new system will offer "a sport for every man and a man for every sport". The new faculty director, George F. Fischbach, coach of tennis, swimming, and golf at Maryville since 1933, announces that the proposed plan is to have two leagues made up of eight independent teams and eight society or club teams.

This intramural plan, which has been "borrower" from the University of Michigan, is run through a system of eight sophomore managers, two junior managers, and one senior manager, the latter of whom is to be selected from year to year through the merit-system. An eligibilty form for each team member must be filled out by the manager before the campaign gets underway. Every man who is registered in Maryville college is eligible to participate and the choice of a particular team is entirely up to the individual.

TOUCH FOOTBALL RULES

All of the many rule changes under the new touch-football program make for a wide-open, free scoring, and non-injurious tussle. The playing field is marked off 80 yards long and 54 yards wide, with the goal posts planted 10 yards in back of the goal line as usual. All nine players on a team are eligible to snag a pass, but when the ball is snapped back from center, at least five men must be on the forward wall. The runner is considered down only when touched by both hands of an opponent, and a flying lunge at the ball-carrier calls for a penalty of fifteen yards from the spot of foul.

If any ambitions man thinks he can get together and lead a team to victory over such squads as "Junior" Herrick's 'Rebels', Mac McGaha's "Tigers", Clemmie Hahn's "Powerhouse Gang", Athenians, Alpha Sigmas, Ministerials, or Pre-Meds, he should contact Coach Fischbach right away for the more minute organization details. Coach urges that every as yet unattached man see him immediately about snagging a position on one of the new squads to be organized within the next week.

Intramurals

The 1940 edition on the intra-mural sports program is well underway with the tennis tournament, and now plans are being formed for the intra-mural touch football. The plans which have been drawn up and handed to all managers are extensive and have been carefully checked for any errors by Coach Fischbach.

The plan for the year is to divide the league into two divisions. The one division will consist of the club teams, and the other will be made up of independent teams consisting of any man of the college wanting to play football.

The men who represent the clubs in the fray must all be members of the club and be in good standing. The independent players may be a member of any organization on the hill, but they may play as an independent team. Thus far in the race there are four club teams and four indepedent teams. Alpha Sigma and their rival Athenians both are placing teams on the field, the Ministerials are putting their team in the fray, and the Law club are the members of the club division. McGaha's bone-crushing array of players, Clem Hahn's team, Junior Herrick and Vernon Lloyd's powerful, smooth working machines make up the independent division.

The games will be held after three o'clock in the afternoon on two parallel football fields adjacent to the gym. Two games will be in progress at the same time. Officials will be selected by the highly efficient staff in charge of this intra-mural campaign. The fields will be sixty yards long (actual playing distance) so as to assure a high-scoring game. The teams are limited to twelve men and nine of these will be playing at one time. These measures

Highlander Gridders Make Two Straight As Cumberland Is Rolled Under, 19 to 18

Last Friday night the Maryville college football team journeyed to Cumberland University and beat the Lawyers in a hotly contested football game by the score of 19-18. The Highlanders had to come from behind to overtake the Lawyers as the home team scored two touchdowns in the first ten minutes of the fray.

Maryville elected to kickoff and the Cumberland team to receive. Morton kicked to the ten yard line and the ball was returned about thirty yards on the run back. It was then that the University's team started a sustained drive straight down the field toward the Scots' double stripe. Orr broke away for several long gains on a reverse that seemed to be functioning perfectly, and finally scored from the four yard line. The try for the extra point was wide of the uprights. Score: Cumberland 6—Maryville 0.

The kickoff for Cumberland went down to the Scotties' 25 yard line where Hughes attempted to lateral it when he saw he was trapped, but the lateral was not completed and a Cumberland man fell on the ball. Again the machine functioned and the home crowd went crazy as the Lawyers pushed over another score against the Highlanders. The try for the extra point in the shape of a drive through center failed. Score: Cumberland 12—Maryville 0.

Thus far the Highlanders had not touched the ball, but on the next kickoff they started to move. With Witt carrying the ball they picked up several yards, Hughes plowed through the line and Scot skirted end to pick up more yardage. Morton, playing his usual bruising game, picked up yard after yard as the Honaker-coached machine shot into high gear. Starting from their own 35 the invaders rolled down the field. They were stopped momentarily on the four yard line as the quarter ended. Morton then tucked the ball under his arm end scampered over for the first Maryville score of the evening as the second quarter started. He converted the extra point to make the score now read: Maryville 7—Cumberland 12.

The rest of the quarter was played near mid-field, with neither side being able to penetrate the other's goal line until the waning moments of the half. Cumberland threatened to score as they drove deep again with the reverse clicking again. They were held and Maryville took the ball on their own 45 as the result of a poor kick from the toe of a Cumberland man. They started their second long, bruising, powerful drive and were not to be stopped. Morton tore the lines to shreds and when he was not carrying the ball, Hughes ripped through tackle. The blocking assignment in the backfield seemed to be handled in fine style by Garner who replaced injured Witt. The downfield blocking of the Scots seemed to be improving as the game went on and Honaker rounded end, aided with men in front of him, for sizeable gains. Hughes scored as he drove through the entire Cumberland team. The extra point was not good. The half ended with the score 13-12 in Maryville's favor.

The fourth quarter started and it appeared as if Maryville was on another rampage. They started another drive down the field with the backfield ripping off gain after gain. Morton took the ball on Cumberland's ten yard stripe and drove through for Maryville's final touchdown. It appeared as if he was stopped several times on this touchdown trip, but he drove hard and crossed the goal with more than one man hanging on and several sprawled about from the force of his drive. The extra point was no good. Score: Maryville 19—Cumberland 12.

The Cumberland team, although behind by seven points, was not out of the game by any means. They were unable to penerate the Scots' defense through the ground so they took to the air and completed five straight passes to a long, lanky end, straight down the center of the field. They moved about 45 yards on these passes before one was intercepted. Getting the ball again on a kick they started down through the air again and aided by a ruling by the officials placed the ball deep in the Scots' territory and finally completed a pass to score. The Maryville team, anxious to block the kick, was offside and the Cumberland team had another chance to try for the tying point. The kick was wild again, however, and the game ended with the score 19-18 in Maryville's favor.

Milligan Humbles Lighter Orange-Garnet Eleven 20-6 In Johnson City Last Night

In a Smoky Mountain Conference tilt played last night under the flood lamps at Johnson City's Roosevelt Municipal Stadium, the Orange and Garnet-clads from Maryville were downed 20 to 6 by the Milligan college eleven.

After a series of bad breaks following the opening kickoff, a Maryville fumble gave the pigskin to the Buffs on their own 20 yard line. A long forward toss which almost sailed clear over the end zone was nailed by Williams for a touchdown. The Scottie forward wall charged ahead as a unit and blocked the placement kick to make the score remain, Scots 0—Buffs 6

At the beginning of the second period Coach Lacey sent into the game a whole stampede of fresh Buffs. Scatback "Shorty" Brumett punted from his own 40 to Scot Honaker, who was tackled in his tracks on the 20 yard stripe. Honaker's punt was blocked by a furiously charging Milligan right end and the ball was downed by a Buff on the Highlander 15 chalker. Big, bruising Fullback Showalter, on a fake towards center, shifted to the right and carried the ball all the way to the Maryville 2. On the following play, Showalter again plunged and this time the ball went over for the second Buff touchdown. Score: Milligan 13—Maryville 0.

The Highlanders came back strongly, but again the breaks went in reverse. A Milligan man intercepted a pass intended for Shelfer and on the folowing pay a pass Easterling to Blessing went for 20 yards. "Shorty" Williams, behind excellent downfield blocking, carried the ball to the Scottie one-foot line. Williams went over center for the score and his extra point through the uprights put Milligan in the lead by 20 points.

In the final quarter the Scots made their only serious threat. Morton traveled wide to right end and lateraled to Honaker who gained 15 yards. An offside penalty against Milligan put the ball on their 6 yard marker, and then on third down Hughes picked up a very poor snap from center and tossed a long pass to Shelfer in the end zone. Hughes' kick was just inches away from being good and the score stood: Maryville 6—Milligan 20.

Women's Point System Opens With Soccer

Point system for women opened last Tuesday afternoon with an enthusiastic meeting in Bartlett auditorium. Ruth Wynn, assistant to Mrs. Verton M. Queener, instructor in physical training for women, was in charge. The main purpose of the meeting was to find out when point systemers could come out for the interclass sports and how many were interested in the program. At the same time, the rule sheets were given out.

The times set for practice of soccer, the first sport on this year's program are as follows:

On Tuesday and Thursday of each week sophomores report from 3:15 4:00; freshmen from 4:00 to 4:15; and the junior-seniors from 4:45 to 5:30.

All women of all four classes are eligible for point system and are urged to come out for the various sports which are included in the program. There will be soccer, basketball, aerial dart, tennis, volleyball, baseball, track, and swimming, as well as hikes and stunts and other activities. Points are given for each of these sports, 300 of which entitle the winner to an "MC" monogram; 400, an "M" and membership in the "M" Club; and 500, an "M" and sweater and membership in the "M" Club if the individual is not already a member.

are to assure a wide open, high-scoring game creating more interest among the spectators and the players.

All teams must have their entry blanks and the eligibility blanks filled out and returned by today so that the play may begin sometime next week. All the team managers have received these blanks along with a complete sheet of rules and penalties.

No football shoes will be allowed and no harmful equipment is permitted, the only padding allowed is the sort necessary to cover or protect a previous injury and this will have to be passed by the board of intra-murals. Crushing blocks, and too hard-hitting the passer or kicker result in extensive and harsh penalties. Every man on the team down from the center to the backfield is eligible to receive passes. This makes almost a man for man defense imperative if the defensive team hopes to hold the offense.

Rules For Use Of Bartlett Announced

By standing arrangement with the administration of the college, certain parts of Bartlet hall, including the auditorium, are reserved for use of the YMCA. During the past summer the college has made extensive and expensive improvements throughout the building. The auditorium is now a very attractive place. Because of this fact and because of the new policy of closing Thaw hall at night, the auditorium is in more demand than formerly. The YMCA and the college feel it is wise for the YM to announce certain regulations, in order to avoid conflicts or misunderstandings.

1. Upon request of the college, the Y has consented to have the auditorium used for certain classes and presentations of the dramatic art classes.

2. The auditorium may be available for other meetings which are approved by the YMCA Executive Board. But all scheduling of meetings and activities by clubs or other groups must be arranged through the president or secretary of the YMCA.

3. YMCA meetings will be given precedence over all other meetings.

4. Dramatic art classes or presentations, if scheduled with the YMCA in advance, will be given second consideration after Y meetings.

4. Dramatic M

5. All organizations, upon application for use of the auditorium, agree to leave it in good shape. Any abuse or destruction of property will be grounds to deny the use in the future. Such destruction of property will be paid for by the organization using it at the time.

6. Use of nails, screws, or similar implements on the platform or walls is prohibited.

7. The Bartlett auditorium is primarily the worship room of the YMCA, and any meetings or conduct contrary to the spirit of the YMCA is discouraged.

Presidential Campaign To Be Thrashed Out In Next Law Club Meeting

Political "speechifying" will hold the limelight in the next meeting of the Maryville Colege Law club this coming Wednesday evening at 6:45 in Athenian hall. Upholding the candidacy of the Republican nominee for the presidency of the United States will be Professor L. L. Williams. And upholding the election of President Roosevelt will be Professor Verton M. Queener.

At the last meeting of the club two new officers were elected to fill the vacancies which existed. These were Roy Crawford, treasurer, and Jack Harwood, sergeant-at-arms. The new members were welcomed by Archibald Pieper, instructor in political science.

The Maryville College Law club is composed of all students interested in law and the related professions.

September Payroll Paid On October 10

Word has just come from the NYA administrators that our NYA payrolls will close on the 5th of each month. The first closing date happens to fall on a Saturday, October 5th. However, the time sheets must be turned in on the fifth of each month, regardless of the day of the week on which this date falls. The time sheets should include work done on the fifth, and must be turned in before 10:00 the following morning, or in case the fifth falls on Saturday, by 10:00 the following Monday morning.

All NYA application blanks should be returned to the office also by Monday, October 7.

The government is requiring this year that each student on NYA sign his monthly payroll sheet before it goes to the State Auditor for payment. Student workers must call at the Student-Help office on Monday, October 7, to sign this sheet.

NYA pay checks will be mailed by the government direct to the students, and will probably arrive about the twentieth of the month. If workers wish to apply their NYA check on their board payment, no fines will be charged on the amount of the board which is covered by the NYA check, if they turn checks in promptly when they receive them.

The college payroll for September will be paid in the Student-Help office on Thursday, October 10, and all checks must be claimed on this date. If it is impossible for anyone to do this he may ask someone else to get it for him.

Throughout the year the date for the college payroll each month will be the Thursday of the week the board payment is due. These dates are as follows:

October 10, November 7, December 5, January 16, February 13, March 13, April 10, May 8, and June 4.

Dr. Hunter To Lead At Vesper Service Sunday

Dr. Edwin Ray Hunter, professor of English and Dean of Curriculum, will be the speaker at the vesper service tomorrow evening. He has not announced the subject of his address. The choir will furnish special music.

The choir will be featured in the chapel service Wednesday morning, October 9. At this time the choir will present the entire program of music and meditation.

208 Men Enroll In YMCA As Extensive Program Is Planned

73 Hikers Attracted By Y Trek to LeConte Sat.

With a membership of 208 college men already, the Maryville college YMCA is starting off a year which promises to surpass any year in the past decade. Only six more members are needed to exceed a membership record made seven years ago; and membership applications are still being received by the officers of the organization.

The first main event of the Y program this year was the annual hike to Mt. LeConte attended this year by 73 men and under the supervision of the Y officers.

The next Y-sponsored program is the intramural sports tournaments, under the direction of Coach George Fischbach. The tennis tournament is drawing to a close with the final rounds in progress, and the football tournament started this week. This year has seen the institution of a new policy in regard to competitive sports on the hill. As formerly, the teams are not class teams but are sponsored by the various men's organizations, including Alpha Sigma, Athenian Ministerial association, and the Law club, and by a few student captains. Also this year's schedule includes team sports, basketball, track, swimming, and the like, and a few individual sports not yet announced.

The Sunday afternoon worship programs have been drawing large attendances, the Y officers stated today. The remodeled auditorium is conducive to worship and to the holding of varied programs. Tomorrow Miss Jessie K. Johnson will speak to the men on the subject: "The Poet's Attitude Toward God." Once each month the entire hour will be devoted to music; also, the program committee is planning to have more outside speakers from surrounding cities. These worship programs are held each Sunday afternoon at 1:15 in Bartlett auditorium.

A representative of the Y serves each year on the East Tennessee Interracial Group, which is composed of delegates from white and colored schools in this area. The purpose of this group is to bring about a closer relationship between the two races and to discuss problems relating to the welfare of these two groups.

Other campus activities in which the Y cooperates are the Artists' Series and the International Relations club. The tickets to the first Artists' Series, which will be on November 4, will be purchased from a member of the Y cabinet, Wesley Lochausen said.

Near the end of the current school year the Y, as always, will give a banquet at the New Providence Presbyterian church, for all men of the college. This banquet, a stag affair, will have a man's menu of steaks and all that goes with them. The cabinet members, directed by Charles Baldwin, will cook and serve the food.

Membership cards are being distributed now by the officers of the organization. Those desiring to join may obtain their application blanks from the Y store. And those who have not received their membership cards may do so by calling at the office of the president, Phil Evaul, senior from Haddon Heights, New Jersey.

Shots Of Campus Life Snapped By Chilhowean Staff

Senior Section of Book Will Close October 16

Plans for the 1941 Chilhowean were rapidly taking place as the subscription list climbed toward the six hundred mark this week.

A large number of formal and informal pictures were taken on the campus; the senior class selected its sponsor; and several advertisements were solicited from local business houses, according to reports from the editor and the business manager late yesterday.

The senior section of the yearbook will close on Wednesday, October 16, and the junior section will open the following morning. An announcement concerning organization pictures and pages will be made soon.

The time of the announcement of the sponsors has been changed from October 31 to November 28, when they will be presented at the annual Barnwarming in the Alumni gym. The three lower classes will choose sponsors this week, it is expected.

A sketch of the new cover is being prepared by Kingskraft and will be submitted for the approval of the editorial staff within a few days.

Disc Club To Have All Request Program

The Disc club will hold its first meeting on October 18 at 4:30 in the Fine Arts studio.

With Miss Genevieve Cowan as sponsor, the committee composed of Gabriel Williamson, chairman; Ruth Sutherlin, publicity chairman; Marianne Allen, Ann Biggs, Marian Magill, Arthur Peterson, Margaret Peters, and Meredith Preston, has decided to have a request program for the first meeting. They are planning to play "Peter and the Wolf" by Prokofieff, a gay and enchanting musical story in which all the characters have a little melody of their own by which they are easily recognizable, and "Moldau" by Swetana, about which no comment is necessary.

This year the committee is trying to have something entirely new and different in all things. They are planning to have a new recording machine, if not for the first meeting, at least by the second. Instead of having long oral commentations about a selection, they are going to have printed explanations with just a brief talk by the commentator.

The committee is anxious to please everyone, and several all-request programs will be played throughout the year. Semi-classical and modern music will be featured as well as the classics.

Debate Will Not Meet

The varsity debate class will not meet on Wednesday, October 16, at 1:10. Speeches assigned for that day have been postponed until the following Tuesday. Dr. Verton M. Queener, debate coach, is serving on the board for registering those in this ward for the selective service draft.

Three New Horns To Be Used In Public Address System Now

Vernon Lloyd To Be At Microphone to Broadcast Over System Tonight

The new public address system will be used on the football field for the first time tonight. The speakers are larger than those first ordered because of a mistake made in the shipment.

Thursday, the equipment for the new system arrived here. Instead of containing the three smaller horns which had been ordered, the shipment had three larger horns. The representative of the company discussed the matter with the athletic committee, and the group came to a satisfactory agreement concerning the price. The larger horns cost more than the committee expected to pay, but the larger sized ones will very definitely increase the efficiency of the system. The new horns are only two and one-half feet long, but they will have the power of a six-foot horn. The new speakers, for the present will be mounted at the south end of Wilson field. However, if the speakers do not seem as efficient as the committee hoped they will be, the location may be changed. Either the top of Thaw or a newly-set telephone pole at the north end of the field would be used as the new support.

The new equipment purchased consists of three P.M. driver units, three 72-inch projectors with 29-inch bells, a new cable plus wiring material, and four phones. This equipment costs over three hundred dollars, and the committee in charge states that the system will be superior to those in use in Knoxville.

Vernon Lloyd, who will announce the game tonight, will use the new broadcast booth. Besides buying the new equipment, the athletic committee has supervised the building of 3 new booths. One of these booths will be used for radio broadcasting, one will be used for a press box, and the other will be used for the public address system. From the last of the three mentioned, a wire has been stretched across the end of Wilson field and will be attached to a microphone on the band stand. This will enable both the public address system and the radio microphones to pick up the band music.

It is hoped that WROL and possibly WNOX will take advantage of the new broadcasting booth and that the home games of Maryville college will be heard over the air by those unable to attend the games.

Each of the booths is eight feet wide and six feet long. They were built under the supervision of Mr. Ernest Brown, college engineer, and Mr. Walter Morton. As yet no windows have been set in because of lack of time, but these will be put in before the end of another week.

The athletic committee which has supervised the entire program consists of Dr. Frank D. McClelland, chairman; Mr. Louis Black, Coach Lombe Honaker, Prof. George Howell, and Mr. F. L. Proffitt.

Queener And Williams Talk Politics To Law Club At Last Meeting

Dr. V. M. Queener and Dr. L. L. Williams, as guest speakers of the Law club Wednesday evening, gave their views on the coming election and the presidential candidates.

As to "Why I Am Voting for Roosevelt", Dr. Queener mentioned some of the statements made by Candidate Willkie, such as more and faster defense, more relief, and at the same time reduction of the national debt. He assumes that President Roosevelt will be re-elected, although he had hoped, he said, before the "no third term" policy was broken, that Secretary of State Hull would be nominated as the 1940 Democratic candidate.

Dr. Williams, giving his reasons for voting for the Republican candidate said he believed there were stronger men available to help Willkie carry on the work of the country than there were to help Roosevelt. Dr. Williams also spoke of Willkie's appeal to the people because of his accomplishments as an executive and as a business man.

During the business meeting, Olson Pemberton was elected sergeant-at-arms to replace Jack Harwood, who has resigned, and Janet Lindsay was named chairman of a committee for planning the annual Law club picnic in the college woods.

College Farm To Install New Dairy Plant On Campus

Improved Refrigeration System to Be Employed

The Maryville college dairy farm is to have a new dairy plant in a few weeks. The plans and specifications are prepared and the funds are on hand for the project, Mr. Louis A. Black, Director of Maintenance, announced today. The new building will be erected on the college campus near the milking barn.

The new dairy plant is to be 16x32 feet by 7 feet in height. It will comprise five sections: 1. a refrigerating room, 2. a processing room, 3. a wash room, 4. a storage and machine room, and 5. an enclosed loading porch. The structure is to be built of cinder block and refrigerated by a General Electric cooling system.

The new plant is estimated to cost $1200. The cooling system will consist of CMF 53B General Electric condensing unit with a capacity of 99400 BTU's per day. The system is to care for 100 gallons of milk, which requires only 85000 BTU's per day. The brine tank will have a 200 gallon capacity, is made of boiler steel, and will carry calcium brine. It will function to cool the cold storage room and furnish a medium for aeriation of the milk over a system of copper cooling coils. Work is to begin on this new refrigeration plant right away.

The refrigeration storage room will be five feet wide, 7 feet long, and 7 feet high; it will be of the cork and concrete type of construction. There will be four inches of Armstrong's Corkboard insulation on all four sides, top and bottom. The corkboard will be applied in two layers of two inches each, applied in hot asphalt with broken joints. The walls and overhead will be finished with two coats of 2 and 1 cement plaster on the inside and on the outside exposed walls. On top of the floor insulation a three-inch concrete wearing surface will be laid. The refrigerator door will be a Jamison Cold Storage door.

The refrigerator will be a No. 2 Faultless cooling system with a top section for the use of water. The circulating pump will be a model 3028 Gould's Centrifugal pump with a capacity of ten gallons per minute. The aereator will have a capacity of 220 quarters per hour with 8.36 square feet of cooling surface. If ever greater cooling surface is needed, it can be provided by installing units as needed.

Maryville Alumni Enter Air Corps For Training

Lawrence Lowe, Clarence Thames, and Donald Cross, Maryville alumni, have been admitted to the United States Naval Air Corps and will begin a four years training course on January 15, 1941. This training will be at Pensacola, Florida, where former Maryville students, Weldon Baird, John Odell, and Winfred Ross, are already stationed.

At the end of their training period they will be commissioned officers in either the active service or the naval reserve. The former Maryville students were among the nine out of twenty who passed the entrance examinations.

Selective Service Registration Station Will Be Installed In The Alumni Gymnasion Wednesday

College Men Will Not Be Compelled To Go Into Training Until Spring

QUEENER IN CHARGE

Tennessee Quota Almost Filled With Volunteers; Only Few More Needed

Maryville college will feel the first tangible results of the Selective Service law next Wednesday, October 16, when a draft registration booth for the purpose of registering all men of the college and the immediate vicinity will be installed in the Alumni gymnasium.

Registration will start at 7 o'clock Wednesday morning and will continue until nine o'clock that night, or later if it is necessary. All college men must register on the campus. They cannot register by mail at their home town.

College men whose numbers may be drawn will not have to discontinue their college year. If they wish to have their one-year period of training deferred until next July, they must make their wishes known to officials in charge of registration. It is important that they state this wish to the officials; otherwise, they will be subject to immediate call.

Although college men must register here, they may have their registration cards sent to their home registration committee, where their cases will be considered when their names are drawn.

Very few Tennessee students will be inducted into training, because the Tennessee quota has almost been filled by volunteers. Approximately only 800 Tennessee men are needed to finish filling the quota.

Men who register will be divided into four classes. The first class will be composed of men to be called. Men who will be exempt because they are employed in industries important to national defense make up the second class. Men who have dependents make up the third class and men who are incompetent will be put in the fourth.

In order that the registration machinery may run smoothly, the regular county election commission will be in charge of registration. The men who compose the commission are experienced in this type of work. Therefore, since the job of registration will be somewhat difficult, they have been assigned this work. Approximately 30 minutes will be needed for the registration of each individual. However, some may get through sooner and it may take longer for others.

Men who wish to volunteer must do so through the local board, but no special privileges will be accorded them. They may not pick their position; instead they must comply with the rules governing regular drafted men.

Students not yet twenty-one do not have to register, and, as the draft law now reads, they will not have to register in the future after they have become of draft age. However, the present draft law may be amended to make necessary the registration of men who will become of draft age later on, but it's not likely that the law will be amended before next year, if at all.

Engineering and chemistry majors drafted will be able to use their training to an advantage in the army. Also, students who have had ROTC or National Guard training will stand excellent opportunities for promotion.

Although men volunteering for the one year's training period will not be granted special privileges in picking positions, men who join the regular army or navy for the regular longer period of time will have some choice as to what department they become a member of.

Draft boards which will make the selections of those to be drafted will be non-partisan as far as politics are concerned. No man who actually participates in politics to any great degree can be a member of the selective draft board.

Dr. V. M. Queener, Mr. E. E. McCurry, Dr. F. A. Griffitts, and Miss Geneva Hutchinson, all faculty members of the college, will help with the registration. Queener is in charge of the work here.

Twelve Freshmen Elected To Echo

Fisher, Hall, and Felknor Fill Junior Vacancies

Twelve freshmen apprentices and junior staff members were elected Tuesday afternoon at a meeting of the Publications Committee. The try-outs were completed early this week, and those new members of the staff have already started work on the paper.

The new freshmen members are Billye Ruth Braly, Carolyn Eberhardt, Georgia Lee Meadows, Nettie Rose Spraker, Kay Lidell, Mary Wintermute, Robert Francis, Pete Van Blarcom, Paul Cooper, George Piper, Sidney Duke, and Thomas Gardner.

From the preliminary try-outs for which all freshmen were required to write, thirty-three themes were selected by the editorial staff of the Echo. The authors of these themes were asked to do further assignments so the final selections could be made, and when these assignments were judged, twelve freshmen were selected to become Echo apprentices.

The new junior staff members elected to take the places of Hilton Wick and Don Kent who resigned because of their work on the Chilhowean were Bob Fisher, Dave Hall, and Mary Felknor. Bob Fisher is on the advertising staff of the Chilhowean and is a member of Athenian, Student Vols, and the YM cabinet. Dave Hall, chemistry major, is a member of the college choir and glee club. Mary Felknor, French major and transfer student from Meridian, Miss., is a newly-pledged Theta and member of the French club.

Shine Is President Of Philological Club

Dr. Hill Shine, associate professor of English at Maryville college was elected president of the Tennessee Philological club at the organization's May meeting. Dr. Shine is a graduate of the University of North Carolina; and at this university he also earned his master's and doctor's degrees. Since 1932, Dr. Shine has been a member of the Maryville college faculty.

The club which Dr. Shine serves this year as president was first organized by the University of Tennessee's English and foreign language teaching staff. In recent years the club has been open to visitors from the faculties of all the colleges in this area, and several Maryville college faculty members belong to it. Dr. E. R. Hunter was a member of the executive council last year.

As the name implies, the Tennessee Philological club is interested in the study of all true literature, including etymology, grammar, criticism, literary and linguistic history. Regular meetings are held at the university the second Tuesday of each month. One of the planned activities for this year is the celebration of Chaucer's six-hundreth birthday in December.

Many Improvements Make Dining Hall One of Great Show Places of Campus

By DAVID M. HALL

Visitors shown around the Maryville college campus, since the opening of the current college term, have been unanimous in their praise of the dining hall's appearance. Many have declared it the most beautiful college dining hall they have seen. Back of its present beauty, as compared with its past average appearance, is a story of cooperation and determined efforts on the part of many of the college family. And now that the final touches have been put by a decorative artist, the dining hall is more beautiful than ever.

This summer the college had the entire dining hall repainted a soft light tan, moved all the radiators from wall positions to window bases to avoid soiling the walls, and closed the old elevator shaft opening into the hall. On every other column a cabinet has been built for the condiments and the "old lady".

Mrs. R. W. Lloyd, Mrs. John Walker, and Miss Margaret Ware, the manager of the dining hall, decided that green drapes, to match the table tops, should be hung with the opposite sides of the drapes very light to match the walls. Mrs. Lloyd and Mrs. Walker conceived the idea of putting artistic flower holders on all the tables. Mrs. Walker decided to finance the project and Mrs. Lloyd, with the help of Miss Ware and the College Maid Shop, chose the materials and the design, made them, and put them in place. These chair covers are of bright but soft pastel colors. The chairs at tables all have the same color chair backs, but no adjacent table has the same color. The effect can be imagined: it is a sea of beautifully contrasting colors. But even this is not all, for now the decorative has added her touch.

Regularly, Miss Florence E. Newcomer, a decorative artist who is a

YMCA Climbers Take To Tall Timbers On Week-End Smoky Mountain Hike

By TREVOR REES-JONES

Oodles of fun, popcorn, peanuts, spills, and thrills can be packed into an hilarious few hours by the successors of the Great Barnum. But it takes the Maryville Y to present five times as much fun and at half the price.

For the benefit of those who wondered where all the masculinity of the college was last Saturday and Sunday, the YM men were barracked at the Chimney tops camp grounds in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. A bus and the cars of faculty members were requisitioned to transport the 73 hikers to their camp on Saturday afternoon. Upon arrival, the boys engaged in a wild scramble to find the most suitable spot on which to bed down, preferably near a fire and plenty of wood and inhabited by only a few mosquitos. Gradually groups formed and headed for the tall timbers. And therein hangs a tale. One group started up the nearby stream but got only as far as a regular swimming hole. Technically a sign, NO WIMMIN ALLOWED, was hung out and the brave plunged in but not for long!

Feeling fit as a fiddle and 'raring to go against any and all food, the fellows straggled in group by group, refreshed by either swimming or a brief hike into the surrounding mountains. And you should have seen those boys consume the 40 pounds of hamburgers, the 150 ears of corn, the six gallons of cocoa, and the cookies. Talk about the Law of Diminishing Utility—it's been repealed. About half way through this repast someone missed the tall manager of the Y store, Frank Barr. Sure enough, a call of the roll revealed that Frank and two others, Arling Kressler and Jack "Frosh" Fesperman, were not present. A searching party was formed. Frank, followed by Arling and Jack, was

A Much Abused Privilege

As apart of the freshmen orientation program this year instruction was given on the use of the library. While most upperclassmen do not need fundamental instructions about the ways and means of finding the books they want, the continued abuse of library privileges by a minority of them might suggest the need for some type of review or remedial course.

Reserved books, some of them missing since 1938, recently have been found in remote places on the campus. Even reference books and current magazines, placed in the reading room for convenience, often disappear.

Most of these disappearances are not outright thefts. At a later time some of the books and magazines mysteriously return to their proper places, but many have been permanently lost. Those who take unwarranted liberty in the use of library property show lack of consideration for the rights shared by others, and no doubt most of them are quite irritated when they call for a much-needed book and are told that it cannot be located.

The purpose of placing important texts on reserve and of setting limits on the length of time all books may be borrowed is to make them equally available to all who need them. Those who illegally take them from the library defeat this purpose, and subject their fellow students to serious inconvenience.

There are no rules and regulations, however strict, that can prevent some people from trying to monopolize the use of books and magazines. Reference volumes and current publications are necessarily fully accessible to the reading room, and many others are made accessible by various undercover methods. Only cooperation on the part of all who use library facilities can keep them available to the whole student body.

FIRM STAND IN THE EAST

Both Great Britain and the United States punctuated their disapproval of Japanese activity in the East by placing new obstacles in the way of a new order in Asia. Winston Churchill's decision to re-open the Burma Road from India, important source of supply now closed to the Chinese government, and America's decision to cut off subsidized wheat shipments to the ports of the Orient, most of which are held by Japan, are two more steps toward Anglo-American resistance to Japanese ambitions. These actions, following closely the pointed threats from Japan and the Axis powers, will doubtless bring out relations even nearer the breaking point than they now are, but in view of the expressed determination of the totalitarian states to continue aggressive warfare on all fronts, there is no alternative to strong action for the United States.

If Japan is allowed a free hand in the Far East and Germany should win in Europe, America may find herself surrounded in both oceans by hostile powers, already pledged to isolate her from foreign trade. Faced with such a possibility, a firm stand now is the only choice.

AID TO STARVING EUROPE

The French government has announced that food rationing is now in effect in unoccupied France, and with the coming of winter great suffering will probably ensue. Private relief agencies will doubtless renew the proposal made by ex-President Hoover, that America send food to war victims in Europe. Mr. Hoover's suggestion was prompted by humanitarian motives, but it is very doubtful if aid sent to German occupied or adjacent territory would serve a truly humanitarian purpose.

The British Admiralty would not consent to the passage of American relief ships through its total blockade, because the English have learned by experience that Herr Hitler's word is worthless, and that the day has passed when promises made on international honor can be taken at face value. Supplies sent to German occupied territory would be used to feed the Nazi army, and the people who have been made the vassals of the Fuehrer would remain destitute.

Certainly neither Great Britain nor the United States can be considered inhumane for refusing to furnish aid to the champions of oppression who are now employing every means of destruction to crush the last of European democracies. Those people who have involuntarily become citizens of the "new order" are the wards of Germany, and regardless of American or British sympathy for them, most people recognize that any attempt to send help would only contribute to a German victory and hence to more suffering for millions of people.

Echo Analysis

By CARSON BREWER

It isn't often that students get steamed up over affairs of state. However, recently, affairs of state have become so clearly connected with the welfare of every individual neck that we can't neglect them.

"Will we get into the war?" is the question that looms like a sinister shadow in the minds of policy makers in Washington. We students ask the same question because we have rather pointed reasons for wanting to know. Still, nobody knows the answer.

I think, though, that we are nearer to actual participation in the thing than we have been at any previous time since war started. The reason for this is Japan.

Japan is trying to put into effect what she calls a "New Order" in the Far East. That means merely that she wishes to secure economic, political, and military control over China, and all the Far Eastern territories that now belong to France, Holland and Great Britain. If Japan does secure that control, all foreign investments in China will simply become the property of Japan, to do with as she pleases. Furthermore, nations that have been buying the products produced by the British, French, and Dutch possessions will have to bargain with Japan. It goes without saying that Japan will drive hard bargains. We have been getting almost all our crude rubber from the East Indies. What would we do if Japan got possession of that rubber and decided that she wished to sell it to her new friends, Germany and Italy. They need rubber, you know.

Very important, also, is the fact that we have large investments in China. We are not going to turn those over to Japan without at least doing some diplomatic sword rattling. This we have been doing all along. And, moreover, we have been lending money and materials to China in order that she might be able to continue her fight with Japan. The crazy angle to the situation is that, until very recently, we have been selling material to Japan too. Scrap iron, the commodity that Japan must have if she is to continue the war for any long period of time, wehave been selling to her in immense quantities.

Just the other day, though, we came to our senses and told Japan that, beginning October 16, she would have to get her scrap iron somewhere else. Since Japan can't possibly get anything like all the scrap she needs somewhere else, she resented our action in no mild manner. To add to Japan's anger, we persuaded Great Britain to re-open the Burma Road, the life line over which food and materials must travel in order to reach China's embattled army.

Washington has apparently already made its decision; perhaps that decision is only tentative, but as it now stands, it is a decision to pursue a policy of firmness, firmness, and more firmness with no backing down. Japan, too, has evidently made a decision. If those two opposing decisions are strictly upheld by both countries, war is inevitable. Both countries are traveling swiftly toward each other on a narrow, dangerous road. It is doubtful that they can fin dcommon ground wide enough for them to pass on without, to put it mildly, some rought fender scraping. Neither can back up without a serious loss of face. Certainly it will not be wise for us to do any backing.

TALK OF THE WEEK .... By Jean White

Scots and Soda

In starting a column of this type, which, incidentally, is trying to fill the somewhat vague requirements of a society-fashion-gossip column, we wish to state, with a note of envy, that the actions described in this space are by no means either approved or copied by the writer. Suppose we start in the conventional way, giving an authentic bit of information:

Last week-end Weldon Baird, Helen Maguire, and Bill and Polly (Hudspeth) Wood, alumni of Maryville college, were guests of friends on the campus.

One of the most delightful events of the present social season took place in suite 100, Baldwin hall, Miss Nan Wood, of Martins Ferry, Ohio, who is making her home with us at the present time, was hostess to several friends at a week end party. Miss Wood, attractively attired in a charming red plaid evening ensemble, served dainty refreshments to the following: Miss Mary Esther White, Miss Carol Barbour, Miss Kathryn Estes, Miss Joan Humann, Miss Betty Bryant and Miss Ruth Carter.

And speaking of plaid, have you noticed the number of smart Scotch plaid outfits scholastically adorning so many students? Band Sponsor Jean McCammon, carrying out the college tradition, looks charming in her neat ensemble. Just a few of the many others seen following the spirit are Ruth Sutherlin, Phyllis Johns, Dorothy Barbour, Mary Orr, Lucette DeBarritt, and Dorothy Gessert. And you might pay special attention to those lovely worn-on-the-outside numbers being modeled by Jim Humphries and Tex Lochausen.

Grooming has certainly taken an upward trend the past few days. Of course, a great deal of this may be due to the fact that class sponsors are being chosen, and that Mr. Benson has been swarming unobstrusively over the scenery. Still it was real nice to see so many page 97 in "Esquire" suits decorating the landscape. For example, that unsurpassable pin-striped creation occupied by Robert L. Puncheon, on the front row in Ethics.

The 1941 Chilhowean is to be the best pamphlet ever produced at Maryville college, it said on the memo. We heard through the next-door-neighbor's lab partner's room mate that the class sponsors were not going to be, as was formerly noised about, announced at the class parties; but the clever little YW girls have pulled a fast one, and are going to have the announcement made at Barnwarming. See Hilton Wick, or your nearest staff member for your copy of the Chilhowean (we are not receiving one cent for this plug.)

A delightful musicale was held in Baldwin parlor last Thursday evening. The feature artists were Miss Lucette deBarritt and Mr. Joseph Dickenson, and Carl Miller was guest artist. The high spot of the evening was a rendition of "When You Come To the End of a Perfect Day", played by Mr. Dickenson and dedicated to Miss deBarritt. Those present were Miss Betty Bryant, Miss Billy Ruth Brawley, Miss Lucette deBarritt, Mr. Dickenson, Mr. Miller, Mr. Fred Roth and Mr. Don Lowrey.

Last Wednesday evening a charmingly old-fashioned ice cream social was held in the local debate room. Those participating were Miss Janet Lindsay, Miss Elizabeth Moore, Mr. Hilton Wick and Mr. Henry Wick, and Mr. George Webster. Mr. Webster was officiating host. Just for the benefit of the statistically minded, a quart easily served the five guests. Ice cream, that is.

Student Recital, October 16

The music department has announced a series of 70 student recitals to be held every two weeks throughout the winter. SCOTTIES UNDERDOGS TONIGHT

The scent of a Smoky Mountain Conference championship is in the Tornado of King college as the boys from Bristol invade Wilson field seeking their second straight verdict over the Maryville Orange and Garnet. By virtue of their stunning 39 to 0 victory over Emory and Henry last Saturday, the visitors from way up in "Ole Virginny" are slight favorites to come out of the tussle with another niche carved in their victory string.

★——★——★——★

KING SCOUTED BY DAVIS

Coach J. D. Davis scouted the big Tornadoes as they overwhelmed their fellow-Virginian opponents last week, and he brings home a breath-taking tale of a huge forward wall which averages at least 190 pounds. The key spots of the King machine seem to be in the smooth pair of terminals, Robert Rogers at 185 and Victor Kursavage at 195. Coach Davis tells the Orange and Garnet that "Bus" Everard, 170 pound quarterback, is the triple-threater to watch out for in the King backfield. Although he seems almost out of place on the monstrous squad from Bristol, 140 pound halfback Jim LaVanche, who carries a mean pigskin will bear a lot of watching this evening.

★——★——★——★

BACK TO THE HIGHLANDERS

That proverbial injury jinx has struck the hill again. However, slippery-shod Lloyd Taylor is the only victim of the Milligan tilt who won't be able to don his war-togs tonight. If Taylor can possibly recover in time for the not-so-far-off game with Chattanooga, the Honaker-men will be considered lucky. Those wrenched knees never fail to take a long, drawn-out treatment for full recovery.

★——★——★——★

BABY BAIRD AND CRAGAN STRICKEN

A near epidemic which threatened to hit the Scottie squad has finally been stopped with only two victims. Baby Baird and Tom Cragan each suffer from the effects of large boils on the arms. Although Tom has only one of the pesky things, Baby has four in a row about an inch apart on the lower part of his right forearm. And still these two men have what it takes to get in there and dish it out when the slightest touch must bring violent throbs of pain shooting through them.

LET'S HELP OUR TEAM TONIGHT

All of these seemingly bad breaks to the team in general might make some teams quit "right in the middle of the stream", but not the fighting Scotties. They'll dig their cleats into the Wilson turf tonight with nothing in mind except a clean, hard battle and victory at the closing whistle. However, as both Coach Honaker and Coach Davis said to the student-body at a recent pep meeting, the success of our team depends more than one could possibly dream of in the school spirit and loyalty shown by the rooters in the grandstands. So, bring along your leather lungs tonight and help us come out on top of the Tornadoes by a convincing margin.

Frosh Jim Hedges Is Singles Champ

Bushing-Hargrave Rout Wick-Wick Doubles Team To Capture YM Tourney

TENNIS

Leading throughout the entire match, Freshman James Hedges defeated seeded George Webster in straight sets, 6-3, 6-1, and 6-4, Friday afternoon. Earlier in the day the doubles crown was won by Art Bushing and Bill Hargraves as they turned back the Wick brothers.

Webster was favored at the start of the match since he had had tournament experience, but it was soon evident which man would win. Hedges defeated Joe Humphries, Hal Lloyd and Ken Cooper, before meeting Fisher in the semi-finals. Webster overcame A. Flowers, Hal Henschen, and Robert Hunter. He turned back Williamson in the semi-finals by 3-6, 7-1, and 6-4, while Fischer was being defeated by Hedges.

When the two began to play, it was seen that the match would be slow as Hedges resorted to a slow lobbing ball capable of pulling Webster all over the court. Intermingled with these floating balls were hard smashes to Webster's corners which George could not return.

Friday morning saw the Wick brothers, who had repulsed Boyd Rich and Stuart Schimpf in the first round and later in the semi-finals Whetstone and Culver, trounce by 6-4 and 6-4 by Art Bushing and Bill Hargraves for the doubles championship. The combination of Bushing and Hargraves had defeated Lippard and George, and Peterson and Corbett.

These two matches ended the first phase of the intra-mural system which has replaced the interclass games of the past. This year's winners will soon see their names engraved in the gold cup at the Y below last year's winners. To obtain permanent possession of the cup the winner must come through for three years straight, without receiving a letter in tennis.

Last year forty boys entered into the singles and eighteen in the doubles, while this year only 34 were in the singles and sixteen in the doubles. In last year's matches, Oliver Van Cise won the singles while Morrow and Copeland came through in the doubles.

For those who went down early in defeat, a consolation tournament is being held. Stan Menning and Allan Moore, who were in charge of the interclass event are also at the head in these matches.

And then there was the professor who, calling on a pupil who was soundly sleeping in the last row and getting no answer, said without looking up: "Well, is Mr. Drake absent or on the floor?"

Intramurals

After several weeks of preparation and practice, the intramural football tournament really got under way Friday afternoon. Athenian defeated their arch rivals, Alpha Sigma, 6-0; the Tigers defeated the Rebels, 8-0; the Ministerials defeated the YMCA Frosh 6-0; and Powehouse beat the Floogies, 13-0.

The football fireworks started shortly after 3:30 when Corbett's Athenians faced Alpha Sigma. The only score of the game was the result of an Athenian pass to Wright. The attempt to convert failed. Alpha Sigma's best efforts to tie the score were without result.

McGaha's Tigers really sank their claws into Herrick's Rebels to the tune of an 8-0 score. Steakley's touchdown pass to Hodges produced the first score and was followed by a safety when Thompson fell upon a Rebel fumble behind the goal.

The next teams to take the field were the Ministerials vs. the YMCA Frosh and the Floogies vs. Powerhouse. The Ministerials and Frosh might well have fought to a tie had not Rowely intercepted a YMCA pass and carried it for a touchdown early in the game. In the other game the Powerhouse turned on the juice and defeated the Floogies by the largest score of the afternoon, 13-0. After both fought through a scoreless first half, the game was broken up in the third quarter when Laughmiller passed to Cooper for the first score. Huff took a pass from Laughmiller for the extra point. Late in the fourth quarter another pass from Laughmiller to Huff added another six points to the Powerhouse total.

The only team that has not as yet played is the Bulldogs. They will enter the competition on Tuesday opposing the Powerhouse. Other games scheduled for Tuesday are as follows: Alpha Sigma vs. Ministerials, Athenians vs. YMCA Frosh, and Floogies vs. Rebels. Each team is scheduled to play a total of eight more games and they will be played every Tuesday and Friday until November 8.

The official length of each game is 32 minutes, divided into eight minute quarters with a resting period of a minute. There is a five minute period between halves.

It is hoped that those of the student body not playing on any of these teams will come out and enjoy watching the games. There will be plenty of excitement and a lot of good football played between now and November 8.

Honaker Machine Meets King College Under Floods Of Wilson Field Tonight

Tonight on Wilson field the Maryville college football team returns home after two weeks on the road to meet King college in one of the hardest battles on the Highlander's schedule.

Last year the Tornado swept over the Scots 13-0 at Bristol. The Highlanders were in the ball game for 57 minutes, but in the last three minutes the King machine began to roll and the result was a loss for Maryville. Smith, King back, intercepted two of Maryville's desperate passes in the last remaining seconds and King pushed over on two quick punches.

The injury jinx which habitually hits the Scotties has been rather lax so far this season. Tommy Saffel is suffering from a blow on the head in practice, Sam Monger is probably lost for the season due to a knee injury, Lloyd Taylor, star freshman back last year, has thus far this week been unable to participate in practice due to a knee injury received in the Milligan game last week, and Boydson Baird is suffering from boils on his arm, but it is believed that he will be in shape to play against King.

This is the first home game since September 21 when the Scots played host to Hiwassee college on the Wilson field turf. Since then the Highlanders have journeyed to Cumberland U. and to Milligan. Defeated only by a strong, fast fighting Milligan team the outlook is not too dull for the home fans. The word received from Bristol and the results of their games thus far this season proves that King is presenting one of the strongest teams in the conference and one of the strongest teams in the history of the school. Losing but a few men from last year's well-balanced squad, and securing several new key men, the Tornado is thought by many to be heading toward the conference title this year.

The game with Milligan last Saturday showed up several things in the Scots' play, one of which seemed to be the poorness of the pass defense. It has shown up in other games this year, but from the extensive passing drills both offensively and defensively that the Scotties have gone through this week it appears this will definitely be remedied. The running of Tommy Saffel in the Roosevelt Stadium Saturday night was an encouraging sight. Tommy carried the ball fine and gave his own exihibitnon of broken field running. BB. Baird's play last Saturday was great. He hit hard, and kept going, and his defensive game was on; he looked like the boy who ripped off 152 yards

Star End From King

ROBERT ROGERS

Robert Rogers, one of the flashy ends on the SMC-leading King Tornado eleven, is a 185-lb. lad from Saltville, Va. He will be face to face tonight with one of the Maryville Scotties aces, "Tommy" Cragan. Rogers and his team-mate, Vic Kursavage at the other extreme side of the giant King forward wall, make up the set of scoring twins which hit an all-time high last week as they contributed more than their share of the scoring in mowing down Emory and Henry, 39 to 0.

DINING HALL

member of the Artists' Guild of Pittsburgh, comes to Mrs. John Walker's home, "Morningside", to do Mrs. Walker's decoration. It seems that this year she gave most of her time to the Maryville college dining hall. The piano was finished in light tan and green to match the color scheme as were the cabinets and Miss Ware's desk. Then three large "decorative pictures" were painted by Miss Newcomer. One is hung to the right of the main entrance on the panel: it is of fall flowers and berries from Mrs. Walker's garden. The one hung to the left of the main entrance is from spring flowers that grow on the college campus. Each of these have a pot on them for domestic flavor. Over the fire place in the annex is hung a huge flower and fruit painting. It is composed of flowers and leaves from the college woods and from Mrs. Walker's gardens, and also some imported items that are usually used for tables in this vicinity for decorations. These three paintings are not primarily for decorative purposes which fact means that the artist is not confined to natural proportions, but may enlarge a subject out of proportion to its natural relationship with its surrounding subjects to create the desired effect. These three pictures are intended to attract individual attention, but are not intended to contribute to the entire decorative effect.

against Cumberland last year. Lloyd Taylor pranced off a good many yards a week ago as he swivel-hipped thru the defense until he was hit from the side and hurt his knee.

For the second straight year it is the Scotties who enter this important fray as the underdogs. Last year the Tornado was a highly favored team and Maryville was given little chance to beat them. This year it is the same story, but the Highlanders will enter the fray this year in much better shape and with the squad complete as differen from last year when several of the key men were out due to injuries.

The fans who attend this game will be treated to the new public address system that is being installed for the game. The press boxes and the address booths are being erected on the upper stands. The equipment is said to rival and perhaps surpass any other equipment like it in this territory.

The Scots have no breathers ahead for them this year. After facing a huge Milligan team last week, and a strong, tough bunch of athletes from King this week, they take to the road and engage the University of Chattanooga on the following Saturday. The University plays the U-T Vols this week end and Maryville should be able to tell what it will be like a week from today.

YMCA Hike

found sliding down a nearby mountain, and, by expert maneuvering, he should have reached the camp inside of an hour! So now it's "Chimney Top" Barr.

With a regulation army call of "presentallaccountedfor" everyone turned in. The fires gradually diminished in intensity, bull sessions broke up, and one by one the fellows fell asleep—maybe to dream third term nightmares or peaceful thoughts of the morrow. As the sun's rays finally began to pierce the haze surrounding the mountains again, everyone piled out. Since the day was Sunday and World Wide Communion Day, a service was held at a nearby meeting ground. Dr. Ralph T. Case administered the communion and was assisted by Dr. Frank D. McClelland and Dr. L. L. Williams. A prayer ended this service which joined our group with groups of Presbyterians throughout the world.

A breakfast of scrambled eggs, ham, cinnamon buns, and coffee started the hikers off with a bang. Most of the boys were transported to the foot of Mt. LeConte, but then it was every man for himself and the Devil had a rush day. Five miles on a straight stretch is no morning jaunt; and it's still worse if the five miles consists of uphill grades, an occasional 2 per cent downgrade, and more uphill pulls. Alum Cove was reached and still the Yehudi of the hike, the boy who once hollered "Excelsion", was running a poor second. But in the home stretch the Y boys were really going; some even passed up a cool drink of water from a summit spring to get to the large rock at the very top.

The trip down was all go and relatively few brakes, compensating for the fatigue of ascending the mountain. Then after a regular Sunday dinner of steak, French fried onions, cake, and sodawater, the fellows piled into the jitney of their choice and headed for the Hill.

And who are the hikers indebted to for this well-attended and successful hike? Well, let's see. Smokey-eyed Phil Evaul, beverage-stirrer Dudley Moore, cookie-watcher Allan Moore, disher-outer and chief-cook Charles Baldwin, dietician Art Peterson, and then there is one more. Oh yes, it's that laugh-provoking "Chimney Top" Barr.

Glee Clubs Organized By Colbert This Week

The combined mens' and women's glee clubs held their first meeting of the year in the chapel Wednesday morning.

About one hundred and sixty students turned out to answer Professor Colbert's call for new members. Of this number, Mr. Colbert says that he can keep only about one hundred. The names of those selected have not been released as yet, but a full list will be out within a few days. The alto section will be strengthened by the addition of quite a few good voices. Both of the mens' sections are larger this year than last.

The officers for this year in both clubs were elected last spring as is the usual custom. Doris Smith is president of the women's glee club, and Betty MacArthur will serve as her secretary-treasurer. Sam Cornelius is the president of the mens' glee singers and Gene McCurry is the club's secretary-treasurer.

Parish Project Launches Program

The College Parish Project has launched its full program of student ministry to churches and Sunday schools in Blount County and adjacent territory. Several of the boys have been going to some of the more distant points each Sunday since the opening of the college year, and September 29 a number of workers started work at the other points where services were conducted last year.

The Parish station wagon started out at 8:15 a.m., leaving two workers at New Castle, two at East Mountain View, two at Covemont, and then returned to the campus at 11:30. Immediately after lunch, the same wagon took another load of students down into the Friendsville area, leaving four workers at Marble Hill, three at Unitia and two at Belleview over in Loudon County, returning to the campus about 4 p.m. About 5 p.m. another group of boys took the station wagon and went to Holston and West Emory where aid is given to the young people's societies of those places.

General Directions For Scheduling Of Events

A word now near the beginning of the school year may prove to be helpful in keeping a clear and an accurate calendar of events, both academic and social. Here are a few simple directions:

1. All affairs of general interest are to be scheduled in Dr. Hunter's office. These include all athletic events, oratorical contests, debates, Artists' Series, and other programs that are for the entire school.

2. All purely social group activities should be scheduled in Mrs. Snyder's office. These include all parties, picnics, banquets, hikes, special suppers in the YW rooms or in the college woods, and the like. Also all programs attended by mixed groups should be scheduled. These include joint meetings of the societies of the YM and YW and other similar programs. In scheduling of these activities it is necessary to fill out an activities permit card stating time, place, and chaperon.

3. All schedules should be filled five days in advance of the event.

4. All clubs that wish to meet regularly should petition the committee on the scheduling of activities and secure a regular meeting time and place. All programs, unless special permission has been secured for extension of time, should be over not later than 7:15 except on Saturday evening which is not a study evening.

5. The official register of activities is posted in Anderson hall near Dr. Hunter's office.

YWCA Changes Time

Philip Evaul, president of the YMCA will speak on "Christian Growth" at the regular meeting of the YWCA on Sunday afternoon.

Miss Thelma Ritzman will play special music on the flute. The meeting will be held at 1:30 p.m. instead of the usual hour, 1:15.

Athenian Holds "Girl I Left Behind" Contest

Athenian will hold its regular meeting tonight at 6:15 in Athenian hall. Featured on the program is the annual "Girl I Left Behind" contest. Any Athenian is eligible to enter a picture.

While the judges are deliberating, Phil Vance and Charles Burgreen will entertain members with several well known college songs. As usual during the football season, scores of the games played throughout the nation today will be announced.

The meeting will end early in order that members may attend the Maryville-King game.

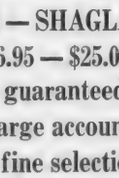
COLLEGE QUIZ

There are plenty of questions that arise at college that the faculty doesn't always have the answers for. Here, for instance, are a few problems that'll probably pop up—and here also are our ideas as to the best way to solve them! There's one thing certain, however, you won't be confronted with any serious clothing problems if you come here before you leave and outfit yourself with our smart accessories—and clothing by Hart Schaffner & Marx. But now, on to the quiz:

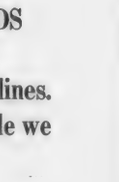
Q. If I ask her for a "coke date" and she orders a double-chocolate fudge sundae with pecans and whipped cream, what should I do?

A. Show her a chart on calories.



Q. How long should my slacks and other trousers be?

A. Show the girls what masculine ankles you have by wearing your trousers so they just barely "break" and meet the tops of your shoes.



Q. How many suits, hats, etc., shall I load my trunk down with?

A. That depends upon your personal budget. The important thing is not how many clothes you take along but how well-selected they are. Whatever you do, "blackball" anything that is tricky and faddish—be sure the clothes you take are authentic and smart.

Q. When shall I give my tailcoat an "airing" and when my tux?

A. Cover your noble frame with a tux at informal affairs like fraternity house or week-end dinner parties, but when you re set for that big formal date, don't let your gorgeously dressed girl down by putting on anything less than your Surrey tailcoat.

Theta Alpha Phi Presents Play By A. A. Milne "Mr. Pim Passes By" October 25 In Voorhees Chapel

George Tibbetts Takes Lead in Fast Moving Modern English Comedy

VETERAN CAST TO ACT

Brink, Coleman, Moore, Gehres, Berg, Hellums Make Supporting Cast

"Mr. Pim Passes By" will be presented by Theta Alpha Phi at 8:00 on Friday. evening, October 25 on the Voorhees stage. This play, written by A. A. Milne, is a fast-moving English comedy with the typical English setting.

A. A. Milne, author of "Dover Road" which was presented by the senior class last June, wrote this modern comedy in his own inimitable style thus producing a mirth-provoking play which is listed among the better known modern English comedies.

The play is being coached by Mrs. Nita Eckles West, professor in the dramatic art department. The cast of characters is as follows: George Marden, J.P., Frank Brink; Olivia (his wife), Marianne Coleman; Dinah (his neice), Troye Moore; Lady Marden (his aunt), Virginia Berg; Brian Strange, William Gehres; Carraway Pim, George Tibbetts; and Anne, Frances John Hellums.

The character of Mr. Pim, taken by veteran actor, George Tibbetts, is the lead and portrays the absent-minded businessman who, because of his forgetfulness, mixes up the marital ties of the Mardens to such an extent that the action covers two acts before things are straightened out. George Tibbetts, junior from Newportsville, Pa., has had several minor parts and also leads in plays presented here. He will be remembered for his performance as dePinna, supporting comedy role, in "You Can't Take It With You", and as Mendel, the marriage broker, in "Family Portrait."

Frank Brink, senior from Williamsport, Pa., taking the part of George Marden, is a well-known actor on the Maryville college stage. He has taken leads in several plays of which the best remembered are his interpretations of Scrooge in "Christmas Carol"; James in "Devil's Millions" written by John Wintermute; Dr. Gibbs in "Our Town"; and Gorochenev in "Tovarich."

In this play, "Mr. Pim Passes By", Marianne Coleman plays opposite Frank Brink as George Marden's wife. Marianne, a Maryville resident, is stepping into her first leading role in a Maryville college production.

Troye Moore takes the part of Dinah, the neice of George. Dinah is supposedly in love with Brian Strange who is portrayed by William Gehres. Troye played in "Family Portrait" last year;

This entertainment has been planned by the Social committee and is being presented by the four societies on the hill, Alpha Sigma, Theta Epsilon, Athenian, and Bainonian.

The long program promises to be of the varied, Major Bowes type. Accordian solos, piano solos, tap dances by Polly Park, a skit by Tommy Stahl and George Phelps, a bass fiddle solo by Karl Miller, and impersonations by Floyd Green are among features to be presented. Among the outstanding names that will appear on the program are Phil Vance, clarinetist; Gregory Steele and Charles Burgreen, pianists; Lynn Becker and Kay Liddell, and Barbara Holt, ventriloquist.

Presbyterians Have 150th Anniversary

October 20 has been designated by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, USA, as Sesquicentennial Sunday. The Presbyterian church throughout the United States is taking a special offering for the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education in the interest of the work through Presbyterian colleges, Westminster Foundations, maintained by churches at university campuses, and theological seminaries.

Part of the Sesquicentennial fund campaign, sponsored by the Board of Christian Education for the past three years, will close at the end of 1940. The object of the campaign is especially to encourage the fifty Presbyterian colleges and fifty Westminster Foundations connected with the Presbyterian church to raise funds for their own endowments, and also the Board of Education offices at Philadelphia to raise what money it can for work of this kind. The Board has conducted extensive campaigns of publicity and promotion. The goal is $10,000,000, to be raised by all these groups.

It has now reached more than $8,000,000. The total is made up from reports of more than one hundred institutions.

Maryville college is one of the institutions whose reports are included in the total. Maryville did not announce its campaign until last fall. The money Maryville is trying to secure is called "The New Forward Fund." Maryville's campaign is to last four more years, closing at the 125th anniversary of the college.

Roosevelt or Willkie? Maryville to Decide Issue Next Friday

I.R.C. Conducts Straw Vote Again This Year

The International Relations club will conduct a straw vote, October 25, to determine who would be elected President of the United States if the job of electing were left up to the students of Maryville college. The polls will open at 9 a.m. and close at 5 p.m., in Thaw hall lobby. The votes will be counted between the hours of 5 p.m. and 6 p.m., in time for the results to appear in the next edition of the Echo.

The election board, whose task it will be to officiate in the election and assist in the counting of the votes, will be composed of Chairman George Webster, Jean White, Warren Corbett, Bob Lamont, David Kidder, Barbara Swift, and Anne Gammon.

Archibald Pieper, political science instructor, will be in charge of the vote counting, which will be done soon after the last ballot is cast.

It is interesting to note that for the last three successive times the straw vote has been taken here, the Republicans have won decisive victories.

At the next regular IRC meeting, next Thursday night, October 24, a round table discussion will be held. The question for discussion will be "The Relation of the United States With Europe During the Winter."

Dr. Hunter, Dr. Queener, Dr. Case, Professor Wendt, and Mr. Pieper will compose the group who will talk over this important question. Such topics as food conditions in Europe, how strong England is now, and where will Germany turn next will be discussed.

The meeting starts promtply at 6:45 in Bartlett auditorium.

125 M. C. Students Affected By First Peace-Time Draft

Last Wednesday morning, one hundred and twenty-five students and faculty members enrolled in the first peace time conscription in the nation's history. The men turned out one hundred per cent to the gymnasium where fourteen attendants were kept busy registering the draftees from 7:00 a.m. until 9:00 p.m.

Although this was an epic making event in the nation's history, the men accepted the registering with complacency. Special students, who are majoring in engineering and chemistry, will receive special consideration if they are called. Others who have had ROTC or National Guard training have the best chances for advancement. Any student who may be called has the right to defer his training until July 1.

Registration at Maryville was under the supervision of Dr. Queener assisted by Dr. Griffitts, Miss Geneva Hutchinson, and Mr. McCurry.

All men who are selected by the national lottery will fall into four classes only one group of which will undergo the year's training. The other three groups will consist of those men who are excused because of their need in defense industries; those men who have dependents, and those who are incompetent.

Great Church Hymns Theme of Y Program

"Great Hymns of the Church" will be the theme of the YMCA worship service Sunday afternoon. Facts about each hymn will be given before it is sung or played.

The YM is striving in their worship service Sunday to obtain a more thorough knowledge of the truly great hymns. Among the ones to be discussed are "Abide With Me"; "Our God, Our Help in Ages Past"; "A Mighty Fortress is Our God"; "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross"; "Onward Christian Soldiers"; "Jesus, Lover of My Soul"; "Love Divine All Loves Excelling"; and "Nearer My God to Thee."

Facts concerning the writer, the reason for writing the hymn, the history of the hymn, and anything else which will help one to better appreciate the hymn will be given before it is either played or sung.

Some of the hymns will be sung by the entire group, others will be sung by a soloist, and the rest will be heard as violin solos. Mr. Ralph Hovel and Jeanne Heckman will be the soloists.

Maryville College Students To Attend Community Series

Yehudi Menuhin Opens Season November 25

Approximately fifty Maryville college students are planning to attend the Knoxville Community Concert Series this year which will be held in the Knoxville high school auditorium. The Community Concert Association is a nation-wide organization, bringing before the public at popular prices outstanding musicians of the world. Definite arrangements in regard to the attendance of Maryville students have not as yet been made; however, there will be two busses chartered if an even fifty desire to go. If less than that, the number will be limited to twenty-five, as in that case only one bus can be chartered. Also, the number of tickets available is restricted to 50. All those who want to go should see Prof. Ralph Colbert in regard to their tickets.

Yehudi Menuhin, brilliant world-famous violinist, will open the season on November 25 at 8:15. Beginning his career at the age of four as soloist with the San Francisco orchestra, Mr. Menuhin has since devoted all of his efforts to his chosen work except for a two-year retirement in 1935-37. At the age of eight he gave a recital at the Manhattan Opera House and made his Carnegie hall debut in 1927, two years later, playing the Beethoven Concerto with the New York Symphony. After that he regularly appeared with symphony orchestras conducted by such leading musicians as Arturo Toscanini.

On his first world concert tour Menuhin appeared in thirteen countries, sixty-three cities, having a total of one hundred and ten concert engagements. Not only for his concert work is Menuhin outstanding but also because of his research work in regard to his desire to expand the repertoire of violin concert music which has led him to restore to life many rare and important works of classical and modern masters; thus, Schumann's now famous "lost" concerto composed in 1853 and never played before, Mozart's "Adelaide" concerto composed when Mozart was ten, and a host of thers have first been introduced and played in public and now immortalized on records by him.

The other artists who are to appear on the Knoxville series are Dorothy Maynor, soprano star of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, on January 20; and Jose Iturbi, Spanish pianist, who in 1932 appeared on the Maryville Artists Series.

NOTICE

Junior class dues of $1.00 are due this week, and must be paid before the class party. Dues may be paid to Allen Moore, Andy Haynes, Phyllis Johns, or Johnye Sue Long.

Rossini's Gay Opera "Barber Of Seville" To Open Current Artists' Series On November 4

To Appear Nov. 4

Georgia Graves, contralto, who appeared here in joint recital in the 1939-40 Artists' Series, will portray the role of Bertha in "The Barber of Seville."

Talented Conductor To Present Opera Without Orchestral Background

ELABORATE COSTUMES

Alexander Kipnis Will Complete Current Series With Concert on March 4

Opening the 1940-1941 Maryville college Artists Series on Monday evening, November 4 will be a presentation of Rossini's gay opera, "The Barber of Seville". Hilde Reggiani, newest coloratura sensation of the Metropolitan, with six other outstanding operatic and concert artists will participate in his spectacular performance.

"The Barber of Seville", called the "singers' opera", is considered the only opera that can be successfully presented without orchestral accompaniment. It, however, is presented effectively with two pianos under the direction of the talented conductor, Guiseppe Bamboschek, who has directed over fifty performances of this opera.

Hilde Reggiani, small and blond, is considered as perfectly cast for the part of Rosina, the young and beautiful heroine of the opera. Miss Reggiani was born in Modena, Italy in 1914, studied there at the conservatory in Bologna where the great Rossini had also studied, and finally made her brilliant debut in her native Italian city. After a successful tour of Europe, she spent three years in South America scoring triumph and triumph. At her United States debut at the Chicago Opera house, she aroused a wild demonstration of applause and ovation—so great that the performance was necessarily stopped until she repeated the song that caused such an outburst. Critics describe her voice as high and clear, technically excellent, and totally enchanting. She is now a leading coloratura soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Armand Tokatyan with his instinctively dramatic actions and "beautiful" tenor interprets Count Almaviva, rich young Spanish nobleman and lover of Rosina. Tokatyan's life also includes world travel. Born in Egypt, he has since sung in leading tenor roles in Europe, and North and South America. So striking was his debut in Italy that he was immediately engaged to join the Metropolitan, where he is ranked as one of the most versatile and dependable stars.

Carlos Ramirez is the likeable, happy-go-lucky Figaro. Twenty of his 26 years he has studied music, starting as choir boy in Bogota, Columbia, his birthplace. From there he passed to radio singing where he became the most popular South American radio artist. Agentine radio fans dubbed him "the golden voice of a silver land." As he appears here November 4 he will be making his operatic debut tour in the United States. He joins the opera troupe after a season of work at the famous La Martinique doing "night club opera." As the New York World Telegram describes him, "Ramirez is handsome in a boyish way. When he

Student Volunteers Hold Picnic Today

Outing Features Talk And Campfire Service

This afternoon the Student Volunteers held their first picnic of the year in the college woods. Games of various kinds were played in the afternoon and in the evening Mrs. Margaret McClure Cummings spoke to the group.

Members of the Student Vols met in front of Pearsons at three o'clock to leave for the college woods. During the afternoon, baseball, three-legged races, relays, and various other games furnished entertainment.

At 5:30, the group was called for the evening meal. Ione Youngs, home economics major was in charge. After the meal, a general song-fest was held for half an hour. During this time, the favorites of the group were sung. The camp fire setting added much to the program.

Gradually hymns and choruses were introduced into the singing which led into the worship part of the picnic. Stuart Schimpf acted as song leader for the group.

Following the period of hymn singing, Mrs. Cummings, instructor in Bible and religious education, spoke to the group on the subject: "Meet Yourself."

The program for the day was in charge of the general committee. On this committee are "Bunny" Tontz, chairman, and Jimmy Yunkers. Members of the faculty present were Mr. Louis A. Black and Mrs. Cummings.

Former Cheerleader Believes Microphone Beats Megaphone

By TREVOR REES-JONES

Jack Benny made Waukegan, Ill.; Bob Burns made Van Buren, Ark.; and Mary Martin advertised Weatherford, Texas throughout the nation. And now Maryville college has its own "local boy makes good". And who's the guilty fellow? None other than Frank Brink, senior from Williamsport, Penn. If you have a radio and if you have come across with the required "dinero", he is the announcer you hear over WNOX every evening from 6:00 until midnight—or at least until eleven.

Frank has had varied experience in the field of public speaking and dramatics. In his sophomore year he served as the president of his class and as the captain of the cheering squad. Last year he won the T. T. Alexander Oratorical Prize. And this year he is the president of the local chapter of Theta Alpha Phi, national dramatic honor society.

Among the many parts he has played in campus productions are the lead in John Wintermute's honors work play, "Devil's Millions", Scrooge in Dickens' "Christmas Carol", and Doc Gibbs in "Our Town". He has also assisted in the direction of many plays and was co-director of "Devil's Millions."

With all this experience behind him he was able to secure a position last year as a part time announcer with WNOX. In this capacity he directed a few dramatic shows and other radio programs. Then last June he started full time work as an announcer, going home for a brief stay only.

Contrary to a common belief, an announcer's work entails far more than just reading a script every time the program changes. Frank has to stand guard over his local control board, change transcriptions, and, in general, be ready for any emergency. In his work as the Esso news reporter he has to arrange the news as it comes in on the station teletype, edit it, and write up his own slants on the various subjects.

Sometimes his slants are very original and very humorous. Once after a newscast he said in his pleasing voice, "We now join the largest nest-work . . ". Once in awhile he'll read some news on Willkie or Roosevelt and sure as shootin' a few contraminded people will keep the studio 'phone jumping. Then there was the time he put on a transcription of "Blue Lovebirds" by Jimmy Walsh and his orchestra at record time, twice as fast as required. The resulting sounds resembled a debate between Donald

Dark Doesn't Stop Fems' Frivolity Fun Comes First; Matrons Follow

By KAY LIDDELL

"Where was Moses when the lights went out?" The answer comes back in an extremely disgusted tone, "In the dark!" Evidently the joke had been heard before. But if you're in the "dark" when the lights go out, then that's a different dark from the dictionary definition!

Having a candle in a room proves a difficult proposition. Someone over in Carnegie is sure to start yelling, "Candle on third floor! Candle on third floor!" The candle is extinguished hurriedly. But with enough presence of mind it will be noted that if the shades are pulled and the candle if placed well toward the door of the room, it becomes practically impossible to detect the light.

Our Miss Maryville takes sketchy notes on tomorrow's history, and when She finishes She looks around for her roommate. Roommate his disappeared. She hears muffled giggles next door and draws rapid conclusions as to Roommate's whereabouts. Blowing out the candle She falls wearily into bed. She no sooner takes a deep breath than Roommate comes tiptoeing in and crashes into the waste paper basket which is near the door waiting to be emptied.

Roommate mumbles a few incoherent words, and then informs her excitedly that the girl next door has a portable radio and that Glenn Miller has just come on and She simply must come and listen. And who is She to refuse to hear Glenn Miller? When the program is nearing its end, someone gives a loud "shhhh!" A death-like silence falls instantly. An authoritative step is heard on the stairs. Safely in their own room once more, they thank their lucky stars that they live just next door.

A few minutes later a determined knock is heard on the door. After proper delay She answer it, only to be confronted by the matron. The matron has a knowing look in her eye, but says all she wanted was to be sure they were in their room. Well, they were, but She swallowed hard more than once during those moments.

She informs Roommate in no uncertain terms that She intends to go to bed and be done with this foolishness. She climbs into bed once more. Suddenly a pair of roller skates is sent flying down the hall. Roller skates have a capacity for making a very penetrating noise, as someone has evidently discovered.

With a sigh of not-quite resignation She sits up in bed. Glancing over toward Carnegie, She sees the whole building go dark. And then, one by one, dim lights begin to make their ap-

Year's Glee Club Projects Announced

Mr. Ralph Colbert has already drawn up detailed plans for the three projects of the Glee clubs, which are under his direction.

First comes the practice for the Messiah, which will begin the first Sunday in November. The Glee club and the choir will form the nucleus for this service, but anyone in the college wishing to take part in it may do so if he can carry a tune.

The second project for the year will be the opera, which so far has not been decided upon. This is sponsored entirely by the Glee club, and will take almost all of the winter to perfect.

The third is the spring concert, which is held sometime in May by the Glee clubs.

There is also a possibility of there being a half-hour program for the college, in which the Glee club will participate.

The organization is composed of about ninety members, who have already begun practicing for the coming activities.

STUDENT UNION IS LATEST ADDITION TO FIFTH COLUMN

Early this month the National Student Union, a pacifist youth organization, attempted to organize what it called "a walkout on war", and suggested that it be carried out by student demonstrations against American foreign policy. Prepared editorials, one of them written by the editor of the Vassar college student publication, and other forms of publicity material were sent to college newspapers with urgent requests that they be printed.

The union condemned the transfer of destroyers to Britain, the proposed sale of "flying fortresses", and the plan to train Canadian pilots on American soil. Even the Civil Aeronautics Authority came in for denunciation as promoting a "war move" because of the military-service pledge now required of the men who take the training.

Can it be that those who would sabotage the American defense effort have invaded American colleges and universities to ask students to demonstrate against the measures necessary for preserving democracy, perhaps even for preserving our national existence?

It is a well recognized fact that aid to Great Britain, aside from all moral considerations, is the most important phase of our national defense. The British fleet which the American destroyers helped to strengthen, is America's first line protection against Axis aggression. Democracy is pitted against the most ruthless military power ever encountered in the history of the world. If we fail to furnish the aid required to defeat fascism, the time may come in our own country when not only the academic freedom extolled by the Student Union, but also the entire catalogue of human rights enjoyed only in a democracy may be obliterated.

We would not advocate that the activities of the Union and kindred organizations be suppressed, because such a policy is inconsistent with the principle of free discussion, but we would urge that those who tend to approve anti-defense propaganda be careful to consider its source. As we have said before in this column, IF DEMOCRACY IS NOT WORTH DEFENDING, IT IS NOT WORTH ENJOYING.

—The Editor's Viewpoint—

AMMUNITION FOR THE DEMOCRATS

The most recent bit of political ammunition utilized by the Democrats is the dispatch of Herbert Matthews, ex-correspondent for the New York Times in Rome, to the effect that the Axis is out to defeat President Roosevelt "not as a measure of interference in the internal policies of the United States, but because of the President's foreign policy and because of everything for which he stands in the eyes of the Italians and the Germans".

Although the Times is supporting Wendell L. Willkie, it gave the story front page publicity. Two days later the controlled Italian press declared that it made no difference who was elected, since both Italy and Germany are sure of victory anyway.

Mr. Matthews was ordered to leave the country with the explanation that he had disturbed relations between his country and Italy. This was evidently not the real reason, unless the Fascist press has had a change of heart in regard to its attitude toward the United States. A more plausible explanation for Matthew's expulsion and for Gayda's apology is that the dispatch reacted in Roosevelt's favor, although it is difficult to believe that the Duce's agents could be so ignorant of American public opinion as to think that they could help defeat a candidate by coming out against him.

Mr. Willkie's pointed statements on foreign policy have made his position clear. The only reason for Axis opposition to the President rather than to the Republican candidate is that the dictators have seen and felt he policy of his administration. They have had no experience with Wendell Willkie.

AMMUNITION FOR THE REPUBLICANS

The Republicans have not been without their own breaks in the past few weeks. One of the best "lifts" the Willkie campaign has experienced was the appointment of Elliott Roosevelt as a captain in the Procurement Division.

Coming as it did immediately before national registration day, Republican strategists adopted it as the subject for new slogans in an attempt to give a human interest twist to he campaign. An "I Want To Be A Captain Too" button is being given wide circulation, and much publicity has been given to the report of a man who actually went to an army recruiting station and tried to enlist as a captain.

Proof of the incident's campaign value is found in the fact that young Roosevelt asked to resign his new appointment, giving is his reason that it is creating adverse publicity.

Aside from its political aspects the appointment is seen in some quarters as a mistake, because of the way in which it may detract from the democratic character given the draft program. Prospective draftees may not be as quick to recognize Captain Roosevelt's unique qualifications as were the army officers.

Scots and Soda

Despite two strikes against us, we are still at bat; but instead of only two of us to fend off the enraged public, there are now three of us. In self-defense, we imported a third room-mate for reinforcement. Now three of us take the responsibility for this drivel; if the howling mob gets any thicker, we'll have to resort to hammocks and trundle beds to take care of the room-mates we'll need.

The presence of Steve Amos, renowned alumnus of Maryville college, was celebrated Saturday night with a short, effective concert rendered by the college band, before Pearsons hall. This event was coincidental with an Open House at Pearsons dining hall sponsored by Miss Susan Ware; Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd were honored guests of the evening.

Several last-years graduates were guests at the college last week end. Edith Evans was visiting her sister, Madge Evans; Ruth Woods was visiting Betty McArthur; Mary Dean Allen was visiting her ex-room-mate, Margaret Kern Hodges; and Lyn Tyndall flashed through the campus in a maroon, two-garage imported creation.

The rain of the past week brought out a number of the latest designs in drizzle-drapes—those boxy, pre-shrunk numbers of Coach Al Thomas, and a couple of freshmen girls. Although more abbreviated in length than the ordinary, we noticed that they cover the situation admirably. Also noticed pattering through the puddles: super-attractive scarlet boots, worn by Virginia Wheeler.

Fashions for the male of the species seems to have gone jolly well British lately, as tweeds appear from every conceivable wardrobe. H. Wick, as well as his brother, H. Wick, was among the first to don tweeds; taking up the idea since then have been George D. Webster, Bill Felknor, J. D. Hughes, and Chuck Foreman. Well, gentlemen, here's looking at you.

Other guests last week, either for the week end or for the game, were Harriet McMurray, '39; Nicholas Whtie, '30, who was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Blazer of Maryville; and Deane Brown and Alice Prime, who revived old times by taking their places again in the college choir at vespers.

Imagine the embarrassment of one Ken Cooper, caught in the very act of stacking the room of the treasurer of the freshman class. To coin a phrase which will indubitably catch the fancy of the public—was his face red?

The song, "If It Wasn't For the Moon" doesn't appear to mean a thing to some people. In all the wind and rain of last Tuesday night we quite unexpectedly stumbled upon some devoted couple planted among the trees, carrying on the venerable practice of moonshinecking—moon or no moon. Took more than rain to dampen their ardor.

This week end Marjorie Resides, of Harrisburg, Pa., is playing hostess to Miss Phyllis Rohrbaugh, who comes from the same general region of the Keystone state. All the pearson girls are so happy to again welcome Miss Rohrbaugh into their midst. Incidentally, and for the benefit of the freshmen, Miss Rohrbaugh constitutes the principal reason why none of the campus girls have been able to get to first base with Frank Brink.

Latest report on the economic system of the Law club leans toward a bargain policy. The finances of the picnic, planned for next Wednesday night, go something like this: single member, male or female, fifteen cents; member and guest, male or female, as the case may be, two for a quarter. At that rate, they're practically giving it away.

And in conclusion, may we say that we realize that all the people can't be pleased all the time—in fact, that some of the people can't be pleased at any time. So please address all complaints to 410 Pearsons. And no holds barred.

TALK OF THE WEEK .... By Jean White

Cheerleader

Duck and Walter Winchell. But Frank just laughed it off, as did his radio audience, and placed the disc on the transcription machine.

Everyone knows that the machine-gun chatter—the spittin' image of a Yankee accent—of a teletype machine is often used before and after a newscast. Walter Winchell may have started this; it took our Frank to improvise on this custom. Yes, Frank once used the instrument as the background for a recital. But the latest act literally takes the cake. No fifth oolumnist, Frank accidentally cut off a speech by Great Britain's dynamic Prime Minister, Winston Churchill, and started—advertising shoe polish. But then it's humorous incidents like these that brighten an announcer's humdrum life.

In spite of his many duties as an announcer and as a student he is doing honors work on the subject of "Make-up in Dramatics". And all in all, Frankie is a regular fellow. He likes coffee and hates cheese. And he likes to get wet in the rain and to be awakened gently. And akin to the postman who takes a walk on his day off and the college lad who loafs during the vacation is Frank Brink. On his day off, Friday, he likes to sprawl out on a comfortable chair and—listen to the radio.

Miss Henry Will Visit New England

Miss Clemmie J. Henry, student-help director, will leave this week end on an extensive trip through the eastern states in behalf of Maryville college's "New Forward Fund."

Miss Henry's trip will take her to Newark, N.J., and New York City from which she will go through the New England states where most of her time will be spent. She will not return to the campus until Thanksgiving.

In addition to the regular equipment used for speaking engagements, Miss Henry will carry a new 16 mm. projector with several reels of technicolor film. These movies include campus views and informal shots of student life.

Dr. Stevenson Tomorrow's Speaker At YW Meeting

Dr. William Patton Stevenson, college pastor since 1917, will be the speaker at the YW worship service tomorrow. The meeting will be held in the Y rooms at the new time, 1:30. Dr. Stevenson will discuss "Living All of Life." The Chilhowee trio, composed of Mrs. Wagner Newberry, Miss Jessie K. Johnson, and Mrs. Charles F. Webb, will furnish special vocal music'

WOW! WHAT A GAME

The Maryville-King football game last Saturday is now history. But, oh! how that thrilling chapter glistens in the minds of all who saw it. Before the game in the dressing room, we could see two entirely different scenes. In the Tornado quarters the big, bruising, gridders lounged about on the double-decker bunks with only feeble efforts at getting uniformed for the tilt. Instead of numbers on the backs of their maroon colored jerseys, big white letters seemed to appear which spelled—O-V-E-R-C-O-N-F-I-D-E-N-C-E. Another thing in the Tornadoes' favor was the fact that Coach Jack Young could boast that not one man on his squad had so much as a single scratch on his body.

UNDERDOG BIVOUAC

In the Highlander dressing room another mood entirely could be seen. Popular Public Relations Director Jimmy Smith was quietly slipping from one Scottie to another mumuring words of the "give them all you've got and let them know they've met the REAL SCOTTIES" variety. To the last sub who knew he had little chance of seeing service, each Orange and Garnet clad warrior nodded grimly and clenched his molars into a pugnacious lower lip.

THEN CAME THE BARRAGE

Two beautiful 15 yards slashed by Half George Morton stunned the high and mighty Tornadoes before the first quarter was very old. From the four marker where the pikskin rested after Morton's last mad scamper, Baby Baird recovered his own momentary fumble and ripped off the remaining gap to the goal line. After Captain Hughes calmly booted the ball squarely between the uprights, the football tussle was in the bag for the Orange and Garnet.

SIDELINE QUARTERBACKS

Some of the local lads who have been watching pigskin parades on the Hill for years, said that this tilt was by far the best game ever played on Wilson Field. That's really paying tribute where tribute is due. According to the records, the Scotties walloped Hiwassee 13 to 7, Emory and Henry beat Hiwassee 18 to 7, and King spanked Emory-Henry's Wasps by a 37 to 0 score. At least on paper these figures would tend to prove that if the Highlanders came out of the tilt on the short end of a two or three touchdown margin they should feel lucky. Also, it was a badly crippled and outweighed Scottie squad vs. a strong Tornado with every man in the pink of condition.

HOW DID WE DO IT?

We wonder if anybody in the grandstand noticed the telephone on the Maryville bench which continually interrupted Coach Honaker as the game went on. However, if anyone did notice this new gadget, we wonder if he realized what a vital role it played in trimming the Tornado. Coach J. D. Davis was at the other end of that phone, and he was sitting in the middle section of the newly completed press box directly across the field from the Scottie bench. Thus, the new set-up gave Coach Honaker an extra pair of eyes commanding an unobstructed view of the entire gridiron. From his lofty perch on the far side of the field, Coach Davis was able to spot King strategy in time to relay the plans to Coach Honaker who in turn could rush in a substitute to thwart the play before serious damage could be done.

Scotties Score Stunning 7-0 Victory Over Highly Favored King Tornadoes

Last Saturday night on Wilson field, the Maryville college football team completely outclassed and outplayed the King college eleven and beat the highly favored visitors by the score of 7 to 0. The Tornado entered the game as the favorite, but the playing of "Baby" Baird, George Morton, Cecil Tipton, Norman Hooker, and J. D. Hughes soon put a crimp in their style. Baby was in great style and he toted the leather for yard after yard and finally scored from the four yard line behind faultless blocking by the entire team.

The pass defense, which up to now has been so poor, showed such great improvement that hardly a pass was completed by the visitors, although their huge ends towered over the defense. Several times a Maryville man raced in to intercept the ball almost from the finger tips of the King men. The defense of the whole team was greatly improved. The vicious tackling of J. D. Hughes, Morton and Hooker backing up the line kept the fans yelling as time and time again these men would fill up a gap and plow into a man. Several times they would hit a man so hard that they would life him entirely off the ground and drive the runner back several yards.

The blocking improved greatly over the last game and although the backs were smeared on several attempted passes it appeared that the passer had more time to find his receiver. Fred Shelfer grabbed several nice tosses out of the ozone for long gains while at the other end, Rock playing his usual steady dependable game, was down fast under all the punts. Tipton was, as he always is, the bulwark on defense and the powerhouse on offense. He was usually the first man downfield on all punts and he opened gaping holes in the line for the backs to romp through. On defense, Tip stopped play after play coming anywhere around his section of the line.

Baby Baird, playing the best game to date, really went wild. He ripped the line to shreds, tore around the ends, blocked cleanly and ferociously, and on defense did his part in breaking up the passes. In the first quarter Morton, Baird, and Hughes started the ball rolling and moved straight down the field toward the King goal. With the roar of the crowd, sensing a score and a possible upset ahead, the Scotties kept moving. First Hughes would lower his head and plunge, then Baird, and Morton galloped for two beautiful first downs in a row to place the ball on the four yard line. The ball was snapped to Baird who went off the right side of his line to score. The blocking on this play was about perfect as the hole in the line was there and opened just as Baby hit. Hughes converted the extra point and the Scotties went into the lead that they never relinquished.

The visiors never seemed to open up and get going. Several times it appeared as if they were on their way for a long march when a pass would be intercepted, or the line would tighten and they would have to resort to kicking. The run back of the kicks by Baird, Spears and Honaker before he hurt his ankle, was a sight to behold. The downfield blocking by the other members of the team on these runs was a big factor in the success of the backs to scamper across the chalk marks. Another pleasing sight was the kicking and passing of J. D. Hughes. He placed a beauty out on the three yard line when Maryville was forced to kick. George Garner booted some long arching kicks while he was in there.

The Maryville team fought for 60 minutes of the ball game, as they remembered the last three minutes of last year's game when King scored their only two touchdowns. It looked for a few minutes toward the waning moments that the King machine was about to get rolling, but Maryville intercepted a pass to stop that threat.

The newly-installed telephone was given a good workout by Coach J. D. Davis in the new press box and Coach Honaker was kept busy answering the phone, sending in subs, and watching the game. The newly installed amplifying system was proved to be a success and great improvement to the game as a whole and the work of Vernon Lloyd and Lloyd Taylor in announcing and keeping the players straight was carried out to a high degree of accuracy.

The injury jinx that has already hit Lloyd Taylor, Sam Monger and Baby Baird continued to grab its share of the Orange and Garnet clad warriors. Baby's boils seem to have cleared up, or at least they didn't affect his sparkling game any. Lloyd's knee is still in very bad shape. Scot Honaker suffered an ankle injury in Saturday's game. Tipton's fingers, which were already in bad shape, received another smash and were hurting him all week. Hooker received a pretty badly smashed face and his nose was smeared badly. Tom Saffell received the most painful and the worst injury when he hurt his knee and had to be carried from the field. He has been on crutches ever since. The loss of Lloyd Taylor and Saffell is severe blow to the Highlanders, as these two swivel-hipped boys were counted on a great deal by the coaches. Other from these major hurts, the squad took the usual terrific beating, but came up in good shape as a whole.

Heavier Chattanooga Moccasins Eleven Steams Over Orange-Garnet By 28 to 0

In an attempted invasion of the great Southeastern Conference last night, the Maryville Highlanders were smothered under a 28 to 0 score by the University of Chattanooga in a game played on the Moccasins home gridiron before a near sell-out crowd.

In the first quarter before Coach Moore started his wave after wave of fresh subs against the lighter Scotties, the invaders tossed back everything the Moccasins attempted. Finally, a fluke punt by Junior Orend, Chattanooga's triple-threater, rolled past Scotty Honaker and out of bounds on the two yard line. The first quarter ended without a score as the Highlanders held their foes on the one yard stripe.

One yard from the goal line as the second frame started, fullback Wynn ran wide trying to skirt left end but was dropped for a loss by George Gaer's vicious tackle. However, on the next play Grigonis carried over for the score on a powerful line buck. Junior Orend's perfect placement gave Chattanooga the lead by the score of 7 to 0. The raging Scotties took the kick-off, and on the following play J. D. Hughes completed a beautiful pass to Baby Baird who picked up 25 yards. On the next snap from center the Orange and Garnet attempted the very same maneuver, but this time the pigskin was inches out of Baby's reach. Even at that it looked from the stands as though a Chattanooga back had illegally shoved Baby off of his stride. The second "Moc" score came after an intercepted Scottie pass gave the home lads the ball on the 40 striper. This time Junior Orend scored the touchdown and kicked the placement.

In the first few minutes of the second half, J. D. Hughes' pass intended for the left end was partially knocked down and then intercepted by LaCerba who sprinted forty yards untouched for the third score. Following Hughes' kick from his own 40 to the 4, Baby Baird ran back the return punt to the "Moc" 10 yard stripe. However, on 4 downs the Scots were unable to push beyond the one and ball went over to the Chattanoogans. The final score was made late in the fourth quarter by Culberson who slashed over right tackle for the touchdown. The final score on the big electric score board read: CHATTANOOGA 28, MARYVILLE 0.

Touch Football

This week has seen the downfall of what last week appeared to be the best teams in the intramural league. With Athenian and the highly practiced Powerhouse, both taking it on the chin, the race now settles down into a hard fight for the school title.

In the hardest fought game of the season, Athenian bowed to an inspired Ministerial team Friday afternoon by a 12 to 6 score. It took the Ministerials two overtime periods to bring defeat to their opponents and it was not until Jack Fesperman, with only two downs to go, threw a long pass to A. Moore who scored. Earlier in the game, Alf Davies pulled the miracle play of the fray when he managed to scoop up a deflected pass from Fesperman. Athenian scored early in the first half on a pass from Stringer to Jim Hedges who then toted the ball over the goal. Athenian then failed to make the extra point which would have assured her of victory.

While Athenian was being defeated by the Ministerials, the Bulldogs were troucing the Floogies 13 to 0. Long runs by Hargraves were the order of the day for the Bulldogs, as twice, after making hair raising catches, he sprinted to the goal. All the scoring came in the first half of the game, although in the closing minutes of the third quarter the Floogies moved the ball to the Bulldog one foot line before losing the ball on downs. Graham stood out for the losers as he made several good runs for first downs.

Later in the day, the undefeated Tigers handed the Powerhouse gang their first defeat of the season as they trounced the Hahn men by a 6 to 0 score. The touchdown occurred early in the first quarter when Steakley threw a long pass to McGaha who raced across the goal line. Repeatedly, the Tigers would reel off first downs, only to be held near the goal line by a hard fighting Powerhouse gang. With Clem Hahn throwing the passes, the Powerhouse offensive was blanketed, while the Tigers, using bullet passes constantly found weak holes in the Powerhouse defense. Don Kent, who played the last half of the game, stood out for the Tigers on defense.

Tuesday saw Alpha Sig hand the Ministerials their first defeat of the season when they won 7-0. Athenian maintained it unblemished records by defeating the weaker "Y" Frosh by an 18-0 score. The Powerhouse unleashed all their might and the Bulldogs lost by a 19-0 score. The Floogies forfeited their game to the Rebels.

Tennis Tourney

With the championship matches over, the eyes of the tennis fans are now focused upon the outcome of the consolation tournament which is being held under the direction of Stan Menning.

Because of the heavy rains this week the matches have been held up, and the contestants are anxiously awaiting the go-ahead signal from Coach Fischbach. The matches are in the semi-final stages with Art Rowan playing Ed Wiezalis and Chuck Foreman meeting Ross. Foreman in qualifying for the semi-finals has defeated DuBois and Joe Humphreys, while his opponent has turned down Campbell in straight sets, 6-4 and 6-0, and Ezell, 6-4 and 6-2. Hess and Flowers were defeated in Rowan's bid for recognition, and Thompson and Lochausen were Wiezalis' victims. The winner will be announced next week.

Case Will Lead Vespers

Dr. Ralph T. Case, professor of sociology, will speak at the regular Sunday evening vespers tomorrow. The service is to be at 7:00 p.m. as usual.

Piano, Violin Selections Make Up First Recital

The first student recital of the current school year was presented Wednesday afternoon at 4:15 in the Fine Arts studio. The first number on the program was Rebiroff's modernistic "Nereid", played by Florence Barber on the piano. "Nereid" is written in a whole-tone scale and resembles Chinese music. Ruth Duggan followed with another piano selection, Bach's familiar "Arioso". The next selection was a violin piece played by Jeanne Heckman, who was accompanied at the piano by David Kidder. Miss Heckman played Mozart's "Rondo", arranged by Kreisler. "Uncle Remus", a colorful composition by McDowell, was played by Ruth Wynn at the piano, following which came another Bach number, "Fantasie in C Minor", which was presented by Gordon Stone. This Bach composition is one of big, flashy chords. Louise Marshall, playing a gay, dance-like composition, "Gigue", written by Graun, was the last to appear at this first recital.

flashes at Latin smile, he looks half his age His baritone rolls like thunder."

Pompilio Malatesta is known the world over for his impersonation of Dr. Bartolo, the intriguing old guardian of Rosina. Coming originally from Italy, Malatesta reached the United States in 1910 and has for many years been an American citizen. His record contains 24 years of active and successful service as interpreter of principal bass roles for the Metropolitan.

Completing the list of Metropolitan artists is John Gurney, distinguished basso, American born; he holds an outstanding record of success and achievement. He has been featured during his career with three opera companies as well as being formerly the leading baritone of the Roxy Theatre at the time of its stage productions. With excellent dramatic ability and rich, winning voice he makes a perfect Basilio, scheming match-maker, Rosina's music teacher.

The part of the count's servant is played by Brooks Dunbar. Dunbar is a familiar concert soloist and radio star, appearing with famous symphony orchestras and being a celebrated member of the staffs of WEAF, WJZ, and WOR. More recently thousands of people have heard him sing as tenor soloist with the New York Philharmonic at the New York World's Fair of 1939.

Remembered by all old students is the rich contralto of Georgia Graves, who appeared in joint recital in the 1939-40 Artists' Series. Miss Graves will portray the part of Bertha, a servant at Dr. Bartolo's house. Her warm, voluminous tone forms a mellow accompaniment to the famous quintet found in the opera near the end of Act I.

"The Barber of Seville" is a story of stormy love, intrigue, and adventure. The plot centers around the love of Count Almaviva (Armand Tokatyan) for the lovely Rosina (Hilde Reggiani) and the attempts to prevent their meeting and marriage made by Rosina's old guardian, Dr. Bartolo (Pompolio Malatesta), who wishes to marry his beautiful ward himself. The action is complicated by the attempts of the count to see Rosina through the use of various disguises from drunken soldier quartered at Dr. Bartolo's house to music teacher. Figaro, rollocking barber of the nobility, is the abettor of the count and provides amusement by his comical imitations of the stern Dr. Bartolo. With the aid of Basilio, his co-intriguer, Bartolo tries to thwart the lovers' plans for elopment, but fails and unwittingly aids them. He is pacified at the end by the handsome dowry given him by the count.

The production of the opera will be made effective by elaborate costumes and attractive scenery and background. The lilting songs, swift action, and the comic effects of the incomparable Figaro make the opera a universal favorite. To quote Ernest Newman, most widely read and influential critic: "Rossini's immortal work is the finest flower of the old Italian musical comedy."

The second of the Artists' Series programs will be a joint recital on December 10, 1940, of Maurice Eisenberg, American cellist and Joseph Battista, young American pianist.

Joseph Battista, gifted young American, is ranked as rising to the highest position among mature pianists. Only 22, Battista has advanced at an amazing rate to become the foremost of young pianists in the world. Since his first child's dream at the age of five of becoming a great concert artist, he has progressed with unequaled success toward his goal. He won many contests and fellowships as a youth and has now achieved fame through his exceptional interpretations as soloist with America's greatest orchestras. His playing is vigorous and enthusiastic but highly sensitive and expressive of the mood of the music.

Maurice Eisenberg, American born cellist, has spent almost his entire musical life in study and successful concert tours in Europe. His return to America is causing concert managers to rejoice. His playing technique has a memorable individuality which makes the highest critics of Europe and America term his recitals "unforgettable and delightful." Through training by the immortal Pablo Casels and his own natural brilliance, Eisenberg presents programs of rare depth and charm.

Completing the Artists' Series for the year on March 4, Alexander Kipnis, Metropolitan basso will present another concert. He returns this year by popular demand after a program of extreme popularity last year. Kipnis' "deepest voice in the concert world" plus his charming stage manner captivates his audiences wherever he appears.

Student tickets have been on sale this week and will continue to be so. Tickets for visitors and townspeople are available for $2.00.

and Mr. Gehres, senior, has been in several dramatic productions here, including "You Can't Take It With You" and "Our Town."

The role of Lady Marden is taken by Virginia Berg whose first lead here, and a striking one, was in the Theta-Alpha Sigma 1940 midwinter, "Winterset."

Anne, the maid, is characterized by Frances John Hellums who is making her first appearance on the Maryville stage.

The cast is supported by an able production staff. Those in charge of the various departments are business manager, Harvey Lehman; assistant business manager, Ruth Sutherlin; stage manager, Lloyd Shue; assistant stage manager, Elizabeth Glover; properties, June Morley; costumes, Helen Airheart; advertising manager, Sam Cornelius.

SWING TO BE KING AT THETA

Swing will reign as king at the Theta hall Saturday night beginning at 6:15. A variety musical program featuring favorite Maryville college artists will be presented.

pearance. One might be inclined to draw the conclusion that Maryville fellows study at night.

She settles back to get some rest. She is just comfortably relaxing in the stage between being awake and asleep, when Roommate bounds out of bed and leaps on to hers, informing her in a hysterical whisper that there are Mice in the closet chewing on that new formal skirt. Once more She tears herself from her bed. Lighting the candle again She goes to the closet door. Hesitantly opening it, She peers within its not-too-great depths. She sees absolutely nothing. Roommate asks in a tremulous whisper if there are small pieces of yellow net all over the floor. She answers nastily that there aren't. Holding the candle in one hand and plowing through a pile of shoes with the other, She finds—nothing, not even a hole. Having covered thoroughly all of the square yard of floor space in the closet, She decides to let Roommate hunt her own Mice.

Stiffly rising, She sees Roommate backing toward her bed, a chagrined look on her face—and small wonder, too! And so it's back to bed once more—with one more night in the "dark" gone by.

Founders' Day To Be Observed Nov. 2

Maryville college's eighth annual Founders' Day exercises will be held in Voorhees chapel Saturday, November 2, at the regular chapel hour, 8:10, a.m.

This year the theme will be of a type somewhat different from those of the seven former observances. In those years some individual or individuals have been honored, and doubtless that will be the usual plan of the future. In 1933, Isaac Anderson, the first president was honored; in 1934 it was Rev. Thomas Brown and Rev. John S. Craig; in 1935, the second president, John J. Robinson; in 1936, the third president, Peter Mason Bartlett; in 1937, Rev. William Eagleton and Rev. Darius Hoyt; in 1938, Rev. Gideon S. W. Crawford; and in 1939, the second founder, Thomas Jefferson Lamar.

For this year the theme is "The Year of 1840 in the Life of America and of Maryville College". The exercises will be in charge of President Ralph W. Lloyd. Brief historical addresses will be given by Clyde B. Emert, editor and publisher of the Maryville Times, and by Dr. Edwin R. Hunter, Dean of Curriculum. Dr. William P. Stevenson will participate in the services.

Mrs. Brown Addresses Nature Club On Leaves

Mrs. Bonnie Hudson Brown, assistant professor of biology, spoke to the Nature club Friday evening on "Leaves." Mrs. Brown gave information on the structure and functions of leaves.

The organization is maintaining a nature exhibit on the second floor of Fayerweather science hall this year. A great deal of interest has been aroused by this display.

Officers of the club for this semester are: Bob Short, president; Jake Bradsher, vice president; Eloise Zimmerman, secretary; Emma Cassada, treasurer; and Harvey Lehman and Rose Pinneo, program chairmen.

German Club Will Meet To Elect New President

Wednesday evening at 6:45 the regular business meeting of Der Deutsche Verein will be held in Athenian hall. The club will elect a new vice-president to replace Lamar Russell who is not attending Maryville college this year.

Following the business meeting there will be musical entertainment. Warren Culver, the newly-appointed song leader, will lead the club in the singing of German songs.

All students planning to join Der Deutsche Uerein are requested either to be present at this meeting or to send their name with some other student.

Moving Pictures To Be Shown At Bainonian

Bainonian will present a moving picture show this evening at 6:15 in Bainonian hall. Following the theme of "Discovery", the pictures will reveal scenes and facts about college. Mr. James R. Smith, public relations secretary, will show a reel of pictures taken here at Maryville. The film is one of several taken by Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd and loaned to Mr. Smith for the occasion. It contains pictures of President Lloyd's family, shots of college life taken at random on the campus, and various scenes which it is believed will be of interest to the students.

Special numbers with Phil Vance at the piano will complete the entertainment.

Gilpatrick Named As President By Freshmen

Charles Gilpatrick of Maine was elected president of the freshman class at its first meeting Wednesday morning after chapel. The other officers chosen by the class were vice- president, Helen Anderson; secretary, Nettie Rose Spraker; treasurer, Ralph Heishman. As there were many nominations made from the floor, the balloting for the Student Council representatives was very close. Those finally elected were two women: Jeda Browne and Sarah Jo Bolling, and two men: Dexter Rice and Hal Lloyd. The nominations and elections, as well as the tabulation of the ballots, were conducted by Bill Baird and Joseph Swift.

The newly elected officers will assume their respective duties in the near future.

Law Club Will Have Picnic On October 23

The Law club plans to have its annual picnic on Wednesday, October 23. The party will leave Pearsons hall at 4:00 and go directly to the picnic grounds. Baseball is planned for the afternoon until supper time and after supper, singing followed by a few legal stories. At this time plans are also being made for a mock trial to be given on November 30.

Founder's Day To Feature New Theme In Annual Exercises Nov. 2

Dr. Lloyd, Dean Hunter, And Dr. Stevenson To Participate In Program

CLYDE EMERT TO TALK

Pep Committee Plans Novel Attractions For Homecoming Celebration

Following a different theme in Founders' Day programs, Maryville college will present this year, as the topic of Founders' Day, "The Year 1840 in the Life of America and of Maryville College." This theme will make an interesting comparison of the college as it is now, with the college as it was a century ago. This plan of exercises differs from the programs that have been presented in the past eight years in that they were centered around some individual or individuals.

Among the outstanding records to which the college may lay claim is the limited number of presidents who have served it in this length of time, for in all the one hundred and twenty-two years of the college there have been only six presidents. Dr. Samuel Tyndale Wilson, President-Emeritus, is the fifth president, and Dr. R. W. Lloyd, the present president, is the sixth. The average term of each president has been more than twenty years.

Founders' Day exercises will be held Saturday morning, November 2, in Voorhees chapel. The program, which will begin at 8:00, will be in charge of President Ralph W. Lloyd. Dean E. R. Hunter, and Mr. Clyde B. Emert, editor of the Maryville Times, who will give historical addresses. Dr. W. Patton Stevenson, college pastor, will also participate in the service.

Arrangements have been made by the Pep Committee to have several novel features in connection with Homecoming, Friday night, at a pep meeting held on Wilson Field. Ex-Maryville football captains will be called on for short speeches. On Saturday afternoon, before the game with Emory and Henry, the band will lead a pep meeting and snake dance which will start from the college, going down town into Maryville.

At 5:30 there will be a big barbecue and a campfire; and after the barbecue there will be a social period for renewal of old acquaintances when several of the "old timers" may be presented to the group.

Special features have been prepared for entertainment at the game Saturday night, including fireworks between halves, and formations by the band. All high school football players in Blount County are receiving special invitations to the game, as well as all former Maryville college players.

It is too early to predict the number expected to be present, but indications are that the committees in charge are anticipating a record attendance.

Messiah Rehearsals Start November 3

The eighth annual production of Handel's Messiah by the community and the students of Maryville college will be presented December 13. As is the custom there will be a large chorus, local and college soloists, and accompaniment of piano, organ and orchestra. Although the Glee clubs are starting to work next Tuesday evening on it, the first general rehearsal will be held on Sunday, November 3 at 3:00 p.m. All faculty members, students, local people, and community church choirs are invited to participate.

Last year's performance had a chorus of 208 which is about all that can be accomodated. If more show up than that, arrangements will be made accordingly as the music department believes that the great benefit of the production is the enjoyment of participation. Soloists will be announced later. Each person is responsible for his own music; if any one has a copy at home, it would be wise to send for it. Copies can be purchased here at $1 each and two people may use one book.

Two Former M-C Actors Take Leads

Last Wednesday evening, Violet Webb and Gordon Bennett, two Maryville graduates received high honors for their portrayals of Louise, a maid, and Elyot Chase, respectively, in the Tennessee Valley Players' production of Noel Coward's "Private Lives." This was the first of four plays to be presented in Knoxville by the group this year.

At Maryville, Bennett was cast in a great number of the school plays throughout his college career. The Neenah, Wisconsin, boy during his freshman year played Armand in the "Purple Mask", and in Peter Ibbetson, he held a leading role. By his splendid portrayal of Craig in George Kelley's "Craig's Wife", he received a second place tie with Deana Bell for the outstanding individual performance of the 36-37 season. This play won the Theta Alpha Phi cup for the best play at Maryville that year.

Later, Bennett gained greater recognition by his work in "First Lady." This was soon followed by the male lead in Deval's farce on Russian nobility, "Tovarich". Playing the part of Mikail Ouratief, the role which Charles Boyer played in the film version, he received great acclaim for the splendid feeling he put into his portrayal.

In the senior class production for 1939, the title role of Hamlet was assigned to him. For this part he allowed his hair to grow for over nine months. Critics believed that his characterization of the Danish nobleman ranked high among the country's amateur players.

As a sophomore, Bennett was an English major, but he soon turned his talents to the field of dramatic arts. He belonged to Alpha Sigma, and for four years was a member of the college players. A leading role was assigned to him in Alpha Sigma's mid-winter production during his sophomore year.

Miss Webb, a star in her own right, has had many leading roles during her career. At Maryville, she carried the lead in the "Torch Bearer", as well as important parts in other plays. She was a leading member of Theta Alpha Phi.

Recreation Grounds To Be Open Soon

Four Sets of Horseshoe Pits Will Be Constructed

Four sets of horseshoe pits are being prepared by the intramural department and will be ready for use in the near future, probably sometime during the coming week. These pits will be situated near the north bleachers at Wilson Field. The clay courts will be the regulation length of forty feet but will be so constructed as to be adaptable to the thirty foot length used by women.

The main purpose of this project is to furnish proper facilities for the next event on the intramural schedule, a horseshoe pitching tourriament. However, these courts will also be open for use as an everyday recreation ground. All horseshoes will be issued from the intramural office in Bartlett hall.

The game of horseshoes or quoits is very simple. The test is one of accuracy and not of strength, the object being to throw the shoe around a peg stuck in the ground some forty feet away. The object is to throw the horseshoe so that it rings the far peg, which counts two, or, failing this, lies as close to the peg as possible. Each player has two throws in succession. A shoe nearer the peg than that of an opponent counts one. A match may be for any number of points agreed upon, and it may be between two players or two teams.

Gates Speaks at Vespers

Dr. John A. Gates, a member of the department of bible and religious education, will be the speaker at the vesper service Sunday evening, October 27. His subject will be "The Will To Believe Adventurously."

Boydson Baird Is Named President Of Student Council

Eleanor Long Elected New Vice-President

Boydson Baird, a senior from Kilbourne, Ohio, was elected president of the Student Council at their first meeting of the year which was held last Monday evening, October 21, in Dr. Hunter's classroom. The new vice-president is Eleanor Long of Sanford, N.C., while Jeanne Stringham whose home is in St. Louis, Mo., was chosen secretary-treasurer.

The new president, a letterman in basketball, football, and track, is captain of the basketball team this year. In addition to that, B. B. is on the Athletic Board of Control and is the vice-president of Hi Trail. He also holds the office of secretary-treasurer of the senior class.

A talented art major, Eleanor Long serves also on the YW cabinet and is a senior this year; last semester she was secretary of Bainonian. The new secretary-treasurer, a junior whose major is home economics, was on the varsity debate squad last year and is on the YW cabinet. Jeanne is also secretary of the Social Committee.

Five matters were taken up by the Council last Monday evening; first, it was decided to look into the fact that a flag hasn't been flying from Anderson hall; second, a committee was appointed to see about securing more lights for the boys' side of the library. The third thing discussed was the lack of proper lighting along the walks to the library at night and the muddiness of these walks when it rains. A decidedly misused new hymn book was shown the club and they determined to do everything possible to keep this from happening in the future and also try to bring about the return of the eight books now missing. The fifth matter discussed centered around the general grumbling of students recently because they do not get first choice at reserving Artists' Series seats; these students should remember that students pay much less for their tickets through their student activities fee than do the people out in town who pay $3.00 for each program. Also the fact is that any seat in the chapel is a good one for this kind of program since the chapel is comparatively small.

The Council decided to meet every two weeks at 8:15 on Monday night in Dr. Hunter's classroom. There will be specially designated meetings at which representative organizations will be welcome. If any one wants anything brought up, he should see his class representative.

Ministerials Hear Gates

Owing to a change in schedule, the Ministerial association will hold its future meetings on the second and fourth Thursday of the month, instead of on Monday evenings. At the first meeting at the new time, Dr. John A. Gates will talk to the group on the problems and methods of organizing a Sunday school.

McClelland, Briggs Participate in ETEA Program Next Week

Chicago University Pres. Is Guest Speaker

On October 31st and November 1st and 2nd, the East Tennessee Teachers association will hold its annual meetings and discussions in Knoxville. This year two of the Maryville college faculty, Dr. Frank D. McClleland and Dr. David H. Briggs, will actively participate as speakers on the afternoon of Friday, November 1. Dr. McClelland, as member of the Guidance and Personnel division of the association, will discuss the subject of "Guidance Practice on a College Level". Dr. Briggs, who is secretary for the sections of Teachers of Education and Psychology, will speak with "Visual Effectiveness and Reading" as his topic.

This association is one of three state organizations centered in Memphis, Nashville, and Knoxville. It is composed of six thousand teachers employed in the various schools in the eastern part of Tennessee. Several members of the Maryville college faculty attend the meetings which are held at the University of Tennessee. The guest speaker this year is the famous president of the University of Chicago, Robert M. Hutchins, who will speak on November 1 at 11:15 a.m., concerning "The Outlook for Education."

Chilhowean To Announce Sponsors At Barnwarming

Wednesday morning after chapel, the junior, sophomore, and freshman classes met to elect this year's class sponsors.

The junior class held its meeting in the front of the chapel. The nominating committee had submitted the names of Janice Graybeal, Phyllis Johns, Martha Shearer, and Eloise McNeely. Besides these candidates Mary Elizabeth Karg was nominated from the floor.

At the same time as the junior class meeting, the sophomores and freshmen were holding meetings. The sophomores met in the back part of the chapel and proposed Mary Virginia Williams, Mary Jane Person, Mary Ruth Baker, Anne Halabrin, Irma Russell, and Jean McCutcheon as nominees.

The frosh held their meeting in Bartlett auditorium. Ten candidates were selected. All nominations were made from the floor.

The names of the sponsors will be kept by the 1941 Chilhowean until Thanksgiving when they will be announced at the Barnwarming. Besides other honors given them, each sponsor has a full page picture in a section of the Chilhowean. Formerly, they were elected for the year book only, but since then they have acquired other duties. They appear officially at Barnwarming, and appear at all class activities as representatives of the class.

Staff Critic Praises First Theta Alpha Phi Production On Maryville Stage

By JEAN WHITE

Last Evening, Friday, October 25, Theta Alpha Phi presented an excellent production, "Mr. Pim Passes By", on the Maryville stage.

The curtain rises on an old fashioned English room crowded with furniture that has accumulated through the years. The owner, George Marden, declares that nothing in the room may be changed, for "what was good enough for my father and grandfather is good enough for me."

The family who lives in this charming country place are George Marden, J. P., his charming wife, Olivia, and his neice, Dinah Marden. Mr. Pim is only a passerby, but plays the most important part of the plan, mixing up the marital affairs of the Mardens to suchan extent that it takes two acts to straighten them out. Incidentally, and as a result of Mr. Pim's passing by, the love affair of Dinah and Brian Strange, young socialist and artist, comes to a happy ending.

George Tibbetts, veteran actor, in the character of Mr. Pim, did a grand piece of acting. Though he appeared on the stage only at intervals and then for a very short time, the results produced by his absentmindedness were always in evidence throughout the rest of the play. In spite of the trouble he had apparently caused, or rather because of it, the final scene turned out well for all the persons concerned.

Marianne Coleman, taking the part of Olivia, George Marden's wife, stepped out on the Maryville college stage for the first time last evening. Her part was not easy and she certainly did a good piece of character acting. In comparison with the more experienced actors of the case, Miss Coleman stands high, and her stage presence stood her in good stead.

Frank Brink, another well-known actor on the Maryville college stage, played the part of George Marden. J. P., and in this part once again he showed his ability to master the art of character portrayal. His characteriza-

Maryville Students Give Republican Candidate 337 to 219 Win In IRC Poll

We Should Not Get Into European War No Matter What Happens to Britain

21 VOTE FOR THOMAS

Two-Thirds Majority In Favor of Proposed Hemisphere Alliance

Wendell Willkie defeated President Roosevelt by a 327 to 219 majority in the campus "straw vote election" conducted Friday, October 25, by the International Relations club, in the Thaw hall lobby. Norman Thomas, Socialist, received twenty-one votes, and Roger Babson, Prohibitionist candidate received three.

An overwhelming majority of Maryville students voted against the United States' immediate participation in the present war. Only 158 voted for our entering the war now, whole 407 voted agaist it. When asked what the United States should do if Great Britain should start to lose rapidly, 230 students think we should give military aid to her. While a greater number, 322, voted to stay out, no matter what happens to Britain.

That Maryville college students are definitely in favor of a Western Hemisphere military alliance is shown by their voting 368 to 187 for the much-discussed proposal.

In giving Willkie an approximate three-to-two majority over Roosevelt, Maryville students followed the example set by Tusculum college students, who gave Willkie a 192 to 129 majority last Wednesday. Results of these two college elections are representative samples of the opinions predominate in the sections from which Maryville and Tusculum students come. Most of the students of both schools come from the northeastern part of the nation, which is strongly pro-Willkie.

A different story comes from Jacksonville State Teachers college, Jacksonville, Ala., where students gave Roosevelt a nine to one majority. And the University of South Carolina students voted as their state always goes when they gave Roosevelt the long end of a twenty-to-one count.

Roosevelt-for-President clubs have been formed on the campuses of the universities of South Carolina and Kentucky. The South Carolina club appears to be bent on giving more than moral support to Roosevelt. The members are trying to raise $500 to add to the Roosevelt campaign fund.

A committee composed of George Webster, Anne Gammon, Barbara Swift, David Kidder, Jean White, Warren Corbett, and Bob Lamont was in charge of the election and the counting of the votes here. To insure fairness, Mr. Archibald Pieper, political science instructor, supervised the vote counting.

Student attitude toward America's entrance into the European conflict at once corresponds in general to the attitude of the American public as a whole. Approximately 28% of the students voted for our helping Britain immediately, and about 41% think we should enter the war if it becomes apparent that Great Britain is in danger of a quick defeat.

As for an alliance for all Western Hemisphere nations, 2-3 of the students here are in favor of it. This question is receiving much discussion in government circles now, and it is significant that students favor it.

Hilton Wick, president of the Internations Relations club which sponsored the election, was highly pleased with the efficiency with which the election was carried out. Both faculty and students, he said, co-operated splendidly.

President Wick reports that from now on the IRC will meet on the first and third Monday nights of the month. There will not be a meeting, however, on Monday, Nov. 4, because "The Barber of Seville" is to be presented on that night.

Many Best Sellers Added To Library

Mr. Horace L. Ellis, head of the Maryville college library, believes that the new list of books that has been placed in the library might be considered as the best group purchased in some time, and will prove quite an asset to the students. They are books written on general subjects, including the fine arts, English, music, history, and languages.

Under physical education, perhaps the most interesting book is "Budge, on Tennis." The new reference books include Webster's New International Dictionary. For music lovers the library now has "Groves' Dictionary of Music and Musicians," edited by H. C. Colles, a very complete musical library in five volumes. Under history, perhaps the most valuable set of books recently purchased is the "Dictionary of American History", published by Scribner's. In the realm of the fine arts comes the "New Standard Encyclopedia of Art," by Haurticq, written to bring in a compact form pertinent facts of the whole history of art. For those interested in dramatic art, "The History of American Costume", by Elizabeth McClellan, would be most interesting. It is very easily read, and is well illustrated.

"Tennessee: a Political Study" by Combs and Cole has been aded to our library this month. This is the first book published with a University of Tennessee imprint. Since there isn't a suitable press in Knoxville, the University's press is at Kingsport.

Madame Chiang Kai-shek's "This Is Our China" is another addition among the best sellers. "New England Indian Summer" is Van Wyck Brook's sequel to "Flowering of New England" and it finishes his study.

Others of the best sellers are "Life with Father", the play by Lindsay and Crouse, and last year's Pulitzer Prize winner, "The Time of Your Life." Each year the college, in acquiring new books spends over three thousand dollars, and at present the number of books on the shelves is over 45,000.

YWCA Candlelight Installation Service

New Members Recognized In Amphitheater Service

Maryville college YWCA held its annual candlelight installation service Thursday evening in the college woods. Participation in this service was the acknowledgement of the new girls that they wished to be active members of the YWCA.

The service was opened by a trumpet selection, "Day Is Dying in the West," which was followed by a scripture reading by Mary Darden. Ruth Andrews then led a hymn "God Who Touchest Earth with Beauty." The climax of the program was the lighting of a huge bonfire in the shape of a triangle. This triangle, as was explained by Mary Orr, symbolizes the three purposes of the organization:

1. To live fuller and more creative lives; 2. To make this kind of life possible for all people; 3. To understand and follow Jesus.

All members were then given a lighted candle, and they formed an outer triangle around the blazing one. In this formation they sang "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind" and "Spirit of God Descend Upon My Heart." A prayer by Marianna Allen completed the program.

Thirty YW Girls Hike To Laurel Falls Today

Thirty girls left this morning at 8:00 on the annual fall YW hike. This year the hikers go as far as Gatlinburg by bus, striking out on foot from there for Laurel Falls and Cove Mountain. On the return trip the group will cook its supper at the public picnic ground. Dr. and Mrs. L. L. Williams and Miss Dorothy Horne accompanied the hikers. They will return in time for the football game tonight.

Alpha Sigma will hold its meeting at 6:30 this Saturday in Alpha Sigma hall. Miss Betty Parker will play a few solos on the accordion and will then lead the society in singing community songs.

IRC STRAW POLL PROVES IT CAN BE DONE

The effective way in which the IRC straw poll was conducted yesterday is practical evidence that a general election system will work at Maryville college. Balloting was completed in a single day; all those who were really interested had an opportunity to vote; and the election commission functioned smoothly.

If this method can be used successfully for a straw poll, there is no reason why it could not be used just as successfully in a regular campus election.

Last spring, the editorial page of the Highland Echo carried the suggestion that the Student Council formulate a definite plan for conducting a general campus election each spring, and that it provide supervision for the various special elections held during the year. No action was taken, and the major campus elections were conducted in the usual haphazard manner, many of them by means of signed ballots, which were counted by the incumbent officers of the respective organizations.

Not even the most practical vote-getter would advocate that voters in a national, state, or local election sign their ballots, or that the votes be counted by persons who by reason of their position or their relationship to one of the candidates might find it difficult to remain disinterested in the result. Yet these practices have long been followed on this campus. Of course we are not charging that any election has been fraudulent; we are merely pointing out that to the extent these methods are used, the possibility for dishonesty exists. The object of any good election system should be the removal of conditions which casue suspicion on the part of the voting public.

Under the present method, interested students often hesitate to vote, because they know that they are leaving a permanent record, witnessed by their own signatures, of the candidates for whom they vote. Voting by signed ballot is even more harmful than voting by a show of hands in the presence of the nominees, because it is difficult to see and remember how each person voted, but there is nothing difficult about compiling the statistics when the record is spread out in black and white.

It is with the hope that a comprehensive plan for conducting campus elections will be considered by the Student Council that the following suggestions are made:

(1) That a general election day be set by the Student Council on which the regular elections for class officers, members of the Athletic Board of Control, officers of the societies and the major clubs would be held;

(2) That a special fall election be held to take care of the elections that must come near the beginning of the school year;

(3) That elections in organizations which affect only a few people be held separately, but be supervised by the election commission;

(4) That nominations be made public at least three days prior to election day, so that everyone may know who is running for office in time to make an intelligent choice;

(5) That voting take place by unsigned, secret ballots printed for the occasion, and that the election commissioners register each voter's name as he casts his vote.

(6) That only the authorized election commissioners be permitted to count votes.

Some such plan, and this one is not defended as perfect or as complete, would promote student democracy, and would provide a better guarantee of fairness to both voters and candidates. The example of the system in action here this week should serve as a challenge to those interested in free and honest elections.

—The Editor's Viewpoint—

IS THE GERMAN PUBLIC ASLEEP?

Further evidence of the opposition that Adolf Hitler is encountering in his fight against Britain is reflected in new diplomatic discussions with possible allies. This week Der Fuehrer conferred with General Francisco Franco of Spain and former Premier Laval of France. It is believed in authoritative quarters that Germany is offering conquered France several concessions in return for naval and air bases in unoccupied French territory including her African colonial possessions. Spain has long been thought to figure in an Axis plan to seize Gibraltar from British control.

North African and Syrian bases are needed by the Germans and Italians now operating against Egypt in their drive toward the Suez canal, while the caputre of the Rock would help cut Britain's communications with her Near Eastern oil supply.

France has no choice in obeying the command from Berlin to turn over strategic positions to the enemy of her former ally, but the German public must sometimes question the irresistible quality of their fighting forces in spite of propaganda to the contrary when their government seeks the aid of vassal states against a foe that was scheduled to have been crushed months ago. If such a questioning attitude does not arise, it is because all rather than merely a part of the facts about the negotiations are withheld from the Germans.

When the Nazis attacked England, they met a new type of European adversary, an adversary not afraid to sacrifice for ultimate victory. Unlike all the other nationalities which have come to blows with the Hitler machine, the British have shown real devotion to their cause, and this fact accounts for the morale of both the fighting forces and the civilian population.

Everything now points toward a long war in which control of the seas may be the decisive factor. In a war of attrition, Britain has the advantage because of her location and because of the navy. Even if Hitler is successful in welding the continent of Europe into a solid front, he will still have to defeat the British fleet before he defeats England. Neither Germany nor Italy has the naval power to do this, and so must depend solely upon their combined air forces to harass British trade. As yet this method of blockade has not been successful in cutting off war supplies from the United States and the Empire.

The sources of supply for England are out of reach of German bombers, while the Reich's industrial areas are wide open to attack. Judging from the intensity of the RAF's forays into German territory, these bases of supply must have suffered greatly. If the lines of supply between Britain and her supporters are kept open this winter, the British offensive may be expected to grow steadily stronger.

Scots and Soda

Now that the IRC has definitely settled the question of national importance that has had two of the leading politicians pretty worried for the last few months, we feel that we might as well relax, since there's nothing more we can do about the situation. We'll try to give you a bit of news about what Maryville has been doing while this national crisis was being met and managed.

Last week end was a pretty dull week end on the campus; practically everybody went away except me, and a couple of thees. It would be impossible to tell where everybody went; but you, undoubtedly, know where you were and we know where we were. And that is all that really matters. We might make mention of the prominent school spirit shown by a group of campuskirts who followed the crowd to Chattanooga. By name, they were Nan Wood, Analyn Ramey, Ruth Elizabeth Curtis, Betty Bryant, Carol Barbour, and Kathryn Estes. Main attractions of the tour were Lookout Mountain, "Maryland", and Chattanooga ball players. Oh, yes! and the Maryville-Chattanooga football game.

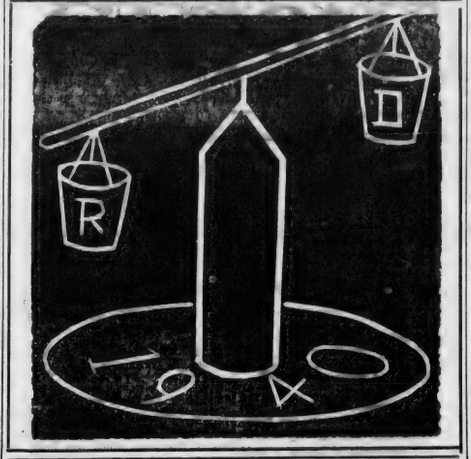
SCOTS AND SODA again scoops the hill as we go to press with a piece of fundamental information: Mr. McCurry gathered together the boys of the college last Tuesday night for an informal chat on things in general. We girls who have enjoyed such meetings for years, have wondered when the young men would be allowed such a privilege. Now that it has happened, we can all rest easier.

This week end two former Maryville students are visiting on the campus with various friends and relations. They are Robert Parvin of Bradenton, Fla.; and Pat Hart, Owensboro, Kentucky.

Last night Mr. Pim successfully passed by in an outstanding production. The play was a masterpiece of dramatic presentation; the audience was a gala crowd of appreciative, well-dressed students. Especially so was Louise Darden, attired in a gorgeous powder-blue chiffon creation; also Eloise McNeeley, modeling a stunning plaid taffeta skirt and black velvet jacket outfit.

And that reminds us that Carson Brewer and his tweed suit were offended because they received no recognition with other tweeds. May we pause to take this opportunity to offer our apologies, and to place him among the immortals.

We were astounded to hear one of Mrs. Butcher's little helpers declaiming in stentorian tones from the east balcony: "I hate wah," he yelped. "My wife Eleanor hates wah", boomed the echoes from behind Thaw. "I hate my wife Eleanor", the voice gargled. "Therefore", continued the echo, "I hate wah." Imagine my surprise, upon turning around, to see Trevor Rees-Jones, planted on the fire-escape.



Another legitimate bit of gossip we might pass on to you is that George Phelps has company. She's an attractive lass named Peggy Miller, and hails from the Miami University at Oxford, Ohio.

Last Wednesday afternoon, Lucette deBarritt visited in Knoxville, where she was entertained by the federal government. The FBI, or Department of Justice, or maybe it was the post office department, took her fingerprints, and gave her a general going over. All of which adds up to the fact that Lucette, as an alien, has now become civilized.

This would have been a scoop if we could have given it to you last week; but now we'll pass it on to you as ancient history. Friday, October 18, Miss Zillah McKenzie, class of '39, and Mr. Charles Hicks Kindred, star fullback, and graduate of the class of '40 at Maryville college, were united in marriage.

Did you hear the one about the traveling salesman who went to a Sunday School Mission conference and sold the congregation $55 worth of Fuller Brushes? It was Robert Wilcox.

TALK OF THE WEEK .... By Jean White

Maryville Students Master Chewing Art

By CAROLYN EBERHARDT

Sitting in the library, trying to study, you cannot help coming to one very definite conclusion; namely, that a surprising number of Maryville students have mastered the art of chewing gum.

As you sit trying to decide into how many pieces Rome broke when it fell, you are suddenly aware that a mint odor is billowing around you. Looking up, you find that you are the only person at the table who is not snapping a cud. Finally, in fascination, you stop to see what it is that makes chewing so intriguing to some people.

Next to you, a big, dark girl opens her mouth a good two inches, keeps it open a while, and suddenly springs her jaws together so hard you expect her teeth to be chipped. But no, when she opens that calcium mine of hers again, you can see that her chewing equipment is intact, and quite ready for the next onslaught.

Then you gaze at the next girl, positive that no one could chew like the girl next to you. You're right—each one of them gives gum-chewing a personal touch, so that their acquaintances can recognize them by sound alone.

As you gaze farther down the row of jarring jaws, you at first think that something is wrong with that little blond, because her teeth are jerking together so hard and fast, it makes her head jiggle. Then you discover that instead of being alarmed for her, you should stop to admire the precision with which that girl can pull her gum around, never missing a sixteenth of a beat.

Really warming up to your subject, now, you travel to the next person, and stop in surprise! Wouldn't you think that that lanky red-head would have more to do than to gaze in wide-eyed fascination at her ribbon of gum? She works somewhat on the order of a steam-shovel crane: she opens her strong-springed trap, exposes her widely-spaced, broad teeth, reaches in, pulls out the wad of gum, and proceeds to twist it into all sorts of interesting shapes. Suddenly, when you least expect it, the gum is clapped safely back between the grinders, and she is ready for the next attack.

After having studied many such priceless examples of gum-chewing, you are finally able to draw up a set of rules, such as must govern all arts.

1. When trying to impress someone, sit opposite, and chew steadily, with the mouth open as far as possible.

2. Always keep fresh chewing gum in your mouth; it has a much more distinctive odor, which your companions cannot fail to notice.

3. To really prove your interest in someone, pull your gum in and out frequently, managing to twist it into many varied, peculiar forms.

You may be assured that if you adhere strictly to these rules, you too, can, in just a few easy trys, become a master in the art of chewing gum.

Theta Alpha Phi Play

tion can be ranked with his interpretation of Scrooge in "Christmas Carol", James in "Devil's Millions," and Dr. Gibbs in "Our Town".

Troye Moore, taking the part of Dinah, George Marden's niece, gave an excellent interpretation of the naive, talkative girl of 19 who is in love with a man of whom her uncle does not approve. As the Mardens' marital troubles are straightened out, so the love affair of Dinah and Brian.

Bill Gehres, another veteran actor, took the part of Brian Strange. In this role he showed his past experience with character portrayal and stage technique.

Virginia Berg, as Lady Marden, aunt of George, portrayed well the elderly maiden aunt who thoroughly disapproves of anything which might be at variance with the laws or censored by the county.

Frances John Hellums, another newcomer to the Maryville stage, also did a nice bit of acting in her part an Anne, the maid. Though Miss Hellums' part was not long it was important, and she too showed a poise worthy of more experienced actresses.

The play, "Mr. Pim Passes By," was well received by a well-filled house, and the actors were given evidence of the audience's enthusiasm by the number of curtain calls. This comedy, which was written by A. A. Milne, though light, has a great deal in it, and was well liked by those attending the performance. The stage presence and technique of the actors were much in evidence, and the various character interpretations were very well done.

Due credit must also be given to those various members of the production staff and the stage crew. The latter had unusual difficulties behind scenes because of a changed procedure due to the new floor. However, the new setup was very well managed in spite of the difficulties involved.

Members of the production staff were as follows: business manager, Harvey Lehman; assistant business manager, Ruth Sutherlin; stage manager, Lloyd Shue; assistant stage manager, Elizabeth Glover; properties, June Morley; costumes, Helen Airheart; advertising manager, Sam Cornelius.

FAVORITES ONCE MORE

At last the Maryville Highlanders can crawl out of the underdog-house and take the favorite's throne for the tilt with the down-but-not-out Bucs from East Tennessee Teachers college. So say two reckless members of the novel clan of Limb-Climbers. Both Joe Epstein, rapid-fire sports announcer from Knoxville's station WNOX, and Doug Steakley, local scribe for the News-Sentinel agree that the Highlanders rule as slight favorites to come out on top of the Buccaneers tonight. However, these gentlemen frankly admit that Coach Gene McCurry's squad has more than an outside chance to continue their five-year old jinx for the sixth victory in a row over the Honaker-lads.

JINX NUMBER TWO

It seems as though we can't come through a pigskin tussle without adding at least one new victim to the already overcrowded injured string. This time it hits and hits where it hurst badly. Tommy Cragan, a gridiron demon who has finally found his stride as he switched from quarterback to end, came up with a fractured finger as the result of the tilt with Chattanooga last Friday. Although it is still uncertain, Coach Honaker will probably depend upon Les Rock, who does the century dash close to ten seconds, for the greater part of the game. In practice earlier this week the bad breaks stepped in and gave the Scots another hard knock as Cecil Tipton, brilliant tackle, received a shoulder injury which may keep him out of action tonight. At the time of Lloyd Taylor's knee injury in the Milligan tussle, it was doubtful if he would be back in grid togs until the date rolled around for the tilt with Chattanooga. But now it seems unlikely that it will respond in time for him to be ready to go against Carson-Newman, the last game of the season. Mickey O'Brien, U-T Vol's trainer and specialist on these things, examined the knee and expressed the opinion that some cartilage in the joint had been torn loose. Tom Saffell, flashy freshman swivel-hipper, is still hobbling around from his knee injury received in the King game two weeks ago.

LADIES' NIGHT THIS EVENING

Coach Honaker and the athletic department have joined the ranks of such celebrated showmen as the "Great P. T. Barnum" and the Brooklyn Dodger's Larry MacPhail. Tonight for the first time a plan has been started whereby any lady who is accompanied by a male escort will be given free admission to the game. Also, football squads from every high school in Blount County are invited to our Homecoming date with Emory and Henry next Saturday evening. So, all you "Daisy Maes" had better grab off a loose L'il Abner and drag him to the game tonight. Next week we'll be glad to welcome all of you scholastic stars as our guests.

SCRAPPY INTRAMURALS

Although it's a bit early to come out with the teams who look like sure fire bets to annex the touch football title, from this corner the race seems to be red hot in favor of the Rebels and the Ministerials. McGaha's gridders with such stalwarts as Hodges, Suitor, and Sweeney, have run roughshod over all opponents and lead their division with an unbeaten record. The Ministerials and Alpha Sig are running neck and neck as current leaders of the society division. Junior Herrick's pack of Tigers looked especially powerful as they handed the Powerhouse their second straight defeat by a score of 16 to 6. Besides being a combination chef, book store manager, and mathematician, Charlie Baldwin unearthed his gridiron potentialities as he fell on a fumbled punt to score the first touchdown against the Hahn-men.

HARDWOOD AND TANK

Every Maryville college man between the ages of sixteen and sixty is urged to register early for his favorite winter sport. Bill Baird has already started the basketball campaign, and Coach Fischbach would like to get the mermen launched on Monday afternoon. Also for the boys with strong minds and stronger backs, the wrestling squad will begin practic soon in defense of the Tennessee collegiate title.

Touch Football

As the intramural touch football teams enter the last half of this year's schedule, there is a three way battle for the lead between Alpha Sigma, Athenian, and Ministerials in division one. In division two, the Rebels are fighting hard to stay in the race and prevent the Tigers from walking away with the honors at this early date.

By defeating the Rebels Friday afternoon by a score of twelve to six, the Tigers entrenched themselves in the league lead, and also eliminated all teams but the Rebels from taking the lead from them. Leading by a 6-0 score, the Rebels were unable to turn back a desperate Tiger drive in the closing minutes of play, and the game went into overtime. Within the three minutes allowed, the Tigers again marched down the field in a drive that ended when Cline carried the ball over for the final score.

While the Tigers were winning their game, Alpha Sigma and Ministerial fought a bitter contest for the division lead. Alpha Sig finally won the game by a 6-0 count to gain the lead. By mutual agreement, the game that was to have been played last week between Alpha Sigma and the Y Frosh will be played at a future date.

A much improved Frosh Y team held Athenian in check, and kept within striking distance of victory before Athenian scored in the last minutes of play to win 6-0. The Frosh showed better form than they have all season, and are capable of giving the league leaders a few troubled moments. C. Wright and Hedges scored for the winners.

In the upset game of the day, the Floogies upset the Hahn Powerhouse to hand them their third straight setback. Taking advantage of a poor pass from center that went over Captain Hahn't head, the Floogies, who until this game had not scored, trapped Clem as he tried to return the ball to actual playing territory. After obtaining the lead, the Floogies managed to withstand several attacks upon their goal line, and though their defense was loose in mid-field, they became solid walls near their goal. Playing with only seven men, the Floogies destroyed any Powerhouse hope of romping off with first place honors.

Thursday afternoon saw the Rebels turn back the Powerhouse gang by a score of 16 to 6. Baldwin and Nicely lead the attack for the winners as each carried a pass from Williams across the goal line for the score. Each time the extra point was made. The additional two points came when Hahn went into the end zone when runing back a ball. Miller scored for the Powerhouse on a long pass from Hahn.

At the same time that the Rebels were winning, the Tigers trounced the Bulldogs by a 14-0 victory. Early in the game Hodge took a pass from Slaton to score. Later, Scapellati took McGaha's pass for the additional score.

Tuesday afternoon, the lowly Floogies took a sound thrashing at the hands of the Tigers as they were set back 25-0. Hodges, Scapellati, McGaha and Kent figured in the scoring for the winners. The Rebels continued their bid to overtake the leader, by beating the Bulldogs 27-6. Alpha Sigma turned back Athenian by a score of 7-0 when Graham scored on a pass from the six yard line. The Y Frosh again went down in defeat at the hands of the Ministerials.

Scot Cagemen Begin Regular Practice

With the regulars expected to report for practice near the end of the football season, hopes are already rising for a good basketball season. Already twelve freshmen are reporting to Bill Baird at the big gym for conditioning and ball handling every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. From this group, several promising prospects have been discovered.

Last year's veterans will provide the nucleus of the team, while the less experienced will fill the weak spots. Last year's veterans who are expected to report include Boydson and Bill Baird, Scott Honaker, Lloyd Taylor, Stan Menning, Bill Sweeney, Willard Klimstra, Bob Lord, and Dave Humphries.

Tennis Tourney

INTRAMURAL TENNIS

Wednesday afternoon, Chuck Foreman and Ed Wiezalis battled for the Consolation tennis championship which Foreman won by 6-4, 5-7 and 6-4 sets. In qualifying for the finals Foreman, who had already defeated Dubois and Humphries, turned back Ken Ross in staright sets, 7-5 and 6-4. Rowan, who had defeated Hess and Flowers, could not match the fine play that Wiezalis showed. Wiezalis had already turned back Thompson and Lochausen. With the completion of these matches, the tennis program for the fall closed.

Psychometer Demonstrated At Pi Gamma, Tuesday

Dr. David H. Briggs and the psychometer were the main attractions at the last Pi Gamma meeting in the Y rooms on October 22. This was the first program in a series on "How To Get Your Man." Dr. Briggs remarked that most of the girls present probably already had their man, but the rest might be interested in finding out who he was. Although the first to brave the lie detector was Mary Elizabeth Cruze, several other girls later got up the courage to face it. The "victims" were at a distinct disadvantage, since they could not see how the machine was registering their emotions, and all the others present could. This situation often caused a good deal of merriment for the on-lookers, but embarrassment for the one questioned.

Having given the first names of six boys, the "victim" was requested to answer 'no' to each question asked. At the completion of a blitzkreig of questions, Dr. Briggs told each girl questioned the boy whom she liked best—leaving the rest in an excited buzz trying to decide what the gentleman-in-question's last name might be.

The next meeting in the series will be held November 5.

Highlanders Favored To Silence Bucs In Smoky Mountain Conference Tilt

This Saturday night on the newly-equipped Wilson Field, the Maryville college Scotties will meet the East Tennessee Teachers college elevent in what appears to be a hotly contested battle. The Highlanders, although defeated last week by the University of Chattanooga, are gunning for this game to wipe off the crushing defeat of last year at Johnson City when the Teachers whipped a crippled Scottie eleven.

Earlier in the year Emory and Henry rolled over the Teachers by the score of 19-14, and more recently the Milligan powerhouse continued their supremacy over conference foes by smashing over, through, and around the Tutors. Maryville was also beaten by the smoth-working Milligan machine and it appears that two evenly matched teams will take the field at 8:00 p.m. under the lights.

Injuries will again play a big part in the outcome of the game as they did last year. Cecil Tipton, outstanding tackle of this and many seasons, suffered a shoulder injury in practice and it i snot sure how much time he will be able to play on Saturday. Cragan's hand is still taped although he has not lost any practice. "Red" RogerHville's shoulder is continuing to give him trouble. Saffell and Taylor, both out with injured knees, have been working out their injured members, but it appears now that these two men will be lost for the season. Honaker's leg is still bothering him and it was further agitated this week by an unfortunate burn. Cloninger has a badly bruised and battered leg.

The team will go on the field with a determined attitude to beat the Teachers. Fleming, hard-plunging fullback, will probably not see any action in the game due to injuries sufferd earlier in the season. He was the back that spelled the doom of the Highlanders last year.

Following this all important tilt with the Teachers will be Homecoming with Emory and Henry. How the team shows up against the Teachers tonight will be a good indication of the score for the Home ing. The Wasps having beat the achers by five points should indicate two hard fought, but close games right in a row for the home fans. A large crowd is expected for both tilts due to the very newest in the way of drawing cards for the game. All male-accompanied girls will be allowed in free to the game starting with the Teachers tilt and all the local high school football teams are invited to the Homecoming game.

The playing of Baby Baird which has been improving every week; the hard smashing, fighting, good play of J. D. Hughes; the punting and all-round play of Garner; Scot's play, although affected somewhat by his sore ankle, has been up to his usual good standard; the running, blocking, and tackling of Morton gives the Highlanders a slight edge in the backfield. On the line the Scotties have shown considerable power in Tipton, Shelfer, Cloninger, Murr, Hooker, McCurry, and Rock, but the gap left if "Tip" is unable to play his usual hard smashing type game, will be hard to fill and may be the weak spot in the line.

The amplifying system will be in perfect working order for this game, and the press box which was not completed for the King game has been completed and the fans will be presented to one of the finest pieces of equipment in this area. Also another great improvement in store for the crowd for the first time this year will be the organized, roped-off cheering section which has been reserved for students only. This will enable the cheerleaders to get the timing needed on the cheers and as a result the cheering as a whole will be greatly improved.

Lippard Heads Plan For Freshman Party

Organizing quickly under the direction of Charles Gilpatrick, the freshman class plans to hold its first social event of the year this Thursday in the big gym. The season will begin with a Hallowe'en party which starts at 7:00 and lasts until ten. Throughout the evening several games, folk dances and grand marches will be held in order that the members of the class can become better acquainted with each other.

Arrangements are under the supervision of Jack Lippard who will be aided by Helen Anderson, Virginia Cain, Mary Evelyn Waysman, Bill Ford. Decorations will be in keeping with the theme of the party. After the program, refreshments of cider and doughnuts will be served by the committee.

There will be no admission charged to the freshmen, but they must present their receipt for the first payment of their class dues. Sophomores and juniors will not be allowed to attend, but the members of the senior class are invited. Payments will be taken by Ralph Heischman at Carnegie, Sarah Jo Bolling at Baldwin, and Helen Anderson at Memorial.

Athenian In A Dither Over New Zither

By JOHN ROSS

Would you like to have a zither? The Athenian society is awarding its outstanding members with a very unusual gift to be retained by them until it is decided to give it to some other noteworthy member. Any member of the society who has any special abilities, wins contests, or performs feats of merit is liable for reward.

This unique instrument is shaped like a large dog biscuit; about two and a half feet long and a foot wide. There are thirty-two strings, sixteen of which are plucked and sixteen of which are played with a bow. Ann M. Howitt, art student in Munich in 1854, says: "There is a peculiar spirit in the zither, and it is well adapted to Alpine melodies." Present president Paul Brown presented the zither to the society. It was given to Mr. Brown by Zerp Olski, noted Czechoslavakian zither player, when Brown saved his life this past summer. Brown, Wick and Wick rescued Mr. Olski from drowning when his sail boat overturned on Lake Chautauga.

George Laird Hunt, ex-president of Athenian, received this award as a graduation present. At present the trophy is held by Hilton Wick, winner of the "Girl I Left Behind" contest. His picture of Mary Alice Grubb put the judges in a dither and Wick got the zither.

The names of the recipients will be burned on the back as a permanent record. None of the holders so far have been able to play or manipulate the zither. It will next be awarded to the outstanding Athenian football player. At that time a contest will be held to see if any one here can play it.

Echo Makes Annual Visit To Journal

Last Monday evening, fifteen members of the Echo staff made the annual visit to the offices of the Knoxville Journal. The group met at the Echo office from which they went to Knoxville in cars. Dr. F. A. Griffitts, faculty advisor, accompanied the group. At the Journal office, a representative for the firm guided the group through the entire building, beginning with the Associated Press rooms where the news comes to the Journal, and finishing with the printing presses.

Juniors To Celebrate Hallowe'en Thursday

According to Jeanne Stringham, chairman for the junior class party, plans for the celebration of Hallowe'en on Thursday night are nearing completion. Definite announcement as to where the party will be held will be made early in the week. Presentation of a recepit for class dues paid or 25c will admit any junior and all seniors are invited to visit this party, which Class President Henry Wick says is to be the best yet.

20 Members of Law Club Trek To Woods For Picnic

Twenty members of the Law club and their dates trekked to the college woods last Wednesday afternoon at 4:00 for the annual Law club picnic. They were chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Pieper.

Janet Lindsay, chairman of the picnic committee, was assisted by Bob Wilcox, George Webster, and Elizabeth Moore.

After a supper of hot dogs and hot coffee, Mr. Pieper led the group in singing songs around the camp fire.

Band Rewarded With Food For Concerts

The college band has really come into its own during the last few weeks. Not only has the band expanded so that several new uniforms have been purchased, but it has played at both of the home football game and has given several informal concerts in addition.

These open air concerts have been a great pleasure, and have enlivened several otherwise uneventful autumn evenings. The first of these occasions took place after the football game with King several weeks ago.

When the faculty attended the open house at Pearson hall. The band played several selections and then adjourned, but not without an acknowledgement of appreciation by their listeners.

Mr. Colbert touched the match to the next display of harmonic fireworks, when at the rehearsal a week ago Monday, he suggested that the band take advantage of the beautiful evening to get a little outdoor practice. The first stop after leaving the chapel was Baldwin hall. This was followed by a session in front of Dr. Lloyd's residence. Hearing the music, Dr. Lloyd came out and demonstrated his skill on the base drum, playing a selection with the band. There are those who contend that Dr. Lloyd was out of practice and that he missed a beat or two; however, the general opinion seemed to be that our president has the touch of a master on the bass drum. Mrs. Lloyd then very generously offered cookies to all present, to restore them after their noble exertions. This hospitality by no means ended the evening activities of the group. Full of hope they serenaded Pearsons and Carnegie in turn. Some carefree soul in the latter building attempted to feed an apple core to the fellow who plays the bass horn by dropping it into the bell of the horn as he was playing. Another offered him a drink of water in the same manner. It is sad to relate that one individual leaned out of his window to see what was going on, and received some water on his person. No explanation was offered as to where the water was headed.

The most recent concert was performed outside the windows of the YWCA rooms in the rear of Thaw hall, and was rewarded by two boxes of candy distributed to the band at its last rehearsal by one of the grateful listeners. In this manner the band has been well filled. (In more ways than one).

Seriously, the band has been working valiantly. Anyone who has seen them parading the streets of Maryville in the broiling sun on the afternoon of a home football game will testify to that. Recent reports have it that several new formations are being worked out for use at football games and will see the light of day in the near future.

The band's trip this year will be to the Carson-Newman football game on November 23.

Becker, Vance, Burgreen On Theta Program Tonight

Lyndall Becker and Charles Burgreen will be the chief attractions at the Theta meeting in Theta hall this evening at 6:15. Lyndall Becker needs no introduction because she is well-known on the hill for her amusing original skits. Charles Burgreen will play "Sweet Sue", "I'll Never Smile Again", and one of his own compositions.

Athenian, Bainonian Have Joint Meeting

Bainonian will have a joint meeting with Athenian in Bartlett hall auditorium tonight at 6:15. The Hallowe'en theme will be carried out.

Mary Esther White will give a reading, "Tell-Tale Heart," and Winnie Hart will play special accordion music.

The order of the meeting will be reversed, with the business last. Light refreshments will be served.

Dr. Orr To Speak At YMCA Service

Dr. H. E. Orr will speak at the Y service this Sunday. The theme of his address will be "Glorious and Triumphant." The special music will be furnished by Thelma Ritzman. She will play a flute solo.

Starting this past Thursday night the Y cabinet instituted a new social program for the cabinet. They hope to hold a social gathering every month. Different games will be played and refreshments will be served.

On November 3 the Y will have charge of the evening vesper service. Both of the Y's will have charge of one service each semester. The theme for November 3 will be "Youth's Outlook." There will be three student speakers whose topics will be Government, Religion and Morals. The respective speakers will be Jack Zerwas, Alfred Davies and Vernon Lloyd.

Proffitt And Black Attend Conference

On October 23 Mr. F. L. Proffitt, treasurer, and Mr. Louis Black, director of maintenance at Maryville college, attended a conference in the interest of the Educational Buyers' Association at Tusculum college. This is the national organization of those who purchase for the colleges and universities of the country. Chattanooga University, Lincoln Memorial University, Tusculum college and Virginia Intermont college also sent representatives.

Mr. B. G. Ahrens from New York represented the National Organization and was the leader of the discussion on purchasing and contracts. Another meeting, to which representatvies of additional colleges will be invited, will be held on January 16.

Keller and Moore to Read At Workshop Next Week

Members of Writers' Workshop met in Dr. E. R. Hunter's classroom Monday at 4 o'clock for the second meeting held this year.

J. Edward Thomas was the reader and author of the first paper. Its title was "The Political Philosophy of Nazism". Harvey Lehman was the second reader and author. He read a one-act play, "There was Room."

Mary Orr, taking the place of Howard Dizney, led the discussion and criticism following the presentation of each piece.

Elizabeth Moore and Miss Mary Keller, instructor in education, were announced as the readers for next week's meeting. This was the first meeting at which the newly-elected members for this year were present.

Student Recital Wednesday

There will be an informal recital at the fine arts studio on Wednesday afternoon, October 30, at 4:15. The following music students will perform:

Marian Magill, Johnye Sue Long, Janice Graybeal, Dortha Jee White, Louise Marshall, Ruth Guinter, Katherine Crews.

This is the second of these recitals sponsored by the music department. They will be continued at two-week intervals throughout the school year.

German Club Meets

Wednesday night at 6:45 the regular business meeting of "Der Deutsche Verein" was held in Athenian hall. The meeting was presided over by President Arling Kressler. A nominating committee was chosen to select nominees for the office of vice-president.

Following the business meeting there was a short musical program. Professor Hovel sang an aria from Gounod's "Faust." Betty Parker played accordion selections, "Old Dutch Garden" and "Vienna Dreams."

New Recorder Used At Disc Club Friday Night

A new RCA-Victor recording machine, purchased by the college for use in class work in the music department and for the bi-monthly meeting of the Disc club, made its initial appearance before the student body as a whole last Friday in chapel when the students were given a pre-view of the Disc club program for that night. The new machine, one of the best standard recorders, is a table model and so is easily moved from place to place.

Some new records are purchased by the music department each year; new additions this year are Richard Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration" and Schumann's "Piano Concerto". Late last spring the choir bought the complete score of the "Messiah."

Junior Section of 1941 Chilhowean To Close Thursday, October 31

Pictures of 120 seniors have been placed in the senior section of the 1941 Chilhowean. The junior section, which opened October 17, closes Thursday, October 31. Pictures for the sophomore section will be received from Friday, November 1, until November 14.

More than 100 of the snapshots taken on the campus recently have been returned to the annual staff. The best of these pictures will be selected for publication. Club pictures will be taken at an early date.

Hilton Wick, business manager, states that advertising space in the Chilhowean is selling fast. The advertising section will be made more interesting this year by the use of cuts on each page.

Meeting of Pre-Med Club

Mr. Carl Siebert, laboratory technician of Fort Craig hospital, was the guest speaker at the Pre-Medical club meeting held last Monday evening in Bartlett auditorium.

An interesting feature of Dr. Siebert's visit was an exhibition of an outstanding collection of blood-stain slides, viewed by all attending.

Philippine Missionary Speaks at Student Vols

Dr. Charles Magill, graduate of Maryville college and missionary to the Philippine Islands, addressed the Student Volunteers Sunday, October 20, in the YWCA auditorium.

Drawing from a wealth of experiences covering over thirty-five years in the foreign field, Dr. Magill presented a message of a challenging nature, revealing the need and opportunities in the Philippine mission field. Dr. Magill graduated from Maryville in 1899.

Next week, the Student Volunteers welcome as their guest speaker, Dr. Frederick Mixon, missionary to Jamaica.

Alumni Delegation Large For Eighth Annual Homecoming

Emert and Hunter Make Addresses In Morning

The football game this evening with Emory and Henry university and the chapel service this morning mark the highlights of the eighth annual Homecoming and Founders' Day program held on the Maryville college campus.

Last evening the annual Homecoming pep meeting was held at Wilson field. Former football players and captains were given special recognition and short speeches were given by several former lettermen.

Mr. Clyde Emert, editor and publisher of the Maryville Times, was the guest speaker at the Founder's Day exercises held in Voorhees chapel at 8:10 this morning. The theme of the 1940 service was "The Year of 1840 in the Life of America and Maryville College". Mr. Emert delivered a brief historical address on "The American Nation in 1840." President Ralph Waldo Lloyd presided and gave several introductory remarks under the subject, "On the Maryville College Campus a Century Ago." Dean Edwin Ray Hunter presented a cosmopolitan view of "The American College in 1840."

The theme this year, embodying the educational, political, and economic events of a century ago, was of a type somewhat different from those of the seven former observances. In each former year some individual or individuals have been honored. Last year the service commemorated the life and works of Prof. Thomas Jefferson Lamar, who played a conspicuous part in the history of the college for thirty years and who was the leader of the second founding of the college after the Civil war.

This afternoon at 2:15 the band paraded to town where an informal concert was given in front of the post office. Cheers and a snake dance through the streets completed the pep meeting.

At 5:30 this evening the annual barbecue for all alumni will be held on the practice field. Before and after the barbecue there will be group singing, which has been planned by the entertainment committee, and special selections will be played by the band under the direction of Professor Ralph Colbert. A large bonfire of wood and leaves will add its little bit to the evening's gaiety.

The gridiron encounter between Emory and Henry and Maryville will be a fitting close to the day's entertainment. All former lettermen who attended the pep rally last evening will be at the game tonight as the guests of the college. Also, a special section of the bleachers has been reserved for members of all Blount county high school teams. Students, faculty members, and alumni will compose the rest of the crowd.

Under the glaring lights of Wilson field, Coach Porterfield's Wasps will meet the Maryville Highlanders. At the half the band will make a number of intricate formations, forming the EH and the M. Also, a pyrotechnic display of skyrockets and bombs is being planned to complete the program before the two squads again take to the field.

The recently installed public address system, with Vernon Lloyd at the microphone will see its first use before a record crowd, and the bleachers will be decorated by members of the senior class.

Cracker Club To Elect Officers Monday, Nov. 11

The Maryville college Cracker club held its first meeting of the year last Monday night in Athenian hall. The meeting was held for the purpose of organizing for the year. A nominating committee was chosen and will present nominations at the next meeting, to be held a week from Monday. The officers of the club are at present: Fred Shelfer, president; and Mary Jane Person, vice-president. A program committee was also chosen and is engaged in planning the program for the future meetings. A musical program is being planned for the next meeting and it is possible that there will also be a speaker.

Last year the membership of the club was broadened so as to include students from Alabama. Consequently, any student from any of the three states of Georgia, Florida and Alabama is eligible for membership. The meetings of the club will continue to be held on Monday nights in Athenian hall.

Full House Is Expected To Hear "The Barber Of Seville" Monday

Hilde Reggiani And Armand Tokatyan To Sing Leading Roles in Rossini's Famous Comic Opera

HILDE REGGIANI

ARMAND TOKATYAN

Monday evening the presentation of Rossini's opera, "The Barber of Seville" will open the current season of Artist Series attractions at Maryville before what is expected to be a record audience. Hilde Reggiana, coloratura sensation of the Metropolitan Opera company, with Armand Tokatyan, Carlos Remirez, Pompilio Malatesta, John Gurney, Brooks Dunbar, and Georgia Graves, will participate in this operatic performance.

"The Barber of Seville" will be sung without orchestral accompaniment and will be presented under the talented direction of Guiseppe Bambaschek, who has directed over fifty performances of this opera. Joseph Battista and Maurice Eisenberg, artists in their own right, furnish the piano accompaniment for the company.

Hilde Reggiani, born in Modena, Italy in 1914, is cast for the part of Rosina, the young heroine of the opera. She studied at the famous conservatory in Bologna, where Rossini had also studied, and made her debut in her native Italian city. Her musical triumphs include a successful tour of the European continent, a tour of South America, and numerous spectacular performances in Chicago and New York.

Armand Tokatyan, tenor, is cast in the role of Count Almaviva, rich Spanish nobleman and lover of Rosina. He was born in Egypt, and has sung leading tenor parts in Europe, and in North and South America. After his debut in Italy, he was engaged by the Metropolitan where he ranked as one of their most dependable stars.

The role of Figaro, the barber, is taken by Carlos Ramirez, who began his musical career as a choir boy in Bogota, Columbia, his birthplace. Ramirez became the leading radio singer in South America, and when he appears here Monday evening he will be making his operatic debut in the United States.

Pompilio Malatesta is known through the world for his interpretation of Dr. Bartolo, the guardian of Rosina. He came to the United States from Italy in 1910, and has for many years been an American citizen. For 24 years he has sung leading bass roles for the Metropolitan.

John Gurney, American born basso, will portray the part of Basilio, Rosina's music teacher. He has been featured by three prominent opera companies, and was formerly the leading baritone of the Roxy Theatre at the time of its stage productions. In all these roles he achieved outstanding success.

The part of the count's servant is played by Brooks Dunbar, distinguished concert and radio singer, who has appeared with several famous symphony orchestras. Georgia Graves, who appeared in the 1939-40 Artist Series, will sing the part of Bertha, a servant in Dr. Bartolo's house.

The "Barber of Seville" comes to Maryville under the management of Charles L. Wagner, former secretary of the Metropolitan Opera company. For many years Mr. Wagner has barnstormed through the United States selling such personages as William Jennings Bryan, John McCormack, Mary Garden, and Walter Gieseking to the public. Last year when inconvenient train schedules in New England and in the South annoyed him, he decided to take opera to small cities by bus. "The Barber of Seville" is touring the country in a large Greyhound-type bus which transports the stage crew and scenery as well as the operatic company.

Messiah Practice Starts

The first rehearsal for the annual production of Handel's Messiah will be held this Sunday afternoon, Nov. 3 at three. All students and town people who are interested in participating in the singing are invited to come and sing with the glee clubs. All choir and glee club members are required to attend all rehearsals. Attendance at all rehearsals is required of all those who wish to participate in the production.

YW Program Of 'Musical Meditation'

The theme of this week's YWCA program is to be "Musical Meditations," and the meeting will be held in the Fine Arts studio instead of the YW rooms.

There will be music, meditation, recordings, scriptures, and a short talk. The program is somewhat different from the usual and should be greatly appreciated and enjoyed by those who attend.

"Roosevelt vs. Willkie" Featured At Bainonian

Bainonian will have as the theme for its meeting tonight the coming political election. Harry Lyle and "Cherie" Curtis, dressed in appropriate costumes and accompanied by Phil Vance, will do a tap dance. There will be a debate, "Roosevelt vs. Willkie" by Elizabeth Moore and Janet Lindsay. The meeting will be at 6:15 in Bainonian hall.

French Club To See "The Baker's Wife"

Beginning last Thursday night at the Booth theater in Knoxville, another Finer Films Forum series, always successful and widely talked about in the past, got underway. These productions are of interest to the Maryville college French club because the series of four movies are French shows.

Starring in the first movie night before last was America's own Grace Moore in "Louise", a movie-opera not only sung in French but also produced in France. The titles, however, are in English, having been written by one of the foremost music critics of this age, Deems Taylor.

The second production, to be given next Thursday night, is "Katia", staring Danielle Darrieux, who has appeared in several American movies.

On November 15, "The Baker's Wife", which has been shown in New York for ten months straight now and which has received the best notices given an imported film for years, will be shown. France's great Raimu is the star of this picture which the local French club has made plans to see.

The fourth and last of this series of Finer Films is "Pagliacci", the only one presented in English; it is scheduled for November 21. In this picture Richard Tauber and Steffi Duna bring some operatic music to the Booth again.

Rev. Hamilton At Chapel

The Rev. Robert B. Hamilton of the Fourth Presbyterian church of Knoxville will conduct chapel next Wednesday morning. Rev. Hamilton has spoken several times to the YWCA and the YMCA, but has not conducted chapel or vespers.

Panamania Is To Be Unleashed At Barnwarming On 28

King and Queen Will Be Chosen By Student Body

At 8:15 on November 28, Panamania will be let loose in the Alumni gym. Panamania will be for the first time the central theme of the annual Barnwarming which is sponsored each year by the YW.

Charlotte Colby who was to have been in charge of Barnwarming this year could not return from Panama where she is now living; but sent her plans which are being put into effect by the present chairman, Jean White, with the help of the various committees.

The work of planning for Barnwarming is divided among four major committees with a chairman at the head of each as follows: program, Elizabeth Moore; decorations, Willy Williams; booths, Phyllis Johns; and tickets and publicity, Beth Pascoe. Dorothy Jean Eslinger, assistant manager of the YW store, will take care of the refreshments.

Under each of these committees named above, are three or four other committees who take charge of the details of the work. If there are any who are interested in working on any of these committees or on the program, the committee heads will be glad to have them report immediately.

Of course, the theme Panamania will be followed throughout the program, and during the entertainment the Barnwarming King and Queen will be crowned. At the present time, it is planned to have the four class sponsors as attendants to the King and Queen who are to be chosen by the whole student body from the nominees selected by the senior class. Very soon now the nominating committee will submit the names of the nominees for the positions of King and Queen of Barnwarming to the senior class and call for additional nominations to be made from the floor.

Meetings are being held by the main committee and sub-committees every week, and work has already started on the plans, more of the details of which will be revealed later.

Editorial Staff Busy With Little Dummy

With the closing of the junior section of the Chilhowean the final form of the 1941 issue is one step nearer. The sophomore section opened November first and will not close until the 16. Already the little dummy has arrived from the publishers and the editorial board is busy working on it. Class sponsor pictures have been taken and are ready to enter the book.

The Chilhowean business staff has been busy collecting late payments at the bookstore and in selling space to the clubs on the hill and advertisers. Some of the societies have recently signed contracts for a page, and is it expected that the rest will soon follow.

The Echo Has Been Covering Home Comings For a Long Time

By SIDNEY DUKE

Did you ever notice the date line on your copy of "The Highland Echo"? This week's edition, as you may see, is headed "Volume 26, Number 8". This means that the paper has been published for over a quarter of a century. Much has happened at Maryville College during that time; many men and women have gone out from the "Hill" since the Echo has begun. Today, when we are honoring these old students, it is interesting to consider the early history of the paper they began.

In the vaults of Anderson is a file of all the past editions of the Echo. Upon entering the bottom binder in this stack of yellowing papers, one is greeted by the familiar head "The Highland Echo." The date line reads "November 4, 1915—Volume 1, Number 1." An editorial on page two explains in detail that the need for a weekly paper has been felt and that "The College Monthly" will therefore be replaced by a weekly publication.

Most of the material in the paper is matter-of-fact, uninteresting, colorless. But the small boxes of type in the upper corners of page one administer a real shock. The one on the left declares in bold type: EAST TENNESSEE FOOTBALL CHAMPS. The one in the opposite corner adds: A TEAM NOT SCORED ON. Yes, believe it or not, the Scotties of that day were the supreme power in East Tennessee football, no school excluded.

The most prominent position on the first page is given to an account of the Maryville-Chattanooga game. Score: Maryville 13, Chattanooga 0. Another article, headed "Students Celebrate Chattanooga Victory", tells of a shirt tail parade, snake dance, and pep rally on the streets of the town. To show the supreme exultation of the students, this bit is included: "The Gem Theater was opened and some of the fellows went in and enjoyed a few antics by Charlie Chaplin."

"Why Maryville Won the Chattanooga Game" is the title of a piece

Freshmen Debate Members To Begin Debates Soon

The freshman debate classes have been in training under the coaching of Mr. Archibald Pieper since the second week of school, and are planning to begin their actual debate work week after next.

So far, the 30 students who comprise the freshman debate classes have merely given practice speeches, but Mr. Pieper is now planning to put them to work on the question: "Resolved: That the Federal Power should be dimnished."

Sometime before Christmas the frosh try-outs will be held, and five men and five women will be chosen to represent their class. These students will constitute the freshman debate squad for the following semester.

GIVE CHAPEL-GOERS A BREAK

Daily chapel services are a part of the religious program of the college and are not within the scope of editorial criticism. For this reason, we point out that the comment which follows is not intended as a thrust at the character of these services, but rather as a suggestion for increasing their spiritual value.

A practice which tends to detract from the devotional quality of the morning chapel hour is the monotonous recital of a long list of routine announcements before the service opens. It is true that some announcements are necessary, and that there is no other time when the whole student body is brought together, but much time is spent in reading statements for which there seems to be little or no real necessity.

Saturday morning chapel invariably opens with an announcement, sometimes a discussion, of the time, place, and type of program for every society that meets on Saturday evening. Usually these details are accompanied by a commercial "plug" prepared by the program chairman in charge of the various feature attractions. There are enough clubs and special organizations to furnish announcements for the other days of the week, so that only those that meet on Monday evening are deprived of free advertising.

Since all club and society meetings must be scheduled for permanent times and places, there is obviously no real need for most of these special explanation. As for advance publicity regarding coming attractions, the Echo would welcome these as "live" news, and would devote even more space to them than is now its policy if they were not given so much previous advertisement. There are also at least ten bulletin boards in conspicuous places available for all types of legitimate publicity.

The elimination of superfluous announcements from the chapel service by those in charge of publicizing programs would add to its worship value, and would conserve the time of both the announcer and the audience.

GOOD CONCERTS AT LOW COST

By JEAN WHITE

When it comes time for the artist series each year, we hear so much fuss and so many complaints from students about the best seats being sold to outsiders that we decided to do some talking ourselves. The facts of the matter cannot be well or correctly known, or thoughtful students at least would not be griping. The facts are as follows:

In the first place, the Maryville college artist series is not supported and made possible by the students; rather by the outsiders who attend the concerts. Each student pays an activities fee of $10.00 a year, and of this $10 fee 18 percent or $1.87 is given to the artist series' fund. Outsiders —those other than students—pay $3.00 for a season ticket and $2.00 for a single program. Then too, since the series is not commercialized, the only source of financial support is from the student activities fee and the season and single tickets. So it is that it is mainly people other than students who are supporting the artist series and making it possible for us to have such well-known artists as John Charles Thomas, Alexander Kipnis, and the "Barber of Seville" opera appear on the Maryville stage.

Incidentally, while speaking about tickets, for a like series in the New York Metropolitan Opera House you would probably pay approximately $7.00. The fact that Knoxville people and others from more distant cities such as Chattanooga, Bristol, and even Abingdon, Virginia, come to these concerts, means that they are really well-known and worthwhile. Also, it is this that makes it possible to have better series and to make the series better known. This is an important factor especially since no advertising in connection with the series is done. The reason for no advertising is that without advertising the chapel can be filled to capacity; with it there would be no seats for the sudents, for all could be sold to outsiders.

We also hear some comment about the 15c charge which is paid when the student gets his ticket. This is not the price of admission but is for your seat reservation.

Radio Rambles

It goes without saying that the most important radio broadcasts on November 5 will be concerned with election returns. The Columbia Broadcasting System will be on the air with fast returns a quarter of an hour after the first polls close in some of the Eastern states. The broadcast starts at 5 p.m.

Between broadcasts of returns, CBS will give special features of 1940's Presidential election day. Early in the evening, radio listeners will hear Paul White, CBS director of public affairs, check arrangements from New York with men in different parts of the country who are responsible for routing the returns through the central broadcast point in New York.

LEWIS GIVES IMPETUS TO CAMPAIGN

The Willkie-Roosevelt campaign has been one of the most unusual political contests in the history of the presidency. In the very beginning, the Republican nomination of a life-long Democrat over seasoned politicians, and the Democratic choice of a third term candidate against the will of influential party leaders were precedent-setting events.

Although surprise followed surprise throughout the campaign, the most sensational of them came last week with the endorsement of Wendell Willkie by John L. Lewis, labor's most belligerant leader. This last minute declaration, coming as it did in the last round of the contest, probably improved Willkie's chances of winning the presidency. Republican strategists have worked toward building up the idea that their candidate has the ability to coordinate business and labor for national defense. The fact that the president of the CIO, whose membership includes workers in important defense industries, is supporting the Republican nominee will furnish proof for this contention. It will also furnish evidence against the important Democratic charge that a Willkie-Wall Street alliance is responsible for his candidacy.

Another reason for the impetus given the GOP campaign by Lewis' endorsement is that his announcement was accompanied by a threat of resignation if the President is elected for a third term. Many of the four million CIO members who are now being asked to choose between Mr. Lewis and Mr. Roosevelt give Lewis much of the credit for recent gains made by their union, and so will hesitate to vote contrary to his advice when such action may cost them his leadership.

NATIONAL UNITY MUST NOT BE SACRIFICED

Regardless of which side wins the election, the important problem for the disciples of all political faiths is to curb their partisanship to the extent necessary for cooperation with the administration in furthering national defense. Today, more than ever before in our history, this need faces America. Democracy is on trial, and we cannot afford to be divided at home when we are confronted with the most ruthless enemy of human freedom that has ever undertaken world conquest. We are Americans before we are partisans.

TALK OF THE WEEK .... By Jean White

Qualifications For Student Voters Nov. 5

(This in no way applies to students of Blount or nearby counties where voting at home is practicable.)

All who can answer "yes" under oath to the following questions.

1. Are you a citizen of the state of Tennessee? (Citizenship consists in having been "domiciled", living at home in the state for one year next preceding the day of election.)

2. Are you twenty-one years of age? If you became twenty-one before January 10, 1939, you must have a poll tax receipt.

3. Do you reside in this county?

4. Has your home been in this county six months before the day of election? (This would mean having previously been a citizen of Tennessee and a resident of Blount during the past school year without having returned home in some other county to live or reside during the summer.)

In other words, any citizen of Tennessee of the proper age who was in college last year and who worked here or at some place other than home and who maintained his room or room reservation at college during the summer would probably be permitted to vote.

A person from outside the state must have shown his intention of residing in Tennessee, other than merely attending college here, by moving his family here, or by establishing his home here, or by continuing here during the summers so that the state has been his home in fact for at least one year previous to the election and that his home has been in this county six months previous to the election.

Juniors Celebrate With Cider And Square Dancing

Hallowe'en was celebrated in high style at the junior class party held Thursday night at the Maryville high school gymnasium. About two hundred students were present at some time during the evening.

The evening's entertainment began with a "House of Horrors", and continued with group games; individual acts presented by Bernard Boyatt, Troye Moore, and the Proffitt twins; and square dancing, deftly called by Bob Fisher.

Chaperones for the party were Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Pieper, Mr. and Mrs. Paul F. Wendt, and Mr. and Mrs. James Smith.

Decorations for the party followed the usual Hallowe'en idea with cornstalks, streamers, pumpkins and cardboard figures. Those planning the party were Jeanne Stringham, chairman of the party committee, and Margaret Proffitt, Anderson Haynes, Bob Martin, and Charles McCammon.

Refreshments, cider and doughnuts, were served after a round of square dancing.

Nature Club Hears Geislet

Because of the opera Monday night the regular meeting of the Nature club will be postponed until November 18. At this meeting Muriel Geisler will speak on "Fish Scale and Sea Shell Flowers."

Plans are being made for a hike to the Sinks on November 9. The group will meet at 1:00 in front of the book store. Those wanting to go on this hike must sign up for it on lists which will be posted in the dormitories.

Lucette Finds Pre-Med, Picture Shows and $1.75 Lunch, Plus Civilization

By BILLYE RUTH BRALY

SCOTS AND SODA gave us a scoop last week about Lucette deBarritt's visit to Knoxville to be civilized. But there's more to it than went to press. Yes, she did go to Knoxville especially to be civilized, naturalized, and glamourized and, incidentally, to visit a former playmate who attends U-T. But the friend's friends were so intriguing that such a small matter as fingerprinting was soon forgotten.

In the whirl of picture shows, a $1.75 lunch, and shopping in the big town, her allegiance to our country became secondary. Whose wouldn't, with a good-looking pre-med showing all his attention?

The result was that Lucette had to go down, or rather up, to the post office in Knoxville to go through all the necessary cross-examinations. After stopping to think back when, she finally told the nervous examiner she couldn't remember whether it's her mother who is French and her father who is English, or vice versa. Several sheets of paper were wasted, and several tempers were heated, but no audible thoughts were expressed. When the questions were at last finished, the actual finger-printing began. This is a very clean job, so her hands had to be scrubbed immaculate with soap; for contrast, ink was spread on her fingers. Then the fight began. Each print had to be done exactly right or the whole thing redone. Every operation, of course, had to begin with the hand washing; so, much soap as well as time was wasted.

After several hours which seemed like years, Uncle Sam's little helper gave our Lucette permission to leave, with the promise that she would become a citizen November 13, the date on which her mother is also to become a naturalized American citizen.

There is such promise of change in our citizen-to-be, that we could see possibilities for great improvement if there were only more of us to be Americanized. To give you a fair example, Lucette will now be allowed a roommate. However, don't get the idea from this that her former seclusion was due to violence. On the contrary, since she is a junior and living in Baldwin hall with freshmen, she is our living example (?) of what an upperclassman tries to be. In fact, we all rather look up to her—she's been fingerprinted, lived in a foreign country, and is especially entertained by the United States government.

Lucette promises a decided change November 13, so be on the look-out. Who knows?

Music Students Present Second Recital In Chapel

Music students of the college presented their second recital Wednesday afternoon at 4:15 in the chapel. The next recital will be in two weeks, on Wednesday, November 13.

Appearing at this last recital were three vocalists, Jack Gilmore, accompanied by Dave Kidder at the piano, and Louise Marshall and Ruth Guinter, both accompanied by Ruth Duggan. Janice Graybeal, Dorothy Jean White, Marion Magill, and Johnye Sue Long played piano solos. One organ selection by Dave Kidder and a violin solo by Catherine Crews completed the recital.

By CHUCK FOREMAN—Sports Editor

IN A DITHER

Coach "Pidney" Porterfield and his Wasp-nest from Emory-Henry have invaded the Hill packing the threat of giving our Homecomers one of the biggest sixty minutes of gridiron spills and thrills on record. Try to dope out this team and team comparison: East Tennessee Teachers handed the Scotties a 6 to 0 defeat last Saturday night, although they had been lucky to break even with Emory-Henry in two previous tilts with the Wasps. The first game was won by the Wasps 19-14, and Teachers edged the second, 13 to 6. Then came the game with King college when the big Tornadoes spanked the lads from Virginia by a score of 37 to 0. These statistics become more interesting when we remember that the Scotties trimmed King by a 7-0 score.

★——★——★——★

WHO SAYS FAVORITES?

All of these mental gymnastics lead to but one conclusion. Three weeks ago we favored King over the Scotties—and the Scots presented us with a rip-roaring 7 to 0 victory. Last week everyone agreed that this was the year to break the five-year old jinx. Again the underdog rose up and shattered our perfect logic. Therefore, for press publication the Emory-Henry Wasps are favored to beat the Highlanders. (Seriously, however, don't ever be fooled by a rumor like that.)

FACHILLA! FRONT AND CENTER

"Little Nickie" Fachilla, Wasp-waisted halfback, is the highly-touted lad from up Emory-way. It was he who sparked the 44 yard airlane drive which accounted for the only tally in their second tilt with Teachers. Another star on the invaders' squad is Captain "Whitey" Holyfield who only recently was switched from left end to tackle to fill the hole left in the wall due to an injury to 200-lb. Earle Manning.

DOUBLE TROUBLE

"Old Man Jinx" is still hanging around and this week he packs his wallops in bunches. Captain J. D. Hughes and George Garner, Scot Honaker and Baby Baird, Lloyd Taylor and Tom Saffell are the respective victims of knee, shoulder, and ankle injuries making the forecast anything but pleasant for the Orange and Garnet.

HO! THOSE LOWLY FROSH

This week it's Alpha Sig's turn to be in a "zither over a dither". Tuesday's schedule linked them to play the oft-beaten Y Frosh, and oh, what a slug-fest that turned out to be. Although the society-nine were able to edge their rivals 9 to 8, they left the field in a huff, vowing to quadruple the score in the next tussle. In the meantime every spare moment was devoted to skull practice and muscle building exercises. At last the fateful game time arrived and the battle of the century was on. But! Have you heard who won? Can you even guess who won? Yep! You're right! Through four grueling quarters and four overtimes they battled, and those lowly frosh, those underdog underclassmen, man-handled everything in sight and emerged victorious in a story-book finish.

PEP CHATTER

Last night at the Homecoming pep meeting, Charles Hunt, an old-time Maryville star from the days when footballs were really made of pigskin, hinted of a situation which he feels exists on the Hill today. He said that every year students give Homecoming a smaller valuation and that something should be done about it. As one way in which we can get into the old-fashioned swing of things, a stiff fine should be levied against any person who does not care to have the fun of accompanying the band in a snake dance through downtown Maryville this afternoon.

Orange And Garnet Tackle Emory-Henry Before Homecoming Crowd This Evening

The Emory and Henry Wasps of Emory, Va., will furnish the opposition tonight for Maryville's annual homecoming game on Wilson field at 8:00. Inspired by the hundreds of ex-students who will be in the stands, the Scotties are expected to put up a hard fight. They will be slightly favored, despite their defeat at the hands of East Tennessee Teachers last week.

This will be the first Wasp-Scottie gridiron clash in several years; therefore the Emory and Henry squad is somewhat an unknown quantity. Though they have not met with a great deal of success this year, the Wasps boast a speedy backfield, built around triple-threater "Bear" Atkins. Wasp mentor, "Pidney" Porterfield, has developed a dangerous passing attack, with Atkins and little Nick Fachilla, reserve backfielder, doing the throwing. Fachilla's most dependable receivers are Graybeal, the starting quarterback, and Holyfield, left end.

Paced by Atkins, the Wasps downed East Tennessee Teachers early in the season by the score of 19-14. Against King college, another foe common to both teams, Emory and Henry went down, 37-0.

Capt. J. D. Hughes will lead a somewhat crippled Highlander team onto the field. Taylor and Saffell are out with knee injuries, though they are greatly improved. Honaker's leg injury is much better.

Great things are expected of George Garner, the newly discovered backfield star. His splendid performance against Tennessee State has inspired hopes of better things to come. Of course, the ever-dependable Morton will be as strong as ever, as will Baird, another powerful backfielder.

In the line, Shelfer, Hooker, McCurry, Cloninger, and company are expected to charge hard and furiously all night. It is hoped that Tipton will be able to fill the gap which exists at left tackle when he is out of the game.

Returning alumni will hear the new public address system and view the new press box for the first time. The speakers were in perfect working order for last week's game, and will be tonight. Another great improvement has been attained by the introduction of a roped off cheering section for students, who are expected to show plenty of spirit for the homecoming fracas.

Probable starting lineups:

MARYVILLE	Pos.	E-H
Shelfer	LE	Holyfield
Tipton	LT	Manning
Murr	LG	Hagy
Hooker	C	Kovacs
Cloninger	RG	Brewer
McCurry	RT	Shafer
Cragan	RE	Early
Honaker	QB	Graybeal
Hughes	LH	Dixon
Morton	RH	Neal
Witt	FB	Edmundson

Touch Football

With the end of the touch football season drawing near, the Y Frosh turned back Alpha Sigma Wednesday afternoon in the hardest fought game of the season. Continuing to show improvement in form over last week the Y Frosh withstood the attack of Findlay's men for four quarters and two overtime periods before winning the game on yardage.

This game was a grudge game for Tuesday, Alpha Sig had tasted the Frosh power, but had won by the close score of 9-8. Trailing by a score of six to two Alpha Sig scored when Rowan took Findlay's pass over the goal. On this play, Swift did some remarkable blocking as he took out the Frosh backfield man before Rowan received Findlay's pass. Rallying in the closing minutes of play, the Frosh managed to come within one point of victory when Ellwell scored on a long pass thrown from mid-field.

Fighting to stay in the race, Athenian rolled over the Ministerials for a 19-0 victory. On the third play of the game, after two running plays around right end had netted nearly ten yards, Jim Hedges heaved a scoring pass to Stringer who was out on a sleeper. Receiving the ball at the hal, Athenian scored on the next play when Curtis Wright took Hedges' pass across the goal line. Hedges then intercepted a pass on his own thirteen and wasn't stopped until he scored. The extra point was good for the first time all day. By losing this game, Ministerials lost all chances of winning in their division and the best they can hope for is a two-way tie.

Clem Hahn's Powerhouse managed to snap a three-game losing streak when they turned bac kthe Bulldogs 7-0. Marnikey who had been off his style in the past three games regained some of his power and rang up the only tally of the game on a pass from Hahn. The Floogies forfeited their game to the Rebels.

Since yesterday's games were all rained out, the final week of play will be a busy one. In the independent division, the title practically rests with the Tigers unless they drop three straight while the Rebels win their last two games. In the society division, there is a possibility of a three-way race with Ministerial, Athenian and Alpha Sigma fighting all the way. The outcome of the season rests in these last few games.

Volley Ball

Volleyball teams are being formed by the intramural office to replace the touch football games. Any organization wishing to have a team entered will present a list of nine names to Coach Fischbach by November 12. Present plans are to have two leagues, as in football, with the same divisions. Further details will be posted at Bartlett hall Monday.

By November the thirteenth the horseshoe pits will be ready to accomodate an all-college horseshoe tournament. Boys wishing to enter are to sign the entry blanks at Carnegie or Bartlett.

Teachers Continue Jinx By Dumping Highlanders 6 To 0

Last Saturday night on the turf at Wilson field, the Maryville Scotties went down to defeat before a hard-driving, fighting bunch of athletes from East Tennessee State Teachers college by the score of 6-0. The Scotties seemed to tire during the final stages of the game and lacked the needed punch several times when they were within the visitor's 10 yard line and failed to carry the oval across the double stripe.

The Bucs have defeated the Scots and the jinx for the Highlanders increased. It has been six long, hard years since the Orange and Garnet has defeated the Blue and Yellow. Last year the team journeyed to Johnson City and again were defeated. Although Maryville was outclassed last year it was not so last Saturday. The teams appeared to be of equal power and strength as the game began; and throughout the first three quarters neither team scored a point. Then in the final quarter, the visitors started their pay-off march which finally resulted in the only score of the entire ball game when Hunt crashed across from the one-yard stripe.

As usual the Maryville spark plug on both defense and offense was powerful J. D. Hughes. Hughes ran the ball well, punted nicely, threw several beautiful passes, and made a great percentage of the tackles. Les Rock played his best game to date and he seems to be improving as the games go by. Tipton played his usual hard fighting, bruising type of game, while George Garner ripped off the long gains for the Scotties. Several times he broke through the Bucs' defense and tore for the sidelines, then raced unmolested for twenty, and thirty yards at a time.

When the game started it appeared that the fray would be hard fought, interesting, and close. It was all of this and the game was won on breaks taken advantage of by the visitors and the way in which they fought to the last minute.

The Scotties' pass defense slackened several times on passes down the middle and it was through a pass of this kind that the touchdown was set up. Smith faded for Teachers and let fly a pass which was completed to Carpenter for a gain of 30 yards to the Highlanders' 12. Hunt, playing fullback for the Teachers gathered in the ball and tore through the weakening Maryville line to the one. On the next play with Hunt again lugging the leather, ETST scored their only points throughout the game. The try for the extra point failed.

J. D. Hughes let fly with a pretty pass early in the game to Baby Baird and Baby made an equally good catch when he snatched it out of the ozone and practically out of a defensive man's hands. This pass covered 35 yards and it looked like the Scots were on their way to victory. However, after taking the ball within the 10 yard stripe on regular running plays, the Scots would always resort to a spread offensive and invariably lose territory and then lose the ball on downs. This happened several times during the game.

During the half a colorful exhibition was put on by both Maryville and East Tennessee Teachers. The Teachers brought with them their famed drill team and snappy band. They put on an exhibition of precision drilling, baton twirling and music that surpasses anything ever presented to the Maryville spectators. The Maryville band then

NYA Students Must Call At Student-Help Office Wednesday Or Thursday

The closing date for this NYA month is Tuesday, November 5, and time for the week of October 28 to November 2 should be turned in before 10:00 a.m. Monday, the Student-Help office announced today.

Time for Monday and Tuesday of next week must be turned in before 10:00 a.m. Wednesday, November 6, in order to be included on the payroll. This means that two time sheets will be needed for next week; one for Monday and Tuesday, to be turned in before 10:00 Wednesday morning, and another one for the rest of the week, beginning with Wednesday, to be turned in the following Monday morning.

Every person on NYA should call at the Student-Help office on either Wednesday or Thursday to sign his payroll card, in order that the payroll may be mailed promptly to the state office. Cooperation in this will help to make it possible for the checks to be received earlier.

explaining that Chattanooga was overconfident and that the result of the game was a distinct upset. "Here's the answer: a well coached, hard fighting, untied team backed by a loyal student body." It seems that the Pre-War generation meant business about their football.

Notices of Alpha Sig, Athenian, and the Y's serve to remind us that the Echo is not the only Maryville institution that has withstood the ravages of time.

Of course, most of the names in this first edition are now forgotten by most of those on the Hill. A few, however, are again spoken here—with the suffix "Jr."

Yes, the names are forgotten and the events have lost their appeal, but their memories live on in the dusty vault. These issues of the twenty-sixth volume will soon take their places in the neglected stack, but they hold their appeal—for a time anyway. Who can say that our children will not look upon them with the same curious, inquiring interest twenty-five years from now? Nevertheless, you must admit that the class of '15 started something.

appeared, rather noticeably lacking Scottie. It seems that Scottie took sick ant was unable to parade with the band. However, the band presented a colorful spectacle to the game.

Lloyd Taylor, Tom Saffell, and Sam Monger are definitely lost for the season it was disclosed this week. Lloyd's knee has been given treatment in Knoxville and it appears that he may need an operation before it returns to normal. Tom Saffell was injured again during practice when his bad knee slipped out again. All these three men are lost and the loss is a great one as all had been counted on to carry the brunt of the attack. Baby Baird has another boil which has swollen his left arm to nearly twice its size, but it he runs true to form he will play. Scot's ankle seems to have improved considerably, but it is still a sore and vulnerable point. Tom Cragan's fingers are still in splints and although improving rapidly they are still painful.

The Scotties made 11 first downs to the Teachers' 10, but still lacked the punch when it was needed.

Cowen And Seedorf To Appear In First Faculty Recital Friday

PIANO SOLOS GIVEN

Miss Seedorf Will Read "The Chinese Water Wheel", Play by Higgins

Next Friday night, November 22, at 8:00 in Voorhees chapel, Miss Genevieve Cowen, pianist, and Miss Evelyn Seedorf, reader, will appear together in the first faculty recital of the year.

Miss Cowen, who is a member of the music department faculty, came to Maryville this year from Iran, Texas, where she had taught music for the past three years in the State Experimental school. Miss Cowen received her Bachelor of Music degree from Drury college, Springfield, Missouri, and she has done graduate work in the Julliard School of Music.

Miss Seedorf, who came to the dramatics department this fall, is a graduate of Maryville college in the class of 1930. In that year she appeared in an expression recital during commencement week. Following her graduation from Maryville, Miss Seedorf took private and special lessons from teachers graduated from Northwestern University. In 1938 she completed work on her M.A. degree in speech, which she received from the University of Wisconsin. Before coming to Maryville this year, Miss Seedorf gave private lessons in interpretation in Madison, Wis.

Miss Cowen, at the piano, playing Bach's "Sinfonie" from Partita in C Minor and Beethoven's "Sonata", Opus 10, number 2, will appear first. "The Chinese Water Wheel" will be read by Miss Seedorf at her first appearance. "The Chinese Water Wheel" is a one-act play written by Edna Strachan Higgins.

Brahms' "Intermezzo" in B flat Major and Chopin's "Nocturne" in E Minor are Miss Cowen's second numbers; Miss Seedorf will appear again to read four of T. A. Daly's shorter works: "So Glad for Spring," "Da Leetla Bov", "Da 'Mericana Girl", and "Da Blue Devil."

Miss Cowen's final numbers, which will conclude the recital, are "Reflets dans l'Eau" by Debussy and "Polichinelle" by Rachmaninoff.

Dance In Gym Tonight

Tonight's social activity for the student body is a square dance in the big gym at 8:00, directed by the "M" club. Chairs and ping-pong tables will be placed along the sides of the gym for this who prefer to watch or play ping-pong. The same orchestra that played last Saturday night in the gym will provide the music tonight.

Panamania Is Big Feature of Annual Barnwarming Event

Latin American Visitors To See Novelty Program

Panamania will greet and welcome all who attend the annual Barnwarming festival presented under the auspices of the YWCA, on Thanksgiving evening. It will be held in the Alumni gym from 8:15 to 10:00 p.m. on Thursday evening, November 28.

Plans for the affair are going ahead rapidly and all of the committees are going on with their work which was started a month and more ago. At this time there are over 120 people working on committees or participating in other ways on the program.

The formal program is under the direction of Elizabeth Moore, senior from Maine, who has many original and clever ideas concerning this part of the Panamanian festival. On the floor will appear many of Panamania's well-known artists of world-wide fame. Panamanian songs, dances, and various acts will be among the many things to be viewed with interest by the visitors to Panamania. It is rumored—and this rumor is officially confirmed—that the faculty of the Panamanian Institute (Maryville college to those who have difficulty translating) will participate in the program. In what capacity will be seen when you join the other tourists who come each year in great numbers to Panamania.

An additional attraction on this program will be the coronation ceremony. It is the custom in Panamania to have a new king and queen each year, these to be elected by the entire population of Panamania. The nominations are made from among the senior class of the Panamanian Institute, since these students are felt to be the ones most fitted by brains and beauty to reign over the yearly festival of Panamania.

Attendants on the king and queen will be the four class sponsors who have already been selected for the 1941 Chilhowean by their respective classes. These sponsors, whose names heretofore have been kept secret until the spring of the year when the annual comes out, are to have formal recognition by their presence here at the Barnwarming for the first time in their official capacities. The Barnwarming committee secured this privilege of announcing the sponsors through the courtesy and cooperation of the Chilhowean editor and staff.

Willie Williams, in charge of the decorations, with several committees under her direction, is going ahead with plans for the decoration of the Panamanian festival. This is a job requiring the assistance of many workmen, but those acquainted with Panamania realize the significance of this festival and many are volunteering for service.

Phyllis Johns is chairman of the committee on booths. There will be five of these booths which will be taken over in the usual Panamanian manner by artists in their various styles. The types of booths will be disclosed at a later date, and one in charge of the freshman class, will be a most surprising.

Publicity and tickets are being taken care of by Beth Pascoe who will have tickets on sale by Thursday, November 22. A bit later there will be posters and notices in conspicuous places, and Panamania will be put on the map. The price of the tickets is 15 cents and this will include not only the price of admission, but a 5 cent order of refreshments as well.

IRC Presents Round Table Discussion On U.S.-European Mess

A round-table discussion will be sponsored by the International Relations club in Bartlett auditorium next Monday night at 6:45. The relationship between the United States and Europe during the coming winter will be the subject for discussion.

Dr. Hunter, Dr. Queener, Dr. Case, Professor Wendt, and Mr. Pieper will be the faculty members taking part in this meeting. Hilton Wick, president of IRC, will lead the discussion.

"Our Relationship With Europe During the Coming Winter" is considered by the executives of IRC to be a timely topic for discussion at this particular time because our attitude toward the European war and our attitude toward the different participants will have a decided effect on the outcome of the war. And since many people think the tide will turn in favor of Great Britain this winter if she gets adequate assistance from the United States, the limit of our aid to Britain will, to a great degree, determine the outcome of the war.

Freshman Grades Will Be Released Next Week

Dr. Frank D. McClelland announced this week that the freshman grades would be ready for distribution some time early next week. As usual the students will report to the Personnel office on certain days, depending upon the first letter of their last name. Definite arrangements about this will be announced in chapel Tuesday morning.

This year the Personnel office is inaugurating a new system of compiling the reports which should speed up the process of recording grades. At the same time the student receives his card he will be told the results of the various tests taken at the first of the year. These include the reading test, the English placement test, and the scholastic aptitude test.

300 Entertained At Pearsons' Open House Last Night

Judges Select Honor Rooms on Each Floor

Faculty members and men of the college were entertained last night at the formal open house, held at Pearson's hall between 8:15 and 10:00. Approximately three hundred guests were guided through the three floors, where honor rooms were given special attention. This is the first time in three years that Pearsons hall has been formally opened for inspection.

On each floor two rooms were selected as honor rooms, the basis of selection was attractiveness. Judges on the committee for making the selections were Miss Purinton, Miss Hutchinson, and Miss Johnson. They chose on the second floor the rooms of—— on the second floor the rooms of Lily Pinneo and Edna Manroae; Elizabeth Prater and Inez Johnson. Third floor, Madge Evans and Lois Ann Alexander; Alma Millsaps and Evelyn Ogle. On the Fourth floor, Bunny Tontz and Phyllis Johns; Savannah Sneed and Mary Lewis.

The guests were met in the lobby of Pearsons by four girls, who were in charge of registration. These girls were Jeanne Stringham, Ruth Lane, Bunny Tontz, and Ila Goad. Each floor was under the supervision of four girls from that floor; these hostesses were, on second floor, Jean White, Margaret Peters, Christine Fritz, and Rachel McCall; on third floor, Helen Pratt, Geneva Patterson, Margaret Proffitt, and Alma Millsaps; on fourth floor, Phyllis Johns, Johnnie Sue Long, Irma Criswell, and Miriam Nethery. Also, on each floor were several guides who conducted the guests.

Refreshments were served in Bainonian hall just before the guests departed. Hostesses in charge of refreshments were Mary Felknor, Roberta Hope, Helen Cones, Troye Moore, Margaret Fain, and Mary Mildred Hatcher.

The committee in charge of open house was headed by Rachel McCall, vice-president of Pearsons hall. Other committee heads were Mary Mildred Hatcher, refreshments; Virginia Wheeler, decoration; and Mary Darden, invitation.

Law Club To Have Moot Trial For November 30

On November 30 the Blount County criminal court will hold its first session of the year in the county court room in Voorhees chapel. A murder charge will be tried at that time. The principal attorneys for the defense and the prosecution will be announced on November 21 at the Law club meeting.

For this trial the lie detector, property of Maryville college, will be borrowed to obtain evidence.

Dr. Magill Addresses Students In Chapel

Fred Hope Fund Started; $424 Already Pledged

Dr. Charles N. Magill, Presbyterian missionary to the Philippine Islands, opened the annual Fred Hope drive with a chapel address on the languages of the islands.

Pledges amounting to $423.70 were received by the Student-Help office Wednesday morning following the address. This amount, plus any more which is donated, will be sent to help in the mission work in Elat, West Africa.

Dr. Magill, Presbyterian missionary, spoke to the students Wednesday morning about his experiences in the Philippines as a translator of the Tagalog language. The Tagalog language is one of the forty-two languages spoken in the islands. It is spoken in the listrict around Manila.

Dr. Magill and a native of the Philippines worked together for over two years translating the entire Bible into the Tagalog language.

The speaker was graduated from Maryville college in 1899. In 1915, in recognition of his work in the Philippines, he received the honorary D.D. degree from Maryville college.

Following his talk, the pledge cards were distributed to the students. These cards indicated that an amount of $423.70 had been pledged. Although this year's pledge so far is smaller than the $450 collected last year, other pledges are expected from the Student-Help office and pledges will be accepted any time during the coming year.

Fred Hope, a graduate of Maryville college in 1906, is the first of some hundred and fifty Maryville graduates who have gone to foreign mission fields.

This is the 26th year that the college has made an annual solicitation for funds to aid in the support of the Frank James Industrial school which is under the direction of Mr. Hope.

The college hopes that additional pledges will be made to increase the amount of this year's pledge beyond that of last year's.

Crothers at Vespers

Dr. William A. Crothers, former pastor of the New Providence Presbyterian church, will be the speaker at vespers Sunday evening. His subject will be "Totalitarian Christianity." Dr. Crothers is known to many Maryville students, having taught classes in Bible at the college. Special music will be sung by the choir.

Workshop To Meet

The members of the Writers' Workshop will hold their next meeting at 4:00 Monday, November 18. Bette Umbach will present a sketch, and Sam Cornelius will read poetry.

Spirited British Write Letters On War From Air Raid Shelters

By JOHN ROSS

Excerpts from letters sent from the British Isles to Maryville students show something of personal lives in a war-torn land and the spirit which we hope will carry the British to victory. The letter to Ted Kidder is from a friend and former schoolmate in Chefoo, China who is now working in London. His letter, dated Sept. 6, was written during an air raid.

"We are getting quite used to them (air raids) now. We have had five already today and it is ten o'clock now. This one will probably last all night. They are more of a nuisance raid than anything else, as they don't do much damage, except keep you up all night.

"Ah Lee was killed in action on August 15. He was attached to a fighter squadron and he and another chap were patrolling and they sighted seven Messerschmitts, chased them and shot down several, both of them were shot down. The other chap landed all right but Ah Lee's parachute was machine gunned and so of course didn't function. He would have been safe otherwise. They said that he was a good pilot. He was a pilot officer and was going to be promoted to Flight Lieutenant this month which is very good. The funeral was held at a beautiful church beside the sea, just like Chefoo.

From a letter sealed with the stamp "Opened by Examiner 5564" and addressed to Margaret McKirdy by a relative in London come these quotations:

"At Peggy's hospital a bomb was dropped through one of the wards, no one was injured. Peggy had quite an experience the day she arrived back from her holidays, she was going to the hospital, and didn't know there was a raid on, a bomb dropped on the other side of the street, the glass was flying all round about, she threw herself down on the ground, after a while, a lady took her into her house, she stayed there about two hours.

"Our bombers have done a lot of damage in Germany, but our ones aim at military targets. All Germany's indiscriminate bombing of civilians, and houses won't win them the war.

"It's just over four weeks since the indiscriminate bombing of London began. We used to go to bed and no bother about the raids but after we had a bomb drop about twenty yards away we thought it was time we retired to the cellar, where we now sleep. I hope that is the nearest we will have one. We thought it was coming straight for us. It sounded like three or four express trains roaring over the house top and shaking it until we thought it would collapse on top of us, followed

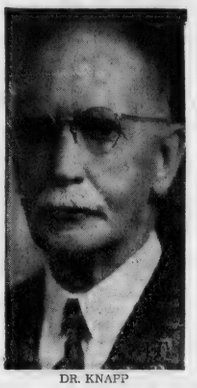
Delegates Of Intercollegiate Christian Council Meet Sunday

REPLACES Y SERVICES

Five Colleges Will Be Represented At Meeting In Bartlett Auditorium

Taking the place of the regular Sunday afternoon YM and YW meetings tomorrow is a meeting of the Intercollegiate Christian Council at 2:45 in Bartlett hall auditorium.



The Intercollegiate Christian Council, organized four years ago, is a group open to membership of all the colleges in East Tennessee and has as its purpose the promotion of fellowship and understanding between the negro and white races of this area. Collegiate members of the organization are Swift Memorial, Morristown, and Knoxville colleges, Maryville, and the University of Chattanooga. The University of Tennessee also sends representatives.

Tomorrow's meeting will present either student speakers or musical selections from each of the member colleges. Following an introduction and welcome by Mary Orr, president of the Maryville YW, will be musical numbers from Swift, student speakers from Knoxville and Morristown colleges, respectively, and a trumpet solo by Robert Hunter, freshman at Maryville. Short talks by University of Tennessee and Swift Memorial speakers follow, after which a quartet from Knoxville college will sing. Lois Ann Alexander, representing Maryville, will be the last speaker. At the conclusion of the meeting an informal tea will be held in the Y rooms.

Programs for the rest of the year center around discussions of student projects, student government problems, and extracurricular activities. Meetings are held every three weeks, the member colleges taking their turns in acting as host. Any Maryville student interested in attending these meetings away from Maryville may do so by making arrangements with either Mary Orr or Phil Evaul, presidents of the YW and YM at Maryville.

At the first meeting of the Council this year, held October 13 at Knoxville college, Mr. Herbert King, national head of the Council, suggested means for the reorganization of the group for 1940-41. Also at this meeting officers were elected for the current year. Recently the Council has received word from the Norfolk News, a magazine published in Norfolk, that an article concerning the East Tennessee chapter of the organization, written by Bill Mooney, senior at Maryville last year, at which time he was president of the Council, will appear in one of the November issues. Mr. Mooney was appointed by the group to write this article.

Math Professor Dies

DR. KNAPP

Dr. George Alan Knapp, one of the six greatest American mathematicians and professor at Maryville college for twenty-four years, died at his home in Maryville, November 3. A memorial service for him was held in Voorhees chapel on Nov. 5. The full text of President R. W. Lloyd's address, delivered on this occasion, is printed on page 4.

Station Wagon Has Accident

Returning from the West Emery mission near Concord, last Sunday evening, the Ministerial association station wagon met with a slight mishap. There were only two occupants, Rev. George Brown and David Humphries, who was driving. About eight miles from Maryville on the Topside road, the station wagon hit a rise in the road and then a soft shoulder. On a normal road this would not have been dangerous, but the road was slippery and the bus careened off the road, turned over three times, and stopped sixty feet off the road.

Fortunately neither Rev. Brown nor Humphries was injured. Throughout the incident Rev. Brown was courageous and at ease. However, he was troubled because the accident delayed their arrival back on the hill.

Lloyd And Henry Tour In Interest of "Forward Fund"

Miss Clemmie Henry left October 20 for New England to speak in the interest of the "New Forward Fund." She went by train to Newark, N.J., and New York City before meeting Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd in Connecticut. Both Miss Henry and Dr. Lloyd will speak throughout New England to DAR chapters and church organizations and will make individual contacts.

"Making friends for Maryville college" is their general topic, and moving pictures of campus life, football practice, and students working will be shown in connection with the tour. The movies are new, having been finished since Miss Henry left.

The "New Forward Fund" is a part of an extensive campaign sponsored by the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education. Its goal is $10,000,000 for work among the fifty Presbyterian colleges and fifty Westminster Foundations throughout the United States.

"The trip is not to make pleas for financial aid nor to interest new students, but merely to relate the work of the college and make it better known," a spokesman for the president's office said today.

Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd and Miss Henry will have their headquarters at Hartford, Conn. Their stay is indefinite but they will be back before the Christmas holidays.

Basketball Featured By Point System This Month

Basketball will be played all this month under point system. At the end of the month the class teams will have a tournament. Ruth Wynn, who is in charge, says that any girl interested can come out for basketball even though she isn't interested in point system.

Water Carnival Date Set For December 7

Marine Music by Local Orchestra is Featured

On the evening of December 7 at 7:00 the eighth annual water extravaganza will be presented in the Bartlett pool. Aided by many campus beauties, the varsity swimming team has prepared for the audience an aquatic carnival with all the trimmings.

At the end of the pool will be a stage from which will emanate appropriate marine music played by an orchestra. To the sonorous rhythm of this orchestra the program of fancy diving, clowns, intricate formations, and novelty swimming will be unfolded. Also there will be a tug-of-war and a fast game of water polo. And as a fitting close, a moon dance will be presented.

It is through this annual swimming presentation that the college swimming team is able to secure part of its finances. The price of admission is 20c. Dudley Moore and Allan Moore are in charge of the ticket sales.

Profs. Queener, Pieper Attended Convention

Dr. V. M. Queener and Prof. A. F. Pieper attended the meeting of the Historical Association held November 7-9 in Charleston, South Carolina.

The meeting of the Historical Association, which is made up of teachers of the south, included in its program a discussion of the "Civil War Period" and visits to the historical points in the vicinity of Charleston.

AND YET AGAIN!

This week America alone celebrated the Armistice which ended the first World War, while conflict for the second time in a generation raged among the peoples of the earth.

Twenty-two years ago the forces of authoritarian government were defeated and the democratic way of life was saved. The battles were won, but the democracies who won them failed to consolidate their victory. Instead of joining hands to police the world against future international brigands, Great Britain, France, and the United States reverted to selfish considerations which were colored by unjustified idealism. They did not take the far-sighted action that might have prevented the tragic collapse of international honor which brought their dream of peace to an end.

The failure to check Japanese aggression in Manchuria left the way open for the subsequent Italian grab in Ethiopia and the German drive through Europe. The disposition to call a halt came only after the culprits were fully grown, and were prepared for resistance.

Peace will never accrue to the world as a result of a utopian age of good feeling in which no one has the will to fight. As long as a philosophy which places a premium on large scale robbery, exalts force as a weapon of state power, and lacks common respect for the individual is allowed to get control of a great share of the world's resources, war will remain a necessary evil. Only international cooperation backed by military power can compel potential aggressors to stay in their places. Totalitarian dictators understand no other language.

If democracy survives this present conflict, it is hoped that those nations that believe in self-government will unite for protection. America might well lead in such a movement, because it was largely our own policy of isolation which prevented early positive action against aggression. The next armistice may introduce an era of peace, not merely a short period of truce, if the democracies will replace short-sighted diplomacy with a genuine effort to maintain order in the world.

RESULTS COUNT

The importance of agricultural marketing cooperation, under suitable state laws, is vividly shown in a graph recently published by the Dairymen's League News, the house organ of the principal New York marketing co-op in the dairy field.

The graph covers four years. And it shows that during the periods when no marketing plan was in effect, prices went rapidly down. When such a plan has been in effect, as at present, prices have held to fair and profitable levels.

The marketing cooperatives have done an especially noteworthy job in framing agricultural legislation that is just, equitable and sound. That is often as important as their basic activity of selling what their members raise. Results count, and results are what the co-ops are getting.

If you're looking for progress, turn to private enterprise. The electric industry is a signal example of that truism.

—The Editor's Viewpoint—

CHAMBERLAIN IS AT PEACE

While bombs fell in the streets he had tried to shield, Sir Neville Chamberlain, England's apostle of "peace ein our time", died at his country estate last Sunday.

The character of the states with which the British peacemaker had to deal doomed his humanitarian policy to failure, but in his devotion to duty and to constructive statesmanship, Mr. Chamberlain was not a failure in any sense. The so-called appeasement policy was based on the belief that the totalitarian nations could be dealt with through the regular channels of diplomacy, and could be trusted to observe the common customs of international law. In this conviction the Chamberlain government was mistaken, and it is for this mistake that the appeasers have been blamed.

Sir Neville Chamberlain's policy did two things for England. It gave her time to prepare for conflict with the strongest military power in Europe and it vindicated her sincerity in trying to keep the peace. When the Munich agreement was concluded the allies were not ready for battle; and what they gained, even at the expense of Czechoslovakia, between the time of the agreement and the outbreak of hostilities, was indispensable to Great Britain. While many of us believe that war should have been declared at the first sign of German aggression, there can be no doubt that Britain wanted war only as a last resort. At the time Germany re-occupied the Rhineland there was little disposition on the part of the rest of the world to call for a showdown.

Sir Neville Chamberlain achieved a high place among English prime ministers, and while his government's policy failed to accomplish its end, his ideal of "peace in our time" is still not a lost cause. In fact it is the real goal of England's war effort today.

WILLKIE STILL LEADS GOP

Wendell Willkie's Monday evening address was indicative of his intention to remain the leader of the Republican party for the next four years, and to use his organizing ability in directing a vigorous opposition to the New Deal.

This will contribute to the strength of the minority party, and certainly members of both parties are in agreement that a "loyal opposition" is essential in a democracy. Since it is the evident intention of the Republican leaders to limit their activity to domestic issues, there is no danger that the defense program will be interfered with in any way. No emergency, at least none the country has yet experienced, is big enough to warrant the throttling of the two-party system.

Notable also was Willkie's statement that he regards coalition with the administration as impractical. No party wants to take responsibility for members who bear the party label but are in the service of the opposition. Officials in such positions can have little influence on the policies of the administration, and can only inflict injury on their own party's morale.

Scots and Soda

You people who came to our house party last night were probably astounded by the seemingly smooth way in which everything at Pearsons is run. Which all looks well enough, but which isn't really normal. The only ones who see the real machinery at Pearsons work—the everyday mopping-under-the-beds-life—are Mrs. Butcher's little boys and we girls of Pearsons hall. So just to disillusion you and prove that it's done with mirrors, here's how it's done.

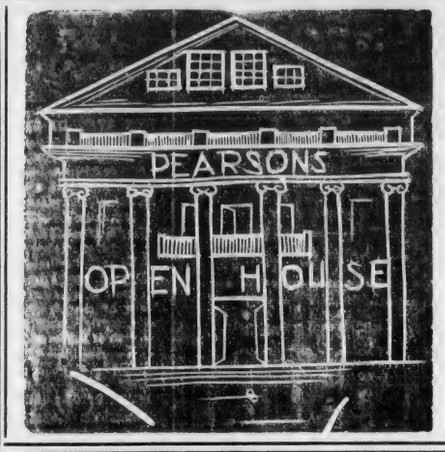
There's so much enthusiasm about Open House it took us three years to work up to it . . . The girls in at least five rooms were ready by Wednesday and had to live out in the hall until Friday . . . One reason we're so enthusiastic about Open House is that it takes us the rest of a normal college lifetime to replace all the appropriated property . .

We've got more "Men of Property" than Galsworthy—our property . . We've finally decided that Open House was designed for people like us—guess we never would have unpacked the steamer trunk; last year, with Open House, we got along with our packing so well—came spring and we were already packed to go.

This is as good a place as any to get in some propaganda about the inequality of the social system that allows half the dorm girls to renovate their rooms, while the other half gets the same results by just cleaning up . . . Rachel McCall deserves an orchid, or at least a gardenia, for mobilizing all our forces so well . . We liked the Helpful Hints for Hopen House (and we don't mean Hopin') daily tactfully tacked on the bulletin board . . It looked like it stretched a lot of people's resources to get their radios and tennis rackets out of hock—those aren't the only rackets around here . . We couldn't understand why so many people were climbing around on ladders to clean up the ceilings—nobody but Stan Menning and Frank Barr and George Piper could see up that far without a pair of binoculars anyway——We honestly tried to decorate our rooms—we hunted at least twenty minutes for that picture of Whistler's Mother to hang over the ink spots; the best we could do was a profile of Janet's father at the age of four years which wouldn't cover the ink spots so we hung him behind the closet door . . Last Open House they had in Baldwin, the girls almost went hog-wild trying to get things presentable; but in Pearsons most of the girls are so neat anyway, it didn't amount to half the upheaval it did before . .

The reason the girls in 425 didn't get first prize, or even Honorable Mention, was that they forgot all about it until after supper; they rushed up and were just making the beds when the judges went by . . The girls on Fourth floor were pretty hurt about the way the boys all rushed through to get down to the refreshments . . Inez Johnson and Ruth Sutherlin were tasty bits to meet the eye on Second floor; as were Alma Millsaps and Helen Pratt on Third; and Phyllis Johns and Betty McArthur on Fourth . . We all appreciated Mrs. Snyder's helping hand, and admired her characteristic charm during the party . . The girls decided that some people just never did know when to go home, and found that the most tactful way to hint that the party was over was to begin rolling up their hair and doing their exercises . . We've heard that it takes "a heap o' living in a hous eto make a home"; but after cleaning up after Open House, have decided that a lot o' living will make a home a heap . . We had fun, but it got awfully monotonous explaining to three hundred people—or was it three thousand?—who slept in the middle bed.

Local Advsry. Board Named for Draftees



Three local lawyers, Joe Gamble, John Morton, and Frank Drinnen have been appointed as an advisory group to which men may go for advice when they receive their questionnaire concerning the selective service draft. These three men are to furnish free legal advice concerning the filling out of the questionnaire and the exemption blank.

Will A. McTeer, a member of the local draft board, will pass on the qualifications for exemption.

Although most Maryville students had their registration papers referred to their home board, they may go to this group of lawyers for advice in filling out the questionnaire and the exemption blank.

Several college students have already received their questionnaires.

Father to Son

A college boy accustomed to writing long letters to his dad requesting one thing after the other is finally informed by said parent that business does not permit him time to read long-drawn missives. The next letter received by the father ran something like this—

Dear Dad,

ECHO SPORTS

THE HIGHLAND ECHO NOVEMBER 16, 1940

JUNIOR "TOUCHDOWN ENGINEER"

Under the newly-installed "Neyland" system of football, the Tusculum Pioneers have invaded the Hill seeking to register their second collegiate pigskin victory in the last five seasons and the first win over the Scotties since anyone and his kid brother can remember. Coach Laird Holt, a former Tennessee leather-lugger, probably will spring against the Honaker-lads all the tricks he ever learned at Shields-Watkins.

THOMAS IN THE BOX?

It seems very likely that Coach Honaker will send both of his assistants to the spy-cabin this afternoon. Al Thomas, a U-T line great for the last four years, should prove to be invaluable in nipping the Volunteer strategy in the bud. With two coaches directing traffic from the press booth, Maryville should outshine the much-publicized signal calling antics of Coach Snavely's in the recent Cornell-Ohio State feud.

★——★——★——★

OUT OF THE NIGHT

The game this afternoon marks the Highlanders' first appearance of the season under the illumination of old King Sol. To show that they are even better minus the arcs-of-Edison, those senior stalwarts, Captain J. D. Hughes, Co-captain Scot Honaker, George Morton, Baby Baird, Gene McCurry, and Ken Duncan, will be in there striving to play the best football of their Orange and Garnet careers.

DONALD DUCK VICTORY

Last year's game with the Pioneers gave the Scotties a tough break from which recovery was tardy on the rebound. Although the Highlanders slushed up a 28-0 victory as Baby Baird and Joe Etheredge paved the way, George Morton was injured so badly that he was lost for the remainder of the season. Non-lettermen on the trip to Greeneville were the only ones who benefited, for that made just one less letterman to execute the familiar "assume the angle" position.

★——★——★——★

PLUG FOR ALPHA SIG

At long last the much-abused touch team of Alpha Sig's came through with an 18-0 victory over the tough little Y Frosh team. On Tuesday afternoon the tilt supposedly ended with a 2-0 edge in favor of the Frosh, but a reversed decision called for a replay of the vital tussle. Now it looks like Alpha Sig has a toe-hold on the championship if they can outlast the scrappy Ministerials. Why do they look like winners over the high and mighty nonbeaten Tigers? Simply because of the fact that practically all of the stars on McGaha's outfit are prominent members of Alpha Sig, and who doesn't know that their loyalty really belongs to the parent organization.

INTRAMURAL PARADE

Coach George Fischbach and his smooth working managers are launched on a new series of intramural athletics. Already the sounds from the "horseshoe park" at the rear of Science make one recall the setting of the "village blacksmith shop." Many new teams and titles dot the volleyball roster for the coming campaign. If O. Roosey Van Cise and his "Lobbers", composed of varsity tennis stars, don't walk away with the trophy, we didn't tell you so.

★——★——★——★

LAW AND ORDER

Since many fellows have been complaining that they are unfamiliar with the official rules of the intramural athletic organization, Coach Fischbach requests that everyone should clip them from the Echo and save them for future reference.

OFFICIAL INTRAMURAL RULES

The following rules and regulations shall govern the eligibility of students who may participate in competitive intramural sports at Maryville College.

1. A student must be registered in the college to be eligible for intramural competition.

2. No student may participate in any sport unless he is pronounced physically fit as indicated on his physical examination card.

3. Lettermen are not eligible for intramural competition in the sport or its associate sport* in which they have won a letter.

Members of varsity squads are not eligible in the sport or its associate sport, represented by the squad they are on.

Students on varsity squads who drop or are dropped from the athletic squads are not eligible in the sport or its associate, represented by the squad they dropped from or were dropped from, except by permission from the Director of Intramural sports.

5. Students who have won varsity letters from any other college or university may not compete in the sports in which they have won letters except by permission of the Directors of Intramural sports.

6. No student may play on more than one team in the same sport. His first participation with an organization or team in a sport definitely limits him to membership on that particular team throughout the sport season. However, he may represent one organization in one sport and another in a different sport. An organization may enter teams in more than one sport in a season provided there is noduplication of personnel.

7. The playing of an ineligible man in a contest shall be considered valid grounds for a protest on that game.

8. Each organization or group shall file an eligibility list of all the members in the organization at the Intramural office before the start of the season in which they compete. Additions may be made to this list when necessary, but to enable such new entrants to participate the additions must be made 48 hours prior to the game in which they are to play.

*—Touch football is considered an associate sport of football and softball an associate sport of baseball. (Follows rule 16 on page 2.)

9. To be eligible to compete in the final series for the championship in any sport a player shall have appeared in the line-up in at least half of the games. A team winning a game by forfeit shall be allowed to count all players on its eligibility list as having participated in that game.

10. Any individual or team failing to be ready to play within ten minutes after the time scheduled shall forfeit to opponents at the discretion of the official in charge.

11. In championship series managers are allowed only until noon of the next regular school day following the contest for filing protests. In all league or flight games 48 hours are allowed. All protests must be in writing on the form provided and handed in at the Intramural office.

12. Any request for postponement of a scheduled game for any reason must be filed with the Intramural Director 24 hours before the contest is to take place. Postponements will be granted in cases of reasonable request if at all possible.

13. No group may organize for a special events only, such as swimming, track, etc.

14. In general, all intramural contests will be held in the afternoons after 3:00. Certain outstanding intramural events, finals, etc., may occasionally be held on Saturday evenings.

15. Points will be awarded for participation or achievement in intramural competition. Appropriate awards will be made to individuals and teams.

The records of each man in competition will be kept by the Intramural department and the man having the highest number of points and still maintaining a good scholastic average will be awarded an individual trophy. Other outstanding intramural athletes will be recognized.

16. The Intramural department reserves the right to put into immediate effect any new rulings regarding eligibility, etc., but before so doing, will notify every organization affected by such changes.

TYPES OF INTRAMURAL COMPETITION

I. All team sports are to be conducted in two separate divisions: 1) club and society and 2) indepedent. These two divisions are to have the same sport schedule. No indepedent may play on a club or society team of which he is not a member, but a club or society in the same sport.

1. Club and society teams include all clubs and societies recognized by the Dean of Curriculum.

Highlanders Oppose Tusculum Pioneers This Afternoon In Final Home Tussle

Maryville's Highlanders meet the Pioneers of Tusculum college this afternoon to complete their home schedule for this year. These schools, traditional rivals on the gridiron, always produce lots of action and excitement when they clash.

Last year, the Scotties trimmed the Pioneers by a 26-0 score. The game, played in a steady rain on the Pioneers' home field at Greeneville, Tenn., was typically rough and tumble. Maryville's attack was sparked by the long runs of Baby Baird and J. D. Hughes, both of whom will again tote the leather against Tusculum.

The Pioneers, out for revenge this year, boast a dangerous passing attack. Backs Heinz and Foxx have connected with their receivers many times in earlier games. Heinz, a triple threater, is an outstanding passer and has proved himself to be Coach Laird Holt's most dependable ball carrier. The team lost several of its earlier games this year because of the lack of scoring punch when deep in enemy territory. Recently, Constady, reserve fullback, has developed into a dangerous powerhouse plunger, and has done a great deal to remedy this deficiency.

Maryville rules a slight favorite in the closely matched contest. Tusculum was defeated 13-0 by East Tennessee Teachers, and bowed to Emory-Henry by the same score.

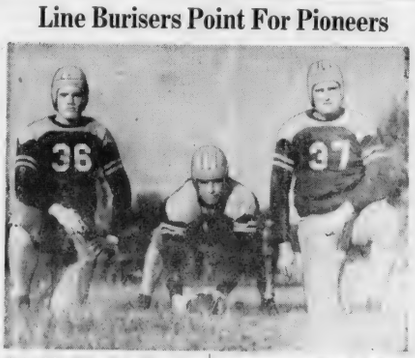
The Scotties will enter the game minus the services of Lloyd Taylor, who is out for the remainder of the season with a knee injury. In the backfield, Honaker, Hughes, Morton, Witt, and Baird will be depended on to do the ground gaining chores. On the line, Murr, Cloninger, Tipton, Hooker, McCurry, and company will bear the brunt of the Tusculum power attack. Garner and Saffell, recovering from bothersome injuries may see some service.

Maryville, not fazed in the last by its defeat last week at the hands of Tennessee Tech, is expected to play one of its best games. The Scotties are gunning for victory in this contest in order that their season record will go back into the swing of the win column. To date, they have won four games and lost an equal number.

The seniors on the Maryville squad —Gene McCurry, Scot Honaker, George Morton, J. D. Hughes, Ken Duncan, and Baby Baird—will be playing their last game on the familiar home turf of Wilson Field, and will be playing their hardest to make this last showing a good one.

Tennessee Polytech Scores 35-0 Victory Over Crippled Scots

On Friday afternoon the Maryville Scotties took the field against a favored and heavier team at Cookeville when they were defeated by TPI by the score of 35-0. The Scotties went into the fray with their first team line and backfield just about shot from injuries which were suffered in the Emory-Henry game the week before.



Baby Baird, Jimmy Witt, and Lloyd Taylor, three of the first team backs were so badly injured that they were unable to make the trip and thus the Honaker machine was short handed to start with. Then J. D. Hughes' shoulder was so painful that it was a grave question up to the last minute of whether or not he would be in shape to play, Scot's ankle was in bad shape and George Garner's shoulder was sore, as he had hurt it again the day before the game. Thus, the Scots were a bunged-up, bandaged crew who left the college Thursday to play this team.

Both teams had lost to the University of Chattanooga by almost the identical scores, but the team that Maryville faced on Friday was a far better one than the University that they faced on October 18th. The home team carried 33 members on their varsity squad and it was due to these reserves that they were able to overpower and outplay the Highlanders to such an extent.

The victors scored most of their touchdowns on sheer power, and on two intercepted passes which were converted into touchdowns. The team seemed able to tear around the ends on regular power plays and end-around plays and they shot through the line several times for long gains, before they were dragged down from behind. The Scottie offense was unable to function as usual with the injured men replaced by capable but inexperienced men. The Scotties, however, put up a good fight and although thoroughly beaten, never stopped fighting.

The entire game was played in Highlander territory, although several times the Scotties penetrated deep into the home team's territory only to see their thrusts fall short of a score. Spears played a good game in the backfield for the Highlanders, and in fact he is the only man in the backfield that came out of the battle without some sort of injury. Tipton played his usual bruising game until he received an injury and was removed for a substitute. Shelfer played the usual sixty minutes, the only player able to do so. This week the Highlanders are meeting Tusculum in a conference game and next week they tangle with their traditional rivals, the Carson-Newman Eagles.

Line Burisers Point For Pioneers

Lloyd Speaks At Memorial Service For Dr. G. A. Knapp

In Voorhees chapel, on November 5, was held a memorial service for George Alan Knapp, who died at his home in Maryville, November 3. Dr. Knapp, one of the half-dozen greatest American mathematicians, was a professor at Maryville college for twenty-four years. Three years ago he retired, and since then he has been living at his home in Maryville.

The principal speaker at the service was President R. W. Lloyd. The text of President Lloyd's address is printed below.

Acts 11:24. "For he was a good man, and full of the Holy Spirit and of faith."

In Acts 11:24 Luke describes one of the Bible's noblest men in these words: "For he was a good man, and full of the Holy Spirit and of faith." Luke is talking of Barnabas, the man who discovered the mighty Apostle Paul, believed in him in spite of his former record, put him in a place of leadership, and then gradually retired from prominence. But he did magnificent work in his own way. Everything said about Barnabas is affectionate, admiring, grateful. We hear of him converted to Christ, pilloring his large possessions and himself in Christian service, encouraging other Christians, bringing Paul into service, traveling as a missionary, and because of his impressive bearing being taken in one pagan city as the god Jupiter. So great were his intellectual qualities that he was later credited with the authorship of a famous epistle that carries his name and even of the Epistle to the Hebrews. St. Chrysostom later expressed what all felt when he spoke of his disposition as "sweetly reasonable, gentle, kindly, accessible." Luke must have been right when he said "Barnabas was a good man, and full of the Holy Spirit and of faith."

In all of this, do we not find ourselves thinking of Dr. Knapp? To say of one that he is a good man is a wonderful thing; the word is so common that we may fail to see its height and depth and strength and magnitude. And to be full of the Holy Spirit does not mean something sombre or mystical or pious; it means life in which God is present; to be full of faith is not something theological but something vital and courageous and forward looking. Barnabas was impressive, learned, active, kindly, religious, helpful. That's what Luke means.

I. Dr. Knapp was a good man from youth.

Born in Downsville, New York, 80 years ago, March 15, 1860, he grew up in a good home, and proceeded with a sound general education program. He graduated from the Walton Township school and from Hamilton college where he received the degrees of Bachelor of Arts and Master of Arts, and studied at Cornell. He not only became at Hamilton a member of Phi Beta Kappa, but attained great academic distinction. His classmates have told us that in college George Knapp had an average grade of 9.1. He won the Townsend mathematics prize in his junior year and the Kirkland prize for the best oration in Biblical sciences in his senior year. From youth he possessed the qualities of character and ability which have grown in him until now.

II. Dr. Knapp as a teacher for fifty-four years was a "good man and full of faith."

Four years were spent as a high school superintendent and teacher in New York state, two at Bridgewater high school and two at Franklin Academy and Collegiate Institute. Then fifty years of continuous teaching were invested in three colleges: two at Park college, Missouri, 1888-1890; twenty-four at Olivet college, Michigan, 1890-1914; twenty-four at Maryville college, 1914-1938. He came to Maryville the year I was a senior and immediately won the respect and solid popularity which he has retained until this hour.

He was a magnificent teacher. His field from the beginning was mathematics, physics, and astronomy. In these he was eminent. Once he was called one of the half-dozen greatest American mathematicians, even though his modesty and preference for work with students rather than with writing prevented his publishing the vast amount of material he gathered during the years.

But he could have taught in many fields—and in fact did so teach in and out of the classroom. He was at home in mathematics, physics, astronomy, botany, biology, government, baseball, business, literature, people. To be in his astronomy class was a rare experience of science and religion; to be among his companions on morning bird walks made for health and happiness as well as for acquaintance with birds. It was he who in 1922 took the lead in securing here the Tennessee Alpha Chapter of Pi Kappa Delta, national honorary forensic society; for a period during the regular coach's absence, he coached the debate teams; it was he who drew up the constitution of our scholarship honor society, Alpha Gamma Sigma.

In 1927, Maryville college, the institution that knew him best, gave to him, a teacher of mathematics, the degree of Doctor of Letters. Only now and then in the annals of teaching have there been men of such mastery and humility and influence.

III. Dr. Knapp as a friend was a "good man. and full of the Holy Spirit and of faith."

At Olivet college he was called "Daddy" Knapp. At Maryville college, within a few months, students affectionately gave him the very same name although, so far as we know, they had not heard of the custom at Olivet.

Through the years there have been none among faculty, students, or townsfolk, whom he has hurt. There have been none unfriendly. All have found in him a man of fidelity and generosity.

In his own household these qualities never wavered. There were four children, one of whom, Esther Marguerite, died in 1904 and is buried in Prattsburg, New York. Two daughters and a grandson survive him. They are Mrs. Paul [illegible] of Findley, Ohio, Mrs. A. S. [illegible] of Columbus, Ohio, and Tracy [illegible] of Louisville, Ky. There are two grandsons, George Knapp Barrett and Richard Barrett, and one granddaughter, Margaret Kiefer. Dr. Knapp's wife died December 5, 1899, and is buried in Prattsburg, New York, where his own body is now to be taken. After her death he gave himself courageously and unselfishly to the care of the children, then so young. And today they rise up to call him Blessed.

Recently an old student of his at Olivet visited Maryville and said what hundreds of others there and here have echoed: "All of us at Olivet held him in the most affectionate regard. It was my privilege in my freshman year to have Dr. Knapp train me for a declamation contest, and on other occasions

It is given to few men to touch so many lives so deeply."

Only a few years ago, Maryville alumni in California invited him so insistently that he went to California as their guest. They later wrote the college with great enthusiasm about his visit there.

These are but samples of the unusual place he has held. He has sought to avoid publicity and prominence and commendation. He asked to be relieved of teaching several years before his retirement, but the President, wishing to keep his unusual influence, would urge each time that he continue Once when being told how much he contributed, Dr. Knapp replied in his characteristic whisper, "I didn't come in here looking for taffy." But his modesty and lack of self-interest were elements in his strength. "For he was a good man, and full of the Holy Spirit and of faith."

IV. Dr. Knapp was a spiritual man.

Of course he was in the church, being a member and an Elder in the New Providence church. Of course he gave his influence as a loyal faculty member in a Christian college.

But he was more than that. He was a "good man" with convictions, moral standards, and unshakable purity and honor of conduct. He had opened his life to the spirit of God, and I have no doubt has for years treasured an inner companionship with God which seemed too sacred to mention. The nature and people and work he loved revealed God to him; the early sorrow of his life and his years of friendly services were sanctified by his religious faith. He did not speak promiscuously about religious matters, but always one could sense a deep spiritual control.

No other morning chapel leader ever made God seem so real to students and faculty. Who that has heard him stand here and pray can forget the benediction of his voice and appearance and words? Who that heard him read here from the fortieth chapter of Isaiah can forget his voice as he repeated the majestic words:

"Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? There is no searching of his understanding. He giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might he increaseth strength. Even the youths shall faint and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fall. But they that wait, upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint."

Yesterday, he, weary and faint, fell in sleep. But who will not say that today the Lord hath renewed his strength and that he shall mount up with wings.

"He was a good man, and full of the Holy Spirit and of faith." This college and thousands of men and women are better because George Alan Knapp lived and served.

"I am writing this in an air raid down the cellar, so you must excuse the writing. I haven't heard any bombs dropping yet but I can hear the planes and the A.A. batteries are letting them have it. I never thought that I should be able to sleep through the noise that goes on but after a week of practically no sleep at all I now sleep very peacefully. It's incredible to think that I haven't been to bed for nearly six weeks.

"I wish you could see us down in the cellar, it's really a comical sight. My sister and I in slacks, jumper coats and turbans round our heads, sleeping in deck chairs.

"I don't know how long this savage attack on civilians will continue but Hitler and Co. have made the biggest mistake yet if they think they will frighten us into submission by this means; it has the reverse I think. In fact everybody seems more confident and determined than ever. During the daytime raids everyone continues work in the usual way, unless it gets very bad. All the German propaganda about London in ruins is all lies, for considering the number of raids we've had, there is very little damage done."

From the first letter quoted, this ending:

"Well Ted pal, the all-clear is just sounding and it is 11:25 p.m. So the raid has lasted two and a half hours. Not too bad. I must get off to bed, else I won't be able to work tomorrow.

"I am looking on you for all your help and prayers. I will keep on to the best of my ability. You know us English, don't you?"

Athenian To Record This Week's Program Tonight

The Athenian society will hold its meeting tonight in the YWCA rooms instead of Athenian hall. The program will begin at 6:15 as usual. Miss Jessie K. Johnson, of the English department, will direct the main portion of the evening's activities, which will consist of the use of the recording machine to record an Athenian program. Several members of Athenian will take part in the program to be recorded, and later played.

Pi Gam Hears Armstrong

"How to Catch a Man in Six Easy Lessons" is the theme of the Pi Gamma programs Tuesday Miss Mary Armstrong gave the second of the series, entitled "You and Your Friends." She stressed charm and etiquette and then gave a personality test that rated the girls on their grooming, poise, and how well the boys like them.

After the program there was an informal tea, with Mary Proffitt and Helen Trotter in charge.

The third lesson in the series will be a talk by a beautician on the care of hair, skin, and nails.

VOLUME 26 MARYVILLE, TENN. NOVEMBER 23, 1940 NUMBER 10

Huddleston, Marshall, Andrews, And Cornelius Are Soloists In Eighth Presentation Of Messiah

All Soloists Have Had Previous Experience In College Productions

MESSIAH DATE DEC. 15

Messiah Is Handel's Best-Known Oratorio, Presented First in 1741

The soloists for Maryville's eighth annual production of Handel's Messiah have been announced by Prof. Ralph Colbert today. The soprano parts will be taken by Louise Marshall and Elizabeth Ann Huddleston, both of whom are outstanding students of the musical department. Miss Huddleston, of Maryville, elected as a member of Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities, had the feminine lead in the "Bohemian Girl" last year and also in the "Sorceror" given the preceding year. Louise Marshall, a music major from Knoxville, has taken an active part in the musical productions here, among other things being one of the accompanists for the opera last year. "Daughter of Zion" will be Miss Huddleston's solo in this case; Miss Marshall will sing "There were shepherds abiding in the field", "And the Angel said unto them", and "Suddenly there was with the angel."

Ruth Andrews of Harlan, Kentucky, will take the alto solos. Ruth, who was class sponsor last year and elected to Who's Who this fall, is also a music major. She will sing "He was despised", "Behold, a virgin shall conceive", and "O thou that tellest good tidings to Zion", and two duets, one with Louise Marshall and the other with Sam Cornelius.

Sam Cornelius, of Pittsburgh, Pa., who will be remembered for his spirited portrayal of Florenstein in "The Bohemian Girl", is taking the tenor solos. He will sing "Comfort ye my people", "Every valley shall be exalted", and his duet with Ruth Andrews. The bass solos will be taken by Lynn Birchfiel, of Maryville, who also had a leading role in the opera last year. He will sing "For, behold, darkness shall cover the earth", and "For unto us a child is born."

The program this year will consist for the most part of the first section of the entire production of the Messiah Several different solos and choruses will be sung, making this year's presentation a change from last year's.

The annual presentation of Handel's "Messiah" was first introduced here by J. Alvin Keen, a graduate of Westminster choir school, and Mary Frances Henry, former voice instructor of the college, in 1933, thus making the presentation the eighth consecutive one.

"The Messiah", Handel's most successful and best-known oratorio, was composed in 1741 in the short time of 23 days when the composer was 56 years of age. Contrary to his usual indifference to the words set to his compositions, Handel very carefully had his text chosen from the literal words of the Old and New Testaments, and arranged by Charles Jennes. The care with which the text was chosen and arranged is well justified by the beautiful musical settings which are in perfect harmony with the sentiment of the scriptures.

Last Year's Echo Editor Procures Literary Job

Climaxing several years of outstanding work and achievements in original writing, Ruth Abercrombie, last year's editor of the Highland Echo, has obtained an excellent position where she has to make use of her writing ability.

After her graduation from Maryville in June, Miss Abercrombie spent the summer taking a three months' secretarial course. Finishing the course, she prepared for a jaunt through New York City in the ranks of America's "job-hunters." Her tour ended abruptly and most pleasantly when she was offered the position as junior correspondent for Sears, Roebuck, and Company, nationwide mail order house. Her job consists of handling all complaint letters which come to the company at its New York City headquarters where she and her companions are paid to use their originality and writing ability.

Rees-Jones Charged With Murder at Law Club's Mock Trial

Court Will Convene In Chapel On Saturday

Trevor Rees-Jones will be tried for second degree murder in Blant County court, moot trial division of the Law club, which will convene for the trial in Voorhees chapel, Saturday night, November 30. Young Rees-Jones is to be tried for the murder of Miss Sussie Mae Glamourpuss. The murder took place in the biology laboratory at approximately 7:45 p.m., November 7.

Clyde Nash, freshman janitor, found the body of Miss Glamourpuss when he went in to clean the laboratory at about 9:30. Nash quickly summoned Sheriff Andrew Richards, who took charge of the body and started collecting evidence.

Rees-Jones is suspected of the crime because he was seen departing from the science building soon after dinner on the night of the murder. He was not at dinner. It is thought, by the Blant county authorities, Rees-Jones was interrupted by Miss Glamourpuss while he was in the act of taking equipment from the laboratory. Upon finding himself caught in the act, he became so angry that he immediately strangeled the unprotected Miss Glamourpuss before she had a chance to cry out.

Since Bill Henderson, biology laboratory assistant, the last person to leave the building, took his leave at 5:30, it is believed that the murder occurred some time between 5:30 and 9:30, the time at which the janitor found the body.

So far, Rees-Jones has refused to talk. He has employed three of Maryville's best known defense attorneys, George D. Webster, J. Edward Thomas, and Jack Kramer to defend him. James Witt, Roy Crawford, and Hilton Wick will be the attorneys for the prosecution.

Psychologist John Ross will be present at the trial with the lie detector from the psychology laboratory. Although the defense attorneys have been battling to keep this "mechanical witness" out of the trial, it is sure to be used in the cross-examining of the accused.

Sheriff Richards has permitted only Rees-Jones' attorneys and Miss Margaret Clippinger, close friend of the accused, to see him.

The body of the deceased now lies in state at the Ko-z Rest funeral home, where it is being held for further medical examination. The trial will be under the sponsorship of the Maryville college Social committee.

Two Student Recitals Planned For December

There will be no student recital Wednesday, November 27, because of the Thanksgiving holiday the following day. The next recital is scheduled for December 4, with one to follow December 11. Those taking part in the recital December 4 are as follows: Jessie Reed, Louise Marshall, Ruth Duggan, Ruth Wynn, David Kidder, Edwinna Coffee, Ann Biggs, Horace Justice, Irma Jones, Sam Cornelius, and Jeanne Heckman.

Dr. Brown To Speak On Chaucerian Literature

Dr. Carleton Brown, a noted authority on Chaucerian literature, will speak at the University of Tennessee on December 3 at 9:00 on the subject, "Chaucer After Six Centuries." Dr. Brown is a professor-emeritus of New York university and is internationally famous for his work in old and middle English literature. The meeting is open to the public free of charge.

Cotton Club Will Meet

The Cotton club, known as the Cracker club until recently when the state of Alabama was taken in, will hold its regular meeting Monday night in Athenian hall at 6:45. The main feature of the evening will be several readings by George Tibbetts.

Treasure Island To Be Theme of Water Carnival December 7

Natives and Buccaneers Frolic To Scintillating Rhythm of Marine Band

An island scene of massive rocks and tropical flora and fauna will greet all who attend the annual swimming carnival on the evening of December 7th.

The program opens with a thunderous report as a ship plows headlong into the rocks somewhere in the distance. The natives of the island rescue the shipwrecked men who turn out to be a band of buccaneers led by the corpulant Captain Kidd. These strange visitors are then feted by the natives who offer them a wealth of entertainment.

As an orchestra plays "Trade Winds", the natives and the pirates get acquainted. Then the native leader calls for some entertainment. Native girls frolic in the water to a background of rippling rhythm. Then the men of the island, not to be outdone, present a number of intricate formations.

The pirates squat on the warm sands and watch these antics. Then they challenge the natives to any form of sport. All agree on a banana race, and the natives return with many bananas. Next comes a tug-of-war. Finally there is a cocoanut polo race.

After this the native girls give a moon dance. However, they are interrupted by the sight of a ship, which is signalled by the pirates. Reluctantly the two groups give their farewells and part.

This is the essence of the program to be presented by the varsity swimming team, with the able assistance of many campus beauties. During the entire entertainment there will be marine music and sea chanties offered by an orchestra and a quartet.

Some lucky person will receive the contents of a chest which the natives discover while frolicking in the shallow waters of the sea. Also, there are other surprises in store for all who attend.

Proceeds from the tickets, which are twenty cents, will go to the swimming team. Dudley Moore and Allan Moore are in charge of the sale of tickets.

Dr. Case Will Speak At "Y" Thanksgiving Service

Dr. Ralph T. Case, professor of sociology, will be the speaker at the YWCA service tomorrow afternoon. In keeping with the prevailing spirit of the Thanksgiving season, Dr. Case will give a special talk on Thanksgiving.

Music in the form of a vocal solo will be furnished for the service by Charles Orr. He will be accompanied on the piano by Ruth Duggan.

The meeting will be held at 1:30 in the Y rooms.

Second Number Of 40-41 Artist Series On December Third

Pianist Battista And Cellist Eisenberg To Present Joint Recital

On Tuesday night, December 3, at 8:15, the Maryville college concert stage will present the second of the 1940-41 Artist Series when Maurice Eisenberg, eminent American cellist, and Joseph Battista, brilliant young American pianist, appear in joint recital.

Maurice Eisenberg, coming to America from Germany when he was not yet one year old, became naturalized as soon as he came of legal age. After moving from Scranton, Pennsylvania, to Troy, New York, Eisenberg began the study of the violin under Victor Smith, who at that time needed for his own local orchestra a cellist. This need was the decisive factor in making Eisenberg the outstanding cellist he is today, for at this time he switched from the violin to the cello. Moving to Baltimore, the young music lover won a scholarship to the famous Peabody Conservatory of Music. While living in Baltimore, Eisenberg played in a hotel orchestra which Stokowski heard one night. Stokowski was so much impressed with the fifteen-year-old boy's playing that he asked him to play his instrument in the Philadelphia orchestra. For two years Eisenberg played in Stokowski's orchestra and then he joined Dr. Walter Damrosch's New York symphony. Being encouraged by Pablo Casals, one of the greatest cellists of all time, Eisenberg decided to go abroad to study. He studied first at Leipzig and Berlin; then he went, for graduate study, to L'Ecole Normale de Musique in Paris, where Casals again heard him play. Casals was thrilled with the young student's performance and invited him to join him at his home and to study under him as his only artist-pupil.

Eisenberg's real career was launched in Paris in 1926 when he gave his first recital, which received tremendous ovations. Later, when Casals gave up his teaching activities at L'Ecole Normale, this position was given to Eisenberg, who was thus the only American citizen to hold an official position in

Miss Klingman To Speak To Student Volunteers

Elsie Klingman will speak to the Student Volunteers tomorrow night about her work in the mission school at Wooton, Kentucky.

Elsie graduated from Maryville college in 1940. During three of her four years at Maryville she was a member of the Student Volunteer cabinet, and has been especially interested in the work of the organization this year since one of its projects is in Kentucky.

Spirit Of Panamania Runs Rampant As Annual Barnwarmin' Approaches

By TREVOR REES—JONES

A sure 'nuff festival in Cristobal, Panama, can not exceed the "South American Way" program to be unfolded in the gymnasium next Thursday evening. Greeted by gayly costumed senors, you will find yourself intently gazing upon the spacious city square or plaza of a small Panama town deep in the tropics. The profusion of colors startles you. A sidewalk cafe attracts your attention. And in the distance can be seen one of the massive locks of the Canal.

But let's see what the evening holds in store for us. Phyllis Johns, chairman of the booth committee, has succeeded in collecting a varied and numerous group. She wouldn't go into detail about them, but she did give me a few hints. It seems that the freshmen will have a colossal booth at which kisses will be sold. But that's not all—not by a long shot. For the Isaac Waltons there will be a fishpond. And, if you want to try your luck or skill, well, Phyllis promises that you will not be disappointed.

And that's only the beginning. Only the beginning. Program committee chairman. Betty Moore, says that the performances will include frolics by the faculty, stunts by the students, etcetera. This is the faculty's chance to show off and don't think for a [illegible] that they can't.

the scintillating tropical rhythms which will be ejected from its hot instruments will rival Cugat in all his glory. Eight dancers, led by Kitty Bennett, will be followed by a trio of girls. And then the spotlight will focus on Carmen Archilla and Joseph d'Antonio as they whirl to the fast tempo of a Latin-American rhumba or conga or something. Anyway it'll be plenty smooth!

Tapp's Toppling Tumblers (not a glass breaking act) will also have their say-so in an intricate sort of a way. Their pyramids and non-siesta activities will be enough to make you sit up and take notice.

Presiding over the entire fiesta will be the King and Queen which you selected. And during the evening the four class sponsors will be announced and will then serve as attendants to the royalty.

As you wend your illuminated way home, you'll think over all you saw and agree with all, that "it was swell" But you won't know who has helped make your Thanksgiving Day both a siesta from classes and a fiesta. So let's go behind the scenes and uncover the brains of the evening's entertainment.

The idea originated with Charlotte Colby, a former student here, who is now residing in Panama. And so with this idea, Jean White was able to plan the entire show. After the show had

YWCA Will Present Barnwarming In Alumni Gymnasium On Nov. 28 With Panamanian Scene As Theme

Final Arrangements Are Nearing Completion As Committee Rushes Plans

YEAR'S SOCIAL CLIMAX

Student Body Elects King and Queen For Gala Presentation

This year as always, the YWCA is sponsoring the annual Barnwarming which is to be held Thanksgiving evening, November 28, at 8:15 in the Alumni gym. The main theme of Panamania will be the great street festival held each year in Panama; and the only difference between the two will be the uniqueness of the Panamanian festival.

The head committee met with Jean White, chairman of Barnwarming, this last week for what they hope will be the next to last meeting, to catch up on all odds and ends of business and to decide on the details of the refreshments, decorations, program and booths.

Wednesday morning after chapel, the senior class met for the purpose of nominating seniors of the Panamanian Institute for the positions of King and Queen of the annual Panamanian festival. The list of nominations are as follows: for Queen, Betty McArthur, Margaret Hodges, Lura Mae Laughmiller, Margaret Peters; for King, John Allen Kerr, Charlie Baldwin, Eugene McCurry, Robert Puncheon, and Carl Walton.

The persons selected as King and Queen by the entire school who voted yesterday will be attended by the class sponsors who have already been selected for the 1941 Chilhowean.

Publicity, under the direction of Beth Pascoe, has already started with notices in the papers, and posters being put up around on the campus and downtown. In addition, a record has been made by the leading citizens of Panamania. This record has been presented to the high school pupils, and will be heard by the college students the first of next week.

When something in the Panamanian scenery can't be taken care of in the orthodox manner, the committee always comes back to its eternal refrain —"Use chicken wire." However, when it comes to the program everything is running smoothly under the capable direction of Elizabeth Moore, head of the program committee, and this motto is not needed. There are many interesting numbers on the formal, as well as the informal program. Included among these will be the special Panamanian orchestra scheduled to arrive that evening from Panamania proper; Nan Wood featured at the drums; Tapp's Toppling Tumblers; specialty songs and dances; beautiful girls; T. D. and H. men; and last, but especially not least, the faculty featured in roles in which they have never been seen before—that is, in the Panamanian Institute at least.

All of these things have been planned, but there are still a few people not yet placed on the program. The committee is not quite sure where to put such individuals as Jim Humphries and Ricky Scapellati; and they're still looking for some one to fill Dizney's shoes and sombrero.

There will be five booths under the direction of Phyllis Johns, and these may well provide some delightful surprises. The freshmen are having a special booth, the contents of which are being kept a deep dark secret until the time for disclosure comes. In some of the other booths and wandering around in the streets of Panamania will be some very famous people, among whom will be Panamanian artists of world wide fame. Painters, musicians, fortune-tellers, and artists in the other fine arts of life and work will be featured. In addition to these extraordinary people, there will be a

Faculty Recital Is Given In Voorhees

At eight o'clock last night in Voorhees chapel two faculty members of the Fine Arts department of the college presented the first 1940-41 faculty recital. A large percentage of students and teachers attended the varied program which featured Miss Genevieve Cowen, instructor in piano, and Miss Evelyn Seedorf, instructor in dramatic art. This recital was the first public appearance of these two new instructors before the student body.

The program consisted of alternating piano selections of famous works of master composers by Miss Cowen and dramatic readings, including a charming one-act drama, presented by Miss Seedorf. The program proceeded in the following order:

I

"Sinfonie" Partita in C Minor—Bach
"Sonata" Op. 10, no. 2—Beethoven
Miss Cowen—piano

II

"The Chinese Water Wheel"—Edna Higgins
Miss Seedorf—one-act play

III

"Intermezzo" in B flat major—Brahms
"Nocturne" in E minor—Chopin
Miss Cowen

College Dairy Plant Under Construction

Work began on the new dairy plant at the college farm recently, and plans call for a seasonable completion of the construction, provided that certain of the materials not as yet on hand, arrive soon. Difficulty in obtaining some of the structural material has hindered progress on the project for the past week. When this arrives masons will be able to work on the building without interruption. The work done so far consists of digging the foundation and pouring the concrete for it. The principal building material to be employed is concrete block which has been on hand for some time. The dairy plant is being built only a few feet away from the milking barn and will be thirty-two feet long and sixteen feet wide and will have a height of seven feet. So far student-help labor has been used for most of the work, but it will be necessary to have professional craftsmen for the more technical work.

Other projects, currently under way, which have been progressing are the two new roads, that back of Thaw and that beside the swimming pool going to the new garage behind Bartlett. The road behind Thaw is still in the process of being graded while the other has been covered with crushed stone. The final grading in and around the garage is being done.

Twenty-Five Attend Knoxville Concerts

Twenty-five Maryville students will attend the concert given by Yehudi Menuhin at the Knoxville high school auditorium Monday night. The students will leave the bookstore at 7:00 and will go by special bus, under the supervision of Mr. Ralph Colbert, to Knoxville. They will return to the campus immediately after the concert.

Menuhin is playing in Knoxville on his way east to participate in a large benefit performance at Carnegie hall. The house is already sold out for this New York engagement.

This series of concerts includes, besides Menuhin, Dorothy Maynor and Jose Iturbi. It is sponsored by the Tuesday Morning Music club of Knoxville. The twenty-five students who have purchased season tickets will make trips similar to this one for each concert in the [illegible]ies.

"Thankful This Year" To Be Hunter's Topic at YM

Dr. Edwin Ray Hunter, head of the English department, will speak at the YMCA worship service tomorrow at 1:30. "Thankful This Year" will be his subject.

A recording of "The Lord's Prayer" as sung by John Charles Thomas will be used for the special musical number.

WHY A STUDENT COUNCIL?

Present in every community are institutions conspicuous for their inactivity, and the Maryville college community is no exception. Among campus organizations, the Student Council is outstanding for its lack of accomplishment and for its ability to present an almost blank record.

As far as research has revealed, the Council has not been successful in inaugurating a single progressive reform in all its seventeen years of history. According to a report in the Echo files for 1935, the senior class of that year attempted to abolish the council by refusing to elect representatives on the grounds that it had done nothing to justify its continuation. Defenders of the institution cited the acquisition of gravel walks somewhere on the campus as a major accomplishment, and were evidently at a loss for other examples of constructive activity. In comparison to results obtained in recent years, this period must have been the zenith of council achievement.

It is increasingly disappointing to those who suggest what they feel are needed improvements, improvements well within the limited powers authorized in the Student Council constitution, to find that their suggestions are not even given consideration by a body supposedly in touch with student opinion. Nothing could be more discouraging to creative thought on campus problems.

There is a real need for some means of student-faculty cooperation, but an organization with a record of failure as long as that held by the council does not fulfill the requirement. Purely honorary positions are adequately provided for by other organizations, so that it is superfluous to maintain it merely as one of their number.

It is possible that a show of more initiative on the part of the membership combined with comprehensive changes in the constitution might make the present system of student representation more useful. However, all past attempts at improvement, including last year's constitutional revision, have been notably unsuccessful. Certainly the council falls far short of its announced objective: "to furnish a representative body of students, who, by virtue of their position and influence in student affairs, shall be able to express the sentiment of the student body."

Our purpose in calling attention to the inadequacies of the Student Council as an institution is not to attack or discredit the individuals who are its members, except to point out that they are responsible to their constituents for keeping in touch with student opinion and for making the most of a not too powerful office. Only the student body as a collective whole has the duty of deciding whether or not the council is really useful. If the student body is satisfied with the results produced by the organization, then obviously it should be continued and supported. On the other hand, if the majority is unwilling to give it a mandate, there is no reason why it should not cease to exist as an empty symbol of student representation.

BARNWARMING COMMITTEE CONDUCTS FAIR ELECTION

The conduct of yesterday's Barnwarming election by means of unsigned printed ballots was encouraging to the advocates of democratic reform of campus electoral methods.

Signed ballots, long used at Maryville, are opposed to the theory and practice of free elections. No person can exercise his right of choice unreservedly if he knows that the candidates and their campaign managers will know exactly how he voted. Also there are unlimited opportunities for fraud and suspicion in an election system which provides the voter's signature as the only check on the number of ballots cast by each person. Under these conditions it is not uncommon for numerous ballots to be cast in the names of persons absent from the election. This particular method of "stuffing the box" by means of forgery flourishes when unofficial ballots are used. In yesterday's election this unethical practice was impossible, and was noticeably absent.

Necessarily designed for a single occasion, the method used by the Barnwarming committee is far from the general election system repeatedly advocated in these columns, but it is a step in the right direction. Since official action toward the adoption of such a comprehensive system seem unlikely to develop, it is hoped that others in charge of campus elections will follow the example of "Panamania's" officers in employing fair and honest electoral practices. Only a SECRET ballot is a FREE ballot.

STRIKES HOLD UP DEFENSE

Recent strikes declared in the aircraft and aluminum industries, both vital to the national defense program, seem to indicate that lack of cooperation in the direction of defense is coming from labor instead of from industry. The The industrialists of the country are in full accord with the effort to bolster our military machine to its full strength in the shortest possible time, and as yet there has been only a small amount of profiteering on prices.

The government took precautions against business by incorporating in the Selective Service Act the right to draft industries which refuse to furnish war materials at reasonable prices, but it made no provision for the same attitude on the part of labor.

We are not advocating forced labor, but obviously organized labor has the same obligation for cooperation in the interest of defense as have business leaders. Labor is well represented on the Defense Commission, but smooth words about the willingness of unionism to do its share toward defense is not enough. Action is what counts, and these two strikes in vital industries are certainly not shining examples of patriotism. Next to the army itself, a nation's labor supply is its most important military asset. American defensive plans for this hemisphere cannot succeed without the help of organized labor.

Scots and Soda

The campus took on all the aspects of Old Home Week, or a family reunion this past week; the place simply swarmed with patriotic people who were celebrating Brother Roosevelt's Thanksgiving. We, in case you hadn't heard, are waiting for Brother Cooper's and Miles Standish's holiday. Among the several thousand visitors, we were able to pick from the crowd Ruth Mack, Martha Dean Reed, Vaughn Lyons, Bill Mooney, and Paul Moon. And it certainly looked natural to see John Ross following VVViiiooollllaa TTTuuurrrneeerrr around.

Some system those clever little boys in Carnegie have worked out about moving the beds in one room, the desks in another, and lounging furniture in a third. Far-sighted, those lads—getting in training for the barracks.

For somewhere upwards of seven weeks now, all we've been hearing, living and sleeping has been "Barnwarming"—and we feel it our duty to let the public in on some of the treats it promises to give forth:... Sam Goldwyn himself would turn green with envy at sight of some of the gorgeous costumes to be used in this gigantic production... ...Seven of the cunningest little youngsters from town are going to help the class sponsors be attendants to the Barnwarming King and Queen... The world-famous dance team—Archilla and d'Antonia—will present a number that is not only authentic, but good... The freshman booth, under the direction of Sidney Duke, has all the earmarks of something especially good—they're keeping all plans secret; well, theoretically so... We have it on reliable sources that there will be an honest to goodness garden in one corner, complete with fountain, shrubbery, and bathing beauties. Ummmmm—sounds good to me... Willie Williams has made surprisingly colossal plans for such a little girl, in the line of decorations; even though it's fifty below that night, after five minutes in the midst of Willie's decorations, and you'll swear you're in Panama... After a week-end of exhaustible research, costumes for the sponsors have been secured. Start out with four such glamourous girls, fit them out in the right costumes, and you have a spectacle that alone would be worth the price of admission and three cents tax... And those lovely nosegays to be carried by the sponsors are being furnished by each class... We got in on an advanced hearing of a record made by seven major critics of Maryville college, on which they recorded for posterity on that deathless disk of wax—unless somebody drops it—their inspired commendation of this Barnwarming... And to quote one of the most prominent campus figures, Music Appreciation Expert Nancy Elizabeth Wood, "It's plenty smooth"... Now that the King and Queen have been selected, they,—well—they've been selected. Wish I could say something complimentary about them as individuals, but as yet even we haven't been informed of their identity... We might remind you that your 15c admission includes a nickels worth of refreshments; and if any of you capitalists want more, Dottie Jean, in charge of the Cafe, will be too glad to sell you some... The orchestra for the evening is really good—it knows more than three numbers with both hands, and one of them isn't Alexander's Ragtime Band... If the unified whole is as good as any of these glimpses, the YW will have spent its time well in the preparation of this year's Barnwarming.

The period of breathless cleanliness in the lives of Pearsons' girls has passed. By now things are beginning to get normal and comfortable again. Now when we push aside the debris and stumble into the room, we don't have to stop and wonder if we're in the right place.

Seems like Pearsons is getting into the stride of things modern with Student Government. Sounds like a good idea to us; and it does have unlimited possibilities.

If you were among the seven hundred and sixty-three people who didn't attend the Maryville-Carson-Newman game yesterday, you really missed a wonderful afternoon. Maryville college lived up, in every way, to its unsurpassable, enviable reputation.

good many ordinary people, tourists, who will attend the festival, some because of curiosity and some because of their remembrances of fun at former Panamanian festivals.

Decorations under the direction of Willy Williams have been planned to the last inch of wall space, not to mention floor space. A good deal of local color is being added by the work of Jane Carter and her committee who have charge of the painting of the Panamanian scenery which is to be extensive and is original.

Those on the committees for decorating will meet in the gym every free minute on Wednesday, and the head committee hopes to be through by Thursday noon, at least insofar as the main work of decorating is concerned.

Tickets for the Panmanian Festival will be on sale in the college post office, and in the YW and YM stores. The first of the week, at announced times they will be sold in the lobbies of Thaw and Pearsons halls. Buy your tickets, which cost only fifteen cents, early, and avoid the rush. The price of the ticket will include five cents worth of refreshments.

French Club Members To Give Series Of Plays

"La Surprise d'Isidore", a comedy directed by Betty Clevenger, will be presented at the French club meeting in Bartlett auditorium, 6:45, November 29. The characters are as follows:

Adolphe Picard, the doctor, Frank Barr; Suzanne, his wife, Margaret Clippinger; Isidore, a friend of the doctor, Bob Calvesbert; Mme. Duval, Suzanne's mother, Ann Biggs; Jeanne, a servant girl, Lura Mae Laughmiller. All parts are to be spoken in French. This is the first in a series of three plays to be presented. The club has been divided into three groups, each to present a play at subsequent meetings.

MINUTE RESUME

Now that the score of the Maryville-Carson-Newman tussle has been engraved in the last chapter of the pigskin ledger for 1940, we find that the Honaker eleven produced five victories in twice-five engagements. At that, a .500 percentage is quite a notable feat, insofar as the Highlanders, strictly amateur athletes, must oppose subsidized brutes from almost every opposing college. It seems like a long time ago since the Scotties opened the season with a thriller at the expense of Hiwassee. Out of the string of victories over Hiwassee, Cumberland, King, Emory-Henry, and Tusculum, we still say that the 7-0 verdict over King was the best brand of football played by the Orange and Garnet this season.

SMOKY ALL-CONFERENCE

It won't be long until that group of outstanding players will be chosen to represent the SMC all-conference team. Everyone agrees that such polls are sometimes inaccurate and prone to slight a man who most deserves to be selected. However, there seems to be no doubt that at least three of Maryville's top performers will dot this year's roster. In every game of the season the Scotties performed nobly, but the names of J. D. Hughes, Scot Honaker, and Cecil Tipton were always standouts in the thrill and spill department. The selection of Hughes, Honaker, and Tipton from Maryville, Tony Dagata and Bill Showalter of Milligan, and Biddle, Shubert, and Wiggington from Carson-Newman, can't be far from the inside track.

ECHO FROM BATON ROUGE

After the LSU-UT tilt several weeks ago, Coach Bernie Moore, head boss of the Bengals, said that the Vols had everything, including their share of the clipping and slugging which a championship team can get away with. If this logic comes close to the truth, there is no explanation for some of the brazen "haymakers" in yesterday's tilt with the Eagles. All of a sudden George Morton snagged a brilliant lateral from J. D. Hughes, only to be nailed from the side as he neared the sidelines nearest the grandstand. After the whistle had blown, Carson-Newman's halfback, Hutton Bible, swung a right hook which grazed Morton's temple and knocked his headgear half off. Even the home fans could see the violation, and everyone in the crowd seemed to rise instantly to hiss the man who couldn't hold himself in check.

NAUGHTY! NAUGHTY!

In last Saturday's game with Tusculum an incident occured which surely rates space in Francis Wallace's annual publication of the Pigskin Parade. George Garner was tackled on Tusculum's 20-yard line, but somehow the ball trickled out of his hands into the arms of Palmer, a Pioneer halfback. As he headed for the unprotected goal line, the back sprinted toward the sidelines nearest the Scottie bench. All of a sudden some sort of emotional stimulus broke loose in Ray Cloninger, a freshman guard, causing him to leap at the sprinting ball-carrier and drag him to earth in mid-field. Although Palmer didn't know what hit him, so hard did the blanketed Scottie tackle him, the officials gave the Pioneer halfback a touchdown for a never-finished 80-yard jaunt.

HARDWOOD CALL AGAIN

After the football men report for basketball practice next Monday, the squad will be taken over by Coach Honaker, and sessions will be three hours long daily until Christmas. Coach has issued the call for every candidate to report at 3:00 Monday afternoon, in the Alumni gym.

Highlanders Smash Pioneers 25 to 18 In Final Home Game

In as wild and wooly a scrap as Wilson Field has witnessed in many seasons, Maryville's Scotties downed the Tusculum Pioneers 25-18 last Saturday afternoon. The Highlanders, playing their last home game of the season, left the impression that they could have run up a larger score if it had proved necessary.

Taking the initiative right from the opening gun, Maryville scored two quick tallies in the first quarter. George Morton, running from a spread formation, drew first blood after about five minutes of action. A few plays later, Baby Baird scampered across on a beautiful 35 yard reverse.

Captain J. D. Hughes, who played a bang-up defensive game all afternoon, scored on an off-tackle smash in the third quarter. His conversion attempt was successful—the only point after touchdown of the game.

In the last stanza, Morton iced the game away for Maryville when he crossed the goal line after a 45 yard trek, featured by the excellent downfield blocking of other Scottie backs.

The Pioneers took advantage of a pass interception, a blocked kick, and a recovered fumble to score markers in the second, third, and last. Tusculum's fourth quarter touchdown added another "twelfth man" incident to football annals. Palmer, yards ahead of his nearest pursuer, was scampering down the sideline directly in front of the Highlander bench. Suddenly an excited Maryville substitute jumped onto the field and stopped the surprised Palmer in his tracks. Tusculum was nevertheless, awarded a touchdown by the referee.

Practically every man on the Maryville squad was used, and second and third stringers were on the field during most of the last half. Several frosh recruits gave good account of themselves. Honaker, who sparked Maryville's first touchdown drive, was removed from the game during the first half because of an ankle injury. However, his place was well filled by Baby Baird, who was outstanding throughout the entire fracas. George Morton was the most consistent Scottie ground gainer.

Everything that had been said about Tusculum's powerful passing attack was proved by the Pioneers, though Maryville's pass defense was greatly improved. Tusculum's huge receivers were down under several long aerials, but Scottie backs covered every pass receiver closely, thus minimizing the damage done.

The game was played in a biting wind, and was marred by many fumbles and missed laterals. The Maryville attack was hindered several times by this "butterfinger" epidemic, but on the whole the team was alert to cover its own and opponents' fumbles.

Bands of Alcoa, Maryville, and Everett high schools were present in uniform and added color and sound effects to the game. A sizeable band of rooters was down from Greeneville, seat of Tusculum college, and these fans helped to keep the Pioneers in a hard-fighting mood.

Mac McGaha's Tigers defeated Ministerial last Tuesday afternoon by a 20 to 0 score to win the school touch-tackle football championship. This victory gave the Tigers a perfect season, as throughout the regular course of the season they turned back their opponents in every contest. Ministerial, on the other hand, had a fair season, finishing in a two-way tie with Alpha Sigma, winning five and losing four throughout the regular season.

Drawing blood early in the first quarter when they scored on a pass from Sweeney to Slaten, to lead six to nothing, the Tigers continued their attack until by half time the score was 14-0. After withholding a Ministerial advance the Tigers again scored for the final time to lead 20-0. The final two touchdowns came as a result of two passes from Sweeney to Hodges.

Minsiterial, who made only two first downs during the game, was unable to stop the swift bullet passes of Sweeney nor could they roll over the Tiger line. Bob Witt, Ollie Williams and Dave Humphries were outstanding for the losers.

Throughout the season the Tigers scored 136 points while their opposition rolled up only eight. The Tiger team which had no definite star owes much to its line for the splendid success they have enjoyed. In the backfield Sweeney stands out as the passer and Steakley and McGaha did the majority of blocking. As an end Hodges was by far the best in the league as he scored eight touchdowns in as many games.

Heres how the Tigers did it:

VOLLEY BALL

Wednesday afternoon intramural volleyball began as the Tenniseers defeated the Mountaineers in three games by scores of 15-11, 8-15, 15-5. With the first game being a nip and tuck battle which finally ended in a Tenniseer victory, the Mountaineers rallied to defeat them in the second game by a fifteen to eight score. Bill Evans and Jimmy Faulkner led the attack for the winners in this game, but Charley Baldwin and Art Rowan put on a spurt in the final game and the Tenniseers walked off with honors. Charley Burgreen played a bang-up game of defense for the losers.

In the second game of the day the Mountaineers ran rampant over the All-Americans to win in straight sets, 15-7 and 15-1. The All-Americans faired worse in their meeting against the Mountaineers when after dropping the first game they couldn't put enough men on the floor to finish the sets.

Carson-Newman Records 27-13 Victory Over Orange-Garnet In Season Finale

Poor Start in First Quarter Gave Eagles Two Touchdown Lead Which Scots Could Not Erase

The Maryville college football team journeyed to Jefferson City yesterday afternoon to play the Carson-Newman Eagles and were soundly spanked by the home team by the score of 27-13. It marked the first time in four years that the Eagles have been able to win over the Scotties.

The game was lost in the first five minutes of play. After the first quarter was over, the game became more even and the two teams were fighting madly. The winners scored their first two touchdowns at the very beginning of the first quarter and were never headed after that.

The Scotties put up a game fight against their heavier opponents, but seemed to be outclassed from the very beginning. The home team scored first on a reverse that caught the Scotties flat-footed and the ball carrier romped over. The extra point was good after the kick was blocked, but recovered by a Carson-Newman man. The Eagles' reverses were continually catching the secondaryl off guard and they slipped over yards after yards on the Highlanders.

The Carson-Newman team kicked off and the breaks of the game shined on them as the ball was fumbled on the runback. This started the second sustained drive of the victors and they proceeded to move straight down the field. Then from out of nowhere, a lanky lad got in back of two of Maryville's men and gathered in a beautiful long pass for the second touchdown of the afternoon. The extra point sailed between the uprights for the 14th point of the afternoon. All this scoring took part in the first quarter.

The game was a tough one to lose and also tough due to the injury of Cecil Tipton, who had to be removed from the field. Tip played his usual hard fighting, blasting, charging game at tackle until he received an injury to his back and was unable to leave the field under his own power. He did not return to the game after his injury.

In the second quarter the home team scored their third touchdown of the afternoon and missed the extra point. The team was working smoothly and seemed to chalk up first downs at will against the Highlanders. A drive over the center of the line netted them their touchdown.

It was in this quarter that the Scotties' offense clicked and they started on their first long drive of the afternoon. Taylor snagged several beautiful passes out of the ozone for long gains. Taylor played a good brand of ball all afternoon and made many beautiful catches. Morton then took the pigskin on a reverse and tucked it under his arm and was off down the field for the first touchdown for the Highlanders. He really moved on this play and bowled over several tacklers who got in the way. J. D. Hughes then converted with a pretty boot. The half ended with the score being 20-7 in favor of the Eagles.

In the third quarter the Eagles scored again on another pass. They also converted this point to make the score 27-7. The passes that the Eagles used sparingly were well-executed. This was the last bit of scoring that was done by the victors in the afternoon's play. However, they threatened several times in the fourth quarter to run the score even higher.

In the fourth quarter the Highlanders began to move again and Taylor almost scored on a pass, but was unable to quite reach it. Spears then faded back and whipped a nice pass to Shelfer who gathered it in from the hands of a defensive man and fought his way across the double stripe for the second and last score by the Scotties. The try for the extra point was no good and so the score remained, Maryville 13—Carson-Newman 27.

Morton played one of the best games of his careere and time and time again, George would pick up needed yardage when called upon to tote the leather. He played a good ball game on the defense, too. Scot Honaker was unable to break into the lineup until the final minutes of the game due to an injury, but he did get into the game which is the last in his college career. J. D. Hughes ended his four years of college ball in a blaze of glory and it was J. D. who broke up many times the plays of the victors and himself picking up many yards on the offense. Duncan, also playing his last game as did Cragan and Baird, played good ball. Baby toted the rock for several long gains and while in there played his usual all-round game.

been planned it was Beth Pascoe's job to start talking Panamania. And she has conducted an admirable publicity campaign, too. Proof? You are going, aren't you? This campaign has been conducted by the use of placards and records. Numerous signs depicting the wonders of Panamania dot the Hill. The voices of campus critics have been recorded on deathless celluloid to commemmorate the triumph of Panamania.

If you want to see what Panama is really like, come to the Barnwarmin', says Willie Williams, in charge of decorations. With much assistance from many assistants, Willie has executed her plans to change the gym into a mass of scenery and color. Jane Carter and her cohorts are painting the huge canal side scene. Ruth Sutherlin is preparing the stage, and Bunny MacCartney, aided by Marjorie Resides, is directing the decorating of the booths. Bette Umbach is directing the installation of the lights and is planning the sound effects. And the properties owe thanks to Aline Campbell for their part in the production.

Ifan Woods is hunting high and low for new and different music to fit the occasion. And, for the benefit of those who do not know, she usually gets what she is after. Doris Murray has planned the local color; Marianne Coleman is in charge of the make-up department.

the French government. He held this position to the outbreak of the present war when he returned to America.

Not only is he a great cellist because of his superior technique and rich tones, but also he has an engaging personality and he is interested in other people and other activities than music.

On the concert stage Eisenberg will be accompanied at the piano for his single appearances by Harry Kaufman.

Joseph Battista, who will appear with Eisenberg, is a native American, having been born in South Philadelphia. Even at the age of five years, Battista showed great pianistic talent, and since childhood it has been his desire to be a concert pianist.

Upon finishing high school in Philadelphia, he entered the Settlement Music School in that city and later won a scholarship to the Philadelphia Conservatory of Music. After a year at this latter school, he won a fellowship in the Juilliard Graduate School of Music. His wide knowledge of piano music is equalled only by his knowledge of operatic literature.

During the 1937-38 concert season Joseph Battista illustrated a lecture on "Elektra" given by Madame Samaroff of the Philadelphia Conservatory. So well did he play for Madame Samaroff he was immediately engaged by her to illustrate her lecture for the following season.

In 1938 Battista won the Youth Contest of the Philadelphia Orchestra and in 1939, when he was twenty-one years old, he played the Rachmaninoff Concerto in C minor, and, owing to this superlative performance, he was swept almost overnight into the slim ranks of the best artists, a position which he has not since relinquished and which he shows promise, even now, of surpassing. There are four things, perhaps, which make of Battista a really great artist; his native talent, ability, boundless capacity for work, and the magnificent fingers of a born pianist.

Both Mr. Eisenberg and Mr. Battista will appear for the first number on December 3. At this appearance they will play Beethoven's "Sonata in A Major" (Opus 69), a duet for the violoncello and piano. Mr. Battista will then appear alone, playing four of Chopin's compositions: "Berceuse", "Etude" (Opus 10, number 8), "Nocturne", F sharp major, and "Scherzo", C sharp minor. Mr. Eisenberg's first single number is from the works of L. Boellmann, "Symphonic Variations". Mr. Battista varies his numbers on his return to the platform with "Feux d'Artifice" (fire works) from Debussy; "Polka", from the Golden Age Ballet by Shostakovich; "Prelude", G sharp minor, by Rachmaninoff; and "La Capanellla" (the chimes), a Paganini-Liszt composition. Mr. Eisenberg concludes the joint concert with Chopin's "Nocturne", "Tonadilla" by Blas de Laserna, "Intermezzo" by Granados, and "At the Fountain" by Davidoff.

Miss Mary Lake Hunter of Lewisburg, Tennessee and Miss Mary Miles of Kanazawa, Japan, are new matrons in Memorial and Baldwin halls respectively.

Miss Miles graduated from Maryville college in 1918 and has been in Japan since 1921. She taught in a girls' high school there. Miss Miles said that the campus is quite different than in 1918, the grounds are much better and the students are allowed more privileges.

Stageshop Presents Play In Bartlett Friday, 8:15

Friday night, December 6, another in the Stageshop series will be presented in Bartlett hall at 8:15. Three plays, "Gratitude", "Mary Jones", and "Evening Dress Indispensable", will be presented at this time, by students taking private lessons in dramatic art.

"Gratitude" is under the direction of Elizabeth Glover. The cast consists of June Morley, Alice Jones, Troye Moore, and Helen Airheart.

Marianne Coleman is the director of "Mary Jones." Frances John Hellums, John Hawkins, and Doris Murray make up the cast.

The last play, "Evening Dress Indispensable", is being directed by Virginia Berg. The following students will appear in the production: Rosemary MacCartney, Betty Clevenger, Melvin Johnson, Charles Foreman, and Ruth Wheeler.

German Club Announces Motto Has Been Chosen

"The one who lives in the past has no future" is the newly chosen motto of the German club, it was announced Thursday evening by the president, Arling Kressler. During the business meeting the minutes and treasurer's report were read in German. The club has decided that members should greet each other in German when they meet on the campus. A new band has also been organized.

The first meeting after the Christmas holidays will be a joint meeting with the Disc club. The program will consist entirely of Wagner's compositions.

Warren Culver was in charge of the program, which opened and closed with songs by the entire group. Eldon Seamans gave a brief talk on the life of the German composer Beethoven, and Dorothy Barber played the first movement of Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata."

YWCA and YMCA To Offer Thanksgiving Programs

Thanksgiving day will be observed by the YM and YW this year by a special worship service on Thursday morning at 8:30.

The Y's will have this combined worship meeting in Bartlett auditorium. The worship committees of the two organizations are in charge of the service.

Alfred Davies will lead the devotions, and several poems about Thanksgiving will be read by Marianne Coleman. Charles Orr will lead the hymn singing.

Student Council Meets

Monday night at 8:15 the regular meeting of the Student Council was held in Dr. Hunter's classroom. President Boydson Baird presided at the meeting. Since no meeting of the student-faculty committee has been held as yet, there was no report from this committee concerning the matters taken up at the last Council meeting.

The matter of lighting in the dormitories was discussed. It was decided that the 60 watts of electricity allotted each room is not adequate for studying. The Council recommended that the allottment be increased to 100 watts for each room.

Plans for the Carson-Newman game were also discussed.

VOLUME 26 MARYVILLE, TENN. NOVEMBER 30, 1940 NUMBER 11

Moot Court Opens With Trial of Trevor Rees-Jones At 8:00

Prominent Campus Barristers To Appear In Spectacular Case

Trevor Rees-Jones, sophomore at Maryville college is to be tried for second degree murder at the meeting of the Blant County court, moot trial division of the Law club, at 8:00 tonight. The victim of the crime was Miss Sussie Mae Glamourpuss of Broadway fame. Her body was found in the biology laboratory at 9:30 on the night of November 7. Dr. Zoe Inkstank, after examining the body, stated that the murder had been committed at approximately 7:45 p.m., that evening. The court will be called to order at 8:00 this evening in Voorhees chapel.

One of the most startling cases during its existence will come before the court tonight at the trial of Trevor Rees-Jones, one of the most popular members of the Maryville college student body, will be brought before the court to determine his part in the murder of Miss Sussie Glamourpuss.

Rees-Jones, who is suspected of having committed the murder, was seen leaving the science building soon after the evening meal. It has also been learned that he was not present at supper. The prosecution attorneys, James Witt, Roy Crawford, and Hilton Wick believe that Miss Glamourpuss found Rees-Jones in the midst of stealing a microscope. Recognizing the fact that her testimony would send him to prison, he strangled the beautiful campus idol.

Friends of Miss Glamourpuss were greatly shocked to learn of her death. All of them state that Rees-Jones and Miss Glamourpuss were on friendly terms with each other the day before. None of them remember seeing them together on November 7, previous to the crime.

Rees-Jones, probably under the direction of his attorneys, has refused to make any statement. His attorneys, George D. Webster and J. Edward Thomas, are recognized as two of the best criminal lawyers in this territory. As prosecution attorneys, James Witt, Roy Crawford, and Hilton Wick, will have charge of the case for the public.

Many of the most popular members of the student body and faculty are expected to be witnesses at the trial tonight in the chapel.

Dr. John Ross, eminent psychologist of Columbine University, will be present with his famous lie detector. Although the defense attorneys are working to keep this instrument out of the trial, its use is definitely insured in the cross-examining.

The chapel doors will be open to the public tonight and the court will convene at 7:30 p.m. The Social committee, which is sponsoring the program, will have charge of the seating arrangements.

Faculty Honors Lloyd's Tenth Year As President

Members of the Faculty club, the Board of Directors who live in this vicinity, and a few other invited guests will be present at a banquet Monday evening in honor of the tenth anniversary of the presidency of Dr. Ralph Waldo Lloyd of Maryville college.

At this dinner Dr. Lloyd will present a paper entitled "Ten Years at Maryville College." On June 5, 1930, Dr. Samuel Tyndale Wilson, who had been president of Maryville college for 29 years, announced his retirement to become effective the following September. On the same day Dr. Lloyd, who was then pastor of a church in Pittsburgh, was elected president. On September 28 he announced his acceptance and on November 29, 1930, arrived at the college, becoming the sixth president of Maryville college.

Although the Faculty club meets in the home economics department of the college, this special occasion will be celebrated in the banquet rooms of the S&W Cafeteria in Knoxville.

Lavender at YM At 1:30

Dr. B. B. Lavender of the Greystone Presyterian church, South Knoxville, will speak to the YMCA Sunday on the topic "Handicapped Lives." Please note that the time has been definitely changed to 1:30 p.m.

30 Piece Orchestra To Appear In The Messiah This Year

Miss Dorothy Horne Is Again Concert Master

When this year's production of the Messiah is given, it will mark the sixth consecutive year that an orchestra has been used with it. The orchestra was first used in the college presentation in 1935.

Thirty instruments will be used. There will be thirteen violins, two violas, one cello, one string bass, four flutes, three clarinets, two trumpets, one horn, one trombone, and one tympani. Efforts are being made to get another cello from Knoxville.

Miss Dorothy Horne will be concert master; second violins are to be headed by Willa Reed, a sophomore from Wilmington, Delaware; Miss Helen Cone, transfer student from Westminster college, Salt Lake City, will be the cellist; veteran Dave Kidder will be at the piano; Miss Davies will be at the organ; and Bill Gehres will handle the tympani. The orchestra, of course, will be under the direction of Professor Ralph Colbert.

Colbert is highly pleased with the recently-acquired director's score, which is a Nouvella edition. Although the new score was ordered several weeks ago, it arrived here only last week. Coming from London, it was held up by war restrictions of the mailing system.

The orchestra will have two different instrumental numbers. First will be the overture; second the Pastoral symphony.

This Pastoral symphony has a theme taken from a shepherd's melody, which is Italian. Handel heard it on a visit to Italy.

The organ and the piano combine with the entire orchestra to play accompaniment for all choruses. Some of the recitatives, however, are scored only for organ. Other recitatives and airs are scored for full orchestration. These will be cut to solo orchestration, consisting of the first two desks of violins in each section, with other necessary instrumentations.

Several of the numbers are played with muted strings. Among these being the Pastoral symphony; the duet, "He Shall Feed His Flock and Come Unto Him; and the contralto solo, "He was Despised."

Since some of the brass parts are unusually difficult, being written in pitches which horns are not used to playing, the clarinetests will have to have two clarinets each, in order to master some of the pitches.

Professor Colbert reports that the orchestra has been working on the accompaniment for the Messiah since October 16. This being a difficult accompaniment to play, the orchestra has had to work unusually hard.

Some of the violin parts are so swift, says Colbert, that they are required to play approximately 400 notes a minute.

Seashore Test Given

All music students and students belonging to musical organizations were required to take the Seashore test that was given Friday afternoon at 4:00. This test was designed by Professor Carl Seashore, a noted pioneer in music. It is given for the measurement of musical aptitude and is not an advancement test. The test is divided into six parts: pitch, loudness, rhythm, time, timbre, and tonal memory. It has been given at Maryville college for four years, but this was the first time since its revision in 1939.

McArthur, Baldwin Reign In Panama For A Gay Evening

Tumblers, Class Sponsors And Faculty Top Show

Amid the Spanish gaiety and color of Panama, Maryville students and their friends spent a hilarious Thanksgiving evening. The Alumni gym had been transformed into a square in Panama, and nothing had been missed. Gobs on leave chased beautiful Cherie Curtis and Kay Estes all over town until they were finally rescued by Dr. Lloyd. Students fished for prizes in one booth, received free "kisses" in another, had their portraits done in a third, and heard haunting music in a fourth. Under the Panamanian spell, many couples sat in a picturesque street cafe eating, drinking, and making merry.

After the subtle Spanish spell had been cast over everyone, the time arrived to introduce the class sponsors. Helen Smith, the dark, vivacious freshman sponsor, was the first to be announced. She was followed by the equally dark and striking sophomore sponsor, Ginny Williams. Phyllis Johns, chosen by the junior class as their loveliest, was the next beauty to be introduced to the audience. Last, in a position of honor, the senior sponsor, Helen Williams, was presented. After the class sponsors had taken their places, introduced by a fanfare, the Barnwarming king and queen came regally forward. Lovely Queen Betty McArthur was crowned by King Charles Baldwin.

A gay program followed with a stirring Spanish dance by Kitty Bennett and her chorus, a song "At the Panamania" by a trio of campus beauties, Betty Bryant, June Brown, and Frances Harris, and numbers by the orchestra. A troupe of tumblers thrilled the audience by the exhibition of their skill. About this time a group of tourists came into the square, led by Dave Hall. Among the celebrities in this group was "John Barrymore" Dollenmayer, who was still in the search for "a perfect mate." "Fulla Brushman" Jackson was in her glory, and "Bell-Hop" Wendt submissively followed Mrs. Snyder and her camera around. Carmen Archilla and Joe d'Antonio danced a beautiful rumba to give the final touch to the evening's entertainment.

Thus, at the end of this year's Barnwarming, Maryville said a sad adieu to Panamania, and sat back to patiently wait for the next gala Barnwarming.

Thanksgiving In Many Lands

By BETTE UMBACH

Native festivals are always of interest to the general public; especially those people who do not participate. Since we have just passed what is known as one of our national holidays, it might be interesting to see how this holiday is celebrated in different lands. Let us skip from continent to continent, studying the Thanksgiving habits of the natives.

Let us go first to our neighbor, South America. Here the natives celebrate Thanksgiving by growing rubber. Although growing rubber is quite typical of the natives, it is confined to certain regions. The flora and fauna of South America are determined by the climate. In other sections of the continent, according to the temperature, cotton, beef, sodium nitrate and tin are grown.

In Europe, Thanksgiving is celebrated by the removal from the calendar of one sheet.

In the greater portion of Asia, the inhabitants observe this holiday by eating Thanksgiving dinner with chop sticks. This custom, however, varies with regional inhibitions. In the central part, the natives perform an old ceremonial rite — sweeping off the steppes of Tibet.

Looking in on Antarctica, we find the penguins plodding their unconcerned way through the frosty antarctic Thanksgiving season.

Natives of Australia spend Thanksgiving in a continent-wide hunt. Armed with boomerangs, the Australians beat the bush in a noble effort to quell the hordes of rabbits which threaten to over-run the British Empire. They also tear another sheet off the calendar.

In Africa, the natives spend the day feasting on a bird known as the Missionary, ordered from other continents

Battista And Eisenberg Will AppearHere In Joint Recital

Brilliant Young Pianist And Noted 'Cellist Are Among Top-Ranking American Musicians

Joseph Battista, young American pianist, and Maurice Eisenberg, noted 'cellist, will present in joint recital the second of the 1940-41 Maryville college artist series in Voorhees chapel on Tuesday evening, December 3 at 8:15.

Joseph Battista, brilliant young pianist, began last year his first year of concert work, and so as yet is not as well known as several of the other artists who have appeared on this program. Despite this fact, however, he has risen since his first performance to the top ranks of American artists, a position which he will undoubtedly maintain.

It is said of Battista that his hands are more nearly like those of Paderewski than any pianist since Paderewski's time, and that is one of the things which enables him to overcome technical difficulties with apparent ease. His fingers are those of a born pianist, sensitive musicianship, and a technique that knows no obstacles. He also possesses an artistic individuality that is sensed by his audience and grips their imagination; and although only twenty-two years of age, he has come fact to a high rank in the select group of America's' greatest artists.

Battista, native born American, showed great pianistic talent at the age of five, and since his childhood it has been his ambition and desire to be a concert pianist.

He attended school in Philadelphia, the city of his birth, and upon finishing high school, entered the Settlement Music School in that city. Later he won a scholarship to the Philadelphia Conservatory of Music and the next year won a fellowship to the Juilliard Graduate School of Music.

During the 1937-38 concert season, Joseph Battista illustrated a lecture on "Elektra", given by Madame Samaroff of the Philadelphia Conservatory. So well did this young artist play that Madame Samaroff immediately engaged him to illustrate her lecture the following season.

In 1938 Battista won the Youth Contest of the Philadelphia Orchestra; and in 1939, when he was nearly twenty-one years of age, he played the Rachmaninoff Concerto in C minor, his superlative performance of which swept him almost overnight into the ranks of the best American artists, to a position which he has not since relinquished.

His native talent, his seemingly boundless ability, his capacity for work, and the fact that he plays with keen understanding, intelligence, and taste, make Joseph Battista's concert presentations some of the most enjoyable given by any artist of the present time.

Maurice Eisenberg, world-known 'cellist, has spent much of his life in Europe where he went in his early twenties to study; but his return to the United States has been the cause for rejoicing among concert managers, especially since the violincello is more than ever becoming a favorite instrument with the people.

An interesting thing to note in connection with Mr. Eisenberg is the story of his favorite 'cello which was made by David Teecler in 1712. Teecler was a Tyrolean who served his apprenticeship in Rome and later built up the prestige of the Roman school of violin makers. He was especially noted for his 'cellos, of which the instrument Maurice Eisenberg plays is considered one of the finest examples and is the only Teecler with red-brown varnish in existence. Its value, as might be guessed, is $15,000.

Maurice Eisenberg not only ranks with the foremost 'cellists of the day, but he is an expert and connoisseur of 'cellos as well. He has made some rather interesting observations concerning the manner in which temperature effects the 'cello. In Europe, no matter whether he was playing in Paris, Ireland, Switzerland, Budapest, or Scandinavia, he found that there was not much variation in the action of his instrument; but on his return to the United States after many years abroad, he found his instrument was much affected by the various climates.

His 'cello is of the high-bellied type, but in Denver the high altitude and low pressure made the belly sag and the keys slip so that it was next to impossible to keep it in tune. Around New York the moisture is such that he often finds the ebony finger board

John H. Ross Resigns As Managing Editor Of The Highland Echo

John Ross, prominent member of the Highland Echo staff for the past three years, has resigned his position as managing editor, J. Edward Thomas announced today. Carson Brewer, ophomore from Mooresburg, Tennessee, is the new managing editor.

Ross, who is a psychology major and an assistant in the psychology department, gave lack of time as the reason for his resignation. Tryouts for the junior vacancy on the Echo staff will begin next week. Any junior who is interested in newspaper work should report to the staff meeting Tuesday evening at 6:30 in the editorial office of the Echo.

Women's Dormitory Is Assured By Substantial Gift

President R. W. Lloyd announced to the Maryville college directors last Tuesday that a "lady in New England", whose name cannot be disclosed, has made a substantial gift to start the fund for the building of a new women's dormitory. Dr. Lloyd stated that architects have drawn a preliminary plan for a dormitory that would have room for approximately one hundred women. The final plans have not yet been drawn.

The building will be located on the north side of the campus near Pearsons hall and Baldwin hall, making three women's residences in one group. It will be of brick and stone fireproof construction with ample parlor space. The dormitory will be planned to fit in architecturally with the other buildings on the campus, according to an original campus plan which made provisions for such additions in the future.

When the new building is completed, Memorial hall, facing Carnegie, will be remodeled and converted into a men's dormitory.

Dr. Lloyd stated that it is too soon to announce when there will be sufficient funds to justify the beginning of work on this new building.

New Appalachian Club Has Fifty Student Members

Composed of some fifty students from the Carolinas, the Virginias, Kentucky, and Tennessee, the Appalachian club has been formed to take its place with the other state clubs on the hill. The first meeting of the club was held on November 11, at which time those present were favored with piano solos and readings and then joined in the singing of folk songs.

The officers of the organization are: Fleming Griffith, president; Natalie Yelton, vice-president; Virginia Cain, secretary; and Jimmy Walker, treasurer. Alpha Sigma hall will be the regular meeting place, and the next meeting will be at 6:50 on the evening of December 9. This newly-formed group has agreed to purchase one-half page in the 1941 Chilhowean.

Committee of 100 Holds Fellowship Dinner December 5

Blount Countians Give $35,000 to Forward Fund

On December 5 at 7:00, the college will give an anniversary dinner in the dining room. The dinner is a fellowship gathering to honor the Committee of One Hundred, a group of 100 citizens of Maryville and Blount County who served as a committee in behalf of the college in raising the community quota for the New Forward Fund. Through the assistance and cooperation of this group in last year's campaign nearly $35,000 in pledges and gifts was raised in Blount County. A part of the money furnished by this committee made possible the construction of the new road on the campus.

Heading the organization is honorary chairman, Dr. Samuel Tyndale Wilson, president-emeritus of the college. He is assisted by three active cochairmen: Joseph C. Gamble, attorney; Mr. A. D. Huddleston, regional manager of the Aluminum Company of America; and David W. Proffitt, merchant. The committee is composed of two groups, one of 25 and one of 75, each member of the group of 25 having three members of the group of 75 under him to assist him.

Though the work of the committee ended a year ago, the dinner on December fifth will be held to commemorate its activity and contribution to Maryville college. President Ralph W. Lloyd will speak to the group, giving information as to recent events and conditions concerning the college and probably show moving pictures of campus life.

Such a meeting, developing into an annual affair, is planned to be held every year.

Maryville Artists In Knoxville Exhibit

Art works by three of Maryville's alumni and faculty members have been on display in Knoxville this week in a large art exhibit. The exhibition was of a collection of crafts, drawings, and paintings done by several artists in this district of Tennessee. It was held in celebration of National Art Week. November 24 to 30, in the Church Street Methodist church, and closes today.

Miss Virginia Purinton, instructor in art, had on display two oil paintings, one a portrait entitled "Girl with the White Eagle" and the other "Autumn and the Red Bridge", a colorful landscape study; a water color painting of sunset on the mountains, two linoleum engravings, "Negro Song" and "Prayer Before Work," and a still life wood engraving.

Mrs. Frances Rich Patterson, former art instructor of the college, entered in the exhibit several paintings and sketches including an unusual study of hands and masks.

Mr. Stone Norton, 1940 graduate of Maryville college, displayed two paintings of heads, a pastel still life, and a picture of a familiar scene, an East Tennessee landscape.

Now The Plea Has Come

Early this week the British Bureau of censorship lifted its restrictions to permit a statement on the real condition of England's vital shipping facilities. A government spokesman in London revealed that the most critical period of the war is now facing the people of the beseiged island kingdom. Tonnage losses inflicted by German submarines and aircraft are comparable to those of the darkest hour in the First World War, and it is admitted that the shipbuilding industry has been unable to keep pace with the destruction on the seas.

Preceding this announcement by only a few days came the plea of Lord Lothian, who has just returned from a visit to London, that English funds with which to pay cash for munitions and supplies are running short, and immediately the question of possible loans by the United States became a current issue.

These two admissions are in line with what many of us have feared were the true conditions in spite of news censorship. The expected plea for more aid has come and should be faced squarely. It is probably true that the Churchill government has appealed to America in the tone of urgency before the situation has actually become acute, and with good reason, since delay could only reduce the effectiveness of the aid we are able to give.

In American harbors much of our merchant marine is lying idle because of prohibitions against its use in hostile waters. These ships transferred to Britain would greatly strengthen the life lines of the Empire.

Although the immediate repeal of the Johnson Act, now in the way of loans to belligerents, seems unlikely, the movement has not been started too early. If the controversy which usually attends legislative discussion of foreign relations is aroused by the measure, either Britain will be seriously in need of funds or the war will be over by the time it is passed. Already Senator George, new chairman of the powerful Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has cast the first stone at attempted repeal by shelving the bill for the rest of the session.

Apparently there are still those who think that "peace in our time" will result from an attitude, if not a definite policy, of appeasement. Prior to the outbreak of war, the isolationists shuddered with fear at the very thought of "committments", which, if they had been forthcoming at the right time might have stopped the dictators without the shedding of blood. This policy of vacillating delay characterized the steps taken by the European democracies to counter the rise of totalitarianism. Now, with only two great self-governing countries left in the world, and left without a friend except each other, some American statesmen still hesitate to face the facts and act.

Unless the United States answers the call of Britain for money and ships the bandit states will probably enforce their wills upon the people who today are fighting our battle as well as their own. With the British fleet in enemy hands there would be nothing between the Western Hemisphere and Hitler except a two-ocean navy "on order" for delivery by 1946. Ships and planes on paper have never yet stopped an invasion.

Howell Heads Artist Series Since 1927

By JOHN ROSS

Since 1927, the Maryville college artist series or Lyceum course as it was then known, has been under the chairmanship of Professor George D. Howell. It is through his efforts and direction that the Maryville college series has risen to the standing that it has among music lovers of East Tennessee.

The present artist series is the successor to the YMCA Lyceum course which brought to Maryville eminent artists, speakers, lecturers, and entertainers. This course secured seven or eight numbers for the year and sold tickets to the students and the town people.

Later the emphasis was changed to music and since that time some of the outstanding artists of America and the world have appeared on the Maryville stage. The artists are scheduled through agents for their appearances here. Formerly they were secured through the agency of the Columbia Broadcasting Company, but now the best artists are available to us through Charles L. Wagner of New York. Their appearances are scheduled a year ahead of time.

By scheduling ahead, Maryville is able to secure artists that otherwise we would not be able to get because of the increased demand. Professor Howell has become noted in this section for his ability to bill artists who later gain national and world fame. Malcolm Miller, music and dramatic critic for the Knoxville Journal, in commenting on the Maryville series, stated that Professor Howell, with canny selective judgment, has booked arresting program

Last year despite difficulties created by the war in Europe and by unusual weather conditions here, Professor Howell was able to bring outstanding artists to the Maryville stage.

Since the changing of the name in 1933, the artist series' audience comes from such distant points as Bristol and Chattanooga. The roster since 1933 includes many of the greatest artists in the world today. Some of the more important are: Don Cossack Russian choir; Albert Spalding, violinist; Vienna Choir Boys; Helen Jepson, Metropolitan soprano; Joseph Hofmann, pianist; John Charles Thomas, Metropolitan baritone; Alexander Kipnis, Metropolitan basso; Rosalyn Tureck, pianist; Moriz Rosenthal, Polish pianist; Walter Gieseking, German pianist; and Jussi Bjoerling, Metropolitan tenor.

The Artist Series committee for this year is: Professor George D. Howell, Mr. Ralph Colbert, Miss Katharine Davies, and Miss Elizabeth Jackson.

Scots and Soda

In our usual pressed-for-this-and-material fashion, we resort to the biggest event of the week—Barnwarming.

When they began moving furniture out of my room to put in the garden, I began to suspect something was going to happen. Then when I stumbled over to the gym Thursday night, I was sure of it. That must have been the reason I haven't seen my room-mate—Betty, that is—for two weeks....once I saw her staggering haggardly toward the gym—at least I think it was Betty—couldn't be right sure because of the load of fir trees she was carrying, but whoever it was had on my black sox....

After I became really conscious of the preparation and presentation of this event, there were several impressions I got of people and things and noises that seemed to me pretty outstanding....

Aline Campbell, dragging pillows and boxes and deck chairs and magazines and bananas out of practically every house this side of Cincinnati...The faculty—taken individually or as one astounding group—one of the biggest hits of the evening...Star-maker Cragan, balanced atop a fifty-foot ladder, giving the scene a heavenly atmosphere...Willie Williams and her little crew, Flucy Brooks, Marguerite Taylor, Becky Jones, and D. J., cutting and pinning miles and miles of crepe paper....

I don't want to seem to criticize anything so perfect as Tapp's Toppling Tumblers, but it would have been lovely if John Paul Baptiste, atop that manly pyramid, could have waved a banner saying, "Se about getting your 1941 Chilhowean today!"

Oliver Williams and Phil Vance, putting in hours and hours to organize the band for the evening...Vernon Lloyd, obligingly putting up and taking down his father's mike system for practices and performance....people wandering through the square during the program, giving it a cosmopolitan, finished touch....Hopkins, master-carpenter, building everything from booths to hedge-holders....Flem Griffith and his cohorts moving the College Woods to Panama.....Margie Resides and Lasses Crutchfield, growing thousands and thousands of those super-magnificent orchids....Jim Humphries helpfully explaining the mechanism of Mrs. Walker's fountain to a group of interested sight-see-ers....(And thanks, Mrs. Walker, for the use of your fountain)....Bill Gehres, expertly lighting the house, taking time off to yell "Igor!" at frequent intervals...Ann Ramey frantically searching Baldwin hall for enough clothes to cover those on the program....Archilla and d'Antonio not only heating the barn, but pretty near burning it down....Nan Wood, taking charge of the music, which is half the show in any man's language....Joan Human, not having any particular job, but being faithfully helpful to practically everybody....

We received a great deal of moral help, just seeing the omnipresent Mr. Irwin and Coach Honaker—Irwin worrying about all the boys and girls, and Coach worrying about his gym floor....

Eleanor Long and Betty Lee Wild putting on a superb little show of their own in the art corner....Ken Cooper and Chuck Dunning doing an excellent job of sign painting....and the Carter family and its little friends, building the Panama canal, gardens, houses and parks out of a bucket of paint and a roll of paper....

The stage, itself, was a work of art, but looked extraordinarily beautiful after it was decorated with the King and Queen, Charlie Baldwin and Betty McArthur; and the lovely class sponsors, accomodatingly loaned by the Chilhowean....Kitty Bennett and her dancing girls, adding a colorful bit of rhythm....Dottie Jean Eslinger, busy for days ahead of time baking cakes and freezing ice cream for the refreshment booth....

It was through the combined efforts of Jean White, general chairman, and Charlotte Colby, that such a colorful pageant was brought here. But all would have been impossible if it had not been for the gracious cooperation of the authorities.

Panamania might have made maniacs out of lots of us, but you'll have to admit—it was fun.

Judge S. O. Houston Re-elected To Head Board of Directors

Dr. Charles R. Erdman of Princeton, New Jersey, and Mr. R. J. McClellan of Chattanooga, Tenn., for the first time since their election last summer as Directors of Maryville college, met with the Board at its annual fall meeting Tuesday, November 26. The meeting, which is supposed to be held the third week in November, was postponed on account of Dr. Lloyd's absence from the campus at the time.

Mr. McClellan is to complete the term of Hon. William A. Lyle of Dandridge, who died May 13, 1940. He is president of the Provident life Insurance Company. He is very active in the work of the Presbyterian church, being an outstanding member in the Second Presbyterian church of Chattanooga.

Although he is from New Jersey, Dr. Erdman is well known among the people of the Synod of Tennessee. He has been a speaker and instructor during the past two years at the summer conference held here on the campus. Since 1936 Dr. Erdman has been professor emeritus at Princeton Theological seminary. In 1925 he was Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church, U.S.A.

Judge S. O. Houston of Knoxville was re-elected Chairman of the Board to serve during the coming year. Rev. J. M. Broady of Birmingham will serve as vice-chairman, and Mr. Fred Proffitt as recorder.

Most of the meeting was taken up with the general election of officers of the board and with the report of President Lloyd of the last ten years at Maryville college, during which time he has served the college as its sixth president. This report is made in two sections, the first coming at the annual spring meeting of the board, and the second at the annual fall meeting. Incorporated with the report were ten recommendations for the general welfare of the college which were accepted by the board.

There are only two meetings of the board each year, one in the spring and the other in the fall. The spring meeting is chiefly concerned with the awarding of degrees, the making of appointments, and other related business. At the fall meeting business matters of the college are reviewed, and the president reads his report.

There are thirty-six directors elected in three classes. One class is elected each year by the Synod of Tennessee. Directors who are directly connected with the college are: President emeritus Wilson, President Lloyd, Mr. Fred L. Proffitt, and Miss Clemmie J. Henry.

Pi Gamma Hears Talk

"Exercise to Get Your Man" was the theme of Mrs. Verton M. Queener's talk to Pi Gamma girls last Tuesday afternoon in the YW rooms. Mrs. Queener proved it definitely necessary to exercise to get your man.

At the next Pi Gamma meeting, the fourth in this series of six, a local beautician will illustrate to the girls that beauty also is necessary to get your man.

Miss Miles Speaks To YW

Miss Mary Miles, a matron in Baldwin hall, will speak at the YWCA meeting on Sunday afternoon at 1:30 in the Y rooms. Her subject will be "The Youth in Japan," and she will come dressed in a Japanese costume.

THE HIGHLAND ECHO NOVEMBER 30, 1940

1940 FOOTBALL AUTOPSY

Maryville 14——Hiwassee 7

On September 21, the Maryville college Scotties started off their season in great style by polishing off the Tigers from Hiwassee by a score of 14-7. After a delay of 45 minutes, caused by the absence of the officials, several spectators were conscripted into service and the game got under motion. The first scoring thrust came when J. D. Hughes took to the flining end and rifled a 15-yard beauty to Scot Honaker, who crossed standing up. Fullback Steele deadlocked the score on a line plunge, but the Highlanders quickly retaliated as Hooker intercepted one and picked up 15 yards on a brilliant hip-swinging sprint.

Maryville 19——Cumberland 18

The first SMC victory by the Scotties came at the expense of a 19-18 edging over Cumberland's Lawyers. The game was marred somewhat when much protest resulted from the illegal use of an ordinary pigskin when the night tussle called for an albino hogskin. When play was started finally, the Scots were so unsettled that the Lawyers were able to score two touchdowns in the opening ten minutes of play. However, the half ended 13-12 in the Scot's favor, and the fighting Honaker-lads went on to pull out the victory, 19-18.

Maryville 6——Milligan 20

Johnson City's municipal stadium was the scene of the Scot's first downfall of the season. Milligan, directed by Coach Steve Lacey, simply outplayed and over-powered the Highlanders and were quick to pounce on the bad breaks suffered by the invaders. In meeting Brumett, Showalter, and Williams, the Scots faced the best trio of backs assembled in the 1940 SMC campaign. Milligan, by the way, was one of the few unbeaten and untied teams in the nation.

★——★——★——★

Maryville 7——King College 0

For those who saw an underdog Scottie eleven play rings around a highly-touted King college team, the Highlanders 7-0 victory was indeed the highlight of the 1940 gridiron campaign. "Baby" Baird, playing the best game in his life, really ripped the enemy wall to powder, and finally toted the oval across the goal behind faultless blocking by the entire team. After the touchdown, which proved to be the game's lone tally, the whole situation can be summed up by saying it was Baird, Morton, Tipton, Hooker, and Hughes in the middle of every play in the tussle.

Maryville 0——Chattanooga 28

In the tilt between the Scotties and the Chattanooga Moccasins, in the latter's home stadium, the jump from SMC to SEC was just too great to hurdle. However, before the regulars were hammered down by wave upon wave of fresh "Moc" subs, the Scots were able to throw back everything that came in their direction. One yard from the Scot goal line as the second stanza started, on two cracks Orend and Grigonis carried across for the first scare. The other "Nooga scores came on two pass interceptions and a beautiful off-tackle prance by Halfback Culberson. Twice the Honaker-lads, sparked by Baby Baird and J. D. Hughes, knocked at the touchdown front gate, and twice the gate was locked and barred.

★——★——★——★

Maryville 0——Tennessee Teachers 7

Old Man Jinx struck again at the Scotties and before the scrimmage had been all cleared away, the Teachers had extended a five-year-old habit and the Scots were losers for the sixth consecutive time. Speedy Les Rock filled in nobly at end when Tommy Cragan was forced to the sidelines with a broken finger sustained in the Chattanooga tussle. When Coach Gene McMurray's outfit marched down the trail for the lone score, the home lads were stunned and never could get back in threatening scoring position.

Maryville 12——Emory-Henry 0

Inspired by a capacity crowd of alumni and former friends, the fighting Scotties gave the Homecomers a real thrill by crushing the Wasps from Emory-Henry by a 12-0 verdict. Again it was just another case of cunning and strategy versus an opposing team of giants. This time, from the opening kickoff to the last line thrust, the Highlanders were really some class. The Wasp triple-threater, "Bear" Atkins, of whom the Scots had been warned, was bottled up so tightly that he never reached a stride worth honorable mention.

Maryville 0——Tennessee Tech 35

The Scotties traveled to Cookeville and were beaten 35-0 by a highly favored and much heavier eleven from Tennessee Polytechnic Institute. The Orange and Garnet were in such bad shape that "Baby" Baird, Jimmy Witt, and Lloyd Taylor were unable to make the trip. Although both teams had gone down before almost identical odds at the hands of Chattanooga, it was just another case of too many reserves on the enemy bench, and the Scotties were overpowered and out-maneuvered from gun to gun.

★——★——★——★

Maryville 25——Tusculum 18

In the final game on Wilson Field, the Scotties presented the home fans with as wild and wooly scrap as a nervous system can stand. Right from the opening kickoff, the Orange and Garnet started rolling, and before the first quarter ended, two tallies were recorded. George Morton led the victors with two touchdown runs, and J. D. Hughes and "Baby" Baird scored one apiece. One of the queerest incidents in the game occured when Ray Cloninger, a reserve guard, jumped from his seat on the bench to tackle Tusculum's Palmer, who was sprinting towards the unprotected Scottie goal.

Maryville 13——Carson-Newman 27

For the first time in the four years since the seniors on the squad have been carrying the mail for the Orange and Garnet, the Carson-Newman Eagles blasted the Scots by a score of 27-13. Lloyd Taylor, making a brilliant comeback after being out for the greater part of the season, snagged several aerials for extended gains. However, it remained for the men who were playing their last game for Maryville to pull glory out of defeat. Captain J. D. Hughes, co-Captain Scot Honaker, "Baby" Baird, George Morten, and Ken Duncan ended their careers in a blaze of splendor.

Hahn, Everett And Evaul Are Nucleus For State Titlists

Twenty wrestlers, led by Coach J D Davis, began practice last week for the 1941 wrestling season. Returning lettermen are Phil Evaul, Wood Everett, Clem Hahn, and John Baptiste. David Daniels is another letterman who is expected to join the squad after the Christmas holidays.

Evaul will wrestle in the 121 pound class, and Baptiste is a 128 pounder. In the 135 pound class, Art Yunker, who has had some previous experience, is expected to compete with McDaniels for a berth on the squad. Cline, a freshman, is a promising 145 pounder. In the middle weight divisions, the Scots boast a wealth of experienced men—Joe Suitor, Joe McGill, Wood Everett, and Clem Hahn—all of whom are rapidly working into peak form. "Tiny" Richards, the freshman footballer, is the only heavyweight on the squad, and has been looking better with every practice.

Maryville will enter the Tennessee intercollegiate competition this year as defending champs. The 1940 wrestlers scored victories over the University of Tennessee, Vanderbilt, King college, and the Knoxville Y to clinch last year's crown. Evaul and Everett proved themselves to be the class of their respective divisions, for they both won the state championship in their weight.

Manager Percy Martin announces that negotiations are under way with the University of Tennessee, Vanderbilt, North Carolina state, Frye Institute, Knoxville YM, Atlanta YM, and Chattanooga YM, and it is hoped that all of these teams can be scheduled. A tentative schedule is expected to be announced in the near future.

Coach Davis, serving his first year as tutor of the Maryville matmen, is thoroughly familiar with the sport, and gives promise of another good wrestling season.

Junior Girls' Team Wins Basketball Tournament

Winner of the point system girls' basketball tournament finally proved to be the junior-senior girls' team. The first game, between the sophomores and freshmen, went to the sophomores. Saturday, November 23, the junior-senior girls won over the sophomores. Tuesday, November 26, the junior-seniors again won; this time it was over the freshmen. This made the upper classmen winners of the tournament.

The soccer tournament also was won by the junior-senior girls last month when they defeated both the sophomores and frosh.

The Railroad is Safe

Ace Sophomore Back

Jimmy Witt, 165 pound fullback from Madisonville, is the only regular backfielder who will be eligible for the varsity next year. The present president of the class of '43, Witt is considered to be one of the smoothest sophomore backs in the Smoky Mountain Conference. Like most of the Scottie backs, Witt was the victim of a very serious injury this season. However, the knee is mending favorably and big things are expected of Witt next year.

Intramurals

The intramural department is issuing entry blanks and eligibility cards for those teams which expect to enter a team in the basketball leagues which will begin play on January tenth. Anyone who wishes to enter should go to the intramural office and obtain the proper blanks. All entries are to be in by December the eleventh.

In the horseshoe tournament, the flights are still on the third round. Since the weather was so poor last week the event has taken longer than was expected. Watch bulletin boards for deadlines.

Football Players Report This Week As Basketball Season Takes Spotlight

The 1940-41 basketball season is rapidly getting under way for the Maryville Highlanders. Coach Honaker has issued the call for all men to report to the Alumni gym every afternoon at three, ready for action.

The schedule this year calls for some important and good games before Christmas. Beforehand, the games were usually held after the holidays, but this year they are being staged before the vacation. There is a game to be played with the Sugar Bowl-bound University of Kentucky. This is the team that will make the trip to the Sugar Bowl where they will compete against another team chosen to play in this classic.

Before this big game of the pre-season games there will be several practice games with the local independent teams. These of the teams are concerned, are, however, important in the fact that they show up the weaknesses under actual fire and it is due to these games that Coach Honaker is able to find the spots which need smoothing up.

There are several new men that have shown up well in the practice sessions and the practice scrimmage held last week. Ray Lillard, Bill Overly, Tom Saffell, Doug Roseborough, Red Mainike, and Bryan are a few of the new men who have done good work so far. Bill Baird, who has had charge of the practice for the past weeks, Baby Baird, Stan Menning, and Bill Sweeney are the old men out so far, but Lloyd Taylor and Scot Honaker will be reporting for practice as soon as the injuries, suffered in football allow it and their presence will bolster the strength of the squad considerably.

The game with Kentucky will be on the fourteenth and there is also a game with North Carolina at Maryville on the 12th. Kentucky, following this game with the Scotties, will start on a swing of the mid-western states and then double back through the southwest to New Orleans.

The Highlanders should present a formidable array this year as they have lost only one starter from last year's successful quintet. Joe Etheredge's loss will be keenly felt, however, as he was the big gun and the high-scoring ace for the Scotties. Baby Baird has shown in practice that he has lost none of his sparkling play on the boards, and brother Bill still plays his steady brand of ball. Stan Menning is shaping up to be a good pivot man and looked particularly good on defense. Lillard seems to have the inside track for the starting five against the big schools.

Monday night there was held a practice scrimmage with the Real Estaters team which was made up of such outstanding former Maryville college players as McGill, Russell, and Etheredge. Coach Honaker used every member of the squad in this scrimmage as it was the purpose of the game. Stan Menning held Etheredge down considerably, but several times Joe looked like the star that shone for the college last year. As a whole the squad looked fairly good. They were ragged on passing, but several encouraging things showed up.

The Railroad is Fast

Captain Frank Cross And Geo. Fischbach Drill M-C Mermen

Under the guidance of Coach Fischbach, Maryville's swimming team has been practicing afternoons in the school pool in preparation for the comin gseason. This year the team has only two lettermen, Gordon Findlay and Frank Cross. This is the least number of lettermen to return in the past eight years. Unless the freshmen can fill the gaps in the squad, this season will be a poor one. Coach has good prospects in Don Lowry, Frank Miller, and George Piper as well as last year's reserves Alan and Dudley Moore, Jim Humphries and Bennett.

At present the squad consists of Joseph d'Antonio, Warren Conrad, George Cox, Stan Crews, Frank Cross, Art Elwell, Gordon Findlay, Jim Humphries, Don Lowry, Frank Miller, Alan Moore, Dudley Moor, George Piper, Trevor Rees-Jones, Horace Scherer, Hill Stiggins, Frank Wells, Bob Wilcox, and John Dilliner.

The tentative schedule for the season is as follows:

Jan. 25—U-T—there
Feb. 14—Concord State Tch.—here
Feb. 19—U-T—here
Feb. 24—Tusculum—here
Feb. 28—Tusculum—there
March 7—Emory—there

Athenian to See Dance

Tonight in Athenian hall at 6:15, Athenian will present an unusual program, featuring a dance, "The Highland Fling" by Misses Mary Darden and Mary Louise Cooper, and a reading by Troye Moore. The dance will be done in costume and with appropriate music.

warped. Then, too, in America, the hotel rooms are so dry that the 'cello begins to open. On one 'cello, Eisenberg has had to have the bridge raised to compensate for the sag in the belly, which means more practice for the distinguished 'cellist, since such a major change requires an entire restudy of the fingering.

Maurice Eisenberg is a close personal friend of the immortal Pablo Casals, and it was because of his encouragement that Eisenberg decided to go abroad to finish his study. Later, when Casals resigned his position as professor at the Ecole Normale de Musique in Paris, Mr. Eisenberg was chosen to fill this place. An American citizen, he was for years the only person from the United States to hold an official position in the French government.

When Maurice Eisenberg was a young boy about eleven years old, he lived in Troy, New York, and studied violin there with Victor Smith. Being one of eight children, the now distinguished artist at that time had no money with which to gain admittance to the concerts which he was so eager to hear. However, being a resourceful lad, he usually managed to hear everything by waiting outside the stage door for the artists and offering to carry in their music and instruments when they stepped from their taxis.

John McCormack's recital had long been sold out at high prices when he went to Troy, and since Eisenberg's father had a seat in the gallery, young Maurice was especially desirous of getting in too. When the great Irish tenor stepped from his cab to enter the hall, Eisenberg offered his services to carry in the singer's small valise. The singer barked out in his bluff Irish way, "Begone! Ain't I big enough to carry my own case?" But Eisenberg persisted, saying, "I am offering my services so I can hear you sing. If I don't carry the bag in for you, I won't be able to attend the concert." McCormack relented, took the youngster with him and obtained a seat for him in the manager's box, much to the surprise of his father way up in the gallery.

It is personal stories like this that make artists seem closer to their audiences. Their renditions of the concert pieces Tuesday evening will do even more to make us realize the extent of the genius and talent of these two Americans, Joseph Battista and Maurice Eisenberg. By their technique and brilliancy in playing, by their interpretations and resulting renditions of the pieces which they will play, and by the force of their personalities, we shall find this concert one of the most enjoyable of any to have been presented on the Maryville college stage.

The program which consists of one duet and several solo numbers by each artist, gives an excellent selection of concert pieces and is as follows:

Y Holds Thanksgiving Service Thursday Morning

Following a custom handed down from year to year, the two Y's on the Hill again conducted a Thanksgiving service Thursday morning in Bartlett auditorium. The simple, but effective, devotional period was led by Alfred Davies, who read the call to worship and the scripture and led the group in prayer. Poems of praise and thanksgiving were read by Marianne Coleman, and, from time to time during the period, soft music which aided in securing a worshipful atmosphere, was played on the recording machine. Group singing was led by Charles Orr; pianist was David Kidder.

for this purpose. In northern Africa, each Thanksgiving morning is celebrated by placing one stone upon another in the tomb of King Xeropthivnobbij the second, who was a tyrannical ruler of an ancient mythical kingdom.

North America is inhabited by strange natives who apparently have ideas concerning the celebration of a great many festivals. In spite of varying regional differences, there is a great amount of consistency in their celebration of a Thanksgiving festival. All over the country they commemorate this occasion by consuming great quantities of a bird called the turkey. In the northern portions, where the temperature reaches a low degree, and where atmospheric conditions frequently cause a downpour of a vaporous substance nationally known as rain or snow, according to its density, the natives spend Thanksgiving watching a selected group of their braves engage in an athletic contest which involves the feet and an inflated bladder, known as the football. Those not engaging in these contests wrap themselves in the skins of animals and sit under devices which are designed for shielding them from the weather, and which are known as umbrellas. In warmer regions, the same practice is followed, except that the natives there wrap themselves in two garments, the upper, a knitted garb known as a sweater, the lower known as skirts or trousers, as the case may be; they do not make an extensive use of the umbrella. In more remote sections, the natives sleep all morning and yell like mad all afternoon. In North America, there seems to be a difference in opinion as to the correct date of this celebration; there is sometimes as much as a week's difference in the celebrations.

Next month we will tell you about the international celebration of Father's Day, which commemorates the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers in Massachusetts.

Disc Club Hears Caesar Franck's Symphony Friday

At a special meeting held Friday afternoon a week ago, at 1:15, the Disc club presented a complete performance of Caesar Franck's Symphony in D Minor. An audience of about forty or fifty was present to hear the symphony, which took about forty-five minutes to play. The comments on the music were written by Miss Horne, one of the faculty of the music department.

The Disc club also presented a program of recorded music for the Athenians at their meeting last Saturday night. The program was under the direction of Gabriel Williamson, president of the club, and included compositions from the works of Beethoven, Brahms, Schubert, Tschaikowsky, and Wagner. Miss Dorothy Barbour played the first movement of Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata."

The next meeting of the club will be held at 6:15 next Thursday night, December 5, in the Fine Arts studio in Voorhees chapel.

YW Social Committee To Sponsor Open House

The social committee of the YW will sponsor an open house for the men and women of the college this coming Tuesday night, December 3. The program will be in the form of a tea, and will be held in the YW rooms from 6:45 to 7:45. This program is open only to the junior and senior men and women of the college. The idea of the program is to provide some sort of entertainment during the time between supper and the artist series. It is hoped that there will be a good crowd at this event.

Theta Opens New Series Of Afternoon Parties

Theta Epsilon gave a bowling party this afternoon in the gymnasium of the Southern Methodist church. For those who did not bowl, ping-pong and other games were provided.

This is the first in a series of afternoon programs. Betty Clevenger, who is in charge, says the other parties will be in the form of a Christmas party for orphans, a skating party and a theatre party.

Fisher At Student Vols

Mary Fisher will be the guest speaker at Student Volunteers this Sunday evening, and will tell of conditions in Persia. Since Mary's home is in Persia, her information will be first-hand, and should be very interesting. There will be readings and hymns.

Varsity Debaters Hold Practice Sessions On Hemispheric Union

Tryouts for the varsity debate squad will be held this year on December 14 and 16. Contrary to the usual custom the girls' and boys' tryouts will be held separately, the former on the sixteenth and the latter on the fourteenth. On these dates twelve girls and twenty-two boys will participate, of whom approximately fifteen will be selected.

During the last several weeks the programs at the meetings of the class have consisted of lectures on debate technique and discussions of the debate question. Practice debates are now being prepared and this procedure will continue until the tryouts. The National Pi Kappa Delta question, Resolved: that the Western Hemisphere form a permanent union, is being used in all of these instances. The question is a broad one and offers diverse possibilities as well as certain dangers of getting side-tracked from the main idea. The western hemisphere is certainly an important actor on the present world stage, holding, as she does, most of the earth's natural wealth and possibilities of greater power as her statesmen are beginning to realize. Great Britain and Germany will figure into the discussions on both sides to a considerable extent.

Varsity Swimmers Present Eighth Annual Water Carnival Tonight With Treasure Island As Theme

Water Antics of The Islanders Are Watched By Shipwrecked Pirates

NOVELTY SWIMMING

Contents Of Silver Chest To Be Given To Lucky Spectator

This evening at 8:00 the varsity swimming team will present its eighth annual swimming carnival by the waters of the college pool. Following, in a non-journalistic style, are the impressions received by a staff reporter who witnessed a rehearsal of the program. A treasure island scene consisting of palm, banana, and date trees and a driftwood strewn beach serve as a background for the action.

Promptly at eight o clock the lights will gradually go out. Then as the marine orchestra softly plays "Treasure Island" the lights again irradiate the scene. Natives are lying in the warm sands imbibing the rays of the Proclaimer of the Dawn. Their chief approaches, and they salaam him as he offers greetings.

Suddenly a loud noise is heard in the offing. The natives, startled, run to investigate and return with a motley crew of buccaneers in tow. The captain of their crew, a corpulant swashbuckler, comes forward and the two leaders converse as the pirates mingle among the natives.

The captain and the chief, seated upon a dias on the beach are rudely interrupted by a clamor among the natives and the pirates. It seems that an argument concerning bananas is brewing. After this tiff is settled by a contest, the chief, not to be impolite, decides to show off the native girls. At a wave of his arm these beauties rush into the waters and present many intricate formations with precision.

The jealous men, natives and pirates, next capture the captain's attention with their group swimming. Novelty and trick swimming follows.

Frying pans, rescued from the wreck of the ship, catch the limelight as the ship's cook swings out with some sea chanties. Following this there is a fast game of water cocoanut polo. The pirates, unaccustomed to the art of swim-

Cotton Club Plans To Change Name At Meeting

Monday night at 6:45 the newly-formed Florida-Georgia-Alabama club will meet in Athenian hall. Suggestions for a permanent name should be brought in, since the "Cotton" club is only temporary.

Newly-elected officers are Mary Morgan, president; Lura Mae Laughmiller, vice-president; Leslie Gilbert, secretary-treasurer; Anne Hunter-Wright, program chairman.

Betty Parker will play her accordian during the program, and Kay Liddell will sing. Charles Burgreen will give an original composition and will also furnish music.

The picture for the Chilhowean will be taken.

New Choruses Are Added to This Year's Messiah Production

A few new choruses have been added to the Messiah program for this year that have not been sung here before. The two new choruses that have been added are "His Yoke Is Easy, and His Burthen is Light" and "But Thanks Be To God." The first of these is sung very lightly and joyfully, and was probably placed here by Handel to lift the strain of the heavier music which precedes it. There is an alto and soprano duet that comes just before this chorus. It is entitled "He Shall Feed His Flock like a Shepherd." The alto part will be sung by Ruth Andrews and the soprano part by Louise Marshall. The second of the new choruses, "But Thanks Be To God", is also somewhat light, but is a song of thanks to God for his son Jesus Christ and the victory obtained through him. This chorus is preceded by a new number; this time an alto and tenor duet entitled "O Death Where is Thy Sting?" The alto part is taken by Ruth Andrews and the tenor by Samuel Cornelius. It is through this last duet and chorus that the oratorio is building up to the climax and final chorus "Worthy Is The Lamb", the last half of which is often fondly called the "Amen Chorus."

There will be a slight rearrangement of the chronological order of part of the program in order to facilitate the broadcasting of a part of the oratorio. The broadcast will last about an hour.

It may be also interesting to note the custom of the audience rising during the singing of the Halleleujah chorus and joining in the singing of the number with the chorus. This custom was instituted by King George II of England. He became so moved by the presentation that during the singing of the chorus he stood and the rest of the audience arose with him and remained standing throughout the rest of the chorus. Ever since then this custom has been followed. Also in connection with this custom there is another special significance. Handel, at the time of the writing of the oratorio, was out of favor with the king. But the king, by his rising during the chorus and showing his feelings, showed that Handel was once again in the kings favor.

The oratorio was first presented in 1741 in London, and was presented almost every year thereafter. It was given some 34 times during Handel's life. One of the most impressive of all the performances was the last one conducted by Handel himself just a week before his death.

Vols" Christmas Program

Since it will be their last meeting before the Christmas holidays, Student Volunteers will have a special Christmas program for their meeting tomorrow night. It will be a worship service featuring Christmas music in the form of piano and vocal selections, and Christmas poetry to be read by several people.

SECOND ARTIST SERIES RECEIVED BY FULL HOUSE

Equals First Series In Fine Entertainment

The second attraction of the Maryville college Artist Series, which was presented Tuesday evening, December 3, in Voorhees chapel, proved to be as outstanding and enjoyable as the first of the series.

Maurice Eisenberg, 'cellist, and Joseph Battista, pianist, proved themselves masters in their chosen fields and were enthusiastically received by a packed house.

Unusual to most of the audience was the possibility of hearing a 'cellist in concert. In many ways, the 'cello concert has a decided advantage over the violin concert, since it affords the audience a much better vision of the artist's technique in fingering and bowing the instrument. Also, the depth, resonance, and wide range of the instrument are very interesting and unique.

Mr. Eisenberg, proving himself to be a capable master of the 'cello, an artist of unquestionable ability and skill, and a most gracious visitor, played an instrument well over two hundred years old. He gave a perfect performance. It would be hard to judge what qualities one would consider best. Clarity of tone, perfect phrasing, masterful technique in both bowing and pizzacato passages were outstanding in all his numbers. His first encore, "Bourree" from the C Major suite by Bach, which was unaccompanied, was one of the high lights of his performance. His other encores were "Malagruena" by Albeniz, and "Allegro Spirituoso" by Senaille.

Harry Kaufman was Mr. Eisenberg's able and efficient accompanist at the piano for all his numbers except the Sonata which Mr. Eisenberg and Mr. Battista played together.

Mr. Battista was a most brilliant and dazzling pianist, whose youth, stage presence, rapid and fiery technique were all very impressive to his audience. He has definitely arrived, and we shall expect to hear much from him in the future.

Especially interesting was the group of Chopin numbers on his program. "In recent years," says Professor Ralph Colbert, "certain pianists have rather looked down on Chopin's works as being rather sweet and sentimental. Phooey on them. Some of the best piano literature is found among Cho-

Smith Home Swept By Early Morning Fire

Last Tuesday morning at ten minutes to seven the Maryville fire department was called to the home of Mr. James Smith, publicity director of Maryville college, to extinguish a blaze in the lower floor of the house. Miss Seedorf, Mrs. Smith and her daughter were the only occupants of the house at the time since Mr. Smith is in the North. Although the exact cause of the fire is not known, it is believed that old papers placed in the fireplace flue caught on fire and dropped down into the living room and ignited the furniture. By quick action, the fire company was able to confine the blaze to one room although the rest of the house suffered from smoke. The walls and ceilings were charred as was the floor, while most of the furnishings in the room were badly mutiliated.

Varsity Debaters Ossoli Club Guests

Four members of the varsity debate class went to Knoxville Monday as the guests of the foreign relations department of the Ossoli club. These debaters, all members of Pi Kappa Delta, debated this year's Pi Kappa Delta question on western hemisphere union before the meeting of the Ossoli club in the club auditorium. Henry Wick and Jack Zerwas upheld the affirmative of the question against Hilton Wick and George Webster on the negative. After the meeting, the boys were guests of the club for lunch.

College Resigns Conference After Year Of Consideration

Withdrawal Will Not Change Position Of College In Emphasis Of Athletics

By Charles Foreman (Sports Editor)

At the annual meeting in Knoxville on December 2, the resignation of Maryville college was accepted by the Smoky Mountain Athletic Conference. In a prepared statement, Dr. Frank D. McClelland, dean of students and chairman of the faculty committee on athletics, presented Maryville's withdrawal which was accepted after very little discussion.

According to college authorities the dissatisfaction was not in the conference itself, but rather in the loose interpretation of the SMC regulations. It is interesting to note that since Maryville joined the SMC in 1926 as a charter member, Lombe S. Honaker is the only coach to have been at the helm for the full fourteen years. As a matter of fact, Coach Honaker and Lake Russell, former mentor at Carson-Newman and present coach at Mercer college, were the most influential men in the formation of the Smoky Mountain Conference in 1926.

The resignation presented to the conference by Dr. McClelland read as follows:

To the Smoky Mountain Athletic Conference:

Maryville college became a charter member of the Smoky Mountain Athletic Conference when it was organized in 1926, and during its fourteen years of membership has sincerely and consistently sought to abide by the letter and the spirit of the Conference regulations, and to support the basic purposes for which the Conference was organized.

The Conference has brought about some important improvements in intercollegiate athletics in this territory. However, for a number of years, Maryville college has become increasingly concerned over a growth within the Conference, of subsidization and eligibility practices which are contrary to the original Conference purposes.

From time to time attention has been called by various institutions to this trend, but all proposals designed to remedy the situation have been rejected by a majority of members. Maryville college is definitely opposed to the principle and practice of subsidizing athletes, and of lowering academic or other institutional standards for any special interest, and cannot conscientiously continue as a member of a Conference which approves or condones such practices.

For these reasons, Maryville college considers it best to withdraw from the Smoky Mountain Athletic Conference, and hereby presents its resignation, effective this date. This step is taken with genuine regret, in a sipirt of sincere good will, and with the hope that the friendly and cordial relations which have existed throughout the years with the individual members of the Conference may continue undiminished.

Respectfully submitted,

Maryville College

by Frank D. McClelland, Chairman

Faculty Committee on Athletics

This is the section of the rules to which Knoxville papers attributed Maryville's objection and ultimate resignation:

"No student shall play in the conference who receives from other than those on whom he is naturally dependent for financial support, money or the equivalent of money such as board, lodging, etc., unless the source and character of these gifts or payments shall be approved by the commissioner.

"In order to more nearly equalize the tuition and fees charged by member institutions no institution will be permitted to grant a scholarship in excess of $125 for each school year. Members of this conference agree that as a matter of policy that there shall be no preferential aid to athletes exclusive of tuition and fees as it applies to other forms of student aid.

Varsity Debate Tryouts To Be Held December 14-16

Sixteen Chosen From Thirty-Four Participants

Thirty-four upper classmen will compete in the varsity debate eliminations to be held on Saturday, December 14, and Monday, December 16. Tryouts will be held in Dr. Davis' classroom in Anderson hall on the Pi Kappa Delta debate question, "Resolved, that the nations of the Western Hemisphere should form a permanent union."

Eliminations this year will be carried out in a manner which will separate men and women debaters. Men will try out on Saturday, December 14, at 1:30, and women on Monday, December 16, at 3:00. In previous years it has been customary to combine tryouts of the two teams.

Each participant will be judged upon his debating ability as shown in a 7-minute constructive speech and a three minute rebuttal. Judging the varsity tryouts will be Dr. E. R. Hunter, Dr. David H. Briggs, and Mr. Archibald Pieper. From the thirty-four contestants, a squad of 14 to 16 members will be chosen.

Pilot Training To Be Given Next Term

Plans for offering the Student Pilot Training course to Maryville college students next semester are being developed, Dr. Edwin R. Hunter, dean of curriculum, announced this week. The work of the course and the scheduling of activities will be similar to those of this semester.

In order to make necessary arrangements for the training, it is important that it be known soon how many may wish to enroll in the class. All students therefore, who are interested in taking the course are requested to consult with Dr. Hunter before the Christmas holidays.

Dr. Collins Finishes Work on German Art

Complimentary Copies Given Advanced Class

Dr. Ralph Stokes Collins, professor of modern languages, has just received a publication of his doctor's dissertation. The dissertation, entitled "The Artist in Modern German Drama," was written by Dr. Collins in 1938 as the culmination of his work for a Doctor of Philosophy degree at Johns Hopkins University. The article has just been published this month, and only this week Dr. Collins distributed complimentary copies to his advanced German class.

The dissertation is a study of artist figures in German drama from 1890 to the present time, an attempt to examine theories and personalities illustrated in the drama and to determine, through comparison, significant characteristics of the different periods of the drama. Dr. Collins presents a discussion of three periods, Naturalism, Neo-romanticism, and Expressionism. Works of such authors as Hauptmann, Schnitzler, and Wedekind form the basis of the study.

Dr. Collins has done extensive work in the field of German language and literature, including a year's study at the University of Munich in Germany.

Back Stage View Of Artists

By JEAN WHITE

A back stage view of the Artist Series concerts is one that few people have the chance and good fortune to enjoy—but these would-be reporters do get into interesting situations and meet very interesting people. At least, that was my situation last Tuesday evening before and during the concert.

Joseph Battista and Maurice Eisenberg, two charming personalities on the stage, are even more charming and pleasant backstage. They were very willing to talk about whatever subject I might bring up and they answered any and all questions asked, in a very informal and interesting manner.

Mr. Eisenberg was rather decidedly European in manner, and from the feminine point of view, some of our male friends could well take lessons in the European arts of conversation and manners. Eisenberg is a man who has traveled a great deal and would be very much at home in almost any section of this country or Europe. Mr. Battista, on the other hand, is exactly the age of most college students, and we could easily have accepted him as one of us, which indeed he seemed to be. His most immediate concern after the intermission was what the average Maryville student's would be—not one, but two, nicely cooked cubed steaks.

But to leave the subject of personalities—the first thing about which Mr. Eisenberg talked was his 'cello. He used, Tuesday evening, his favorite violioncello which was made in 1712 by David Tecceler, who built up the Roman school of violin makers. That Mr. Eisenberg was very fond of this 'cello was easily seen in the way he handled it and also by the way in which he exclaimed over its beauty. A close view of it showed the beautiful reddish-brown varnish finish and the shape of the instrument, which was beautifully made.

Echo Asks Opinion On Council

On the editorial page of this issue, the Echo has printed the complete text of an article written in defense of the Student Council, and submitted to the desk without a signature. In a parallel column, attention has again been called to the inadequacies of the Council as a representative body and to its ineffective position in student affairs.

Since the Council is a student institution, its degree of usefulness can only be determined by an expression of opinion from the people it is supposed to represent.

In order to furnish an opportunity for such an appraisal, the Echo asks your cooperation in taking a poll of campus opinion on the question, "Do You Consider the Student Council a Useful Institution?"

If you care to answer this question, cut out the blank below and return it to Carson Brewer or Charles Foreman in Carnegie, to Phyllis Anne Cain in Baldwin, or to Jean White in Pearsons.

Do you think the Student Council is a useful institution ?

( ) YES

( ) NO

This is not a ballot, but is merely an expression of opinion.

TALK OF THE WEEK .... By Jean White

STUDENT COUNCIL DEFENDS ITS POSITION

COUNCIL LISTS ACHIEVEMENTS

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article answering an editorial concerning the inactivity of the Student Council was submitted to the Echo, UNSIGNED. It is printed below in its entirety.

A few weeks ago an editorial concerning the Student Council appeared in the Echo. The Council feels that some acknowledgment of the article should be made. Some of the statements made were glaringly true; others, in the eyes of critical observers, will be seen to be a slight misrepresentation of fact.

During the years of its existence the Student Council has been able to pass many measures which have been beneficial to the student body. Perhaps these actions have been small sometimes, but major problems of administration and discipline are naturally not within the scope of a Student Council organized as ours is. Many of the things that the Student Council does are accepted by the students with no thought as to who was instrumental in obtaining the privileges.

Any suggestions of measures of improvement, or any complaints which need investigating are always welcomed by the Student Council. Council representatives all agree that the scarcity of constructive suggestions and complaints reaching them from members of their classes or from any of the students is phenomenal. The Council does wish to be as helpful and effective as it is able to be; therefore it desires that any student or faculty member feel free to introduce for consideration anything that seems to him important enough, and anything that concerns a sufficient number of students to warrant careful thought by the Council and ultimately by the student body.

LET'S LOOK AT THE RECORD

As an agency of student opinion the Echo is glad to give space to this effort of the Council to defend its position. The article is indicative of good intentions on the part of council members, but, we are not convinced that it justifies the Student Council as a representative body.

In the first place the spokesman for the Council has admitted that it has no power to consider administrative problems or to have a voice in disciplinary matters, a fact which we took for granted in the beginning. This lack of power to represent student opinion leaves the field closed to the consideration of measures other than minor campus improvements which, it would seem, could be more adequately dealt with by the department of maintenance. Such a recognition of its inherent weakness by the institution itself is an admission of its helpless position in student affairs.

The Council contends that it has been instrumental in obtaining certain "privileges", for the student body. Most of these accomplishments, which are not enumerated in the article, really consist of such achievements as the gravel walk example previously referred to in this column, or the more recent example of a drinking fountain in Science hall. It is current opinion that even these small concessions are granted with the idea of placating Council members who take their offices seriously.

With regard to the plea of the Council for "constructive suggestions and complaints", we call attention to the proposal made on two occasions in the editorial column of the Echo, that the Council consider the adoption of a uniform electoral system for campus elections. Certainly the suggestion of such a plan is well within the scope of the constitution, and yet no action has been taken this year. Also it is public knowledge that the same proposals have often been considered time after time and year after year without any success.

We repeat that we are not attacking the individuals who are members of the Student Council, but are merely calling attention to the inadequacies of the institution.

Purportedly, the Council is a student organization, and so it is up to the student body as a whole to determine its degree of usefulness. To aid in the expression of opinion on this question the Echo is conducting a poll. A lank for this purpose appears on page 1.

Scots and Soda

Before it's too late to mention it, we'd like to get in a plug for the Law club's noble effort of Saturday night. The spectacular trial of Trevor Rees-Jones brought to light so many astounding things that we wish more people could be tried for some of the things they really do commit. From our inconspicuous spot on the stage, we thought either Nan, for the defense, or Douglas McMartin, for the state, was going to steal the show from Dr. Griffitts (who, poor man, has such poor eyesight that he has to turn on a light to find a paramecium), but we got fooled. Jimmy Witt stole it.

It makes it nice and Christmasy to see things like the lights and decorations in the Book Store. Maybe we could get up a petition to have someone sing carols over there from seven to seven-thirty every morning. And the Christmas trees sprouting inconsistently up out of the cement on Maryville's Broadway should prove something about grass growing on a busy street.

We went through Pearsons' lobby about 7:30 Thursday night and it was so quiet we were clear to the porch before we realized they were having the football banquet. So far, we haven't decided whether they were waiting to get a head start on one another, or someone had beat them to it and they were all eating so fast that they didn't have time to talk, or (heads, tails, if it stands on end, this is it) were on their good behaviour and were eating quietly.

We're very, very enthusiastic about the swish just-above-the-knees-just-below-the-fingertips convertible jackets (coats?) that we've admired on people like Dud Moore, Jim Faulkner, Bob Martin, CHILHOWEAN photographer Calvesbert, Jimmy Witt, and Coach Al Thomas. They're stealing sartorial thunder from the girls and if any of you boys have something smooth that you wear around when we're not out digging up debris for this column, stop around one day and tell us and we'd be glad to put YOU in here.

It's a little early to say, but tonight's Water Carnival gotten up and poured out by the swimming team and some glammermaids (yes, we know how to spell glamour, and if it comes out two separate words it's not our fault. We only do our best, even tho' it isn't much, for the column) like Kay Liddell, Vicki Hoole, Corny Jones, and Mary Darden. Carol Barbour is doing a good job getting ready, and reliable sources as a columnist can get tell us she's doing a good act in the show. We overheard Joe D'Antonio talking about grass skirts and went off in a corner to surmise things about a rhumba in a grass skirt underwater. Dud Moore and Jean McCutcheon are leading the formation swimming, and Cross has cooked up some diving to thrill the breathless stands.

Play production class has set its room mates nearly insane building miniature stages which they got done and exhibited at the December Studio Tea last night. We, alas, are not critics of the stage, not even little ones, but we did enjoy peering at the careful reproductions.

Might remind you that Dickens' "Christmas Carol"—the class project of that same outfit—stage managed by June Morley, is going to be fine entertainment to start the holidays off with.

Yankees Ready For Fast Retreat Come Holidays

At the Triangle club this week, the first half of the program will consist of Jeanne Heckman's violin solo, and Polly Parks' dancing.

For the second half, a representative of the busses and trains will give information concerning transportation to the northern states.

Just now, everyone's mind is focused on the coming holidays, and this information will be very interesting to the Yankees.

pin's works." Very brilliant and fascinating were Mr. Battista's renditions of Debussy's "Fire Works", and the Shostakovich's "Polka". Also beautifully rendered and enthusiastically received was Mr. Battista's first encore, "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" by Bach. Because of the reluctance of the audience to allow him to stop, Mr. Battista responded with three other encores after his last group; namely, Liszt's "Liebestraume"; A valse transcription from "Die Fledermaus" by Strauss; and Debussy's "Clair de Lune."

One could never find two more gracious artists in a concert, and it is hoped that some day they may visit Maryville college again as artists and friends.

And now all thoughts are on the next and last number of the current season, which everyone who heard Alexander Kipnis last year, is looking forward to with great anticipation. This last concert of the 1940-41 series will be presented on March 4, 1941.

CONGRATULATIONS TIPTON, HOOKER

To Cecil Tipton and Norman Hooker goes the honor of leading the Scotties through the 1941 season. If Maryville college ever had a better tackle than "Tip", we would like to hear about him. "Tip" was honored by the SMC this week by being placed on the first string all-conference eleven. After the way he consistently broke up enemy strategy by playing in their backfield as much as their own backs did, opposing coaches could hardly keep from voting him in. Norm Hooker, one of the brainest centers seen on Wilson field for a long time, is the boy who is to take over co-captain duties. In the words of Captain J. D. Hughes, "The boys are to be congratulated on their choice of Tip and Hook as captain and co-captain."

YUM! GRIDIRON CHOW

To some people in the United States, November 21 stood for the New Deal Thanksgiving. In most of the state of Tennessee, November 28 was proclaimed as Gov. Cooper's Thanksgiving Day. But to the 85 people who attended the annual football banquet last Thursday evening, the vote is hereby cast to legislate a "Coach Honaker Thanksgiving Day" on December 5 of each year. It wouldn't be proper, so we won't mention chicken, mashed potatoes and gravy, peas and corn, fruit salad, coffee, ice cream, and cherry pie. In fact the only fault we have to find with the 1940 gridiron banquet was in the manner of seating people. The people responsible should have known better than to allow such "chow hounds" (army style) as "Red" Rogerville and Jimmy Garvin to flank a poor sports editor. Food to the right of us, food to the left of us, and one of these burly lineman carrying out his blocking assignment on both sides.

WAS IT BUTTER, COULD BE

At last the explanation was made as to why on several occasions Coach Al Thomas was slightly late for football practice. Coach Davis came out with the scoop that the whole trouble was over churning butter. How could this simple item affect our bruising line coach? Simply this way, neither Al nor his bride, the former Joyce Carson of Madisonville, could agree on the proper time to churn the cream into butter. After all a vital question like this would make even the best of them tardy once in a while. "That's not true," said Gentleman Farmer Al, but he added, "It's a good thing football season is over now, for we killed the hogs yesterday, and we didn't know as much about them as we did about the butter."

CAPTAIN'S HIGHLIGHTS

"I think", said Captain J. D. Hughes, "that we had a great season because of two games, King and Cumberland. In the latter we made the supreme effort by edging the Lawyers 19-18 after they had scored 12 points in the first ten minutes before any Maryville man touched the pigskin—I beg your pardon", he continued. "I touched it once." In Hughes' opinion the 95-yard run in the Tusculum game by George Morton was the climax touchdown sprint of the season.

HARDWOOD GETS NOD

Last evening the Scottie basketeers took one on the chin from the Maryville Real Estaters. Although the score at 48-34 indicates a slightly one-sided affair, the Orange and Garnet uncovered some freshman material which was well worth the licking. "Blondie" Bower, frosh who hails from TMI, was the starter at the center post, and Ray Lillard, a boy who scored 20 of Walland's 26 points against the Scot "B" team last year, looks like a sure-fire to be come a real threat for one of the forward slots. Although Joe Etheredge was slightly tardy for the opening gun, he was on in his usual way and sent 15 points crashing through the hoop.

GRUNT AND GROAN

Coach J. D Davis might be in his infancy as wrestling coach at Maryville, but he puts the boys through their paces like a grand master. Of course he relies heavily on his prize veterans, Clemmie Hahn, Woody Everett, and Phil Evaul, but when something has to be done, Coach Davis gets down in wrestling position and shows his pupils how it should be done. Manager Percy Martin says the turnout has been better so far this year than it was at anytime last season. (And look what we turned up with last year.) Joe Suitor is one of the best prospects we've seen in a long time, and Jimmy Yunker is handling himself on the mat with the x-pertness of a pro.

Basketball Season Takes Spotlight As M-C Awaits 'Cats

With only a week's practice remaining until the big game with the University of Kentucky, the Maryville college basketball team has started to get down to serious work. Last night they held a practice game with the strong and well-balanced Real Estaters' team consisting of such former stars as Joe Etheredge, Howard Magill, and Dale Russell.

Coach Honaker played eighteen men in the course of the game and this constant substituting of players slowed up the game from the spectators' viewpoint, but it enabled the coaching staff to discover the weak points in the offense and defense. A particular weakness which was very apparent was the recovery of shots off the back board. Time and again the Real Estaters would control both bank boards and turn the ball into more points.

In the regulation game, consisting of four quarters, the visitors trounced the college team bythe score of 48-34, but this constant substituting was a main reason for this. In the extra period, the Scotties drew up and passed the former stars, due mainly to Bower's points under the basket.

The team this year seems fairly well stocked with talent. Boydson and Bill Baird provide the spark for the team and Scot Honaker continues to drop them through the hoop with monotonous regularity from way out. Lloyd Taylor's bad knee bothers him a little, but several times in the first game, Lloyd reached up and took several pretty rebounds. Stan Menning is being given a race for his job by Bower and Overly. Both are freshmen that have shown up well both in practice and in the game. Lillard is also a freshman that is likely to see a lot of service on the hardwood this season, as well as Tom Saffell.

Another weakness that was noticeable was the failure to convert foul shots into needed points. However, as there has been no practice whatsoever on this phase of the game in the sessions, this may be excused. The practices during the next week are expected to be long and tough and defense and rebounds are to be stressed.

Tipton And Hooker Are Elected Captain, Co-Captain As 85 Attend Big Grid Banquet

At the annual football banquet held last Thursday evening in Pearsons hall, twenty-two 1940 lettermen elected Cecil Quentin Tipton, junior from Walland, to the captaincy of the 1941 Maryville college football team. In making this announcement the climax of his short speech, J. D. Hughes, retiring captain, paid special tribute to the big, all-conference tackle and congratulated the Scotties on their splendid choice.

"Tonight", said Hughes, "the 1940 lettermen have elected to the captaincy a boy who has played almost every minute of every game since he was a freshman. Your captain for 1941 is Cecil Tipton."

In a similar manner, Scot Honaker, retiring co-captain, concluded his remarks by naming as his successor, Norman Hooker, flashy snapper-backer, who hails from Loudon. As Hooker made a short speech of acceptance, he was fairly overcome with happiness, and when he said how much he appreciated the honor, his sincerity was radiant.

The banquet, attended by a record crowd of 85, was a fitting farewell to a season which was considered highly successful. The completion of this campaign marks Coach Honaker's twentieth anniversary as head coach and athletic director of Maryville college.

"In my first ten years at Maryville," said Honaker, "six of which we had no conference membership, our football team was beaten by ten colleges. This does not include games with universities, but we did manage to score a 14-14 tie with Tennessee one year, and we tied Kentucky another time."

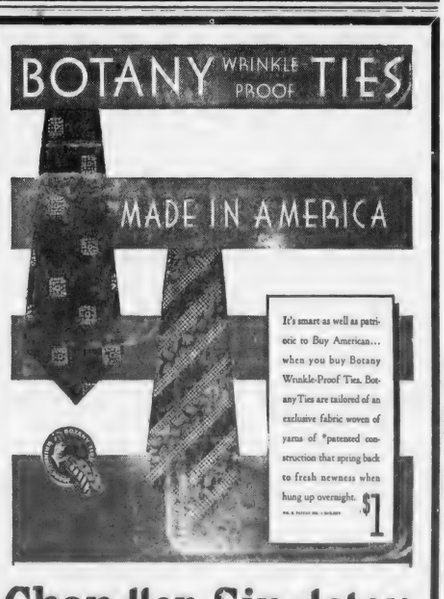
Coach Davis told the players that the biggest thrill for him was the game with King college when the underdog Scotties rose up and crushed the giant Tornado, 7-0.

Mr. Archibald F. Pieper, toastmaster, introduced Johnny Mauer, assistant backfield coach and head basketball coach at the University of Tennessee, as one of the greatest athletes ever produced at Indiana University and one of the foremost coaches in the South. An interesting part of Mauer's speech was a basketball highlight from the Southeastern Conference playoffs last March.

"With 30 seconds playing time remaining," said Mauer, "an opposing player flicked the ball through the net to defeat us by one point. Now that U-T is playing Boston College in the New Year's Day Sugar Bowl classic, the situation becomes tragic. If that man had missed his shot, I would be in a position to see my first Bowl game in three years, since it would then be Tennesese and not Kentucky to oppose Indiana in the Sugar Bowl basketball attraction. The grid Vols go to New Orleans on January 1, but the hardwood Vols missed out by one point."

Mr. Pieper made a special memorium to the late Robert C. Thrower, who served Maryville college as assistant director of physical education and athletic coach from 1925 until 1940.

Speeches also were made by President Lloyd, Dr. Frank D. McClelland, Coach Al Thomas, "Baby" Baird, and Ernest C. Brown. To show their appreciation to the three football coaches, Captain J. D. Hughes, representing the squad, presented each mentor with a small gift. Co-captain Scot Honaker presented a gold football to J. D. Hughes, and later Honaker in turn was presented a similar trophy by "Baby" Baird.



Twenty-three lettermen were announced by Mr. Pieper. These included: SENIORS—Hughes, Honaker, Morton, Baird, Cragan, McCurry, Duncan; JRS. —Tipton, Hooker, Shelfer; SOPHS—Witt, Rock, Taylor, Bennett, Rogerville, Garner, Manager Campbell; FROSH—Spears, Mitchell, Murr, Overly, Cunningham, Cloninger.

College Resigns

"Students matriculating at member institutions who do not pay bills in full must sign notes of agreements running in favor of the institution and forming a part of the treasurer's report, agreeing to pay at a specified time that matriculation charge minus any credits to be allowed for work approved by the commissioner to be performed during the year, or scholarship approved by the commissioner."

From these regulations some might think that Maryville's withdrawal came because of opposition to these by-laws which were established several hours previous to the resignation. To clear up all doubt the faculty committee on athletics has issued the following statement:

"It should be noted that an inference which might be derived from some newspaper reports of the above action, namely, that Maryville college withdrew from the Smoky Mountain Athletic Conference solely because of objection to a by-law of the Conference adopted at the recent meeting, is incorrect. Maryville college's withdrawal had been considered for some months by the college, and the statement given above was prepared before the meeting at which the by-law referred to was adopted.

"The fact is that our withdrawal from the Conference was based on what we considered to be unjustifiable practices in connection with subsidization and recruiting of athletes, and the generally unsatisfactory situation with reference to eligibility, academic standards, etc. It would, of course, be entirely incorrect to say that our resignation was the result of our objection to any single regulation in the by-laws of the Conference."

The athletic destiny of Maryville college is not doomed as some rumors have persisted. The basketball schedule for the coming campaign is entirely complete and will not be affected by the withdrawal. Athletics on the Hill will be just as good or better than before. Although the Highlanders definitely do not plan to de-emphasize athletics, no plans have been formulated to join another conference in the very near future. As proof of the fact that athletics will continue to function as smoothly as before, the 1941 football schedule has already been signed and is as follows:

Hiwassee, here; Union, there; Cumberland, here; King, there; Emory-Henry, there; Carson-Newman, here; Teachers, there; Tusculum, there; Western Carolina Teachers, here.

Doctor, lawyer, student—all take the Southern—see Carl Walton.

Backstage View

When asked what his favorite music was, Mr. Eisenberg very emphatically replied, "Bach". Last week in Stillwater, Oklahoma, he presented an entire suite of Bach which took one half hour to play, and the audience received the suite very enthusiastically. Mr. Eisenberg, speaking of this performance of Bach, considers it the greatest accomplishment of his life. He likes to play the Bach suites unaccompanied and he said about them, "They are the finest of art—most complete—marvelous." He was so enthusiastic about it, as about everything, that his enthusiasm was, to use a very trite expression, bubbling over.

Mr. Harry Kaufman, who very ably accompanied Mr. Eisenberg, is a rather brusque but pleasing personality, with a bit of humor mixed in. He teaches at the Curtis Institute of Music when not traveling around accompanying at the piano. In the past he has accompanied such famous artists as Mischa Elman, Efrem Zimbalist, Alma Gluck, Felix Salmond, Erica Morini, and others.

Mr. Battista, the youngest of the visiting trio, has no favorite composer whose works he likes to play, but, he says, "I am in love with the classics—fascinated by the moderns." He used to play jazz and had a jazz orchestra of his own; but he mentioned the fact that he did not play jazz now because unless you keep up with it, you become, as he expressed it, "corny". The reason he gave for this is that the style of playing jazz changes every two weeks or so, and unless you keep up with it you can't really play it.

And so after this long chat with our two charming guest artists and their accomplished accompanist, I slowly sauntered homeward, thinking that artists are, after all, just as human as we are, in wanting to have their work liked and appreciated by their audience; thinking that they could hardly have been more charming and gracious; and wondering, as any reporter will, what the next artist series would bring forth in the person of Alexander Kipnis.

President Robert Wilcox Gives Talk At Law Club

Members of the Law club met at 6:45 last Thursday in Alpha Sigma hall to hear their president, Robert L. Wilcox, speak on "The Openings in the Field of Law to Politics and Service." In his speech Wilcox showed the opportunities law offers to serve the public and gave a challenge to future office holders to uphold the ideals of democracy.

Mr. William McTeer, prominent lawyer of Maryville, who was the original speaker, was unable to be present.

Joe Swift Elected New President of Alpha Sig

At noon, Wednesday, December 4, Alpha Sig held an election for officers of that society. Joe Swift, senior from Worcester, Mass., was elected president. George Phelps was chosen vice-president and Bob Wright, secretary. The program committee will consist of Perry Bigham, Fred DePue and Joseph D'Antonio. Ted Holman will be chairman of the program committee. John Ballenger and Howard Dizney were elected critics. The position of sergeant-at-arms will be filled by John Baptiste. These officers will be installed at the meeting on December 14.

This evening Alpha Sigma will have a joint meeting with Athenian, Bainonian, and Theta in the chapel at 6:15.

Then a chest of silver, half-covered by the sand, is discovered. Some lucky member of the audience will receive the contents of this chest.

To close the program, the girls will present a dance by the light of the moon. Hardly have the last rhythms of the music died away when a ship is sighted. The pirates, eager to remain but more eager to return to their former pursuits, signal it and reluctantly bid farewell to the islanders.

French Club To See Play

"Au Restaurant Du 'Lapin Blanc'" is the name of the play to be presented at the French club meeting at 6:30, December 12, in Bartlett auditorium. The play is being directed by Mary Felknor. The list of characters is as follows: Le Garcon, Westly Masters; Le Vieux M. Grincheux, Bob Weldon; M. Jules Leblond, Harvey Lehman; Mme. Madeleine Leblond, Ruth Gordon; Loulou, Katherine Estes. This is the second play in a series of three to be presented at the regular French club meetings.

Geneva Hutchinson Ill In Fort Craig Hospital

Miss Geneva M. Hutchinson, printing and publicity office secretary of the college, last Monday entered Fort Craig hospital, Maryville, where she underwent an operation for appendicitis. Her condition is excellent, and it is not expected that she will remain long in the hospital.

The following night they engage East Kentucky Teachers on their floor and then they return home for the rest of the week.

This Kentucky team is the team that beat the University of Tennessee by one point in the play-offs last year and is scheduled to go to the Sugar Bowl where they will meet Indiana during the week of gala sports held down in the Crescent City. It is reported that their center is averaging around 6' 5" and that all members of the team are well up in the air.

VOLUME 26 MARYVILLE, TENN. DECEMBER 14, 1940 NUMBER 13

College To Present 8th Annual Messiah

BIRCHFIEL, CORNELIUS, HUDDLESTON, ANDREWS AND MARSHALL TO SING SOLOS

Knoxville Station To Broadcast Major Part Of Sunday's Production

In Voorhees chapel tomorrow at three o'clock, George Frederick Handel's immortal oratorio, "The Messiah", will be presented. About 223 persons, residents of Maryville, college students, and members of the college faculty, will participate as singers in the impressive production. In addition to this chorus of voices, a thirty piece orchestra with organ and piano will assist in the performance. Orchestra and chorus are under the direction of Mr. Ralph R. Colbert, who holds the position of professor of music on the Maryville college faculty.

This year extensive plans have been made so that the Messiah will have a much larger range of listeners. For one hour, 3:30 to 4:30, the program will be broadcast over the Knoxville radio station, WROL. In order that radio listeners may hear a variety of parts that are well transmitted over radio, Prof. Colbert has rearranged the program slightly so that the broadcast will begin with a chorus, include several solos and end with what is considered the most familiar and most loved music of the oratorio, the "Hallelujah Chorus". A little over half, approximately 57 percent of the Messiah will be heard over the radio. This section is taken from the middle of the oratorio; the chapel audience will therefore hear parts before and after the broadcast section. The radio program will begin with the light and joyous chorus, "For Unto Us a Child is Born", followed by the beautiful "Pastoral Symphony".

Five soloists are required to sing the various recitatives and solos. These parts are this year filled by college students, all of them advanced musicians and members of the Maryville college choir.

The soprano parts will be sung tomorrow by Louise Marshall of Knoxville and Elizabeth Ann Huddleston of Maryville. Both Miss Marshall and Miss Huddleston are well known for parts they have taken in campus productions as outstanding students in the field of music.

Ruth Andrews of Harlan, Ky., is the alto soloist. Miss Andrews has frequetly sung solo parts with the choir, including solo work on a program which the choir recently presented over a Knoxville rido station. She will sing three solos and two duets, one with Miss Marshall and one with the tenor soloist.

The tenor part, Samuel Cornelius of Pittsburgh, Pa., will fill. Lynn Birchfiel of Maryville will sing the two bass solos. Both of these singers gained recognition for their portrayal of important roles in the opera given at the college last year.

The organ accompaniment will be played by Miss Katharine Davies, chairman of the division of Fine Arts of the college, and the piano by Miss Garnet Manges, resident of Maryville and alumna of Maryville college. Miss Dorothy Horne, instructor in music, is the concert master of the orchestra.

The yearly production of the Messiah is an event long looked forward to by audiences and long planned for by those participating. Practice of certain parts begins as early as October 16.

Everyone is cordially welcome to attend the program. Usually a capacity audience fills Voorhees chapel. Last year more than twelve hundred persons gathered to witness and enjoy the presentation. To satisfactorily complete the seating of the large crowd which is anicipated, the doors of the chapel will open tomorrow at 2:15, although the program does not begin until three o'clock. At the conclusion of the performance a voluntary silver offering will be taken to defray expenses, such as purchasing f scores, which the production incurs.

The program usually lasts close to two hours. In order to keep within a maximum time and to have a program varied from year to year, Professor Colbert each time excludes some old choruses and includes some new ones. This year he has chosen to add two choruses, "His Yoke is Easy and His

Stewart, Steakley Get Pilot's Rating

Morris Stewart and Douglas Steakley, members of the Civilian Pilots Training course, have received their Private Pilot's Certificates from the Civil Aeronautics Authority. These certificates indicate that both students have completed 35 hours of flying and have passed both flying and ground examinations.

Inspector Russell A. Young of the CAA gave the written examination on ground school work to the entire class on December 10. A grade of 70 per cent is required to pass the test. The class average was 87½%, every student passing.

Stewart and Steakley passed their flight examinations December 11, less than two months after they began the course. Actual flying started October 16. The rest of the class will take the test when Inspector Young returns to Maryville in January. This examination consists of: power-on and power-off stalls; spot landings of the spiral type from 2000 feet and from 100 feet; a 360 degree landing, which is to make a complete circle before putting the plane down; a spot landing of 180 degrees; a series of shallow and steep eights; a forced landing; a 170 degree power turn in each direction. Each of these tests had to be passed with a grade of 70%.

The Private Pilot's rating means that the flyer may fly a conventional land plane with one engine and weighing not more than 1300 pounds. He may take non-paying passengers anywhere in the United States. This certificate is good for one year and may be renewed by 15 hours of additional solo flight.

Miss Louise Carson, ground school instructor, states that all of the ground school work will be completed before the holidays, which means that they will complete the subject of air-craft operation in addition to other subjects on which examinations have already been taken.

Several students have already signed in Dr. Hunter's office, saying that they wish to take this course next semester. Whether it will be offered depends on the number desiring it. Ten percent of the class may be women students.

Annual Christmas Party Held For Orphan's Home

Santa Claus brought fruit, candy, and ice cream and helped thirty boys and girls from the Orphans' Home to celebrate the annual YW-YM Christmas party this afternoon. The children and other guests were treated first to a young people's Christmas program prepared by Miss Seedorf's private students in dramatic art and presented in Bartlett auditorium through the cooperation of the Dramatic Arts department.

Sixty big sister volunteers from the freshman class helped entertain the children who participated in various games and contests. Santa brought to the gaily decorated tree presents for each of the children. Then each was given ice cream and cookies to eat and oranges and candy to carry home.

Nature Club To Hear Orr

Monday night at 6:45 the regular business meeting of the Nature club will be held in Fayerweather science hall. Charlie Orr will speak to the group on termites.

College Cast To Present Dickens' Christmas Carol

Maryville's Version of Classic Is Unique

On December 18 at 7:30 in Voorhees chapel, Maryville college's adaptation of Dickens' "Christmas Carol" will be presented. This is the second time it has been given here, and the Dramatic Art Department is planning to make this presentation an annual affair.

Maryville college is the only college who gives the 'Christmas Carol' as it does, as far as is known. A great many other colleges and societies read the play each year; but here it is not only read but acted. The Maryville college arrangement is original with the Dramatic Art department of this school.

Mrs. Nita Eckles West presents the arrangement of the story which, as she reads, is acted on the stage. Only the best beloved and well known scenes and characters are presented, such as the Cratchitt family and the Fezziwigs as well as the Ghost of Christmas Past, Ghost of Christmas Present, and the Ghost of Christmas Yet To Come. Scrooge's office scenes will be shown with the lively discussions between Scrooge and Bob Cratchitt. Tiny Tim will appear, portrayed by Bobby McClelland, and again Happy Huddleston will perform. Both these children appear for the second time on the Maryville college stage.

The character of Scrooge will be taken by Frank Brink; that of Mr. Fezziwig by David Hall; Mrs. Fezziwig by Virginia Berg; the Cratchitts by Jack Zerwas and Elizabeth Moore, the last of whom will appear for the first time in a Maryville college stage production. The Ghost of Christmas Past will be portrayed by Ruth Sutherlin; the Ghost of Christmas Present by Rosemary McCartney; and the Ghost of Christmas Yet To Come by Stuart Schimpf.

Preceding this presentation will be a program of music by Miss Davies and a group of carolers. About fifty people will take part in the program which is sponsored by the Dramatic Art class 201, and the entire entertainment will take only an hour or an hour and a half.

Students Leave Hospital As Flu Epidemic Abates

Due to the recent flu epidemic there have been more patients than usual in the college infirmary. Jim Humphries, June Morley, Eva Shelton, and Earl Barrow are the only ones left now, and for those who would like to cheer the sick the visiting hours are from 3:00 to 4:00.

Bates' Oratorical Topics Selected

Selection of the topics for the Bates Oratorical contest was made this week by the executive committee of the faculty. This year the contest is for junior and senior men of the college. The topics selected are "The Good Neighbor Policy", "America's Musical Awakening", "Preparations for Peace", "America's Dangerous Opportunity", "In the Laboratories", and "The Tennessee Valley in America's Future."

Several years ago the Rev. William H. Bates, D.D., of Greeley, Colo., contributed the sum of one thousand dollars to form a fund. The annual income of this fund is to be used as a prize in oratory. The contest is open to the men of the junior and senior classes in one year, and to the women of the junior and senior classes in the next year.

The rules for this year's contest are as follows:

The orations are to be on subjects selected by the executive council of the faculty. Six are to be chosen and submitted for each year.

1. The orations are to be original compositions. The contestants are to have no help in composition except suggestions as to bibliography.

2. The orations are to be 1500 to 2000 words in length.

3. The oration manuscripts are to be submitted on the first Tuesday in April.

4. The contestant is to submit three copies of his manuscript signed with a pen name. He also permits a sealed envelope containing his own name and the pen name.

The manuscripts are to be read by a committee of four members of the faculty who select the six orations to be delivered in the contest.

6. The final contest is to be held between the first and fifteenth of May at a time agreed upon by the contestants and the committee.

7. The contestants may have such help on preparation for delivery as may be arranged for by them and the committee. Each contestant is to have, if he wishes, three rehearsals without cost with a member of the faculty.

YM And YW To Conduct Candlelight Service Sunday

There will be no separate meetings of YW and YM this week, but instead, these two will meet in the new dining hall at 8:15 for a Christmas candlelight service.

The program will consist of poetry selections, read by Dr. Hunter, a solo, "Virgin Slumber Song," by Ruth Lane; and "The Holy City", played by Dorothy Alice Crockett on the violin.

There will be a big log fire, around which all the students will gather. There will be Christmas carols, readings, and the usual Y program.

Lost And Found Department Is Found By Brousing Reporter

By MARY WINTERMUTE

Found—In the Personnel office, one Lost and Found department belonging to Maryville college, Maryville, Tenn.

Yes, folks, Maryville has a Lost and Found department. And what is even more astounding, there is, in this department, a wierd conglomeration of possessions which have never been claimed. This bit of news was a major revelation to me, probably because I'm one of those hapless individuals who loses everything except his head, and who finds nothing save dead mice and sub-normal grades. At any rate, I determined to investigate this phenomenon.

A candy box housed the Bureau of Smaller Articles. This box is Maryville's equivalent to Grandmother's attic. In it one may find everything from innocent little hair ribbons to treacherous sharp-bladed knives. The day I rummaged through the box, I discovered a ew pair of white woolen gloves. Evidently some little Girl Scout was getting prepared for Old Man Winter. Unfortunately—or should I say fortunately?—the gloves were several sizes too large for me to wear. If any one would like a pair of gloves, let him inquire for the same at the Personnel office.

It appears that fountain pens wander away from their owners more frequently than any other article. Pencils, however, are homebodies. Tucked deep in a corner there was some real honest-to-goodness money which had been lost by some individual with utter disregard for filthy lucre, or perhaps some individual with an oversupply of this world's wealth who can't be bothered with mere dollars and cents.

Would you like a green purse? A blue one? Maybe a brown wallet would please you more. In our Lost and Found department are purses, wallets and pocketbooks of every size, shape and description. In size they range from undernourished-looking change purses to the overnight bag variety of the pocketbook family.

Among the more unusual possessions to be found in this department are one golf ball, a fancy letter opener, a book of darning cotton, and a pair of sunglasses. Of course, there is the usual supply of umbrellas left behind by absent-minded professors and otherwise. College folk seem to have an uncanny knack of losing coats, sweaters, and hats.

Strange as it may seem, the collection of missing articles is not complete. Every day students inquire for lost belongings that have not been turned in. If you should happen to lose any articles, please remember that Maryville college has a Lost and Found department which is located in the Personnel office.

Dr. Howard M. Morgan Returns To Lead Sixty-Fifth Series Of Maryville February Meetings

Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd To Lead Sunday Service At Presbyterian Church

STARTS FEBRUARY 6

Rev. Sidney E. Stringham To Lead Singing Again For Nineteenth Year

Dr. Howard Moody Morgan, of Philadelphia, Pa., will lead the February meetings this year. Dr. Morgan is returning to Maryville college to render this service for the second time, having been the leader in 1937, when the class which graduated last year were freshmen. Those who have heard Dr. Morgan before will look forward with great anticipation to his return and to the renewal of acquaintances.

Dr. Morgan is the pastor of the Tabernacle Presbyterian church, which has a special relationship to the University of Pennsylvania. He is the son of one of the most famous clerymen of England. Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, now pastor of the Westminster Chapel at the heart of the English capital, London, and one of the most noted expository preachers and Bible teachers of our generation. His son, who is to come to us, was named for Dwight L. Moody, founder of the most well-known theological seminary in America, at whose invitation Dr. Campbell Morgan first came to the United States many years ago.

Formerly a pastor in Lexington, Ky., Dr. Howard Morgan followed his father in his present pastorate. Some two years ago he held the position of Moderator of the Presbytery of Philadlphia. He is in great demand as a speaker at young people's groups and on college campuses throughout the East. He cannot accept more than a fraction of the speaking invitations which come to him each year, and yet he has consented to spend ten days in Maryville college.

With Dr. Morgan will be Reverend Sidney E. Stringham, of St. Louis, Missouri, who will lead the singing for the 19th year. Because of the wholesomeness and effectiveness of his leadership Maryville college has invited him from year to year. As a pastor he renders a significant service both in his own church and in other churches and conferences where he is asked to assist on special occasions. Because of the outstanding work he has done in the pastorate he has occupied for a number of years, the Epworth Methodist church of St. Louis, he has recently been placed in charge of the strong Shaw Avenue Methodist church, also of St. Louis. Mr. Stringham is counted one of the true friends of Maryville college and brings to the meetings a genuine, vigorous, and capable leadership.

The February meetings this year will constitute the 65th series, the first having been in 1877. Starting February 6 and ending February 13, there will be two services daily, beginning at 9:45 a.m., and 6:45 p.m. The program also includes various group meetings by students and faculty. As in former years, on the Sunday immediately preceding the meetings, the New Providence Presbyterian church will hold a special observance in preparation for the meetings and the minister will be Dr. Ralph Waldo Lloyd of Maryville college.

Men's Debate Tryouts Are Held Tonight At 7:00

Tonight at 7:00 the men's varsity debate tryouts will be held in Dr. Davis' classroom in Anderson hall. Twenty-two members of the varsity speech class will compete for positions on the 1941 varsity debate squad. On Monday afternoon at 3:00, twelve women will try out for the team.

The question to be debated is the National Pi Kappa Delta question, "Resolved that the nations of the Western Hemisphere should form a permanent union." The speeches will be seven minutes long with three minutes for refutation. Dr. E. R. Hunter, Dr. David H. Briggs, and Mr. Archibald Pieper will judge both the men's and women's contests.

During the intermission tea will be served by the members of the local Pi Kappa Delta chapter. Miss Elizabeth Moore will pour.

Dr. Queener, the debate coach, announced at the last meeting of the debate class that this year's Forensic squad would be comprised of sixteen members. He also stated that the team would participate in several large contests during the year. The schedule will probably include trips to the state tournament at Tennessee Polytechnic Institute, the South Atlantic tournament at Hickory, N. C., the Provincal tournament in Alabama, and the Grand Eastern tournament at Rock Hill, S.C.

Chilhowean To Have Five Big Sections

Maryville college's 1941 Chilhowean, the annual production of the junior class, is rapidly being assembled by this year's editorial staff. Most of the pictures of the students and faculty have been taken, and most of the informal "shots" for the big feature section are ready for the engraver.

The Chilhowean will have five big sections this year. There will be the attractive feature section with pictures of daily campus life; the regular section with pictures of the students and faculty; the big athletic section; the interesting organizations section; and the illuminating advertising part of the book. Altogether, there will be approximately 150 pages in this year's Chilhowean. The book is to be dedicated to a person who has faithfully performed an indispensible service for the college for more than two decades, Mrs. John A. Walker. Campus beauties, the class sponsors, will also be featured in the Chilhowean.

This year's Chilhowean costs but four dollars. Because of the relatively low price, approximately 600 books are to be distributed. If anyone has not yet ordered his annual, he may do so by contacting the business manager of the Chilhowean, College Station.

Five Freshmen Featured In Last Student Recital

The second student recital of the month was held in Voorhees chapel on Wednesday afternoon. Featured on Wednesday's program were five freshmen, an unusually large group to appear in one recital. The recital was attended by all people taking courses in the music department and was the last program of December.

Those participating were as follows: Ted Kidder, Helene Smith, Estelle Farrow, Jack Lippard, Carl Miller, Ruth Cathcart, Louise Lloyd, Ruth Wynn, Marion Magill, Janice Graybeal, Louise Marshall, Florence Barbount, and Dave Kidder. Miss Horne was in charge of the program.

Christmas Season Opened At Student Vol Meeting

The Christmas spirit was introduced into the regular Student Volunteer meeting last Sunday night by the singing of Christmas carols. Several religious poems were read by Virginia Berg, Margaret Fain, Dorothy Barber, Stuart Schimpf, and Richard Boyd. Betty Parker played a number of selections on her accordian.

Student Vols will meet with the YM and YW for the annual Christmas program next Sunday evening.

Janet Lindsay Selected To Fill Junior Vacancy

At a meeting of the Publications committee last Tuesday afternoon, Janet Lindsay was selected to fill the vacancy in the Echo staff caused by the resignation of John Ross. Miss Lindsay has already joined the staff and begun work.

Hailing from Honesdale, Pa., Janet is a junior, majoring in Bible. In extra curricular activities she stands out as a member of Pi Kappa Delta, Law club, Writers' Workshop, Theta Epsilon, and last year's varsity debate squad.

Theta And Bainonian To See Christmas Pageant

Tonight Theta Epsilon will play host to Bainonian as the annual Christmas pageant is presented. After the pageant gifts of food will be received for later distribution among the underprivileged children on Home Avenue.

NO CHRISTMAS TRUCE

This year, Christmas, the only really international holiday, will pass almost uncelebrated by two-thirds of the earth's population. Both belligerants in the present war ignored the plea of Pope Pieus XII for a Christmas truce, one of them because a dictator has frequently denounced the Man born on that day as a rabble-rousing member of an outcast race, and the other because its leaders fear a truce would not be observed even if granted by a foe whose word has so often proved untrustworthy. Hunger and terror will over-shadow Christmas in Europe.

Amid such conditions, the philosophy of peace, justice, and love taught by Jesus might be rejected as impractical theory if it were not true that they have survived many tragic conflicts during the twenty centuries of their history. They had their origin in a time of great crisis, and many of the men commissioned to advocate them in both ancient and in modern times have paid the price of persecution and death, but in spite of all efforts at suppression, these ideals found a permanent place in human thought. Even today they furnish man's highest goal of social perfection.

Unfortunately, as long as there are political systems which recognize no measure of justice except force, neither lasting justice nor lasting peace can be achieved. Since this is true, those of us in a part of the world not yet engulfed in actual war owe a debt of obligation to the people, who by struggling against great odds, are doing their utmost to defeat the forces of ruthless aggression, and so to take the first step toward enduring peace. The aid which we, as a nation, can send could be contributed to no more worthy cause—to no cause more in accord with the hope for "peace on earth".

LORD LOTHIAN PASSES

The loss sustained by the death of Lord Lothian is keenly felt, not only in Britain, but in the United States as well. At his post as England's number one ambassador during a period when his country was facing the gravest crisis in its long history, he rendered immeasurable service through his successful efforts to promote a spirit of cooperation between England and America. He did his job well.

To the people of the United States, Lord Lothian was more than a diplomatic representative. He stood for a great democracy fighting for its life; he stood for a way of life like our own; he stood for Britain.

TRIBUTE TO MRS. WEST

By BETTE UMBACH

When Dickens' "Christmas Carol" is presented next Wednesday evening, Maryville college will witness another production under the direction of Mrs. Nita Eckles West, who is responsible for the talented, well-organized department of dramatics for which this college is so well known.

Mrs. West came to Maryville college in 1899, with a B. A. degree from Murphy college, and a B. O. degree from Grant University. Since that time, with the exception of five years, she has been working in the dramatic department, teaching, producing plays, building up the dramatic department into one that has become famous throughout East Tennessee.

Versatility is one trait possessed by Mrs. West—she'll tackle any play, from Shakespeare through Maxwell Anderson, on down to Kaufman and Hart. And she always does a splendid piece of work on whatever she attempts.

Among the plays which have been produced by Mrs. West have been "Mary of Scotland", "Elizabeth the Queen", "Beggar on Horseback"', "Tovarich", "You Can't Take It With You", "Hamlet", and "Quality Street."

Last year three outstanding plays were given by the societies and Theta Alpha Phi—"Winterset", "Family Portrait", and "Our Town". "Winterset" was probably the hardest play to produce in the past several years. Written for a larger stage, more extensive facilities and experienced actors, it was put on at Maryville college with a great deal of difficulty; but through the patient work, the ingenuity, and high ability of Mrs. West, it assumed the quality present in first class legitimate stage productions.

"Family Portrait", the prize winning play of the year, was given by Bainonian and Athenian societies. That play was outstanding for its excellent characterization, and beauty of staging.

Thornton Wilders "Our Town", a departure from most stage traditions and conventions, was superbly handled as the Theta Alpha Phi production.

So far, "Mr. Pim Passes By" has been the one major dramatic presentation this year. In a play of this type—subtle, humorous, Mrs. West seems to bring out the humor that might otherwise be overlooked; but she does not sacrifice the dramatic aspect to the comedy. For the remainder of the year, the dramatic program consists of the two plays to be put on by the societies, Bainonian-Athenian, and Theta Epsilon-Alpha Sigma; the senior class play; and two minor productions, the "Christmas Carol", and the May Day pageant.

When seeing a play presented at Maryville college, the average audience does not realize what patience, work, and real ability are behind such a production. But whether or not they do see this side of the play, they do see and appreciate the perfection and the finesse which characterizes every play which has been under the direction of Mrs. Nita Eckles West.

Scots and Soda

There seems to have been a little seasonal confusion during the '40 year—snow on Easter, balmy—well, practically—breezes for Christmas holidays. Even so, most of the campus inmates seem to have the holiday spirit well in hand. The dining hall decorations provided graciously by Mrs. Walker, the Christmas tree lit up in front of Thaw hall, and the aforementioned decorations in the book store make the campus look more like a Christmas card scene than the grounds of a denominational institution of learning.

It's seldom anything gets us worked up to the extent that we want to write an editorial. We're modest in our ambitions—this column usually satisfies us; it isn't much, but we love it. Besides it's the only public organ of expression we have, except for two debating room-mates. Anyway, since we can't write the editorial which we feel the occasion demands, we'll just have to vent our wrath through this medium. So, may we say here, in print (or reasonable facsimile thereof) that for all our opinion is worth to the breathlessly waiting multitudes—we don't approve of the "prank" pulled in the College Cottage Tuesday night. We may be prejudiced, but we can't reconcile destruction to our ideas of humor. Someone ought to borrow John Ballenger's copy of Joe Miller's Joke Book and get something really clever.

"Christmas time is the time for legs, and the time for legs is Christmas time"—we heard some freshman chanting greedily. And from the looks of the basketball games that have been happening lately, he was on the right track. It's a pity the holidays have to make a break in the schedule when the players appear to be just getting things going:—but a break of three weeks means little to Honaker's Hustling Hoopmen, whose pants, anyway, are on their last legs.

In hearing about this new Art club that is getting itself formed, we picked up the interesting bit of information that some members of the student body and—and this really pains us—faculty, too, are in complete ignorance as to the exact whereabouts of the Elizabeth Gowdy Baker Memorial Art Gallery. May we make a suggestion to the effect that a map be conveniently posted, showing the location of said Gallery, in relation to the College Maid Shop, the costume department, the Chilhowean office, and the S & W Cafeteria? This, you understand, is only a suggestion.

Our hearts are made glad by the sight of all these lovely people who are getting ready to scatter hither, thither, and yon for their Christmas holidays. Only one sad note—the picture of Dud Moore, having to stay here in the post office to send all the mail to the people who have scattered hither, thither, and yon for their Christmas holidays.

Scratch anybody these days and you'll find a person pressing a dress or pair of pants to either have their picture taken for the 1941 Chilhowean, or to sing in the Messiah. And we would like to state for the benefit of those who plan to attend this presentation tomorrow, that not only are you about to HEAR two hundred and twenty-four trained voices rendering this creation, but you will SEE Dave Hall in full-pressed suit for the first time this school year.

If any of you people are dissatisfied with the way your little dormitory hovel looks, you might look in on the present condition of the Practice House, caused by Elsie Cornell, Ezell Hayes, and all the little interior decorators busily interior decorating the place. Then consider yourself lucky.

Here's a pleasant thought for anybody who grieves because the time is too short between now and Christmas to get any real work done on term-papers and notebooks. Just twenty-four more days and you'll be back where you can start to work on them again.

So, Merry Christmas to all.

TALK OF THE WEEK .... By Jean White

Studio Tea Unveils Potential Talent

Potential Hollywood talent was discovered at the Dramatic Art studio tea and program last Friday evening, December 6 when three one-act plays were presented in Bartlett auditorium.

"Gratitude" by George Milton Savage was a mystery play directed by Elizabeth Glover, in which Helen Airheart played the comedy role. The other characters included June Morley, Alice Jones, Troye Moore, and Annalyn Ramey.

The second play, an intensely dramatic production, "Mary Jones", was written by the professor in the speech department at the University of Wisconsin, Ronald Mitchell. Frances John Hellums and John Hawkins portrayed intense living characters as antagonists in the case of mercy vs. murder. The incidental role was played by Doris Murray. Marianne Coleman was director.

Athenian Plans Musical Program By German Band

Athenian will be entertained Saturday night by the German band, which was organized at the last meeting of the German club. Under the direction of Oliver Williams, the band consists of the following members: Phil Vance, Mae Persing, Charles Gilpatrick, Carl Muller, and Bill Hargraves.

Last Saturday night Athenian played host to all the societies, presenting a fine program of music by the college quartet, John Guinter and Dave Kidder.

LITTLE BROWN SUIT INDISPENSABLE

The Scotties got a plug this week from a man who should know his basketball. When asked about the outlook for his Wildcats in their defense of the SEC title, Adolph Rupp, head U-K basketeer for over a decade, announced, "If we can beat Tennessee, we can win it again." Here's where the Highlanders come in: Some reporter volunteered, "Maryville can't be so tough." "Maryville," snapped the man in the faded brown suit. "Why, it won 17 out of 19 games last season and it has an experienced squad. Maryville will be plenty mean, you just watch." (Thanks, Mr. Rupp, and aside from the Scottie-'Cat tussle, we hope that brown suit of yours lasts for decades to come.)

MUZZLED BRUINS

The Garnet and Orange (the Scots are still Orange and Garnet) from Norman Junior college traveled a long distance for the spanking they took from the Maryville kiltie-klads last Thursday eve. Their home town, Norman Park, Georgia, is located 'way down in the depths of the Peach State. When we say depths, we mean that the Bears admitted Tennessee seemed to be North Pole proper. "How my studies are missing me this week", one Cracker wailed. N. J. C., it seems, also features a pre-Yule barrage of term papers and exams.

GOOD GOING, FISCHBACH

Although it probably rates front page news, we would like to add to the compliments already heaped upon Coach Fischbach and his swimmers for the grand performance at the water carnival last Saturday evening. Aside from the mishap when Dave (Captain Kiddo) Hall practically drowned John (Ace Cameraman) Ballenger, the whole affair was a huge success. Those all-women, all-men, and mixed formations really looked like something transplanted from the Billy Rose World's Fair Aquacade.

COME ON, VOLLEYBALL

The intramural football tourney was run off in record style, but the volleyball campaign has hit a snag which gives the whole system a slight black-eye. For instance, in the society-club division, Athenian leads the loop with four victories and no defeats. The irony (or agony), however, is the fact that the men from Athens had not played a single game up to December 12. There is something missing when a team goes through a whole schedule without fighting for the right to the title. Let's go, fellows! Forfeits neither win points nor influence people.

LET'S HAVE MORE OF THIS

We congratulate those who were responsible for matching the junior-senior women with the sophomore femmes for the preliminary to Thursday night's varsity tussle. Although no applause recorder was available, it seemed that enthusiasm ran just as high in this interclass affair as it ran in the Scot-Bear contest. In any event, the experiment proved that Maryville has some real co-ed athletes. We would like to see a permanent attraction of this kind for every game, Mrs. Queener.

Davis Wrestlers Bid For Another State Collegiate Trophy

Several new men reported for practice this week as Coach J. D. Davis continued to round the Maryville wrestlers into condition. Most of the men are now in shape to wrestle for short periods, and pre-Christmas tryouts will be held next week. Each man will wrestle for three or four minutes in order that Coach Davis may determine who are his most reliable performers in each division.

Ken Ross, 145 pound freshman, has been very impressive in several workouts. Mel Gaughan, 121 pounder, is another promising rookie who may become anothcer Phil Evaul with a year or two of experience. V. B. Walker, Horace Justus, and Julius Nicely round out the list of those who have joined the squad recently.

Especially encouraging has been the work of three squadmen from last year, who continue to handle all comers. Joe Suitor, 165 pounder, who was good last year, is really a standout with the additional experience. Jimmy Yunker is among the best of the little fellows—he appears to be the cream of the crop in the 128 lb. class. The always dependable Joe McGill is in the best physical condition of his career, and great things are expected of him this season.

Probably the most evenly matched class is the heavyweight division. A close contest is being staged among three freshman bruisers—Andy Richards, Marvin Mitchell, and Mack Wilson. Richards, by virtue of his slightly greater experience and his vast edge in weight, is rated a slight edge, but quite a race is expected to take place for the heavyweight berth on the squad.

As usual, Phil Evaul, Clem Hahn, and Capt. Wood Everett displayed the most polish of any of the performers. Evaul and Everett, defending state champions in their weight divisions, and Hahn, one of the best college wrestlers in the South, are a trio of lettermen that would do credit to any college wrestling squad.

VOLLEYBALL

In volleyball circles the Athenians rank as club section champions by defeating both the Choir and the Faculty in Friday's games. Unable to score more than seven points in two games, the Choir could not stand the steady pounding of the Athenian forward wall as Foreman, Wright, Fisher, and Thompson continually spiked the ball for points. The scores were 15-6 and 15-1. Dr. Case's brilliant serving and Dr. Collins and Mr. Pieper's defense were not strong enough to save the faculty from defeat and they fell victims to Athenian by 15-4 and 15-9 scores.

In Monday's games, Athenian won on forfeit from the Ministerials and Y Frosh while the Frosh Ministerials game was not played. Wednesday, the Mountaineers forfeited two games, one to the Engineers and the other to the Tenniseers. The Engineers then defeated the Tenniseers 16-14 and 15-1. The two teams had also received forfeit victories from all Americans last Tuesday.

HORSESHOES

Once again poor weather has slowed up the horseshoe tournament, and it is now doubtful if the tourney will be completed by the finish of school. As the teams stand so far, the Baird and Short brothers are tossing deadly games. In the first flight Hodges and McDaniels will meet to decide the flight championship. The Baird boys will take on the winner of the Cooper-Lawson vs. Kidder-Pemberton tussle for the winners of the second flight. Fischbach and Moore are anxiously awaiting to see whether they will play Wright and Dizney or Howard and Tinley or Kell and Evans in the third flight final. The winner of the Hargreave-Johnson vs. Henderson-Randolph games will meet the Short brothers in the finals. In the fifth division Huff and Rogerville will meet etiher of three teams.

BASKETBALL

With the completion of the Volley ball tournament last night, the eyes of the intramural fans are now turning to the basketball season. At the present time ten teams have entered, and play will begin soon after school re-opens. Those teams already entered are Choir, All-Americans, Y Frosh, the Deacons, Spitfires, Foul Balls, Yankees, Question Marks, Rocks and Athenian. Gabriel Williams who has been in charge of arrangements is anxious to have students officiating at the games. Anyone wishing to serve as such, please report at the intramural office.

Like football and volleyball, there will be two leagues, independent and club. These teams will meet afternoons in the Y gym, although it is planned to play several games on the Alumni floor. Men who are competing on the varsity basketball team, wrestling and swimming teams are not eligible for play until their respective sport is over.

The leading news from the intramural office this week, however, is concerning the approaching basketball tournament. All entries and eligibility lists for teams were turned in by Wednesday night, and Thursday afternoon the complete basketball schedule as given at the end of this article was released.

About twenty-five men are now listed on Manager Percy Martin's roll. Practice ends Wednesday for the Christmas holidays, but several more men are expected to supplement the squad when the curtain rises again after Yuletide. Notable among those expected to report is Dave McDaniels, a letterman in the 135 pound class.

January will witness the first intercollegiate matches, when Maryville will set out to gain its second successive state title. With so many promising freshmen out for the sport, the Scotties threaten to make this an annual accomplishment, in spite of the fact that many larger schools engage in the Tennessee Intercollegiate competition.

Highlanders Defeat Georgia College In Cage Tilt By 36-22

On Thursday night on the boards of the Alumni gym, the Maryville college basketball team met their first collegiate opponent as they defeated Norman Junior college of Georgia, by the score of 36-22. The following morning at 6 a.m., the Scotties left for Lexington to battle the Kentucky Wildcats.

The visitors went to work at the beginning of the game and by dropping long shots from all angles with monotonous regularity, built up a commanding lead over the Scotties. Ray Lillard, a Maryville sub, was placed in the game at center and dropped in several in a row to tear down the lead of the visitors. The Highlanders surged ahead at the start of the third quarter and were never threatened from then on.

Boydson Baird and Lillard paced the Highlanders as they dropped 10 points apiece through the hoop. For the losers, Thomas was high man with seven. For Maryville Lillard was high scorer as he continued the pace he set against the Maryville Real Estaters last Monday night. Boydson continued to play his sparkling game and time and time again stole the ball from the opposing team, and most of the time covered the backboard over his taller opponents. Scot Honaker, who drove six points into the cords, was a big factor on the front line as he stole the ball from the guards several times. Lloyd Taylor was the big man around the backboard, as he took rebound after rebound off the board. Although Taylor made no points he was a main cog in the defense.

The Scotties started with a man-to-man defense and then switched to zone when they found that the visitors were making such a high percentage of their shots by employing an effective screen against the defense. Changing to the zone defense the Scotties started to roll and were never stopped from there on. The referee for the evening's proceedings was Toots Blazer.

MESSIAH

Burthen is Light" and "But Thanks Be To God," which are new and strange to last year's audience.

The Messiah is probably the best known and loved of all religious compositions. Since its composition in 1741 by the great master-composer, George Frederick Handel, it has been received with highest approval and enthusiasm everywhere. Its words are based on scriptural passages concerning the Messiah. It is yearly an inspiration to millions who hear this impressive interpretation of the story of Christ. The theme of the oratorio is in three parts, the prophecy and announcements about the coming of the Christ; the life, death, and rseurrection of the Messiah; and the meaning and results of His having lived, died, and risen. The story unfolds with such words as the prophesy, "Behold, a Virgin Shall Conceive", "For Unto Us a Child is Born", "Surely He Hath Borne Our Griefs", and "Hallelujah."

The audience is invited to stand and join in the singing of the Hallelujah chorus, according to the precedent set by King George II of England, who was so greatly impressed by this music at his first hearing that he stood in reverence and humility.

The order for the program tomorrow is as follows:

Overture

Recitative for tenor, "Comfort Ye My People", Samuel Cornelius.

Air for tenor, "Every Valley Shall Be Exalted", Samuel Cornelius.

Chorus, "And the Glory of the Lord"

Recitative for alto, "Behold! A Virgin Shall Conceive", Ruth Andrews

Air for alto and chorus, "O Thou That Tellest Good Tidings to Zion"

Recitative for bass, "For Behold, Darkness Shall Cover the Eearth", Lynn Birchfiel

Pastoral Symphony

Chorus, "Glory to God"

Recitative for alto, "Then Shall the Eyes of the Blind Be Opened", "He Shall Feed His Flock Like a Shepherd," Ruth Andrews

Air for soprano, "Come Unto Him", Louise Marshall

Chorus, "His Yoke is Easy and His Burthen is Light."

Chorus, "Behold the Lamb of God"

Air for alto, "He Was Despised," Ruth Andrews

Chorus, "Surely He Hath Borne Our Griefs," "And With His Stripes We Are Healed," "All We Like Sheep Have Gone Astray."

Air for soprano, "Rejoice Greatly, O Daughter of Zion," Elizabeth Ann Huddleston

Chorus, "Hallelujah"

Chorus, "Since by Man Came Death"

Recitative for alto, "Then Shall Be Brought to Pass," Ruth Andrews

Second Payment On Chilhowean To Be Made February First

Knoxville Concerns Primary Advertisers

February 1 is the date that all second payments are due on the 1941 Chilhowean. The second payment is a two dollar payment and may be paid anytime from now until the first of February. Collections are made daily at the Book Store and each evening in the Chilhowean office, Thaw hall. During the last week of the semester, payments may also made in front of the Treasurer's office during the afternoon. The business manager urges that everyone make their payments as soon as possible.

February 1 also marks the latest date that subscriptions may be made for this year's Chilhowean. Orders will be placed with the printing company at this time, and no extra copies will be ordered. So, if you still have not subscribed for a copy of the annual, you must have your subscription in by February 1 at the latest. Your order for a Chilhowean will also be accepted at the Book Store or at the Chilhowean office.

Bills for organization space in the annual have been given to the different treasurers of the student groups. The business staff would appreciate the early payment of these bills. It is hoped that all clubs will make some payment during January. If we are to have an early delivery of the annual, all club space must be paid for in the near future.

The advertising section of the book is complete with the exception of one page. Most of the support which the advertising section gives the annual was made by business men outside of Maryville, primarily by Knoxville concerns.

Council Attacks Corrupt Elections

At the regular meeting of the Student Council this week the members discussed the present system of dating at Maryville. It was suggested that senior girls be allowed one date in town at night per month.

Then the Council turned to the problem of corrupt elections on the campus. It was decided that an election board to control all elections be set up. President Boydson Baird appointed a committee to investigate the cost and technicalities involved in setting up such a board.

Before either of the proposed changes can be put into effect they will have to be discussed and approved by the Student-Faculty committee.

John Thompson will report at Student Vols on the Student Foreign Mission Fellowship Conference, which was held at Keswick, N. J., during the Christmas holidays. The meeting will be at eight o'clock Sunday evening.

9 New Courses Are Offered 2nd Semester

Nine courses, given this year for the first time, are being offered the second-semester. All but one of these courses appear on the printed schedule, and in the catalogue, where they are described.

The one course as yet unannounced is a new course in the Religious Education field, to be listed as Bible 214b, and entitled Religious Education of Adolescents. This course, to be given by Mrs. Cummings, is designed especially for those who wish preparation for teaching in intermediate and senior age groups in church schools and is especially called to the attention of parish workers who deal with those ages.

The other courses, which are described in the catalogue, are: Biology 320, Plant Ecology, taught by Mrs. Brown; Dramatic Art 308, History of the Theater, by Miss Seedorf; German 314, German Romanticism, Dr. Collins; Home Economics 322, Family Relationships, Miss Meiselwitz; Philosophy 314, Esthetics, Dr. Hunter; Sociology 316, History of Social Thought, Dr. Case.

And in the Elementary Teacher Training program the two new courses are: Education 220, Children's Literature, Miss Keller; and Education 222, Health, Mrs. Queener.

One schedule change shifts Economics 206 from the "a" to the "f" period.

Vandy Law Dean To Visit Campus

Dean E. C. Arnold of the School of Law at Vanderbilt University will be on the Maryville campus Thursday morning, January 23.

Dean Arnold will be in Dr. Hunter's office in Anderson hall between the close of chapel and 11:00 to talk to students who are interested in attending law school or in graduate work in any field. He will have with him information concerning scholarships and fellowships to Vanderbilt.

Varsity Teams Begin Competitive Debate

Teams Open Season at Smoky Mountain Debate Conferences in February

The debate season opens February 1 with the Men's Smoky Mountain Debate Conference at Lincoln Memorial University. The Maryville squad is sending three teams, an affirmative one composed of Frank Cross and Bill Felknor; two negative ones composed of Charles Foreman and Vernon Lloyd, and Trevor Rees-Jones and Hilton Wick. In addition members of the local squad will enter contests in oratory, extemporaneous speaking, impromptu, and after dinner. Preliminary try-outs for these events will be held next Friday afternoon, several members trying for each one.

Two weeks later on February 15 the Women's Smoky Mountain Debate Conference will take place at Virginia Intermont college in Bristol, Va. Janet Lindsay and Elizabeth Moore will represent the local squad in the comparatively new type of debate—direct clash; while Phyllis Anne Cain and Lucille Lynch will uphold the affirmative argument, and Edith Monroe and Jeanne Stringham the negative. Natalie Yelton will enter the after-dinner and oratorical contests, and Beth Pascoe, impromptu and extemp.

Definite dates have now been fixed for other tournaments which Maryville is planning to enter. The State Tournament at TPI in Cookeville, Tennessee, will be held from February 27 to March 1; the South Atlantic at Hickory, North Carolina, from March 6-8; the Provincial tournament in Montivallo, Alabama, at the State Teachers college, from April 2 to 5; and the Grand Eastern at Winthrop College in Rock Hill, South Carolina in the middle of April.

Flu Blitzkrieg Strikes Faculty And Students

Not in any way slighting Maryville college, the current flu epidemic has "conscripted" into its ranks at least one-eighth of the student body in the short time the students have been back from the Christmas holidays. Only in a comparatively small number of cases has the illness lasted more than three or four days, and reports from the hospital show that the epidemic is definitely on the downward trend; however, all students, and especially those who are just recuperating from the flu or those who feel that they may possibly be coming down with it, are requested not to slacken their efforts in taking precautionary measures against the epidemic.

"No respecter of persons" is this flu epidemic, for, to date, eighteen members of the faculty have been kept at home with it. Miss Heron, Miss Jewell, Miss Johnson, Mrs. West, Mrs. Wrinkle, Dr. Hunter, Dr. Collins, and Mr. Honaker have all returned to the campus the latter part of this week, none of them having had severe cases. Dr. Queener, who had not only the flu but also a severe case of ivy poison, came back to the classroom earlier in the week. Dr. Briggs, Mr. Howell, Miss Davies, Dr. Preston, Mr. Colbert, Mr. Hovel, Mr. McCurry, Mrs. Lowry, and Mrs. Snyder remain on the stay-at-home list.

The college hospital remains filled, having nineteen patients, and since all the sick could not be moved to the hospital, the home economics department of the college, supervised by Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz, has cooperated with the hospital in providing the sick students in the dormitories with the proper diet.

An interesting sidelight on the epidemic is the fact that about four times as many girls as boys have been sick; also, the students from the north have been hit harder than those from the south.

Donald Grant, Eminent British Speaker Concludes 3-Day Series of Addresses

STUDENTS AFFORDED CHANCE TO OBTAIN FIRST HAND AUTHORITATIVE INFORMATION ON DIPLOMACY IN SECOND WORLD WAR

On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week, Mr. Donald Grant, eminent British speaker, presented a series of up-to-date and enlightening lectures on international affairs to residents of the college campus and community. This program of addresses was under the auspices of the Institute of International Education; and to anyone interested in current events of world importance, proved a source of interest and of helpful gain in knowledge.

Mr. Grant is a noted authority in his field of international affairs analysis. His popularity as a speaker is made evident by his numerous calls to lecture at colleges in the United States and by the enthusiastic reception his addresses received here.

A background of culture, education, and varied experiences has made him the authoritative speaker he is. During the critical years of the past two decades he has lived in France, Switzerland, Austria, Soviet Russia, and the Balkans. In this time his keen interest in world events has developed and been amply supplied with significant information.

After his graduation from the University of Edinburgh, Mr. Grant gained academic honors from several European universities. Following the last war he was one of the organizers of European Student Relief, later known as the International Student Service. His activities in this capacity caused his presence in the majority of the countries of the European continent. Four years he spent in New Zealand as General Secretary of the Student Christian Movement. So his outlook for many years has, of necessity, been international in scope.

Mr. Grant was in Maryville in October, 1938, just after the now-famous Munich Agreement. He recalled this visit favorably as the course of his opening lecture brought him to a discussion of the time of the pact of Munich.

Characterized as "congenial, informal, highly intelligent, highly informed, and willing to talk," Mr. Grant has the prized capacity for keeping the interest of an audience. Throughout his eight addresses his deep voice, slight accent, and interested motions combined with his straight, rapid way of speaking to hold his various groups of listeners.

His schedule of speeches included assembly addresses, a talk to the local Kiwanis club, an informal question forum at the Faculty club tea Friday evening, and a talk as guest speaker for the International Relations club.

In his assembly address, "Britains at War", on Thursday morning, Mr. Grant discussed Hitler's policy of asking "for something and then everything," affirmed that Hitler cannot be appeased until he dominates the world, and mentioned appeasement with the reminder that Hitler never conceded an inch. He emphasized the vital importance of the efforts made by nations to secure war materials, and made the

New Fashion Course Planned By Student

Kitty Bennett, senior home economics major from Pearl River, New York, is planning to work out a special home economics course for next semester in which she will becme a connoisseur and authority on campus clothing styles.

Under the supervision of Miss Mary R. Armstrong, assistant professor of home economics, Kitty will observe trends in style as seen in the different clothes and ensembles worn by students and faculty members on the Maryville college campus. Then in the manner of the fashion reviewer for popular magazines and newspapers, she will write out a weekly report of her observations and decisions. Thanks also to Kitty's column, wearers of beautiful evening gowns or stunning evening attire to college "First Nighters" or Artists Series will no longer go without public recognition.

New Book By Gates Recently Off Press

"Youth and the Kingdom" is the title of the new book by Dr. John A. Gates, associate professor of Religious Education. For several years Dr. Gates was director of Religious Education in various churches and was requested by the Methodist Church to write this book.

Just off the Abingdon-Cokesbury Press in Nashville, "Youth and the Kingdom" was edited by Paul H. Vieth and was copyrighted in 1940. It is a development of Dr. Gates' dissertation as part of his work for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Most of the work was done when the author was at the Divinity school of Yale University where he made a special study of the meaning of the Kingdom of God. It is not, however, the dissertation itself.

The aim of the book is: (1) to make the idea of the Kingdom of God real and meaningful in terms of contemporary life; and (2) to guide young people into that experienced relationship to God and men which membership in the Kingdom involves. Although it was written for senior high school students, it is usable for college students also.

There are fifteen chapters in the book which make a total of one hundred and sixty-four pages. Chapter The Kingdom Is at Hand, headings are: Thy Kingdom Come, Utopia, The Prophets Point a Way, The Kingdom Is at Hand, The Message of Jesus, God, Myself, The World's School, Men and Machines, Those Who Work, Many That Were Sick, Of One Blood, They That Take the Sword, And Make Disciples, A Man Under Authority.

Dr. Gates stated that the book represents about two year's work, being completed in June, 1940.

Flu Has Humorous Side As Well As Darker Side, Reporter Discovers

By TREVOR REES-JONES

Stretchers. Boys carrying food with altruistic looks on their faces. Disrupted chapel services. All this has been brought to the attention of the Echo and after due consideration and research we have prepared a report as follows:

The prototype of the flu sufferer has been chosen. She is Betty Moore, varsity debater and English major from Patton, Maine. When your reporter visited Betty she was reminiscing. A look at the waal and the table supplies an explanation for this. According to Betty she has not the flu, but Oriental rot. All in all, her time has not been wasted. Although the Spanish Civil War hasn't helped her recovery much, it at least furnished her a very interesting book to read in her spare moments: Heminway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls". She also thought up a title for her next Workshop theme. So maybe it's not so bad after all. At least that is what your reporter thought as he took a last look at her commissary (grapefruit, tomato, and other assorted juices) and bid a fair "Adieu" to the patient.

Out of the epidemic have appeared certain tales and heroes who will go down in the memories of the students here. For example, Carnegie has the distinction of owning a male Florence Nightingale. This is none other than Jack Zerwas. Mother Zerwas has taken under his care the entire male population of the Hill and in a very efficient manner, too. Jack, armed with a thermometer and a knack of learning the truth, parades around the hall stopping in here to utter a cheerful word and there to tuck in some helpless boy, and right behind him are the members of the newly instituted Carnegie Maid Service. Bedside service can now be added to the sign on the front of the building.

But there was one fellow who pulled Jack's leg, so to speak. It seems that this boy, George Fender, we will call him, noticing the pleased expression on the faces of the patients at Carnegie, decided to acquire the flu in one big hurry. So every time Jack came around George groaned and coughed with very good results. Breakfast, dinner, and supper were served to him; then poor George, of a roving nature ordinarily, went to see "Hudson's Bay". No sooner than he had left than here came Jack with

Donald Grant Talks To Reporter Of Everything From Golf To Warfare

By CARSON BREWER

Thursday afternoon, I spent one of the most enjoyable forty-five minutes I have ever spent with a person whom I was meeting for the very first time. The person was Donald Grant, who lectures in the United States about Great Britain, and who lectures in Great Britain about the United States.

Grant will talk about anything and everything from Bobby Jones to the Battle of Britain. He is qualified to talk about these two because he left Britain only two weeks after being in London when the Luftwaffe blasted London with one of the first great attacks on Sept. 7

"The sky over the Thames," said Grant, "was aflame with the reflection of burning dock yards on the Thames. And," he said with a twinkle in his blue eyes, "the Nazis lost 185 bombers in those raids. After that they learned to send fighters with the bombers."

And Grant is qualified to talk of Bobby Jones because he played golf with him in Atlanta the last day of last year. "I played quite decently, too", Grant grinned.

Although Donald Grant is very much interested in golf and soccer, he is even more interested in the fate of his country, where he was born in the Highlands fifty-one years ago. (Incidentally, in speaking of his age, Grant said proudly, "People always think I'm younger.")

One of the first questions I asked him was about the Socialistic state that some think will be established in England after the war is over. Grant says there will be a definite change in the social system in England when the war is over; but he does not agree with Ernest Bevin, British Labor leader, who says outright that there will be a Socialistic state set up in England. Britain, Grant thinks, will not go back to her social position of 1938. There will be a general leveling of classes. In fact, this is going on to a great extent now while the war is in progress. Taxes graduated to take practically all the earnings of the rich contribute much to this leveling. Perhaps this tendency will lessen after the war is over; but even then, there will remain a great change—a change for the good, Grant thinks. Churchill understands the make-up of the working people, he recognizes the need for some change, and the working people expect greater opportunities at the end of the war. However, Grant appears to think this change will be brought about within the existing form of government. In other words, there will be no Socialistic state in England.

This question is important now in regard to the aid the United States will be willing to extend to Britain. President Roosevelt has sent his right hand man, Harry Hopkins, to England in order to get first-hand information about just that situation. And Senator Vandenburg has asked concerning the proposed Socialistic set-up in England, "Are we going to fight for that too?"

And as for our actually fighting for England with man power, Grant expressed the opinion that this is very unlikely. Many well-informed people in our country think that Britain must invade the German-occupied portion of the continent in order to win the war. And they think, also, that Britain, to definitely knock out Germany, will have to invade Germany and German-held territory. However, he does not think another AEF will be necessary. And, also, he says the British people do not expect us to send another AEF.

It is his opinion that British production plus American production will, in the near future, place the Royal Air Force on par with the Nazi Luftwaffe. At that point the danger of a German invasion will be greatly lessened. Then Britain can start cooking

New Registration Plan To Relieve Congestion

Dr. Frank D. McClelland announced this week that in order to shorten the waiting line at the Treasurer's office at the end of the semester all registration cards students are being asked to take their registration cards to the Treasurer's office as soon as they have been checked by the Personnel office. Even if a student cannot pay his bills until the end of the semester, the Treasurer's office can take care of preliminary matters and thus quicken the actual paying process later on.

The seniors are registering this week; juniors and sophomores next week; and the freshmen, the following week. A late registration fee of $2.50 is charged each student who fails to register during his allotted time.

Santa Brings Husbands To Four Maryville Women

Announcements have been made of the marriages of one Maryville college employee and three college students. These four marriages took place during the Christmas vacation.

Miss Gladys Helton, who is an assistant in the College Maid Shop, married Mr. Rocklen W. King, on January third, at the McCalla Baptist church in Knoxville, Tenn. Mr. King is at present employed in Maryville.

On January fifth, Helen Smith, of Clinton, Tennessee, married R. P. Weaver, of Baton Rouge, La. Helen Smith was chosen the freshman class sponsor, and was a member of the college choir.

Martha Lay, of Oneida, Tennessee, married Murrell Heaton, of Kentucky.

The holiday weddings also included Ruth Guess, of Chattanooga, who was a junior transfer from Tennessee Wesleyan college.

Current Affairs Are Important

The lectures by Mr. Donald Grant concluded today, furnished a rare opportunity for the college community to hear an informed speaker on international affairs. His wide experience as a world traveler and observer enabled him to speak with authority on many of the events that have become important in the light of contemporary history. While many of these were common events of the news, they are none too familiar to the average college audience.

It is a deplorable fact that a great many college students allow themselves to become relatively uninformed about current developments. A large number of them do not even read a daily paper, and still fewer make any effort to read editorial comment either in a newspaper or in a critical magazine. If college life necessitates shutting out world problems for four years, its educational value might well be questioned, because there was never a time when national and international events reached the daily life of the individual to the extent that they do today. Modern business practice demands that decisions be made not only on the basis of local information, but on an accurate knowledge of the world situation. An event six thousand miles away often directly or indirectly affects the economic and social relationships of community life.

The person who makes no effort to relate his formal education to the conditions around him, is not likely to do much toward coping with or improving those conditions. Programs like those conducted by Mr. Grant are highly instructive, but a thorough day to day knowledge of current affairs requires some individual effort.

Wheeler Distorts The Facts

Senator Wheeler's bloc of isolationists, few in number but formidable as a legislative pressure group, are taking a dangerous step in their effort to stop the lend-lease aid-to-Britain bill. The danger lies not so much in their congressional discussion of the measure, for there is nothing wrong with full and free debate on any question, but in the appeal to the country which they have undertaken. On a popular Sunday evening radio program, the war-scared senator made a statement, since branded by the President as a deliberate untruth, to the effect that the aid to Britain program would lead to "plowing under every fourth American boy". Such an appeal is begging the question, since there has been no consideration of a plan to send an expeditionary force to England; and since Mr. Roosevelt has repeatedly promised no such action would be taken.

It is in the interest of preventing just such a sacrifice of blood that the administration plan was proposed. If Great Britain should lose this war and we should be faced with a victorious Germany, the Battle of America would entail not only every fourth boy, but also the death of thousands of civilians in the devastation which accompanies total war. The Royal Air Force and the British Navy now stand between us and such a catastrophe. It is certainly to our interests to keep them in this position.

The other alleged argument against the bill is that it gives the president too much power. An emergency as great as the one we now face requires extraordinary action, and to grant it is in full accord with precedent. While we are not technically at war with Germany, we are committed to a policy of partnership with Great Britain in the winning of the war. Our best effort demands a war-time domestic policy, and obviously the executive is the legal authority to exercise the necessary power to make it effective.

Senator Wheeler and his allies are following a course of action which fits perfectly into the German plan for reducing democracy throughout the world, because it promotes disunity at home.

Student Council—Congratulations

This week the student Council took up the problems of corrupt elections on the Maryville campus. In turning to this discussion, the Council is performing a real service and is making a step in the right direction.

We heartily approve the decision to set up a board of election control, and we believe the Council is the logical body to assume the responsibility. Realizing full well that the proposed change requires the approval of the Student-Faculty committee, it seems highly improbable that a step which would do so much to remove the evils from campus politics will meet with opposition.

To Council President Baird and his colleagues, the Echo extendeds CONGRATULATIONS.

Scots and Soda

Now that we are all back from Christmas holidays and all down with the flu, this seems to be the ideal time for a brief but thorough discussion of the effect of the Napoleonic method of warfare on latter-day Polynesian pottery. Shall we proceed from there?

Aside from those inevitable jokes brought about by the epidemic, such as the bird-named-enza one, and the one-flu-germ-to-another-flu-germ one, the epidemic itself seems to have furnished enough excitement to fill a page in any self-respecting person's diary.

Things happened here just like that (act of smartly snapping together the thumb and middle finger of right hand). First everybody was rushing about inanely, exchanging vital holidata (by the way—have you heard Tom Stahl's contribution to history?), and comparing New Year's resolutions, and trying to find some decent place for twenty-nine new jars of shaving cream or seventeen lovely bottles of cologne. Then all of a sudden like, the appearance of cough syrup and pills and gargles and powders and aspirin and tablets and fruit juices and soda and glasses and bottles gave the rooms the cozy and homelike atmosphere of a rear section of a busy pharmacy.

The number of casualties reached such enormous proportions that it got so to any inquiry of "How's your room-mate?" you could give a concise fifteen minute report, then continue with "How long have you been up and how on earth is your room-mate getting along?"

Then there's the extraordinarily intelligent senior of Honors Work rank that experienced the thrill of its life when its temperature was taken—the first in its life. After an attempt was made to chew a perfectly lovely thermometer to bits, the remains were extricated from between the upper and lower molars, the proper adjustments were made, and the temperature, which of all things was normal, was successfully recorded. No kidding.

SCOTS AND SODA nominates for special distinction all those willing Clara Bartons and Florence Nightengales and—well—what would be the masculine for such individuals?—Gunga Dins?—who have given such essentials as time and talent to make those who ailed, comfortable, and those who didn't, appreciative.

And rating equal distinction are the home economics students who took upon themselves the task—and if you think its an easy one just try to whip up three squares a day for eighty patients—of feeding the flu people.

To be real coy about the situation, it seems that Cupid has been at work. But along with learning that somebody besides the Bunny brought Easter eggs, and other fundamental bits of knowledge, we found out that somebody besides Cupid presents engagement rings. All of which brings us around to the reports about Humphreys—Dave, that is; and to the Astles-Carter, and the Menning-Corbett developments. (From the distance can be heard the soft sweet strains of "Oh, Promise Me", "Love's Old Sweet Song", or, to be on the safe side of ASCAP, "Frenesi", or "Practice Makes Perfect".)

From all rumors we could gather concerning various trips home, it appears that there's a big percentage in flagging a bus that is inhabited by either Phil Vance or Dana Cox. Their music, clarinet and violin, sweet and hot, respectively, gave the separate busloads something to build dreams around.

And for a bit of diversion you might ask Superman how to get four gallons of milk out of an eight gallon can, a five gallon can, a three gallon can, and a good sized herd of Holsteins.

We might mention that in our opinion, the Thursday morning chapel address, presented by Donald Grant, was one of the most all-round interesting events that has occurred here in many moons. And, we of SCOTS AND SODA, were deeply intrigued by the bonny wee bit of a Scotch brogue he possesses.

You students needn't think that the outlying districts of the United States of America receive their impressions of Maryville college only from you. The faculty gets around too, don't forget.

Take, for example, Florida, which is a peninsula extending from the southeastern corner of the country. During the recent Christmas holidays, this region was visited by such members of Maryville college faculty and staff as the McClelland family, Miss Davies, Miss Clemmie Henry, Miss Jackson, Miss Green, and Miss McCorkle. California, which is situated to the west of Maryville college, was host to President and Mrs. Lloyd, who attended the Rose Bowl game. Maryville college was represented at the Sugar Bowl game by Miss Carson and by Coach J. D. Davis.

The northeastern portion of the country was visited by Dr. Hill Shine, who was at Harvard university; Miss Seedorf, who made a comparison of drama as New Yorkers see it, and college dramatics; and Dr. Newell Preston, who was also at New York. Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz surveyed the great northwest, with headquarters at Kiel, Wisconsin.

At Maryville college, itself, Editor Don Kent spent much time during the holidays creating the 1941 Chilhowean, which is one of the best manuals of its kind in existence.

College Workers Tear Down Old Lamar House

For the past few weeks the main work on the campus has consisted of tearing down the old Lamar house. As much of the material as possible has been saved for future use. The lumber will be used for building a shed for storing farm implements. The basement of the house was filled with broken bricks and wall plaster. When all the lumber, tin, and bricks and have been removed, the basement will be completely filled and then covered with dirt so that grass may be planted on the top.

During the Christmas vacation the milk storage house on the farm was also completed.

Mrs. West To Read Play, "Dark Victory", At Theta

Mrs. Nita Eckles West will read the play "Dark Victory" at the Theta meeting at 6:15 tonight in Theta hall. Immediately preceding the program, the nominating committee will present the nominations for the officers for next semester, and additional nominations will be made from the floor. I.R.C. Host To Grant At Meeting Held In Chapel

Friday evening the regular meeting of the International Relations club was highlighted by the appearance of Donald Grant who spoke on "The War for the Mediterranean—The Role of Balkans, Turks, and Middle East." A large number of students attended the meeting at Voorhees chapel to hear first-hand information on such an important aspect of the present war.

Donald Grant

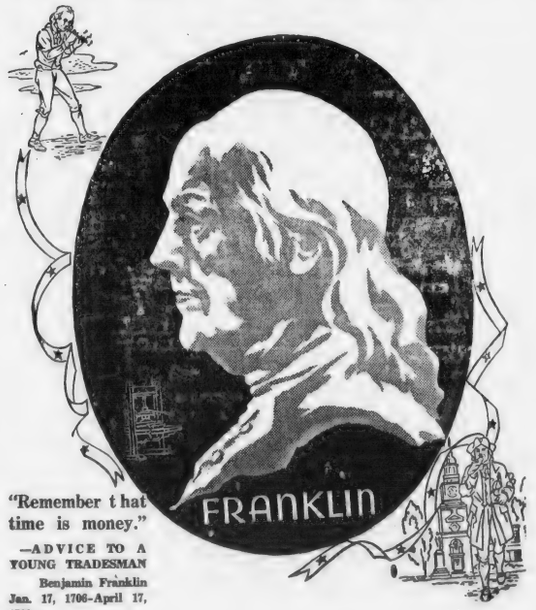
tentative prophecy that Turkey will likely resist if Germany goes into Bulgaria. He compared Britain's earlier policy of "Sits-krieg" with the active blitzkrieg of today.



In his discussion, "Europe Moved to War, 1931-1939", he attributed the present situation to the difference between Germany's ideology and that of the democracies. In answer to the question, "Is the death of the League of Nations permanent?", Mr. Grant suggested that the League was "convalescing—perhaps here in the United States—and predicted its return in some form as the only alternative to another war in twenty-five years.

Other important problems of the present day which the speaker discussed were "The British Empire Now", "The War for the Mediterranean and Africa—the Role of Balkans, Turkey, and Middle East," "Life in England in Total War," and "Role of Russia Under Stalin."

Thrift Week

A Good Time To Start A Savings Account

"Remember that time is money."

—ADVICE TO A YOUNG TRADESMAN
Benjamin Franklin
Jan. 17, 1706-April 17, 1790.

SAVE! January 17th is the anniversary of the birthday of Benjamin Franklin, one of the great men who helped to build this country. One of Franklin's chief attributes was thriftiness, which he constantly preached to those who knew him. This month of his birth reminds us of some of the lessons this great American taught. It is a good time to embark on a systematic savings program, putting away some part of your weekly earnings, no matter how small, just so you put away a regular sum regularly. When your earning power has ceased or decreased, or when some emergency strikes, you'll know how worthwhile it is to have created a reserve fund for your needs. One dollar opens a savings account with us. Come in today and get started!

"DISSERTATION ON ROAST SUGAR"

Because most Maryville football fans are either strongly "fer or agin" the grid destinies of the Tennessee Vols, the Sugar Bowl episode made the Boston College Eagles public enemies one through eleven for some of us, and for others the Bostonians had to move over and share their "tea party." However, since much protest has been made over the radio account of the tussle, you might be interested about the real behind-the-scenes story as told by two well known Maryville authorities. You must remember that each of these gentlemen went to New Orleans on a different mission, and therefore versions of the festivities are slightly misleading to Mr. Average-Maryville-Fan.

Who were these lucky fellows? Could it be Night Watchman Ralph Irwin, or could it be that Maryville-South Dakota Superman? Nope, they're both wrong guesses. It could be none other than those Southern "dapper-dans", J. D. Davis and George Haynes. To get a story out of George, you must play up to his racket by paying a slight toll for shaking the right hand of a man who actually witnessed the 1941 Sugar Bowl Game. After George has the ten mills laid away, he seems to remember that he has forgotten all about football until next September. However, if you listen intently, you might hear him add:

"If the Vols had taken the good old Greyhound, it wouldn't have happened—it couldn't have happened."

This first unsuccessful attempt leaves Mr. A.-M.-F. up a goal post, so he resolves to get the story out of Coach Davis, even if F.B.I. Pieper has to be contracted to administer the third degree.

However, we find Coach quite willing and able to cooperate. Davis has traveled the 'banquet circuit' enough to realize that all coaches rely on 'locker-room dialect', but he starts out by saying he will only do so if we agree not to tattle to Dr. Hunter.

Then it comes, the most thrilling talk ever heard on the hits and misses of a gridiron tussle. When Coach Davis concludes his story of two minutes or two hundred, twenty-two minutes (you have lost all sense of time), you will feel, and rightly too, that you yourself couldn't possibly see as much football in the small space of sixty minutes. There is one phase of the game which Davis is proud to tell his audience. If U-T had known how to handle Boston's spread formation, "the same play which is reputed to be a forty year veteran at Maryville", the score would have been entirely different.

In summary we find that these two authorities have corrected a vital situation. If you loud speaker quarterbacks have attributed U-T's downfall to Neyland, Foxx, Suffridge, or Butler, you must change your tune. Boston College won over Tennessee because of two reasons. Haynes—"They overlooked the Greyhound"; Davis-"Tennessee couldn't even match the so-called 1901 Maryville style of football."

Henschen And McDaniel Bolster Scottie Squad As State Title Defense Looms

Encouraged by the addition to the squad of two more lettermen—Hal Henschen and Dave McDaniel, the Maryville matmen resumed work this week. Most of the wrestlers are overweight and out of condition following the long Christmas layoff, but Coach J. D. Davis has been putting them through long, tough sessions aimed to remove all excess beef.

The team is working in preparation for the first meet of the season, which is to be Tuesday, January 23, with Western Carolina Teachers. The boys will journey to Cullowee, N. C., for the bouts. Little is known about the Teachers, for this is their first year on the mats. At any rate, the Scotties should be able to give them some real competition.

Henschen, defending state light heavyweight champion, had not been expected to wrestle in defense of his title, and his decision to compete is a very encouraging surprise to Scottie rooters. Hailed as one of the best wrestlers ever to represent the Hill, Henschen will probably be called on to wrestle in the 175 pound class rather than with the bigger boys.

McDaniel who lettered last year in the 145 pound division, reported in good shape, and handled himself well in practice bouts this week. His addition will quite ably fill one of the remaining vacanies.

The current influenza epidemic has invaded the ranks of the wrestling team, but practice has gone on daily nonetheless. Joe Magill was able to report Thursday, but will not be strong enough for regular work until next week. "Tiny" Richards, who has been working to rid himself of a little weight, is out with a cold. Incidentally, he is only weighing a little over 220 pounds these days. Others on the sick list are Mel Gaughan, flyweight, and Enrico Scapalatti, middleweight.

In the 165 and 175 pound divisions, Maryville will be represented by Capt. Wood Everett and Clem Hahn, two experienced men who promise to be sure-fire winners this year. This pair continued to take all comers in practice, and are counted on to register many points for the team during the campaign.

One of the problems confronting Coach Davis is Joe Suitor's excess weight. It has been planned to use Suitor in the 155 pound division, several pounds under his present weight. Suitor faces some real work if he manages to lose the necessary tonnage. However, he has shown that he is a capable performer in any class.

Magill will go at 145 pounds. Kenny Ross is another good man at this weight. McDaniel will compete at 145 or 135. Jimmy Yunker will probably weigh in for the first meet at 128, with Phil Evaul, state champion, back in the 121 pound slot. All these men are experienced and well-conditioned. Coach Davis and his bunch promise to make a determined bid to retain Maryville's state title.

It is hoped that the schedule for the season will be definitely arranged and ready for announcement at an early date. Vanderbilt, Tennessee, the Knoxville Y, Chattanooga Y, and several other capable teams will appear on the local mat.

Honaker's Hustling Hoopmen Engage Cullowee College Of North Carolina

On Saturday evening the Maryville college basketball team took to the hardwood for the first time since the Christmas vacation and were beaten 43-40 by Union college. The visitors came to Maryville riding on the crest of a two-game winning streak, and a yearly average of seven out of eight.

The Scots were poor under the basket and this is the department that enabled the visitors to win the ball game. Time and time again the tall men of the victors would take the ball off the backboard and tap it in for a two-pointer. The Highlander's handling of the ball was as good as Union's but the Honaker-five constantly lost possession under the baskets.

Boydson Baird played one of the best games of his sparkling career on the hardwood for Maryville. Time and again "Baby" would came from out of nowhere and steal the ball from the opponents and convert it into points for the Scotties. He was excellent on defensive, and unsurpassable on the offense. Bill Overly, freshman star, also played a sparkling game at the pivot post and he kept the crowd in a panic as he would pivot away from his guard and drop the ball through with that peculiar shot over his head. Honaker and Bowyer hit the hoop for six points apiece.

The playing of the Highlanders, however, was somewhat overshadowed by the sparkling play of the visitors' huge Carrigan. He was all over the court, and although he looked slow, he was the man who controlled both backboards and dropped them through the hoop with a montonous regularity for 14 points.

On Wednesday evening the Highlanders again took to the floor and this time defeated King college in a spine-tingling last minute finish which had the crowd on its feet with excitement. Boydson Baird again came to the rescue when he dropped a field goal through the strings in the last thirty seconds of play to give the Highlanders a 26-25 victory.

The offensive of both teams was not anything great as can be noted by the score, but the Scotties missed many a shot that appeared to be headed straight toward its mark. Their total was nine out of 49 shots. Bower was the big man as far as points were concerned for the Scotties as he dropped three beautiful set shots from the corners and a foul to gather seven points. He was, however, closely followed by Baby Baird who got six and Bill Overly with four.

The Highlanders defense looked good against the sharp-shooting Tornado, but the offensive thrust of the Scotties seemed to be lacking. The Highlanders had to come from behind to win the ball game since they left the floor at half-time with a count of 14-12 against them. From the moment King gathered her first points on a shot from the corner, the lead see-sawed back and forth throughout the entire game. Going into the final minute of play the Scotties were behind 24-23 when Baby cut toward the goal and shot the crip up for the deciding two points. A moment later a double foul was called against Baby and Messerole of King and, while the crowd held its breath, both boys shot and missed their trys to end the game in Maryville's favor by one point.

With games with Norman Junior college, University of Kentucky, Eastern Kentucky Teachers, King college, and Union college already under their belts the Maryville basketball team still has many a game to be played in this year's long and hard schedule.

They left this morning to play Cullowee in North Carolina, and the games so far remaining in January include those with Cumberland on the 22nd, East Tennessee Teachers on the 25th here, and Emory-Henry on the 29th here.

In February the Highlanders engage Carson-Newman on the latter's court on the first day of the month, and ETT there on the fourth. On the eighth comes Hiwassee here, followed by Tusculum there on the 15th and LMU there on the 17th. On the 19th the team makes a long trip to Union, of Barbourville, Ky., and the next day plays LMU on the boards of the Alumni gym. On the 25th of the month they travel to Emory and Henry and the last game will be played at King on the 28th.

In this tough schedule the Highlanders meet some of the best and toughest teams in East Tennessee. Many of the teams are still members of the Smoky Mountain Conference and it may be amusing to note how the Honaker machine does against these teams.

INTRAMURALS

With the first half of the basketball tournament nearing completion, Athenian and the Foul Balls seem to be the teams to beat. Athenian opened its season with an easy victory over the Deacons. Scoring twenty-eight points to fourteen, the Corbett men were never in difficulty after they came through the first period. Crawford with nine and Fisher with six, piled up enough points between them to defeat the Deacons in spite of the valiant play of Grosh.

Not to be outdone, the Foul Balls managed to win a hard fought battle from the Yankees by a 36 to 22 score. Fighting nip and tuck through the first three periods the Yankee machine snapped and Doug Steakley's boys built up a substantial lead and eventually won the game. Ken Cooper and J. D. Hughes battled for individual honors with Cooper finally winning with 12 points to J. D.'s 10. Heischman with five and Graham with seven, were best for the losers.

In the loosest game of the day, the Spitfires romped to an easy 52 to 17 win over the Questionmarks. Leading all the way, the winners were paced by Klimstra, who scored 18 points and Bill Simpson, who had ten to his credit. Lord and Ramsey managed to pile up thirteen of the Questionmarks' 14 points.

Sparked by Cooper and Hughes, the Foul Balls piled up thirty-three points while their opponents, the Spitfires, could only garner five to win the first of Monday's games. Entering the big gym, the Spitfires wreaked their vengeance on the Rocks, whom they set back by a 40-23 score. Simpson and Klimtsar again lead the attack, this time Simpson pulling down top honors with 16, while Klimstra was a close second with 12. Dillinger led the Deacons to an easy 16-11 victory over the Choir. This was the Deacon's first win. Cornelius and Myers rang up the 11 points for the Choir. The Rocks also made their initial appearance in the win column by their 35 to 23 victory over the fast All-Americans. Miller and Mitchell divided twenty points equally, while Faulkner scored 11 for the losers.

Wednesday saw the Choir come back from its defeat with a fifteen to eight win over the Y Frosh. McCurry and Pratt replaced Cornelius and Myers as top scorers. Athenian continued its march for a championship by turning back the Deacons by a score of twenty-one to fourteen. Crawford and Fisher led the Athenian team to its second straight victory over a weaker Ministerial group.

Cooperating better in this game than in their first one, the All Americans showed their colors in defeating the high-scoring Spitfires. Simpson and Klimstra were unable to get loose to pile up their usual scores while Roberts and Williams were dividing high scoring honors for the winners.

Doug Steakley's Foul Balls continued to set the pace as they trounced the Rocks thirty-three to twenty-one. Friday also saw the first forfeit of the tournament as the Y Frosh team failed to appear against the Choir. In the final game of the week, the Yankees beat the Questionmarks 23 to 15.

The horseshoe tournament has finally neared completion with only the Baird and Short brothers, Rogerville and Huff, and Nicely and McDaniels. These four teams will clash early this week to decide the outcome.

HANDBALL —

Registration blanks for the handball tourney will be posted in Carnegie and Bartlett early this week for those wishing to sign up in either the singles or the doubles. Play will begin immediately after the horseshoe tourney is over.

ALL-STAR TEAMS—8

This week the intramural staff issued a bulletin containing their choice for an all star team in both football and volleyball. Of the nine men picked for the football squad, the independent league pulled down five berths, four of them from McGaha's Tigers. Ralph Thompson, Joe Suitor, Ira Hodges, and Mac McGaha managed to clinch these honors in spite of the rabid competition in the club league. From the latter league, Joe Swift of Alpha Sig, Bob Watt of the Ministerials, Bob Hunter of the Y Frosh, and Hedges of Athenian received notice for their splendid play. The Rebel's Williams makes the ninth man on the squad. The results in brief are:

Grant Talks To Reporter

up an invasion of her own.

British fighting men from all over the Empire will aid in this invasion. Grant was loud in his praise for the soldiers of Australia and Canada. Those Australians, he says, are a tough, hard-bitten bunch of boys, some of the greatest fighters in the world. They don't go in so much for strict military discipline. He told the story of the Australian officer in the last war who told his men, "For God's sake, don't call me 'Bert' when the general comes around!"

An attack on the Continent will be necessary to break the morale of the German people, Grant believes. He also thinks that increased bombing by the RAF will aid in breaking the German morale.

Grant left England on September 19. On the trip over he met the first five American destroyers involved in the destroyer-base swap. These five were the first to reach England. England, he believes, is in need of destroyers because she junked many of her own when the disarmament fever swept the world in the twenties.

Grant says a bomb crashed in his own garden, cracking the house and destroying his garage. Now, he says, the British government is providing insurance against destruction by the bombs. The homes will be paid for by the government.

Donald Grant is the kind of man who makes you mad as all get-out at those blasted Germans simply because they're trying to kill a lot of other swell people just like him. He's just as friendly and easy to talk to as the fellow who lives next door. After I had taken up so much of his time that I felt rather guilty, I suggested that I should go. I thanked him for the interview and told him that he was the first real, honest-to-goodness big shot I had ever had the opportunity to interview. He laughed and started talking all over again. This time about the letter he recently received from his young son in England. He drummed his short, stubby fingers vigorously on the desk, an action characteristic of him, and started quoting as nearly as he could from memory. A dog-fight in the air seems to have been taking place while the boy was writing. He wrote: "I hear severe machine gun fire, and I see a Jankers 88, smoke pouring from its starboard side, spinning to the ground. A Spitfire is on its tail. I'm going out to see it." Then, in the post script, the youngster had said that the German fighter had been taken away before he got to it.

In addition to this son, Grant has two other children. One, a girl of eighteen, is in school at the University of London. During the war the university has been transferred to a place of greater safety.

Grant, who has been over much of the United States, thinks the people from Texas to Tennessee are more nearly one hundred per cent in favor of all aid to Britain than any other section of our country.

When asked what he thought of Senator Burton K. Wheeler, leader of the opposition to President Roosevelt's all-out-aid-to-Britain program, Grant turned on that don't-press-me-too-closely grin of his and replied guardedly, "I don't enjoy what Senator Wheeler is doing."

Discussing his travels in Europe, Mr. Grant said, "In Vienna we saw the increasing fruit of the fine achievements carried forward by that city for its total population until it was overthrown by Fascism in 1934. All these years we were working for international understanding and the strength of the League of Nations. One by one we saw the strategic positions in Europe wrested by Hitler or Mussolini from the hold of the democratic nations.

"I attended the Disarmament Conference in 1922, for in those years we began to feel the sharpening of international crises and the growing gloom of impending war."

Scot Mermen Invade Blue Grass Region

This Friday afternoon at four o'clock, the Scottie mermen open our swimming season as we meet Eastern Kentucky Teachers, of Richmond, Ky., whom we turned back twice last year. Since Coach Fischbach had only two lettermen around which to build a team, a Maryville victory at this meet would be a pleasant surprise.

Although time trials are yet to be held, Frank Cross and Bob Wilcox, the only lettermen on the team, will probably get the nod. Others likely to see service are Don Lowry, Frank Miller, Frank Wells, Dud Moore, and George Piper. These same fellows will likely be Maryville's choice in the meet against the University of Tennessee when the two teams clash in Knoxville on the next afternoon.

The remainder of the schedule is as follows:

Feb. 14—Concord State Teach.—here
Feb. 19—University of Tenn.—Here
Feb. 22—Illinois Teachers—Here
Feb. 24—Tusculum—Here
Feb. 28—Tusculum—There
Mar. 7—Emory-Henry—There

Flu Humor

his thermometer. George heard about this and fearing the worst returned to the Hill, climbed up the fire escape, borrowed some pajams, and went to bed in a friend's room. Then a stooge was sent down to inform Jack that George was convalescing in another room. Sure enough, when Jack arrived there was George but he had no temperature. So now George is back at his studies and still the winner.

But there are other ways to benefit from this epidemic. One fellow, who has also asked that his name be withheld from publication, wrote a very plainitive missive home that he had fallen before the ravaging flu. Because of various expenses incurred through the calling of a doctor, and the buying of fruit juices, etc., he needed five dollars. As of now he has not received the money, but there is still hope.

Then there was Nan Wood, who took a little nap and woke up to find a matron standing over her holding a thermometer and exclaiming, "Hmmm, normal".

These are the humorous sides to the story. On the other side out research has proved that over 10 percent of the students and 25 percent of the faculty have fallen victim to Enza. The latter group includes one or two who were not going to take the flu and were well prepared to cope with the situation.

So, with a wish of a speedy recovery to all the patients, a hearty thanks to Mother Zerwas for professional services rendered, and with Good Luck to everybody, the Echo rests.

Joint Meeting of Disc And German Clubs Hear Wagnerian Compositions

At a joint meeting of the German and Disc clubs on Thursday evening at 6:30 an all-Wagnerian program was presented in the Fine Arts studio. The commentator, Edna Manrose, a member of the German club, gave a brief biography on Wagner and then a short talk about each one of his compositions to be played. The first number on the program was the Prelude of Lohengrin. The second composition, sung by Lawrence Tibbetts, was Evening Star from Tannhauser; Elsa Alsen sang Liebestod from Tristan and Isolde for the third number. The beautiful Dawn and Rhine Journey from The Twilight of the Gods was played next. The final selection on the program was the Prelude of Act III of Lohengrin.

Donald Grant Leads Open Forum At Faculty Club

The Faculty club held their January meeting Friday night in the YW rooms. The meeting was formerly planned to be held last Monday in the Tea Room, but due to the present flu epidemic, many of the faculty were unable to attend; so the meeting was postponed until Friday. The main feature of the evening was an open forum and discussion conducted by Mr. Donald Grant. The main theme of the discussion and questions was Nazi religion. Refreshments were served.

Dr. Myers at YM and YW

Dr. A. L. Myers, head of the Bible and Philosophy Department at Tennessee Wesleyan college, will be the guest speaker at YMCA Sunday. He and two boys whom he will bring will each give short talks on different phases of leadership.

YWCA will join the YMCA in Bartlett at five o'clock.

Lehman At Nature Club

The Nature club, at its first meeting of the new year, will present that eminent anthropologist, Harvey Lehman, in a talk entitled "With Apologies to the Apes." The meeting will be held on Monday, January 20, in the chemistry lecture room, beginning at 6:45.

Medical Aptitude Tests Given At Pre-Med Club

On Thursday, January 9, the Pre-Med club met in Fayerweather hall, at which time an aptitude test was given.

This test, similar to the Medical Aptitude test which is given to all graduating medical students, was given to all the members for the purpose of discovering their capableness of studying medicine.

Ministerials To Elect New Officers At Meeting

The Ministerial Association will meet next Thursday evening in Athenian hall at 6:45. The officers of the association for the second semester will be elected and all outstanding business of the first semester will be dealt with. As the meeting is an important one, all members are urged to attend.

Fisher, Humphries Read

The Writer's Workshop met last Monday to hear Robert Fisher and James F. Humphreys read. Fisher read an essay entitled "A German Speaks;" Humphries read some of his poetry.

Next Monday a business meeting will be held. The four best pieces for the semester will be voted upon. The Workshop's page in the Chilhowean will be signed and the members will be assigned reading dates for the second semester.

Girls To Orangize Basketball Teams

Several girls' basketball teams have been organized to play preliminary games in connection with each intercollegiate contest. Highlight of recent competition in this sport was the freshman-sophomore contest played preceding the Maryville-Union tussle last Saturday. The frosh, led by the brilliant work of little Johnny Gudel, downed the sophs 17-12. Johnnie equalled the total of the entire soph team by pushing twelve points through the hoop. High point honors for the losers went to Natalie Yelton, with six markers. The freshman team was composed of:

F—Gudel, George, and Gaultney.
G—M. Smith, Garvin, E. Williams.

Sophomores:

F—B Jones, King, Yelton.
G—W. Williams, Taylor, Gillette.

Independent teams are being organized for girls not participating in the point system's regular program. Any girl interested should get in touch with Mrs. Queener or with Ruth Wynn.

Frosh Debate Tryouts To Be Held Monday

On Monday afternoon at 1:00 the freshman debate team tryouts will be held in Dr. Davis' classroom in Anderson hall. Of the thirty members of the freshman speech class competing for positions, five men and five women will be chosen to make up the 1941 squad.

The question to be debated is: "Resolved that the power of the federal government should be diminished." The speeches will be six minutes long with three minute rebuttals. Judges for the contests will include Dr. E. R. Hunter and Dr. V. M. Queener.

VOLUME 26 MARYVILLE, TENN. JANUARY 25, 1941 NUMBER 15

Rehearsals Start For Bainonian-Athenian Mid-Winter Play; To Be Held In Voorhees Chapel March 1

Lincoln's Early Life Up To National Election Is Theme of Play

"Abe Lincoln in Illinois", Robert Emmet Sherwood's outstanding drama written in 1937, has been chosen by Bainonian and Athenian societies as their mid-winter dramatic production to be presented March 4 in Voorhees chapel at 8:15. Mrs. Nita Eckles West will direct the production.

According to Carl Sandburg, himself an authority on Lincoln, Sherwood's "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" is "the first full-statured drama" that has been built around the "legend of Lincoln". Sandburg continues, "It is the first shaped by a playwright who went to the main studies derived from basic source materials—and delved extensively himself in the actual sources.

Having seen Sherwood's play—I believe it carries some shine of the American dream, that it delivers great themes of human wit, behavior and freedom, with Lincoln as mouthpiece and instrument."

The play consists of twelve scenes, scenes which move smoothly and swiftly, first introducing Lincoln to the audience as he arrives in New Salem, Illinois, a town of fifteen log cabins, at the age of twenty-two. There he meets John McNamar, fiance of Ann Rutledge, the village tavern keeper's daughter, and substitutes for McNamar as an election clerk.

The second scene shows Lincoln entering politics by running for the State Assembly, to which office he is elected. In New Salem, Lincoln meets his lasting friends, Judge Bowling Green and Ninian Edwards. Here also, he falls in love with Ann Rutledge, who soon dies, leaving him only fond memories and a broken heart.

Act II shifts the scene to Springfield, Illinois, where Lincoln and Stuart, his partner, set up a law office. And in Springfield Lincoln meets the aristocratic Mary Todd, who spells her name with two "d's". Lincoln says, in spite of the fact that one "d" is good enough for God. Mary Todd is a Kentucky "blue-blood", a "thoroughbred", who is visiting at the home of her sister and brother-in-law, the Ninian Edwards' family. And in Springfield at this time, Lincoln meets the "Little Giant", Stephen A. Douglas, who makes no bones about the fact that he would like to make Mary Todd Mrs. Stephen A. Douglas. The familiar story of how Mary chooses Lincoln as the man most likely to place her in the White House, Lincoln's failing to show up on the date first set for the wedding, and then his second proposal to her, together with incidents showing Lincoln's ever-ready wit and shrewd keenness finish act two.

The scene for Act III is again laid in Springfield, but the date is now 1858-61. The stirring events leading up to Lincoln's nomination and election and his rather unhappy home life during this period file by rapidly, bringing the play to its climax as Lincoln boards

Triangle Club to Elect

Next meeting of the Triangle club will be Monday night at 6:45 in Bartlett auditorium. This will be an important business meeting including the election of officers for next semester. There will be no program.

Medical Schools For Five Students

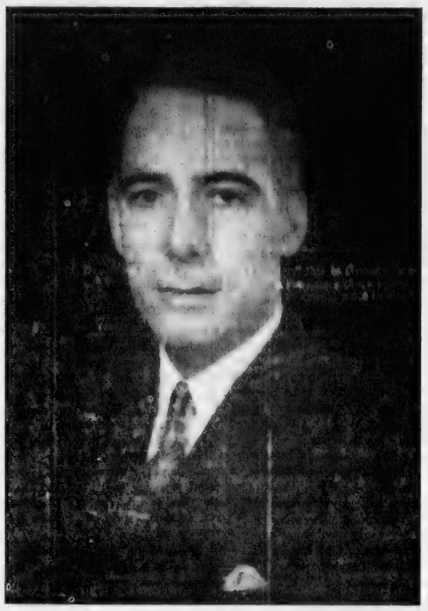
Five Maryville students to date have been accepted in various medical schools in the east. All five expect to begin their work at the opening of the fall semester. The list of those accepted includes Joseph Swift, Fredrick Rawlings, Hal Henschen, Jake Bradsher, and Margaret Peters.

Joe Swift, a biology major, hails from Worcester, Mass. He will go to Temple University at Philadelphia. He has been an active member of the Pre-Med club, one time president of Alpha Sigma, manager of the football team for two years, past member of the swimming team and at present a very active member of the social committee.

Fred Rawlings, a chemistry major, comes from Sevierville, Tenn. His choice of med schools is the University of Vanderbilt at Nashville. Fred is also an active member of the Pre-Med club. He has been a chemistry assistant for the past three years and is well-known by all chem students for his patient and cheerful help at all times.

Hal Henschen, also a chemistry major, comes here from Oakland, Fla. Next fall he will join the freshman class at Emory University. This tow-headed gentleman is well-known to most of us by his achievements on the wrestling mat and on the gridiron. He has been a varsity member of the wrestling team for the past three years and will be out there grunting for the team again this year. He has also been a varsity football man for three years. At present he is also president of the Pre-Med club.

Jake Bradsher, another chemistry major, hails from Milton, N. C. Jake transferred here last year from Lees-McRae college in North Carolina. His application has been accepted at Duke Med school. He is the present vice-president of the Pre-Med club and he also holds the same office in the Nature club. He was a member of Athenian last year. He is also a member of the Ministerial association and hopes to become a medical missionary.



Margaret Peters, a biology major, comes from Augusta, Ga. She plans to enter the Woman's Medical School at Philadelphia, Pa. She is a member of the Pre-Med club and was at one time president of the German club. She has been and is now an assistant in physiology and anatomy.

It is also of interest to note that Bill Short has accepted a position as a control chemist with the Electro-Manganese Corporation of Knoxville next semester. Two other Maryville graduates, William Morgan and Earl Tweed, are also employed by this same company. Short is a biology major and comes from Port Royal, Pa. He is a member of Alpha Sigma and has been the student engineer at the power house for the past few years.

Rev. C. E. Cathey To Lead Vespers Tomorrow Night

Rev. C. E. Cathey, Maryville alumnus, will be the speaker at the vesper service tomorrow evening. Rev. Cathey is the field representative for Christian Education in the synods of Tennessee, Mississippi, and Alabama. His headquarters are in Nashville. The choir will furnish special music.

Lloyds Back From West-Coast Trip

Meetings Place Emphasis Upon The Important Needs of World

President and Mrs. Lloyd returned to the campus January 18 from a trip to the Pacific Coast. They had left Maryville by train on December 27, heading for California via New Orleans and the Southern Pacific through Texas. The return trip they made by way of San Francisco, Salt Lake City, and Chicago. They spent most of the time in Southern California but stopped a day in San Francisco, where a Maryville college Alumni Club was formed, a day in Salt Lake City, where both President and Mrs. Lloyd were once members of the faculty of Westminster college, and a day in Chicago, where President Lloyd's mother lives.

The purpose of their trip was to attend the annual meetings of the Association of American Colleges, the National Conference of Church-Related Colleges, the Presbyterian College Union, and the Pan-Presbyterian College Union. These meetings were held January sixth to tenth in the Huntington Hotel, Pasadena, a suburb of Los Angeles.

At this 1941 group of college meetings special emphasis was given to the relationship of higher education and democracy; the wide-spread neglect of religion, both in general life and in education; and the relationship of the colleges to the national defense program. One action taken was to request Congress to amend the universal service act to permit college students in any year hereafter to complete the college year in which they may become subject to draft.

Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd arrived in Los Angeles on December 31 and were fortunate to be among a small number of persons securing complimentary tickets to the Tournament of Roses Parade and the Rose Bowl game on New Year's day. They report that the parade and game and the other festivities of that day were most impressive. It was a bright day, and they were among an estimated more than a million people who gathered to witness California's gala parade and colorful pageantry. Dr. Lloyd says that he ob-

Cowen's Students Give First Private Recital

Students of Miss Genevieve Cowen had their first private recital in the Fine Arts studio, Tuesday afternoon, January 21. Those taking part were Helen Trotter, Marian McGaha, Lucille Lynch, Margaret Haggard, Elizabeth Getaz, Phil Vance, Imogene Reuter, and Mildred Orr. These recitals are to be held at regular intervals during the next semester.

Maryville Enters New Debate Year

Tournament Starts Feb. 1 At Lincoln Memorial University

Maryville college will send two affirmative and one negative men's teams to Lincoln Memorial University on February 1 to participate in the Smoky Mountain Debate tournament.

Two affirmative teams composed of Vernon Lloyd, Charles Foreman, Frank Cross, and William Felknor; and one negative team, Trevor Rees-Jones and Hilton Wick, will represent Maryville at the Smoky Mountain Speech tournament at Harrogate, Tenn. Mr. A. F. Pieper is taking the trip with the debaters and will act as advisor.

Besides the regular debate contest the group will participate in extemporaneous speaking and in oratory. Wick and Lloyd will compete in extemporaneous, and Foreman and Rees-Jones will compete in oratory.

Teams from South Carolina, Virginia, Kentucky, and Tennessee will compete in the tournament. Such colleges as LMU, East Tennessee Teachers, Carson-Newman, Milligan, Cumberland, and Tusculum will be represented.

The Smoky Mountain tournament will be the first of several contests in which the college debate squad will participate. Besides the tournament on February 1, the debate squad will compete in the Womens Smoky Mountain tournament on February 15 at Virginia Intermont college in Bristol, Virginia; the State tournament at TPI in Cookeville, Tenn., from February 27 to March 1; the South Atlantic tournament at Hickory, N.C., from March 6 to 8; the Provincial tournament at the State Teachers college in Montivallo, Ala., from April 2 to 5; and the Grand Eastern tournament at Winthrop college in Rock Hill, S.C., during the middle of April.

As yet, no home debates have been arranged.

Freshman Debate Group Selected

Members of the 1941 freshman debate squad were announced last Tuesday by Mr. A. F. Pieper, debate coach. The men debaters on the team are Albert Baxter, Paul Jamorik, Hal Lloyd, Benjamin Lynt, Claude Shell is the alternate for the men. The women on the team are Jean Boyd, Ruth Aiken, Veronica Hansel, Kay Liddell, and Muriel Giesler, alternate.

The schedule for the team has not yet been arranged, but it will include one or two debates in Knoxville, and the entrance of two teams in the state tournament ir. Cookeville. There will be no scheduled meetings until after final examinations.

College To Have Campus Broadcasts From Arts Studio

Arrangements have been made with radio station WROL in Knoxville to broadcast two programs a week from the campus of Maryville college. Plans are in progress for the equipping of a radio studio in Voorhees chapel.

From the control room being built in connection with the Fine Arts studio in the chapel, the programs will be broadcast each time. Four new microphones of the best quality have been purchased by the college. These will be placed at the most advantageous points to bring the best results for the broadcasts.

Contact with WROL will be made by the wiring connection put in by the Telephone Company. This wiring connects the Fine Arts studio with the auditorium, which makes it possible to broadcast from the studio, auditorium, or from some other room in the building. The program will go over the wire to the Knoxville studio where it will go over the air at the station there. During recent weeks WROL has increased its power, and is now heard well over all this area.

Second Semester Bills By Jan. 31

Registration Closes Next Week; Freshmen Will Start Monday

Registration at the Personnel office for juniors and sophomores closed today. Freshmen will register next week, from Monday through Friday. Chapel will be held next week as usual, excepting Saturday.

Payment of second semester fees may be made at the Treasurer's office by all students up to and including the last day of the semester, Friday, January 31. After that day the late payment fee of $5.00 will be charged.

Attendance at Sunday school and church on February 2 will be checked as a part of the second semester record. As usual, there will be chapel at 8:10 on the first day of classes, Monday, February 3. This day will be reserved for registration of new students. The regular day for change of schedules will be Tuesday, February 4, but care should be taken that classes are not missed.

All students should note that the holiday penalty of one-half semester hour deduction for each absence, will apply on Monday and Tuesday, February 3 and 4.

Discussion of Important Topics is Feature of Group Meets

Beginning during the first week of the second semester, the sixty-fifth annual February meetings will extend from Wednesday morning, February 5, to Thursday morning, February 13. As in former years, the program will include, in addition to the regular chapel and evening services, various group meetings attended by students and faculty. At these times topics of especial interest to young people will be discussed.

On the Sunday immediately preceding the meetings, February 2, the New Providence Presbyterian Church will hold a special observance in preparation for these meetings. The preacher at this service will be President Ralph Waldo Lloyd of the college.

As was announced in the Highland Echo before Christmas, the speaker will be Rev. Howard Moody Morgan, D.D., pastor of the Tabernacle Presbyterian church in Philadelphia.

Dr. Morgan is about forty years old, was born in the United States, was educated chiefly in England, and has rendered most of his service to this country. He went to his present pastorate in Philadelphia from a pastorate in Lexington, Ky., to succeed his father, Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, noted British scholar and preacher, when the latter returned to London to assume the duties of pastor of the world-renowned Westminster Chapel.

Assisting Dr. Morgan will be the Rev. Sidney E. Stringham, pastor of the Shaw Avenue Methodist church of St. Louis, who returns for the 19th time in the last 20 years to lead the singing at our February meetings. Through his annual visit and his leadership, he has established abiding friedships on the Hill. Each student generation comes to know him as one of the true friends of the college.

Mr. Stringham is the pastor of a large city church, but each year he gives a certain amount of his time not only to Maryville college but also to churches throughout the great Middle West.

When Mr. Stringham first led the February meetings, he was pastor of the Methodist church in Alcoa. It was discovered that he had special talent as a leader of group singing and he was invited for the first time when a leader from a distance found it impossible to come. His work was so satisfactory that he was urged to return; and so it is that he returns after already giving almost two decades of service to the February meetings, the college, and all on the Hill.

The February meetings constitute one of the most real opportunities to be found on any American college campus for thoughtful, reverent, facing of the Christian gospel and the requirements and privileges of Christian life and service. Thousands of students and hundreds of faculty during the past 65 years have found great personal blessing in them. Letters from distant places and reports on the campus tell how the February meetings are increasingly the object of prayers these days.

Final Exams Arrive As Students Frantically Begin Cram Procedure

By JANET LINDSAY

Once every six months a momentous event takes place on the Maryville college campus (and we don't mean paying tuition, either). The Highland Echo this week has the pleasure of announcing, for the benefit of any students who may not have heard via the grapevine or otherwise, that examinations covering the first semester's work will begin today. The first slaughter was scheduled to take place this morning at 9:00 (those Shine-ing students of English Lit are probably still at it).

The preparation for the occasion has been taking place for some weeks. This preparation consists mainly of continual (ecntinuous) groaning, pulling of hair and gnashing of teeth.

Just in case some of you freshmen and strangers don't know what it's all about, there are a few precautions that we who have dealt with similar situations would like to pass on to you.

1. Don't stay up all night to study. It doesn't pay. The will-power and physical effort required to remain awake does not equal what you learn; for the masterminds of the Education department tell us you can't learn anything in a semi-conscious state (we know!). Besides all this, my friends, you run the horrible risk of finding yourself being bodily ejected from your

Oh, But It's Nice To Get Up In The Morning; But Who Wants To

By KAY LIDDELL

You shudder, involuntarily. Roommate shrieks a cheerful "Good morning!" You slowly realize that a new day has put in its appearance. One hand rubs across your eyes; the other hand gropes uncertainly toward the place where the window ought to be. After several moments of fruitless searching, you leap up and slam the innocent window closed. Shivering violently, you burrow once more in the covers hoping for that one extra minute of blessed sleep. Slowly opening one eye, you see Roommate completely dressed, looking pensively at you. Slowly closing your eyes again, you get a strong hold on your covers. And it's not a moment too soon, for Roommate jumps suddenly forward and attempts to pull them off you. A brief but violent struggle ensues, and you finally resign yourself to the fact that you must get up.

"It's five to eight!" Roommate calls encouragingly. In one concentrated moment, you are at last on your feet. You think seriously for a moment about taking a shower, but discard the idea immediately for lack of time as well as lack of actual desire. Staggering across the room, you dive head-first into the closet. Roommate close on your heels. "Well, aren't you going to wash?" You look stupidly at her for a minute and say "Wash?" Oh, yes, later." There's no time for little things now. And no time to remember what you had on yesterday. You blindly clutch a skirt and sweater and hope not only that you didn't wear them yesterday, but also that they are somewhat congenial as to color. Stepping further into Changing Editors . . .

Something new in the newspaper line at Maryville is the selection of co-editors to head the paper staff. Under the agreement made last fall, each of the two co-editors is to publish one-half the issues of the paper; and so, having arrived at the end of the first semester, it falls the lot of the second encumberant to assume the duties of editorship.

The incoming editor wishes to extend to his predecessor the heartiest of congratulations on the excellent management of the paper during the past semester and assumes responsibility for the editorial policy of the paper for the remainder of the year.

—o—

Time to Think . . .

The beginning of examinations brings one to the rather stark realization that one-half of the college year is gone. Between exams or at some pause between "stuffin" sessions take inventory of your accomplishments during the first semester. Have you increased your assets or only added to your liabilities?

Dr. Howard Moody Morgan . . .

Dr. Howard Moody Morgan, leader of the sixty-fifth annual series of February meetings, returns for a second time to the Maryville campus to lead in these worship services. Those who heard and talked with Dr. Morgan on his first visit remember him for his vigorous Christian character and ability to understand the problems of college students. Other striking characteristics are his excellent speaking ability, attractive personality, and unusual ability to explain the Bible in its applications to our contemporary life.

Dr. Morgan is a minister much in dem and, and his slight British accent and chaste use of the English language lends charm to his messagees. He has also unfailing supply of humorous stories and anecdotes which makes his conversations buoyant.

Scots and Soda

It is with much trepidation and world-weariness that we bring ourselves from the hazy tasks of compiling last minute notebooks, book reports, term papers, and projects, turn up the lamp a trifle, and settle down to the column.

There appears to be an unfortunate dearth of conventional topics of conversation nowadays. What with the flu epidemic practically all ironed out, and the weather being its own damp, normal self, about the only thing left of any consequence is the exams. And any person with a mind even approaching normalcy can see that almost everybody has enough of that without doing outside reading of this sort on it.

Just in case you're looking for a book or two to help fill up your spare time, the shelf above the righthand "For Reference Work Only" table has been refilled only recently. Good stuff, too.

And it's always of sociological or psychological interest to notice that the abundance of seats and living space to be found in the library during the year seems to be completely filled just a week and a half before exams—there's hardly room enough to just stroll through.

Just to pass a tip on to some of you people—Kitty Bennett's fashion reviews don't begin for a month yet; so you can hang that necktie or skirt, as the case may be, back in the closet for awhile.

The swimming meet that takes place tonight must be one exciting event. The events themselves are enough to walk the proverbial mile to see—to say nothing of an exquisitely designed chassis or two. Not that it will make the slightest bit of difference in the future record of the team, but we of SCOTS AND SODA would like to wish the best of luck and success.

Quite suddenly we were given the chance to attend the Knoxville Community Concert, the early part of the week. Artist Dorothy Maynor seemed to really have what it takes. From our front row gallery seat we decided that Miss Maynor can sing for our money any day.

We got into chapel the other morning in time to hear that the cast for Athenian-Bainonian's "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" has been picked from among the prolific talent in the combined societies. All we ask is that the production equualuu utheu usuperb eident Oaturetb equal the superb joy they did last year on "Family Portrait". They should win with Honest Abe Brinkoln heading their ticket.

And speaking of chapel, have you even noticed how very much more noisy it is there on rainy mornings? After worrying about it several minutes, we decided that this is due to the percentage of cellophane equipment. Which is as annoying as trying to get into a candy bar at the show, incidentally.

Nice to see Lois Black, one time Maryville college dramatic star, home visiting her folks.

Studies in contrast: Baldwin parlors at 7:00 and Baldwin parlors at 7:02; breafast attendance week-days and breakfast attendance Sunday; dating these Sundays and, to be previous, dating on Easter and Baccalaureate Sundays; the flagstone walk on a clear day and the flagstone walk under the rain—and the word "under" is here no misnomer.

Have you noticed the clever sketches in Pearsons lobby to announce the exhibit at the Art Gallery? Even if you can't make it up the flight and a half of stairs to see the exhibit, the poster is worth whizzing by to view.

Not that it's any of our business—and not that it makes any difference one way or another—but do you get a kick out of these things, too?—

A Letter Home

Dear Mother and Dad:

Here it is before exams with things rushing as usual; or maybe I should say here are exams, for I had my first one today. Somehow it doesn't seem possible that it can be the end of my first semester at college—and while I think of it, I hope my marks won't be too, too disappointing. Course, they really don't really expect us to get on the honor roll the first semester, so I hope you won't mind too much. It couldn't be that I'm not studying enough for I study just all the time.

Well, to go back, it doesn't seem possible that I left home for school after the Christmas holidays three weeks ago Monday; but I did, so the calendar says. And I'm dreadfully sorry that I haven't gotten around to send any letters. I did send those two post cards so you wouldn't be worried about my getting here safely; and once I landed, everything happened at once.

In the first place, when I hit Washington and didn't meet anyone I began to think maybe I was late back to school—maybe I had gotten my dates mixed—I mean dates of returning to school, of course. When I reached Roanoke and still didn't meet anyone I was really worried. And when Knoxville came up about 3:30 in the morning I was sunk. But that's all over now; I didn't get in late—just later or earlier than the others.

And talking about getting in early, my latest time out since returning has been ten o'clock when I walked home from the library one night. It sure was pretty out, what with the clouds half hiding the moon which tried so hard to hide itself wholly—I guess in sympathy for those two couples trying to make themselves one with the tree and shadow to fool the night watchman who was—always is, in fact or imagination—right around the corner. Anyway, it was quite different from coming in from parties and dances at any time from midnight to two in the morning. But I guess maybe it's just as well I don't have so many parties to go to, for I am so busy.

Today was just a typical day. Up at 6:30—and only because my roommate pulled the bedclothes off and put on some real hill-billy music on the radio. I just had to get up and turn that old music box off in self defense. But just wait until some morning when SHE wants to sleep! But I love her anyway; she's my roommate.

To continue, breakfast at 7:00; chapel at 8:10; class at 8:30. After the first class we messed around, decided we were hungry, and so ate crackers and cheese and oranges had our test (horrible thought), and then we didn't know everything, mostly bewailing exams. We have to study so hard for them, and I don't guess the teachers know what we have to go through or they wouldn't make us read the whole book just the night before the exam. They say some of the seniors don't read the books at all, but I don't see how they graduate if they don't even read their books the night before exams.

Anyway, after dinner we studied until 2:05 when we had out test (horrible thought), and then we didn't know just what to do. There is always so much to be done. So we finally decided to go to town. The show was one of those old westerns, but we didn't care. We had such a good time—and oh, Mother, I've got a date with Ferdi again tomorrow. Isn't it wonderful? But they say not to date a boy here more than twice in a row or the other fellows will get the idea they ought not to butt in. Isn't that a funny way to do; but maybe I'll get resigned to only two or three after I get used to it—maybe.

After the show we sat in the drug store and talked and ate. I must confess at that point I was more interested in a big double banana split than in listening to Ferdi talk about the cows on his uncle's ranch in Wyoming where he used to work. Oh, me, but he's nice—not so good-looking, but rather—well, distinguished looking I guess you'd call it. We talked about school and all that and he asked me to go to the basketball game tonight; but somehow I had to tell him that Johnny had asked me and I guess it didn't matter much anyway 'cause he did say he'd see me tomorrow. Johnny's nice too, but he's only a sophomore and Ferdi's a junior. I'd like to have a date to the next formal affair with one of the seniors, but he's been going with one of the senior girls ever since school started, and he never does seem to notice me. But maybe he will some one of these days—I hope.

Well, how's everything at home since I left? Are you sure you sent on any letters that came after I left? I know there's one that got lost in the mail, but maybe you just didn't send them all. Say hello to everyone for me, please; and Mom, those cookies were all gone two days after we got back. Everyone likes them so much, and we can always eat more.

Well, guess it's about time I closed. I've got a pack of studying to do for tomorrow—only two classes, but what work. There's only half an hour left till lights go out; so so long and don't forget to write soon.

Love
Sue

his special car for Washington at the railroad station in Springfield. As the train pulls out, Abe from the platform of his car wistfully waves his hat at his old friends and neighbors; then the stooped, shawled figure turns and goes into his car. And the mighty burst of "John Brown's Body" from the band and the swelling chorus from the crowd, "His soul goes marching on", the engine, its whistle shrilling, moves toward the southeast, taking Lincoln into the cloudy, storm-threatening future.

Seniors and faculty members who have been following Frank Brink's superb acting throughout his college career will be glad to know that the role of Abraham Lincoln will be played by Mr. Brink. Old students will remember him in at least three of last year's major productions, "Our Town", Dicken's "Christmas Carol" as Scrooge, and John Wintermute's honors work play, "Devil's Millions". Last fall Frank played in "Mr. Pim Passes By" and again this year he took the part of Scrooge in the "Christmas Carol".

The supporting cast is composed of students who have had a great deal of dramatic experience here in Maryville, or of promising freshman material. Robert Schwarzwalder appears as Ben Mattingly; George Tibbetts, as William Herdndon; Dave Hall as Judge Bowling Green; Robert Short as Mentor Graham; Dave McDaniel as Ninian Edwards; Percy Martin as Jack Armstrong; Melvin McGhee as Bab; Clyde Brown as Seth Gale; Arthur Bushing as Crimmin; Robert Wilcox as Barrick; William Hargraves as Kavanagh; Paul Brown as Robert Lincoln; June Morley as Mary Todd; Elizabeth Glover as Nancy Green; Troye Moore as Elizabeth Edwards; Rose Mary McCartney as Aggie Gale; Elizabeth Moore as the maid; Hal Lloyd as Fergus; Chas. Gilpatrick as Sturveson; Ben Lynt as Joshua Speed; Paul Jamerik as Major. The two younger Lincoln boys and the part of Jimmy Gale have not yet been cast.

Chapel Broadcasts . . .

Public Relations, will manage the programs. He will be assisted by the heads of the various departments of Fine Arts.

It is the present plan to broadcast a "radio vespers" from 5 to 5:30 each Sunday evening, and a general program each Wednesday from 7 to 7:30 P. M.

"Radio vespers" will not change the regular schedule of vespers at all. It will be chiefly a program of music with a brief meditation given by President Lloyd when he is on the campus. When Dr. Lloyd is away, someone else will be appointed to fill the vacancy.

On Wednesdays the broadcasts will carry a variety of musical and dramatic programs. These will usually have a five or six-minute introduction on some theme connected with college education by some student officer or a member of the faculty. A schedule is now being worked out whereby a limited number of persons may be permitted to attend the broadcasts.

WROL is giving Maryville college the broadcasting time free, counting the broadcast of such programs as valuable. The college is spending several hundred dollars for the equipment and will pay regular charges to the telephone company.

It was hoped that these programs might begin the first week in February, but the radio materials have been delayed by the national defense measures. So far there has been no word as to when the materials necessary for further progress may be expected. The programs, however, will start sometime during the coming month.

"The purpose of inaugurating these programs," stated Dr. Lloyd, "is threefold. First, it is hoped that the college can render real educational and religious service to the territory served by the station. Second, it is hoped that these productions will increase the degree to which the college is known and regarded by the public. Third, it is hoped that the producing and broadcasting of these programs will be of practical value to the students who participate.

These programs will continue until the close of the spring semester.

SPORT ECHOS

By BILL SWEENEY—Sports Editor

BASKETBALL.....The Highlanders have started to hit their stride it appears, for in the past three games freshmen Overly, Saffell, Bowyer, and Lillard have started to live up to the reputations they had while high school stars. In the Hiwassee game Lillard was the high point man and star of the evening, while Saffell came into his own on Wednesday against Cumberland. Baby and Bill Baird continue to play their usual good, hard fought games. After a poor start at the offset of the season the Scotties have taken King college, Western Carolina Teachers, Cumberland, and Hiwassee into camp during the past few weeks.

WRESTLING.....Coach Davis' wrestlers have had a hard time thus far getting matches due to the flu epidemic that seems to have hit all sections and all parts of the country. Scheduled to have a match with Western Carolina State Teachers last Thursday, the grapplers were disappointed to learn that due to the flu this was called off. With Evaul, Hahn, Henschen, Everett, McDaniels, and Culver back from last year's varsity squad, the outlook for wrestling on the hill looks rather good. It is here that the sports staff wants to wish Coach Davis all the possible luck with his wrestling team. In his first year on the hill, Coach Davis has become extremely popular with everyone and so we hope his first wrestling season and the ones to follow will be successful ones.

SWIMMING.....According to the schedule of the swimming meets which was released lately, it appears that the tank-men of Maryville have six good meets lined up for the season. They were to open their season here yesterday with Kentucky Teachers and follow this up with meets with University of Tennessee, here; Illinois Tech, here; Tusculum college, here; Tusculum, there; and ending the season on March 7 against Emory-Henry, there. According to the reports, Coach Fischbach has been working his team hard trying to get them in good shape for the hard schedule ahead. The team that hits the water this year will be lacking many stars which strengthened the team last year. However, Frank Cross is back, as is Dudley Moore and Bob Wilcox, to make up the nucleus of the squad.

INTRAMURALS.....Basketball seems to have taken over completely in this phase of athletics at Maryville. The interest which is shown by the spirited play of the numerous teams of both leagues is keen and they play hard. It appears as if Doug Steakley has come up with the best team in his league with the Athenians tops in theirs.

According to the posted announcements it appears that the finals in the horseshoe pitching will be a brotherly affair. The Baird brothers are scheduled to play the Short brothers for the championship. This horseshoe tournament was also a great success to add to the many that the intramural organization has scored this year. Newly-formed at the beginning of the year, Coach Fischbach and his hard-working managers and assistants have presented a varied and well-balanced athletic program to the college men.

PASSING REMARKS.....Have you noticed the closeness of the games the Honakermen have put on this year? Hiwassee is the only game since the Christmas holidays which was definitely the winners' ball game all the way. Union defeated the Orange and Garnet by three points, King was defeated by one point, Western Carolina Teachers lost to the Scots by 4 points, and Cumberland beaten by six points.....The Scotties, sporting their new jerseys, will look classy tonight when they take to the boards against Teachers. With baseball just around the corner, one may occasionally find McGaha trying to work off some excess weight. At least he was out one day.

Speaking of the diamond sport, the team this year should be a good one with many experienced lettermen back. Losing only Nig Wilburn, Jabo Pierce, and Chuck Kindred from last year's team, Coach Honaker should be able to put a good team on the field.

THE HIGHLAND ECHO JANUARY 25, 1941

Behind Scenes With The Baird Brothers

By CHUCK FOREMAN

Kilbourne, Ohio, a thriving little village located some twenty miles from Columbus and in almost exact geographical center of the state, has one extra special distinction—it is the home town of Maryville's most distinguished and outstanding "brother act" athletes, Boydson Howard and William Edgar Baird.

After a glance at Bill's high school record, the big standout of a long career seems to be that he holds, and has held since 1935, the Ohio state scholastic record of 2:01 minutes in the half mile. His high school, probably the smallest institution represented, won fourth place honors at the same state meet, which was held at Columbus in the huge stadium of Ohio State University. In the district meet, composed of high schools from eight counties, Brother Bill set records in the javelin throw at 165 feet and in the half mile at 2:05 minutes. In high school basketball Bill played two years with Brother Weldon and two with Brother Baby, and all three were on the all-county hardwood five for two years. Brother William amassed three letters in basketball, four letters in baseball, and four letters in track. If Brown Township high had had a football team, we venture to add that Bill would have been at least a fifteen letter winner.

Then in 1936 Bill followed Brother Weldon to Maryville college. Although he had never played a game of football before landing on the Hill, Bill showed up so brilliantly that Coach Honaker's opening lineup against the University of Kentucky found Bill starting in the backfield at the safety man position. It seems that the 'Cats won by 3-50, but the lone field goal represented a moral victory for the lad from the Buckeye region.

It wasn't long after hardwood call that frosh Bill claimed one of the varsity guard positions. Then—it happened. A truck load of Nature club members met with a terrible accident in the Smokies, and Bill was one of those aboard. After two weeks in Fort Sanders hospital, it looked like the end of a promising athletic career. However, for over a year Bill slaved for an REC electric company field crew—and then back he came to the land of the Highlanders.

As a Scottie Bill has won two football sweaters, three basketball letters, and is a four letter man and captain of the cinder kiltie-klads. In 1939 he set the standing college record at 124 feet, 4 inches for the discus throw. He was president of his junior class, a member of the student council for two years, and president of Hi-Trail.

The enviable records of the Bairds are so much alike that they seem like a "Rover Boys" series. The sum total of medals, trophies, and ribbons won by the Bairds in track and field events number well over forty.

Here are some of Baby's highlights: won Ohio state scholastic half-mile, high point man in the district meet, anchor man on the medley relay mile and two mile state champs, won Tennessee collegiate mile as a freshman, and won second honors in the state mile last year. Baby was a four letter man in high school baseball, basketball, and track.

The 1938 Chilhowean sports editor had this to say about the "new freshman star, "One of the highlights of the season was the speed and spirit displayed by spark-plug Boydson Baird."

Baby has won three varsity "M" sweaters, two letters in track, and is captain and a four letter winner of the basketball team. He is president of the student council, on the athletic board of control, treasurer of the senior class, member of high trail, and a member of Sigma Delta Psi athletic fraternity.

Thus, we present the Bairds to you. After graduation Bill and Baby plan to follow Brother Weldon to the U. S. Naval air service, via the Naval reserve aviation base at Grosse Ile, Mich. After graduation?—already it worries Mrs., Miss, and Mr. Maryville. How can there be a Maryville without the Bairds?

Orange And Garnet To Oppose Mighty Teachers' Five In Alumni Gym Tonight

Riding on the crest of a recent winning splurge, which has included victories over King, Western Carolina Teachers, Cumberland, and Hiwassee, the Maryville Scotties meet East Tennessee Teachers tonight on the local boards. The Bucs, invading Maryville for the first time this season, boast a powerful, fast moving club, and are expected to provide a real tussle. The Highlanders managed to down the Teachers last year in a hard game, and the same kind of action is expected to take place tonight. Game time is eight o'clock.

Next Wednesday evening, Emory-Henry makes its first appearance of the current season in the Alumni gym. The boys from Virginia have a rather impressive record this year, and are counted on to put up a tough fight.

Last Saturday the Honakermen journied to Cullowee, N. C. to tangle with Western Carolina Teachers. Maryville staged a spectacular rally just before the gun to clinch a 44-40 win. The game was played on an unusual floor, and the Scotties seemed to have trouble getting adjusted to their surroundings. They got off to a slow start, and at half time the Teachers led 26-21. However, Bill Overly sank two field goals in the closing moments of the contest to break a tie and bring the Scotties out victorious. Overly was high point man in the game, with no less than 15 markers to his credit. Gudger, a towering, fast moving sharpshooter, was the leader of the Teachers' attack and pressed Overly for scoring laurels. As usual, the Baird brothers were standouts on moving the ball down the floor and in breaking through the opponents' defense. The Teachers also displayed a flashy brother combination in the Pryors, a high-scoring pair who saw much action during the game.

Cumberland University appeared on the local court last Wednesday, only to be turned back by a 40-35 count. Cumberland boasted one of the tallest lineups that Maryville has faced this season, but the Lawyers seemed to be just a little too slow afoot to successfully check the speedy Honaker attack. A pair of sharpshooting freshmen—Tom Saffell and Bill Overly—led the Highlander attack. The play of Saffell, who has not seen action regularly, was especially encouraging. He was high point man for the game, with a total of 11 points to his credit. Bill Overly was runnerup in the scoring department, ringing up ten valuable points for the Scotties.

Maryville drew first blood when Lillard, another first-year man, sank a one-pointer from the foul line. From then on, the lead see-sawed and the half ended with Maryville trailing 19-18. Paced by Saffell's point-making spree, the Scotties opened the last half with a rush and maintained the lead for the rest of the game.

Outstanding for the visitors was Edwards, a huge boy who sank field goals from various angles with his peculiar one-handed shots. Patrick, a lanky forward, also scored many points for Cumberland. Baby Baird drew a tremendous ovation from the crowd when he sank a shot from the center of the court late in the first half. Brother Bill also played one of his best games, fooling the Lawyers time after time with his tricky faking and flashy dribbling. The game was rough and tumble, and a good many fouls were called by Referee Toots Blazer. Principle victim of the rough stuff was Bill Baird, who was manhandled by the giants from Lebanon, but who survived the beating in fine form.

The Scotties have shown a great deal of improvement since the Christmas holidays. They have sunk a much greater percentage of their shots in recent games; in fact, Coach Honaker seems to have successfully removed most of the rough edges from the M-C court machine. Of inestimable value has been the work of several freshmen—Overly, Saffell, Lillard, and Bowyer. The student body is urged to turn out tonight and support the squad in its clash with East Tennessee Teachers.

INTRAMURALS

In the most surprising upset of the entire week, the All-Americans turned back the Foul Balls in a thrilling 13 to 11 game which was not decided until the final minute of play in an overtime period. By turning back the Steakleymen, the All-Americans tied the league leaders. In the club league, Athenian marched on to undisputed possession of first place. Next week, the Foul Balls and All-Americans will again battle it out to see who will play Athenian in the first-half title game.

Monday, the Rocks handed the Questionmarks a 41 to 18 trouncing as they continued their futile bid for first place. Hedrick with 16 was the leading scorer for the Rocks while Humphreys and Hooker with seven and six points respectively set the pace for the losers. The Y Frosh forfeited their game to the Deacons. The Foul Balls crushed the Spitfires, 35-13. Hughes, with 10 points, Cooper with 8, Howard with 6, and McGaha with 5 pointed the way while for the losers, Klimstra stood out with six. The All-Americans led by Faulkner with eight points and Cunningham with seven, turned back the fighting Yankees by a score of 24 to 12. Young, Graham, Heischman, and Evans rolled up the scores for the vanquished. In the most bitterly contested game of the day, Athenian nosed out the Choir by a 19 to 18 score. It was not until the final ten seconds of play that the outcome was assured. Crawford, who was in form the first half made a brilliant comeback in the final minutes of play to pace the Men of Athens to their win. Closely followed by Fisher with 5 points, and Lloyd with 4, Crawford managed to ring up seven points. High scorer Pratt's ten points were to no avail, even though help came from Miller and McCurry.

Wednesday afternoon the Yankees saw their 16 points doubled by the Spitfires as Klimstra rang up fifteen points and Simpson and Harwood 15 more. The Choir managed to down the Deacons, 16-14 as Dave Hall broke into the scoring column with 4 points. McCurry was the pace setter for the winners with four baskets to his credit. Williamson, Watt, Dillinger, Rowan, and Grosh each sank a hoop for the Deacons. With Faulkner, Williams, and Spears making 13 points, the Foul Balls finally met their match and could only score 11 points. Outplayed all the way, the Steakleymen looked much poorer on the big gym than in Bartlett. On the other hand the All-Americans had a good passing ofense and a strong zone defense.

Friday saw the Questionmarks drop another game, this time to the high riding All-Americans. Hooker and Ramsey managed to pile up 12 of the losers' 17 points, while Williams, Roberts, Faulkner, and Lowe rang up 32 of the winnters' 36. The Rocks, paced by Hedrick with 16 points, trounced the Yankees 39 to 17. Heischman and Graham were in the points for the losers. Athenian buried the Y Frosh under a 38 to 12 score as Fisher, Crawford, Lloyd and Stringer made 32 points among them. Next week there will be no regularly scheduled games, but the week following it is expected that the second half will open.

HANDBALL—

All fellows interested in entering the handball tournament should sign the entry blanks posted at Bartlett and Carnegie halls. It is planned to have both singles and doubles.

Exams I...

exam because your snores are disturbing your fellow-sufferers.

2. Don't, on the other hand, go the other extreme and take the night off to go to the movies (you know of course that the best shows come to town during exam week—smart people, these theater managers). Wishful thinking is not the best way to insure good grades.

3. Don't develop examination avoiditus at the zero hour. No matter how badly you feel, be a man and take it on the chin. Such illness only postpones the agony. You'll have to take the thing sometime (see rule 8 in Standards and Requirements, page 89). Make-up exams are reputed to be hard to say the least.

There are several people and groups of people to which we would publicly like to express our deepest sympathy . . . all those people who have two exams in one day . . . everyone who has an exam on Friday afternoon . . . the left-handers who have to do a contortionist act to write on chairs designed for right-handed people . . . and last, but not least, those optimistic individuals who haven't finished their term papers yet.

We wish we could change places (just for exam week, you understand) with honors work students who don't have to take exams in their major field . . . people who have studied hard all semester . . . individuals who don't have any consciences.

When do exams start?

Exams II...

By JORDY MEADOWS

College certainly is a wonderful place! It surely is—except the week before exams. During that time the best thing for any uninformed person to do is to stay away from a campus simply because "any resemblence between a student and a happy person is purely coincidental."

There are many different approaches to this problem of preparing for the exams appearing menacingly on the horizon. There are a very few students who grimly haunt the library with a "do or die" expression in their eyes. They spend every available minute during this time studying with a vigor that is unsurpassed. They get dark shadows under their eyes and a worn look on their faces. They make the best use of their time, while other foolish ones have "one last fling" before settling down to the problems at hand. These few are the hateful ones who beam understandingly and smugly at people like me and say, "Oh, I'm all prepared for that test. I studied for it last week." At moments like these I never wonder at the horrible murders I read about.

The majority of students seem to approve highly of the plan commonly known as cramming. Well, if they don't approve of it, they certinly do participate in this very indoor "sport". Last night I staggered down the hall to a friend's room to see if she had another candle that she could lend me. Dazedly I opened the door, and there she was. Her left hand propped up her drooping head. Her heavy eyelids kept closing over her dull eyes. Her right hand fumbled at the pages of the book as she tried to turn them. At her elbow guttered her obviously last candle. Rather than shake her out of her semi-conscious state, I quietly closed the door and sagely shook my head over the follies of cramming. This feeling of wisdom stayed with me until I reached by own room and saw my roommate in the same condition. With a sigh of resignation I slumped down into my chair and vowed that it would never happen again.

In a minority are the students who feel that they need no extra preparation for the final exams that are driving everyone else into a raving state of mind. These few go blissfully around beaming on the poor unfortunates who are foolish enough to try to study at this late date. These people are either geniuses or else their friends bid them a sad farewell at the end of the semester.

College certainly is wonderful! But just think—wouldn't it be heaven if there were no exams?

Print Collection Now On Display

The Complete Collections of Prints issued by the American College Society of Print Collectors will be shown in the Elizabeth Gowdy Baker Galleries in Anderson hall January 24 through February 6. This is one of the largest, best, and most valuable print collections ever brought to Maryville college. Each work is an original and is signed by the artist.

Included in the exhibition are 22 prints, the selections of the Society since 1930, when it was founded. Among the well-known American artists represented in this group are Rockwell Kent, Frank Brangwyn, Martin Lewis, Thomas Handforth, Jas. McBey, and Edmund Blampied. Two of the selections for 1940 are John Winkler's etching, Waterloo Bridge, and Luigi Lucioni's Birch Patterns, an etching of extremely high realistic craftsmanship and aesthetic quality. The story of these two etchings is carried in the November Art Digest.

Each year the American College Society of Print Collectors, counting among its members 100 colleges, libraries, and art organizations, issues one or more fine prints to its members. Only the best possible examples of printingmaking are considered for distribution to the members. Miss Virginia Purinton, art instructor, is a member of this society. It is through the courtesy of Mr. Marques E. Reitzel, National Chairman and Founder of the Society, Head of the Art Department of San Jose State college, that Miss Purinton was able to secure the collection for use at Maryville. Miss Purinton is a former student of Mr. Reitzel's at Rockford college, Rockford, Illinois.
